Redmen Hope To "Thaw Out" Against Scarlet Knights In Cage

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Rutgers University, currently on a road swing through New England, will be the guest of the UMass cagers Saturday evening at the Curry Hicks P.E. Building. Before heading for Amherst Rutgers' Scarlet Knights have a date to keep tonight with the same Boston University crew that sent the Redmen packing 52-42 at Boston Tuesday evening.

Tomorrow's UM-Rutgers clash marks the second meeting of the two schools in a series that began last season with a 77-57 win for the Knights at New Brunswick, N.J. Redmen Coach Matt Zunic hopes the Rutgers game will see some better shooting on the part of his sophomore players.

"Better Shooting Will Come"

Commenting on his team's cold second half performance at B.U., Zunic declared, "We're a better shooting team than we have shown. Once our sophs get some more game experience under their belts then the better shooting will come."

Cold shooting from the floor and foul line caused UMass to blow a 29-20 halftime grip on the Terriers and go on to lose 52-42. "We had the shots," said Zunic "but we just couldn't hit."

Reynolds To Start Again

UMass was hampered without the services of starting forward Mike Johnson. Johnson injured several fingers on his shooting hand and sophomore Jack Reynolds was called upon to fill the gap. Reynolds played well according to Zunic but he too needs more experience on the court.

Johnson may not be well enough to go against Rutgers Saturday. It is expected that Reynolds will be given the starting nod in his place if his hand has not come along well.

RIFLE TEAM

The undefeated UMass Rifle Team extended its record to four wins and no losses by defeating U.R.I. Saturday, by a score of 1379 to 1355. Although this was the lowest total the Redmen have posted this year, it was enough to outscore the Rams by 24 points.

In defeating Coast Guard, Providence College and Brown University in its previous League matches, the Redmen had averaged 1396 out of 1500.

Co-captain Hal Butterworth led the Redmen with a total of 281 out of a possible 300. This was high score for both teams.

Mark Nataupsky, co-captain Frank Fluet, Jim Vermeiren, and Jim Carswell completed the top five with scores of 279, 274, 273, and 272 respectively. Ed Fowler also posted a 272, but Carswell's was counted because his score in the standing event was higher.

ME, EE, AE, ENGINEERS

Fed up with a profusion of promises?

If the thought has crossed your mind that there's too much of a good thing going around for engineering students lately, we don't blame you. We are making no exaggerated promises. In fact, we are looking to you and to other engineering students for promise to bring to us. There's a switch!

History's second most significant Noah defines promise as, "Ground for hope, expectation, or assurance, often specific, of eventual success." Since we are dedicated to the proposition of complete success in all our endeavors, —and the less "eventual," the better—we are looking for men of promise.

Four Goals In Third Period Give UM Win

by AL RICE '66

Charlie Glew powered home two quick goals early in the final period to give the UMass hockey team an opening season 6-3 win over MIT after trailing by two goals going into the second period.

Glew scored after only 37 seconds had elapsed and then drove in another less than a minute later giving the Redmen a two score advantage after coming out of the second frame tied at two all.

Glew had his shooting eye all night in the game played at Deerfield, but MIT goalie John Kirk robbed him of some almost sure goals. The rest of the shooters had an off night. UMass took a lot of shots, but none hit the nets until John Lasher scored first in his opening game as a varsity performer with a goal at 2.47 of the second period with Jerry Wolfe and captain Jerry Clinton assisting. Wolfe also picked up an assist on Glew's first score and Lasher assisted on the second as each picked up two points for the day. Three minutes later Dick Callahan tied the game with Bob Chisholm picking up the assist.

After Glew put the Redmen ahead, sophomore Jim Mahoney added to the lead with a tally at 2.38 of the last period. Callahan registered his second point with an assist, and also assisted on Dave Higgins' goal late in the game after Holcroft knocked one in for MIT at the 3.14 mark.

Though Holcroft's was the only score allowed by UMass in the second and third periods, the Redmen defense was less stingy early in the game. Archer Bowen played a good game in the nets for UMass throughout the contest, but he was boomed by MIT in the first period before the defensemen got down to business. As a result, John Vachon scored with Holcroft assisting and Wismer followed with a goal at 18.46 to give UMass their first period deficit.

Barring weather problems tonight's game will be at the Amherst College rink against the University of Pennsylvania.

Intramural Basketball

The intramural basketball season started in full swing last Tuesday with the IFC league playing in the cage. In the first round of games played, TEP eased by TC 23 to 19 and SAE tromped ATG 52 to 12. In the second set of games, PSK swept by PSD 39 to 11 and TKE coasted to a 41 to 20 victory over AEPi.

On Wednesday evening the IFC again was in possession of the cage, with six games being scheduled. In the opening series of games SPE walked over ASP 54 to 19 and ZN edged out PMD 30 to 29. In the next set of games, LCA won 33 to 25 over a strong KS team and BKP beat QTV easily 38 to 21. The late show games played at 9:30 P.M. had TEP sweeping its bench beating PSD 60 to 8 and on the opposite court in a double overtime thriller SAE beat TKE 41 to 38.

Last night the IFC played six more games and this Monday they will do the same. Tuesday, Dec. 11, the dormitory league will start playing with the bigger dormitories playing in League A and the smaller dorms playing in League B.

Lussier, Majeski, Whelchel, Tedoldi Make All-YC Team

Sam Lussier, the explosive-running senior Redmen halfback, was the only unanimous choice for first team honors on the Yankee Conference football team as selected by the conference coaches, it was announced today.

The champions from the University of New Hampshire and the runner-up UMass squad dominated the first team selections with the Wildcats placing five men on the first team and the Redmen four. Connecticut and Rhode Island placed one each.

Jerry Whelchel, the sharp passing sophomore from Massachusetts won the nod for the quarterback spot over Lloyd Wells, New Hampshire's fine sophomore. Dan Serleka, UNH's leading ground gainer, was named to the other halfback spot and Tony Tetro, Rhode Island's crunching blockbuster, was selected for the fullback position.

Chuck Grzbielsi of New Hampshire and the Redmen's Paul Majeski are the ends and Bob Weeks of New Hampshire and John Contoulis of Connecticut, the tackles. Barry Stiber of New Hampshire and Bob Tedoldi of Massachusetts are the guards with Duncan Ogg of New Hampshire at center.

The second team is composed of the following: Ends—Dick Benz and Paul Marro of New Hampshire and Frank Bolden of Vermont; Tackles—Alan Arbuse of Rhode Island and Dave Sequist of Vermont; Guards—Chuck Scarpulla of Rhode Island and Alton Hadley of Maine; Center—Phil Soule of Maine; Quarterback Lloyd Wells of New Hampshire; Halfbacks — Dave Karponai of Connecticut and Ken Burton of Vermont, and Fullback Mike Eastwood of New Hampshire.

by NEIL BAKER '66

Nothing seemed to go right for the Little Redmen last night as they lost in a closely contested game to the Airmen from Westover A.F. Base at Westover.

It was an uphill battle all the way for the frosh as they just couldn't overcome a big lead piled up by the Airmen early in the first half.

The Redmen jumped off to a quick 4-0 lead with baskets by Forst and Gamble, but this lead was short-lived as Westover proceeded to throw in sixteen straight before Ira Gamble broke the drought with a seven-foot hook shot to make the score 16-6. The teams played even for the next twelve minutes until a splurge of 10 points made the score 37-34 Westover. The half ended with the score Westover 39, UMass freshmen 34.

The Redmen came back onto the court a determined team, behind now by only five points. Timmy Edwards started the half on the right foot with a 15-foot jumper to narrow the margin to three. Jack Forst tied the game at 42-all and then tied it again at 44-44 with a pair of beautiful buckets. Forst tied it again at 51 apiece with a foul shot but missed the go-ahead basket when he missed the next charity shot.

Then, Ed Driscoll, brilliant on the court the whole game, tapped one in to give the Redmen a 53-51 lead with 12:25 left in the game. This lead was short-lived as Bob Alexander tied it on a 25-foot beaut and Jerry Arceneaux put Westover out front again with two free conversions. The foul was on Gamble, his fifth, and this put him out of the game. The Redmen lost their highest scorer and tallest man on this count. Eleven minutes were left and the frosh were down by two.

Timmy Edwards tied it up again with his next two-pointer and Ed Driscoll had to tie it up again a minute later on a picture-play. With the score 57-57 the team seemed to fall apart. Two baskets by Alexander and one by Dick Ogletree gave the Airmen a quick six-point lead.

Timmy Edwards offset Bob Hall's shovel shot and Hal Dupee put them one point closer on a converted free throw. Two baskets each by Craig Farnsworth and the "Dup" made the score 81-79 with less than a minute to play. Craig Farnsworth fouled Bob Hall with 18 seconds to play. Hall had two shots, made the first and missed the second. The frosh grabbed the rebound and immediately called time with two seconds left. A pass from out-of-bounds to Edwards was short and the game ended, Westover winning, 82-79.

National Teacher Exams To Be Given At UMass

UMass has been designated a testing center for the 1963 administration of the National Teacher Examinations, Simon V. Keochakian, guidance counselor at the University, announced today. The examinations will be given Feb. 16.

College seniors preparing to teach, and teachers applying for positions with school systems which require N.T.E. scores are eligible to take the tests.

Mr. Keochakian pointed out that the University's designation as a testing center will give prospective teachers in the area a chance to compare examination performances with teachers throughout the country.

New Men's Interdormitory Council To Consolidate Dormitory Affairs

The University's newly formed Mens' Interdormitory Council is presently in its final phase of organization.

The purpose of the Council will be to consolidate the affairs of the University's 13 men's residence houses into basically one unit. It will serve as a coordinating unit which will operate concurrently with Womens' Interdormitory Council to foster a variety of mixed events.

The Council will be concerned with very nearly every activity that an individual residence house could accomplish alone but it will not interfere with their individual activities and it will function on a larger scale.

The ruling body of the Council is the Dormitory Presidents Assembly (D.P.A.) and from this body were elected the officers of the Council.

As an infant organization, the Mens' Interdormitory Council will thrive on student support and interest. Its first event will be forthcoming shortly.

A petition of protest presented the administration by a majority of the men of Plymouth states that "although the former residents of Abigail Adams have expressed a desire not to reside here, they are being forced to do so."

Also during the meeting, an act presented to the Senate by Jon Fife ('64 Van Meter) proposing that to be eligible to hold an R.S.O. office, the student must have the graduation average of his class, was tabled until the next Senate meeting to allow the senators time to consult their constituents.

Operetta Guild Announces Coming Production Plans

Officials of the UMass Operetta Guild announce they have been granted the production rights to The Threepenny Opera to be presented at the University in April.

With the book by Bertolt Brecht and the music by Kurt Weill, this opera for beggars has been translated by Marc Blitzstein. The Guild has received the rights from the Tams-Witmark Music Library, Inc., Louis H. Aborn, President.

The Operetta Guild has initiated this musical production as a Four-College cooperative venture. Both students and faculty of the University community as well as those from Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, and Smith Colleges will participate in the campus presentation on April 15, 17, and 18.

Staff members of the Music Departments of these institutions have pledged their support to this musical which has just been released to amateur musical theatre groups.

Auditions Tomorrow and Wednesday

Auditions for speaking and singing roles will be held on the University campus tomorrow from 1-4 p.m. in Room 10 of Old Chapel and Wednesday from 7-9 p.m. in Old Chapel Auditorium. Orchestral and technical personnel should complete their registrations at this time.

The success of The Threepenny Opera started in Berlin in 1928, then went on to Paris, Munich, Vienna, all Germany, and all Central Europe. It took some 26 years before New York had any success with the piece —when it opened there in March, 1954, to fine reviews and great prospects.

Then a ridiculous situation presented itself: the theatre-owner had leased the house to another show. After 12 weeks The Threepenny Opera closed, though business was terrific, and the last audiences were vocal and mutinous at the coming departure.

Brooks Atkinson, New York Times drama critic, began waging a campaign by inserting neatly and regularly at the end of his other reviews: "Bring back The Threepenny Opera."

Then the theatre changed hands (after several flops), and on September 20, 1955, it started again. The show ran six years and three months, a record in anybody's language.

The chief song of the work, "Mack the Knife" (also called "Moritat" and "Theme from The Threepenny Opera") bounced onto the hit-parade four distinct times, becoming radio-television's "Song Hit of the Year 1959" in Bobby Darin's sensational rendition.

The college-student crowds kept coming and enjoying and quoting; the sophisticates refused to be left out; the music-lovers wilted with pleasure at Weill's sweetness of tune and acidity of harmonic invention.

Springfield Mayor Wants Med. School

An effort to bring the UMass Medical School to the Springfield area was stepped up last week with the organization of a Greater Springfield committee to direct the drive.

Leland J. Kalmbach, chairman of the board of Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., hosted for a luncheon meeting of the group at the insurance company's home office in Springfield.

The committee being set up by the Citizen's Action Commission and Springfield Mayor Ryan is headed by CAC Chairman Roger L. Putnam. About 75 community leaders from Greater Springfield were invited to attend the luncheon.

Location of the medical school will be selected by the University trustees and the dean of the medical school. The dean has yet to be chosen by the trustees.

Harvard Bus. Dean To Interview

Dean Chaffee E. Hall Jr. of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration will visit the campus tomorrow to interview students interested in attending the Harvard Business School, Director of Men's Placement Robert J. Morrissey has announced.

Dean Hall will interview interested persons tomorrow between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., while visiting Placement and Financial Aid Services.

According to Morrissey, interested students should make appointments in advance.

UMass YR's Will Sponsor Alcorn Talk

The UMass Young Republicans will sponsor a perspective of the Republican credo by guest speaker Meade Alcorn, ex-Chairman of the Republican National Committee and currently professor of practical politics in the University's government department.

Alcorn will deliver his talk on Thursday, Dec. 13, at 8 p.m. in the S.U. Council Chambers. Following Mr. Alcorn's address there will be a coffee break in the Worcester Room at which interested students may meet with Alcorn and club members.

Alcorn's lecture is the first item of an interesting club program being sponsored by the Young Republicans. Also on the agenda this year will be more guest speakers, such as State Attorney-General Ed Brooke, panel discussions and films.

Senate Conducts Poll

The Senate Curriculum Committee is conducting a poll on UMass curricula.

The poll box will be placed in the S.U. lobby until Friday afternoon. The questions follow:

1) In your opinion, should junior and senior courses be entitled to unlimited cuts? a. Do you have any professors who do not allow such cuts? b. Name the course and instructor.

2) Do you think it is advisable that a course outline be given at the start of each course? a. Do you have any instructors who do not follow this procedure? b. Name the course and instructor.

3) Do you have any suggestions in the field of curriculum which you would like our committee to look at?

Nineteen Grads Enroll In Co-op Ph.D. Plan

The Four College Cooperative Ph.D. program has 19 candidates enrolled this semester in the areas of biological sciences, chemistry, French and German, Program Coordinator Stuart M. Stokes has announced.

The candidates include five from Smith, four from Mount Holyoke, two from Amherst and eight from UMass. All but two of the students are on grants, fellowships or graduate assistantships, including those under the National Defense Education Act.

At present, all the University candidates are enrolled in foreign languages while students from the other three colleges are enrolled in science. Stokes said it is unlikely such a division will prove permanent.

Plans for the cooperative Ph.D. program were first formulated in 1959. The first degree under the program was awarded to Dr. Tamotsu Taketomi in 1961. His thesis was done at Amherst College in the field of biology.

Degrees under the program are awarded by the University, but names of all four institutions appear on the transcript and diploma.

A hood, combining the colors of all four institutions, was designed by Charles E. Rogers of the Amherst art department.

Stokes said the Cooperative Ph.D. programs have now been authorized in biological sciences, chemistry, French, geology and German, but the possibility of offering programs in other fields is under consideration.

Candidates under the program originating from UMass and their field of study are: William Cuneo, French; Barbara Feigel, French; Joseph D. Guillory, French; (Mrs.) Violet James, French; Jules F. Eberhard, German; Robert R. Longyear, French; (Mrs.) Harriet Parrish, French and George Schaefer, German.

CAESURA: A Review

by JUDY DICKSTEIN

When the Quarterly became published tri-annually and known as The Literary Magazine of the University of Massachusetts, we had high hopes for a better quality, more readable publication; but the campus was disappointed. The editors resumed their old standards of esoteric mediocrity, and only a small fragment of the campus bothered to read the magazine; many did not even bother to take a copy, and piles of the magazine stood around the centers of the dorms and were finally discarded. Again this year, under new leadership, the magazine announced a change of name, raising hopes once more for a better literary magazine. And this time we have not been disappointed; the first issue of Caesura is certain to be well-received.

Under the leadership of editor Dick Towers, the fall issue of the magazine appeared in an attractive format, with the material discriminately selected and arranged.

First to meet the eye is the smart black-and-white cover featuring a line drawing by Walter Kamys of the Arts Department. Inside, the table of contents lists seven short stories, thirteen poems, and eight glossy center pages labeled—somewhat broadly—"ART." Naturally, some of the contributions were superior to others, yet after reading the magazine I was able to state, in truth, that I felt not a bit of space had been wasted on clearly inferior material.

Unlike past issues, there was a wide range of variety in the material selected for publication, and this was most admirably evident among the short stories: they include humor, violence, charm, pathos, suspense, tragedy, and irony to form a well-balanced reading diet, with something to appeal to every taste. "To Err . . . ," a story by Lester Neale, was a competent, professional piece of writing, and easily the highlight of the issue; the plot tautly dramatizes the abuses in a state hospital. The second story of particularly high merit was Paul Theroux's "Waldo, or Going to the Dogs." The scene revolves around the conversation of Waldo, his mother, and his Grammy, who has gone to the Oak Grove Cemetery to hunt dandelions. It is a fresh, animated story, as only this author can portray, with a whimsy at times reminiscent of Dylan Thomas. Among the other pieces of fiction, Eve Silberstein has warmly captured the spontaneity of childhood, and of the two successfully-executed stories by Sam Gorvine, "Joe," an account of several boys' weekend visit to New York City, is particularly entertaining. Robert Mastrodomenico's story of a janitor in a morgue has a diabolique charm; and Larry Schectman rounds out the issue with grueling tale of a punk's tangle with the police.

As in past issues, outstanding poety appeared by Doug Flaherty and Charles Dean. Mr. Flaherty's "Chambermaid at the Door" and Mr. Dean's "Hearing Frost Read" were among the most memorable of this fall's selection. Apparently for the inherent prestige value, a poem by Robin Skelton, "Every Word," was included among the student work: Mr. Skelton is on leave from Manchester University (England) to be resident poet on campus this semester. The remainder of the student poetry was not overly impressive, with the possible exception of Paul Theroux's "Whores Say Their Prayers" and Karen Tucker's "Preparation of Herring Gull Study Skin."

The art section again contained a good variety of material: a collage by Mary Desmond, a line engraving by William Shumway, photographs by Don Crasco and Stan Patz, and intaglio prints by Paul Serra and Carolyn Heitin. And each of the eight offerings was outstanding in its area of art; the entire section formed an apt supplement to the literary portion of the magazine.

Caesura is an overwhelmingly delightful success, and certainly the campus will eagerly await a second issue of equally high quality.

To the entire staff and all contributors, our thanks and admiration.

To Unite The United Nations

At the moment, the United Nations faces its greatest test. The financial difficulties which have arisen threaten the organization with complete collapse. Yet, many have not realized that this difficulty is but the necessary by-product of contemporary political organization. This is not simply a situation wherein historically familiar political forces stimulate conflict but rather one in which nations think in entirely contradictory political contexts. Indeed, even upon the etymological level there exists but a marginal degree of common ground. What is the meaning of the "free world" or of a "peoples' democracy?"

In the West, the Soviet attack upon the organization of the secretariat is taken as an attack upon the entire structure of the United Nations. This is not so. In fact, this attack (which until U Thant was particularly forceful) is the result of a Soviet view which asserts that no man can be truly neutral but rather must be an instrument of specific ideology. In this context, Dag Hammarsjold must necessarily represent "bourgeois" values despite his protestations of objectivity.

This is the crux of the difficulty. However, U Thant's election to a new term, although not constituting a change in the overall ideological conflict, does reflect a Soviet position which, unlike that of China, sees War as the greatest danger at the moment. In the context of war or peace, Thant has exhibited what may be called the "new objectivity," a flexibility which does not result from specific ideological value judgments (i.e. East versus West) but one which transcends these judgments and reaches common grounds and universally accepted definitions.

Essentially, the world organization can only function effectively in areas which preclude direct confrontation of the major powers. Certainly the Congo crisis has borne this out. Those who assail the Soviets for their failure to meet their financial obligations in the Congo are maintaining a dangerously idealistic position. It is dangerous because it leads to disenchantment with the United Nations, a disenchantment which frequently ignores the truly humanitarian work of the organization in other areas.

The ideological conflict which necessarily hinders the effectiveness of the Secretary General need not lead to stagnation within the United Nations for while this situation exists the eradication of poverty and disease remains the goal of all, for whatever reasons. This is perhaps another road to peace.

A Review

TARTUFFE

by ANN MILLER

A step forward in theatrical ability was displayed by the University Theatre this past weekend with their production of Moliere's Tartuffe.

The infant organization's staging of the 17th century French comedy, their second vehicle since formal introduction to the UMass campus in September, was not only a good show but was several notches higher in acting quality than Oedipus Rex.

Moliere's Tartuffe, so very typical of the work of the great French playwrite noted for his indignant criticism of the French society he lived in, is a cutting attack on the hypocrisy Moliere saw rampant about him in the rising French bourgeoisie. In the grand tradition of such Moliere plays as Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, the playwrite, in Tartuffe, makes fun of everyone he dares make fun of and praises those he dares not leave unpraised—notably King Louis XIV.

Harold Hinds as the hypocrite Tartuffe, Frank Powers as the prosperous businessman who is taken in by Tartuffe, and Deena Ferrigno as Dorine, the maid who combines all the best qualities of Charlie Chan and Pollyanna, did bang-up jobs with their parts.

Hinds deserves special compliments, since he only had a week to prepare his part for show-time.

Powers' versatility is amazing. Last seen in the tragic and powerful role of Oedipus, he carried the part of Orgon with charming finesse—every inch the silly little French businessman.

Miss Ferrigno as the brisk and lovable Dorine was quite captivating.

Nancy Baker as Orgon's wife Elmire was good, but in raising her voice to be heard by the audience, seemed to lose some naturalness in the part. She appeared nervous, but gave promise of more acting talent than showed clearly at Friday's show.

David Manley and Louise Aceti as the star-crossed lovers, Valere and Marianne—Orgon's daughter—were more than sufficient in their roles. Manley showed definite improvement over his handling of the part of Creon in Oedipus Rex.

Thomas Kerrigan was not nearly so impressive in the role of Elmire's brother Cleante as he was in the role of Tiresias in Oedipus Rex. On the other hand, his aristocratic affections in the part were very nicely done.

Jean Roanowicz as Orgon's mother Madame Pernelle was properly "grande damish" though she seemed a trifle stilted in vocal expression.

James Wrynn as Orgon's son Damis, Robert Mastrodomenico as Monsieur Loyal, Paul Cwiklik as a police officer and Sandra Teguis as Mme. Pernelle's maid Flipote did well in minor parts.

The most striking aspect of the production was the tremendously humorous affections displayed, particularly by Powers and Hinds. Hilariously funny physical contortions and nose-in-the-air mannerisms were beautifully carried out by the whole cast.

Spectacular lighting and sets were notable by their absence. Although the lighting projected simply by elimination of gaudy colors and spotlights, the stage sets balanced the effect in the hint of more ornate furniture and architectural style of Louis XIV's period. The last but not the least praise goes to the classes in sets and designing which were responsible for scenery.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Tiger, Tiger Burning Bright

Dear G.M.,

So you are upset over the use of nicknames in sports?

Ever hear of Joltin' Joe or the Yankee Clipper? How about baseball's Iron Horse? The Babe? The Lip? Or Professor or Moose or even the Splendid Splinter? Big Poison? Or names like Zeke and Pie and Kiki and Home Run and Cracker and Dizzy and Dazzy? How about the Rajah or the Fordham Flash and the Say Hey Kid? Perhaps you never chanced to hear them?

Just in case you are innocent enough to have been secluded from those names, surely you remember football's Crazy Legs, the Gipper, Blood, Bootin' Ben or Big Daddy? Being the sports enthusiast you profess to be, I know you'll easily recall the Galloping Ghost, the Four Horsemen, Bronko and the Dutchman? Even the courts have heard of Whizzer. How about Yat and the Kat with the Rock and Big Red supported by Ruff Tuff Sam? Or Hopalong and Nightrain and Goog?

Ye were right, listener G.M. Such a "zoo"! Those nicknames just listed never existed; just a nightmare. There is no color and personality in sports, is there?

But if the nightmare persists, try this simple solution. Turn off your radio, stop reading the sports pages and don't pay your athletic fee next semester. And you'll even save money, too! Just think, you won't have to buy stamps for silly Letters to the Editor. Then no one will dump on you any more, Tiger.

La Cucaracha

To the Editor:

This morning, after the initial struggle of rising and preparing ourselves for another inspiring day, we marched stalwartly to the Commons for our morning feast. After finishing the marvelous meal, we were quite startled to discover—lo and behold—a large reddish-brown bug, commonly known as a cockroach, on the floor advancing bravely toward us.

Finding the situation highly nerve-racking (what if it were the advance guard for an army of the little beasts!), we went to the kitchen to request military aid.

The young man to whom we spoke, upon being advised of the coming invasion, and our plans to exterminate the advanced guard (briefly stated, we asked him to kill it.), said, "Why bother? The place is crawling with them."

Fellow students, if the people who know think "the place is crawling with them," can we not arise and fight?

The enemy can easily penetrate our ranks, infest our dorms, and otherwise make life unpleasant.

"Today the Commons, tomorrow the whole University!" This may well be their motto.

Can we not fight this horrible menace? Ask not what the University can do for you, but ask, rather, what you can do for the University. Besides, if they wouldn't kill 'em, we will!

Wouldn't we?

Honest

To the Editor:

After the Abby fire many students on this campus unselfishly did much to help the girls of the Abby by donating books, money and other things that the girls were in need of. Now it seems that some very inconsiderate student has forgotten how much these girls have lost. A somewhat blackened Sociology 25 book was taken from one of the Abby girls at the Commons Friday night. This was obviously not a mistake as this was the only book taken.

Congress To Hold Hearings On Problem Of Federal Aid To Education Imbalance

The 88th session of the U.S. Congress will hold hearings next year on the imbalance of federal aid to higher education—one of the hottest controversies on the American campus.

Putting the problem before Congress will be a House labor and education subcommittee headed by Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.). Aired during these hearings will be many of the problems cited by Harold Orlans in a Brookings Institution report, "The effects of federal programs on higher education."

After a detailed study of 36 colleges and universities receiving varying amounts of federal aid, Orlans spelled out the problems this way:

1. Leading universities with top quality faculty are getting the lion's share of the federal funds for research in their science departments. Some social science departments are getting lesser amounts of aid while the humanities are being almost completely ignored.

2. While the funds benefit the science departments and faculty of a few universities, it hurts their education programs by keeping the top professors out of the classroom and in the laboratory. The federal money is putting science faculty members in a higher income bracket, and making the best students wonder whether a career in the humanities is really worthwhile.

Research Versus Students

"It's awful short-sighted to keep the best minds doing research," Orlan said, "when your scientific progress depends upon the students at the universities."

A part of the solution to this growing problem according to Orlans, is to broaden the federal programs for large state universities.

"You can't expect a federal agency to ask a small midwestern university to undertake a program that could only be handled by the facilities at M.I.T.," Orlans said in an interview.

But, he added, the continued concentration of the large-scale research programs must be continued at the leading schools, but that more projects, "for the smaller but competent researcher", must be fostered.

Both the National Science Foundation and the National Institute of Health have recently started to do this.

At the NSF, where basic research is primary, the universities getting lesser amounts of funds are being helped. Starting in fiscal 1962, the NSF is granting funds based on a percentage of the universities, over-all federal program costs.

"This program lets the school do whatever it wants with the additional money and generally strengthens its science department," said Clyde Hall, a spokesman for the NSF.

Struggle to Aid Humanities Departments

Orlans is not alone when he reports that federal programs must be directed at aiding the man in the classroom. Agreeing with him on this point is almost every government agency contracting research programs. Aiding the educator was the recommendation of a presidential fact-finding committee headed by Glenn Seaborg, now the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Capitol Hill sources are predicting that Congress will eventually direct a broadening of the distribution of research programs. There seems little or no opposition to such action.

Offering the biggest struggle on Capitol Hill will be the problem of aiding the much-ignored humanities departments. Most Humanities support now comes in the form of student aid and a few research and education projects for various humanities programs.

Government education officials said Congress could help most in this field by creating aid programs to bolster these departments. However, hopes are dim that the Federal Government would create an agency which would give support to humanities on the scale that science departments are getting.

Social sciences, however, are becoming more aware of federal programs which can improve their faculty and department situations. Orlans reports that federal aid to the social sciences is drawing a larger student enrollment, even though natural sciences are getting the largest slice of the pie.

HAPPY TALK

As we all know, conversation is terribly important on a date. When lulls in the conversation run longer than an hour or two, one's partner is inclined to grow logy—even sullen. But occasionally one finds it difficult to keep the talk going, especially when one is having a first date with one. What, then, does one do?

If one is wise, one follows the brilliant example of Harlow Thurlow.

Harlow Thurlow prepares. That is his simple secret. When Harlow is going to take out a new girl, he makes sure in advance that the conversation will not languish. Before the date, he goes to the library and reads all 24 volumes of the encyclopedia and transcribes their contents on his cuffs. Thus he makes sure that no matter what his date's interests are, he will have ample material to keep the conversation alive.

Take, for example, Harlow's first date with Priscilla de Gasser, a fine, strapping, blue-eyed broth of a girl, lavishly constructed and rosy as the dawn.

Harlow was, as always, prepared when he called for Priscilla, and, as always, he did not start to converse immediately. First he took her to dinner because, as everyone knows, it is useless to try to make conversation with an unfed coed. Her attention span is negligible. Also, her stomach rumbles so loud it is difficult to make yourself heard.

"Wash your cuffs and be my love!"

So he took her to a fine steak house where he stoked her with gobbets of Black Angus and mounds of French fries and thickets of escarole and battalions of petit fours. Then, at last, dinner was over and the waiter brought two finger bowls.

"I hope you enjoyed your dinner, my dear," said Harlow, dipping into his finger bowl.

"Oh, it was grandy-dandy!" said Priscilla. "Now let's go someplace for ribs."

"Later, perhaps," said Harlow. "But right now, I thought we might have a conversation."

"Oh, goody, goody, two-shoes!" cried Priscilla. "I been looking everywhere for a boy who can carry on a intelligent conversation."

"Your search is ended, madam," said Harlow, and pulled back his sleeves and looked at his cuffs to pick a likely topic to start the conversation.

Oh, woe! Oh, lackaday! Those cuffs on which Harlow had painstakingly transcribed so many facts—those cuffs on which he had noted such diverse and fascinating information—those cuffs, I say, were nothing now but a big, blue blur! For Harlow—poor Harlow!—splashing around in the finger bowl, had gotten his cuffs wet and the ink had run and not one word was legible! And Harlow—poor Harlow!—looked upon his cuffs and broke out in a night sweat and fell dumb.

"I must say," said Priscilla after several silent hours, "that you are a very dull fellow. I'm leaving."

With that she flounced away and poor Harlow was too crushed to protest. Sadly he sat and sadly lit a cigarette.

All of a sudden Priscilla came rushing back. "Was that," she asked, "a Marlboro you just lit?"

"Yes," said Harlow.

"Then you are not a dull fellow," she cried, and sprang into his lap. "You are bright! Anybody is bright to smoke such a perfect joy of a cigarette as Marlboro which is just chock full of yummy flavor, which has a Selectrate filter which comes in a soft pack that is really soft, and a Flip-Top Box that really flips, and which can be bought wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states and Duluth . . . Harlow, tiger, wash your cuffs and be my love."

"Okay," said Harlow, and did, and was. © 1962 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro cigarettes, who print this column at hideous expense throughout the school year, are very happy for Harlow—and for all the rest of you who have discovered the pleasures of Marlboro.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS SPECIAL

Baker, Pilot, Renfro And Saimes; Collegian All-American Backfield

by AL RICE '66

After thirteen long weeks, the college football season ended Saturday when Syracuse beat UCLA 12-6. With it, ended some of the most exciting and surprise-packed events ever crammed into one year. The teams staying on top since the season opened September 15, have not been the teams rated as powers in the pre-season polls. Neither has the All-American team conformed to that which the experts expected early in the fall.

Headling the Collegian's dream team is Heisman Trophy Winner . . . Terry Baker, a left handed gunner who led the nation in total offense with 2,276 yards, completed 112 passes including 15 for scores, and ran for 538 yards on the ground. His teammate at Oregon State and favorite receiver, Vern Burke, takes one of the end positions hands down. All he did was catch ten of Baker's touchdown bombs and roll up 1007 yards on passes caught, a new collegiate record. Hal Bedsole, a junior on the Rose Bowl bound Southern Cal Trojans, and his nine touchdowns caught takes the other end position.

The line shapes up as one of the beefiest ever. The tackles are Bobby Lee Bell of Minnesota and Jim Dunaway of Mississippi. Both were the pre-season picks at that spot and are almost sure bets for unanimous selection to all the All-American teams. Jack Cverko is a 236 pound guard from Northwestern in his junior year. His brother Andy, now with the Dallas Cowboys of the NFL, gained the same honor with the Wildcats four years ago. Dave Watson of Georgia Tech rates the other guard berth for his top work up front all season for the team that upset mighty Alabama two weeks ago.

Rounding out the interior line is center Leroy Jordan of Alabama. Jordan had the most tackles of any Southeastern Conference lineman and is one of the top linebackers in the country.

The backfield, besides Baker, is composed of Preacher Pilot of New Mexico State and Mel Renfro of Oregon at halfback and George Saimes of Michigan State at fullback. Pilot led the NCAA in rushing for the second year in a row with 1247 yards, was second in scoring with 92 points, and totalled 30 points on five touchdowns against North Texas State last month. As a sophomore last year he crossed the goal 21 times and wound up with 138 points. Renfro carried home 13 touchdowns for Oregon and rushed for 753 yards, good enough for eleventh in the country. He also is one of the five juniors on the first team.

SECOND TEAM

Northwestern's sophomore phenom Tom Myers quarterbacks a second team backfield of Jerry Stovall, Eldon Fortie, and Dave Francis. Myers led Ara Parseghian's Wildcats to their most successful season in over ten years, while completing 116 passes.

Stovall has been almost the whole offense for the seventh rated Louisiana State Tigers this season, and the other halfback, Eldon Fortie, a tailback for Brigham Young University finished second in rushing behind Pilot in running for 1149 yards, and he also passed for 814 yards. His 13 touchdowns and two conversions placed him third in scoring with 86,and enabled the BYU Cougars to win the Western Athletic Conference crown in the league's first year of existence.

Dave Francis replaced Bob Ferguson as Ohio State's fullback and gained the Big Ten rushing title with a splurge against Michigan last week.

The ends are Hugh Campbell of Washington State, third in passes caught with 57, and Pat Richter of Wisconsin with 38 receptions. Campbell, a senior, led the nation in receiving in his sophomore year with a record 66 and last year with 53 but his record fell to Burke this year.

The line is fixed with Steve Barnett of Oregon and Bob Vogel, captain at Ohio State, as tackles and Johnny Treadwell of Texas and Leon Cross of Oklahoma as guards. Center is Don McKinnon, mainstay of the unbeaten, untied Dartmouth team.

FREETHROW CONTEST

A campus-wide free throw contest is being sponsored by the department of intramurals starting Tuesday, Dec. 11, at the Men's Physical Education Building

The contest will be run at the noon hour from 12:00 to 1:00 P.M. Tuesday through Friday. A prize will be offered to the best shooting average out of 25 tries. The contest is open to everyone on campus including faculty and graduate students.

Participation requires no special equipment and whenever you have a moment after lunch drop into the cage and try your skill. Last year winners were Walter Crotty and Dick Blomstrom who tied for honors making 22 out of 25 attempts at the basket.

Graham And Warren 1963 Football Captains

Paul Graham, junior tackle from Malden, Mass. and Dick Warren, junior fullback from Northampton, Mass. have been elected Co-Captains of the University of Massachusetts 1963 football team.

Graham, a graduate of Malden H.S. and a physical education major at UMass, has been a starting tackle for the Redmen for the past two years and one of the steadiest linemen on Coach Vic Fusia's squads.

Warren, a graduate of Northampton H.S., is a pre-med major, and has for the past two seasons earned his varsity letter as a fullback on the Redmen squads. During the past season, he was the starting UMass fullback for much of the year, and Coach Vic Fusia has described him as "one of the finest defensive cornermen that I have had the pleasure of coaching."

Dorms Start Intramural Basketball Tuesday Night

Dormitory basketball will start this week on Tuesday, with six games scheduled at the Men's Cage. The dormitories have been broken into two leagues of seven teams apiece as follows:

LEAGUE A
- Baker
- Brett
- Gorman
- Hills North
- Hills South
- Van Meter
- Butterfield

LEAGUE B
- Berkshire
- Mills
- Plymouth
- Wheeler
- Chadbourne
- Greenough
- Hampshire

Tuesday at 8:00 p.m., Brett will play Butterfield and Gorman will play Van Meter; at 8:45 Hills North vs. Hills South and Mills vs. Hampshire, and at 9:30 Plymouth against Greenough and Wheeler against Chadbourne. On Thursday night the dormitories will also play six more games.

In IFC competition last Thursday night, TC edged out ASP 30 to 27 while ZN breezed home winning 36 to 15. PSK had trouble, losing to QTV 34 to 22 in the 8:45-9:30 games as did AEPi who lost to KS 42 to 27. In the last set of games, LCA crushed PMD 61 to 32 and SPE effortlessly swept by BKP 43 to 23. Tonight and Wednesday the IFC will play 12 games completing almost half their season schedule.

Redmen Gymnasts Too Much For Improved Ithaca Squad

The University of Massachusetts Gymnastic squad has returned from its first road trip of the season sporting a resounding 70.5-25.5 victory of the Ithaca College gym team.

UMass took all of the meet's six first places; three by Dave Williams '65, two by Dave Yates '63 and one by Bruce McCracken '63. The Redmen led all the way with the score at the half being 38½ to 9½.

Ithaca was much improved over last year, but could not match the red hot Redmen. The entire U of Mass team performed well; only one routine was not completed as planned. It was particularly encouraging that the sophomores, Stanley Brallier, floor exercise and rings; Joseph Parner, floor exercise and high bar; and David Feindel, side horse, were close behind the upperclassmen in their respective events.

David Williams scored firsts with strong exercises on rings, side horse and parallel bars. Co-captain Dave Yates placed first in floor exercise and long horse, and placed second on high bar to his co-captain, Bruce McCracken, who performed one of the outstanding routines of the meet in this event. McCracken also placed second on the parallel bars.

The team which now boasts a 1-1 record will next meet the cadets of West Point at West Point on January 9, 1963.

Mermen Lose 49-45 To Amherst Swim Squad

by DON GRANT '61

Friday night the Varsity swim team was defeated by Amherst College, third ranked in New England, 49 to 45. The Redmen continued their record smashing by establishing three new marks.

In this near upset, Mike Rothschild bettered both his 200 yard freestyle and his 500 yard marks. Mike did the 200 sprint in 2:00.9, the tortuous 500 in 5:40.1. He lapped the second man by 3 lengths. John Grybko and Charles Monnier were one two in the close 200 yard, John setting 2:39.1 as the new standard in the breaststoke. Mike Bjornholm grabbed firsts in the 50 and 100 yard free style sprints.

The third double winner for the University was Bruce Morton. He took the 200 yard backstroke and the 200 yard individual medley. The Amherst men set a record of 3:33.7 in the closing 400 yard free style relay.

Our team did extraordinarily well since they swam a team of about 30 men with only 12. Some men went in 3 events.

The Redmen swim at Wesleyan University on Wednesday.

WEEKEND LEAGUE BASKETBALL

All students or faculty interested in playing weekend basketball starting the second semester should form a team and submit a roster to room 8 at the Men's Cage, by Jan. 9. Last year's campus champion, the Flicks, played in this league and succeeded in beating the winners of the independent, Dormitory, and Interfraternity leagues to win the basketball trophy.

Forfeit Of One Match Costs Matmen Victory

Last Thursday night in Worcester, UMass was forced to forfeit one match to WPI due to an injury to Co-Captain Alan Israel. As it turned out this could have been the difference, as the University won four of the seven game matches between the two schools.

However, as happened last year, all UMass wins were by decision while the forfeit and one of the WPI wins were by pin. Since the pin gives a team five points toward the final score while a decision gives only three, WPI prevailed by the final score of 16 to 12.

Special words of praise for their performances must be given to Mike Rivers and Craig DeWallace who both gave away considerable weight and wrestled very good matches to add to the UMass total. Also one could not but admire the job done by Bob Ellis in holding Russ Trask, one of the best wrestlers in New Engand, to a 2-0 decision. Bob showed a spirit and drive that is sure to pay off in future matches. Co-captain Tom Best did his usual fine job in winning his match in the manner that is expected of a good wrestler, and Boris Chevone did a good job in winning also for the Redmen.

There were four exhibition matches wrestled. In what can only be rated as a fine hope for the future, the Redmen took all four, two by pins and two by decision; all quite decisively.

Tickets for the UMass-UConn basketball game at Storrs on Wednesday December 12, are now available in room 10A of the Men's Physical Education Building. The price is $1.00 per ticket.

Redmen Roll Over Rutgers' Scarlet Knights 87-65

Backcourt Combo Of Hill, Bernard Scores 46 Points

by STEVE HEWEY '63

The University of Massachusetts, suffering from a point famine in its first two contests this season, enjoyed a feast Saturday night as it raced to an early 17-6 lead and then rolled on to drown visiting Rutgers University 87-65.

For the Redmen, who really opened up and forced the opposition to play their way for the first time this year, it was win number two against one loss. For the Scarlet Knights, who were never quite in the ball game after the first UMass basket, it was their third straight setback.

Big, burly Cliff Peterson hit on a 15 foot jumper to start the scoring in the first half. Rodger Twitchell tied it for UM with another jumper and then put the Redmen ahead to stay with a one hander. Two free throws by Rutgers backcourt man Bill Craft cut it 5-4 but jumpers by Dan Laakso and Charlie O'Rourke boosted the UMass command 9-4.

Rutgers Baffled

Rutgers was baffled. They hoped to score on the easy ones underneath but the Redmen defense kept them to the outside for most of the game where they were stranded because they lacked the long outside shot. Meanwhile Pete Bernard and Clarence Hill had put together a twelve point splurge and Rutgers was on the short end of a 21-8 score.

Ahead by a comfortable margin, the UMass five still kept the pressure on. They pressed and Rutgers found the pressing tactics too much. Passes were picked off or went astray and the Rutgers mistakes were turned into quick Redmen points. With UMass dominating both boards and Bernard and Laakso popping jump shots from outside the visitors found themselves down by 18, 29-11 with 8:48 left in the half.

Several times during the closing minutes of the first half the Knights managed to spring loose their big man Peterson underneath. But Peterson had trouble finding the hoop. Only the foul shooting of guards Jay Marcus and Bill Crafts, along with occasional layups by forward Tom Ashley kept Rutgers alive while Hill, Twitchell and Laakso were rounding out a 49-30 Redmen lead at halftime.

UMass was greeted by a full court press as the second half opened. The Rutgers press harassed the Redmen momentarily and their lead was shaved to 15, 53-38. UMass called for a time out with 18:00 showing on the clock to map some quick strategy. With time back in, a layup and jumper by Bernard, a driving layup by Hill and a Reynolds tap-in boosted the UM by 21.

Redmen Foul Out

Charlie O'Rourke left the game on fouls at the 15 minute mark with the score 61-40. Eliot Gventer, in to replace O'Rourke, picked up his quota of fouls five minutes later and bid farewell. He was joined a minute later by Rodger Twitchell also picking up five fouls.

Rutgers had the same trouble it had in the first half. The UM press had them saddled and they were getting only one shot at the basket as Reynolds and Laakso swept the boards clean. Pete Bernard and Clarence Hill did the bulk of the scoring in the last ten minutes, Pete on the jumpers and Clarence on driving layups. With 5:12 left UM was coasting along 80-57.

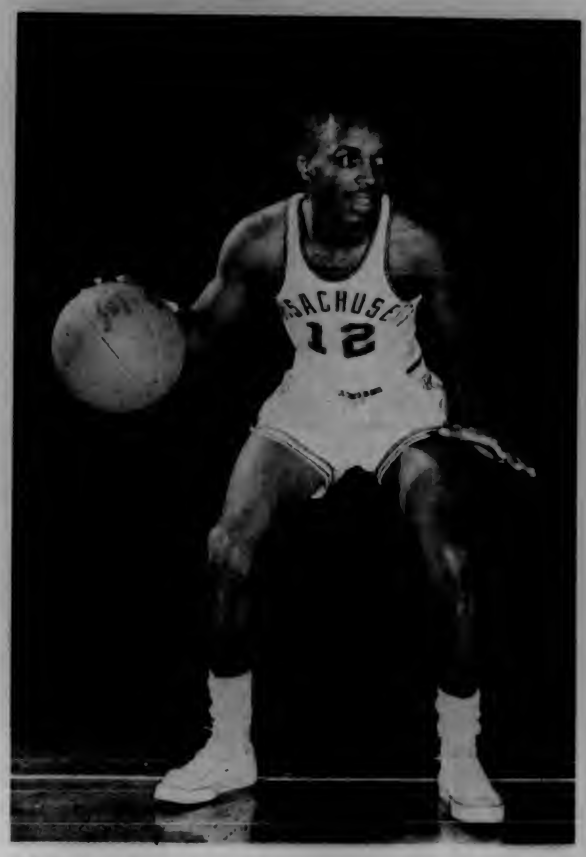
Big John Reynolds, on the hustle all night long on defense, scored the last 5 points for U-Mass, his last basket a driving layup after Pete Bernard had fed him a perfect lead pass.

Hill and Bernard

The backcourt combo of Hill and Bernard produced 46 of the Redmen points. Bernard had 20, Hill 26. Rodger Twitchell had 17 for the game although he fouled out with 9:18 remaining. In the last 3 games Twitchell has compiled a .636 average from the floor.

High men for the visiting Knights were Cliff Peterson with 20 and Bill Craft with 16. Rutgers was cold on floor shots, sinking 20 out of 67. The Redmen cashed in on 36 of 67.

Wednesday night comes the big test for UMass when it tangles with its first Yankee Conference opponent of the season at Storrs, Conn. It has been many a year since a Redman team has left the UConn Field House victorious. If the Redmen hope to hold on to their YanCon title dumping UConn is a must this year, and if it can be done at Storrs, all the better.



Redmen sophomore backcourt ace Clarence Hill teamed up with teammate Pete Bernard to tally 46 of UMass' 87 points. Hill, playing the game while suffering a case of the flu, scored 26 of these points.

UMass Pucksters Drop 2-1 Contest To Blue And White

by AL RICE '66

The University of Massachusetts hockey team lost what looked like a sure victory Friday night in Deerfield when Ed Miller of the University of Pennsylvania scored with a pair of third period goals to drop the Redmen 2-1.

The game was a defensive battle all the way, and there was far more action in the penalty box than in the nets. Penn recorded 38 minutes off the ice and Mass. spent a total of 18 minutes in the box, but the game didn't see its first goal until Dave Higgins scored at 3:47 of the second period on a power play with John Lasher and Charlie Glew assisting while Penn was a man short.

The big factor in the game was the top notch work of the Penn boys in killing penalties. The Blue and White had a full team on the ice only about half the game, but the Penn penalty killers allowed only one Mass goal.

UMass had a load of opportunities to knock in goals and continually Penn broke up the plays before the Redmen got within scoring distance. Down near the net, Penn made it next to impossible for UMass to get any shots off.

The Redmen were equally tough in keeping Penn in check and Archer Bowen was called on to make very few saves for UMass until late in the contest. Gerry Clinton and Bob Chisholm excelled on defense, allowing almost no Penn offense until Miller scored in the third frame.

The first goal credited to Miller actually came when Bowen kicked the puck in himself during a flurry around the Mass nets at 7:38 of the final period. Only 4:28 later he slammed in another tally that gave Penn the lead they held the rest of the way.

UMass had over seven minutes to tie the game, but Penn continued to be tough in the tight places and held off the Redmen although two penalties to Russell had them shorthanded for over half the remaining time. Russell got tossed in the box for offensive checking at the thirteen minute mark and fourteen seconds after he went back on the ice, he was slapped with two more minutes for another violation. Nevertheless Mass could not get moving against the Penn defenses and their own slipshod passing.

The game put both teams at a 1-1 record. Mass beat MIT in their opener and Penn lost to Cornell. The next Redmen contest is against Amherst College next Tuesday afternoon at 4 p.m.

Senate File

The following is one in a series of articles about the workings of various Student Senate committees. The articles are written by members of the Senate Public Relations Committee who are qualified to write authoritatively on the various matters chosen for the articles.

A very important Student Senate committee which is usually heard of only twice a year is the Election Committee.

The Student Government Association By-Laws state that "The Election Committee shall be responsible for the conduct of all Student Government Association elections, except Judiciary election."

But it has a larger purpose—to see that these elections are run with ease and efficiency. It is with this purpose constantly in mind that the Election Committee is currently undertaking a complete revision of the election rules.

Headed by Senator Fred Thurberg ('64 At-Large), the committee consists of six Senators and a number of non-senators. They have come up with many suggestions that they will bring before the Senate for approval early next semester which they hope will facilitate more efficiently-run elections.

Among the proposals made were the establishment of a permanent day and time (Thursday between 8-11:15 p.m. is one suggestion) for student elections, the establishment of a vice-chairmanship of the committee to allow for more continuity of leadership in the event that the chairman leaves or does not return to school or the Senate, and the publishing of all rules affecting the candidates and the electorate.

These are only a few of many proposals and the committee welcomes any and all ideas which may aid the conduct of the elections.

by J.D., EXCHANGE EDITOR

Here we are back again with news from other campuses—or campi, if you prefer—across the country. We'll begin with events we mentioned last time.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN UNIV.—As part of the homecoming festivities, the students at Texas Christian adopted turtle racing, as previously seen at the University of Oklahoma. The event was an inter-fraternity one, and each house elected one member to the position of "turtle trainer." Among the useful pointers offered were these: Don't feed the turtle before the race so it won't be sleepy. And keep it in a small box so that when let loose it will scramble away.

MASS. INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY—Students here had another animal featured at their annual Soph-Frosh Field Day. The event was a greased pig race, and ended in a tie. Other events included collecting old filter tips, finding resistors-in-a-haystack, a gondola boat race, a bed race, and a glove fight.

CHARLETON COLLEGE — A fallout shelter system to protect at least 1500 persons has been started on this Northfield, Minn. campus. Basements of dormitories and classrooms will be utilized for shelters; underground passages between buildings, under at least three feet of earth and one foot of concrete, will also be equipped for shelter use. Supply depots will contain a two-week supply of food and water; hand-cranked generators will provide electricity. Bedding, first-aid kits, fire extinguishers, and battery-powered field telephones will also be stocked.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY — A graduate student was suspended from this university over a month ago for allegedly sharing his off-campus apartment with a co-ed from another school. His "indefinite" suspension—meaning that he can return at the beginning of any academic semester—was not disputed by himself or any of the university's student groups. However, a new student code is being proposed that would permit university interference in students' "private lives." His suspension came under a clause in the old code which stated that a Cornell student should conduct himself in a "decent and respectable manner at all times and in all relationships."

Dolce Alviani (left) and Janet Fortin (right) are pictured here at rehearsal for "Amahl and the Night Visitors" which will be presented at 7 p.m. this Saturday.

Opera Workshop Presents "Amahl" Saturday Night

The UMass Opera workshop is working on last minute plans for its second annual production of Gian-Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" to be presented Saturday, at 7 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The Christmas play, directed by Doric Alviani, will feature thirty students from the Wilbraham Regional High School.

The story concerns a small, crippled shepherd, Amahl (Dolce Alviani), and his mother, a poor widow (Janet Fortin). They are visited by Three Kings (David Amsden, Ernest Bilodeau, David McQuestion) on their way to Bethlehem.

The mother, bitter because the Wise Men's gifts are intended for a newborn child, attempts to steal for her son. When she discovers the baby is Christ, she not only gives back the gifts but wishes to add one of her own. Amahl comes to her rescue.

Also in the cast are a page, Stanley Wade, two dancers, Ann Cohen and Ron Julius; and the chorus of Wilbraham students.

Lighting is by Jim Allen; staging by Tim Donnelly, Bob Eaton, and Herb Mongue.

The costume committee includes Sally Gerry, Carol Walkwitz, Nancy Ellwell, and Jean Roanowicz.

Tickets for 'Amahl" may be purchased at the door.

Voting For Carni Queen To Be Friday

Winter Carnival officials have announced that elections for five finalists to compete for Winter Carni Queen will be held Friday in the S.U. lobby.

Officials said Carni Queen nominations have been submitted from all dormitories, fraternities and sororities.

The identity of the girl selected to represent the University as Winter Carnival Queen will be withheld until the Carnival Ball, when she will be crowned by President Lederle.

Winter Carni Publicity Committee officials said they "expect a large turnout for the elections" and expressed hope that "many students would indicate their choice of queen for one of the University's most prominent events."

The queen candidates are: Andy Michelman, Robie Labatte, Louise Brown, Carol Ricci, Michele Holovak, Nancy Oikel-

Majority Of Students Say Hatch Needs Enlargement

by BOB McKAY

During a survey conducted last week, it was found that over 90% of those interviewed stated that the Hatch either needed to be enlarged or added on to.

The Food Service Survey was conducted by the Food Management Class from Saturday, December 1 to Friday, December 7. During this week over 10% of the college community was interviewed in the Hatch. The purpose of the survey was to determine who was using the Hatch, when, what they usually purchased, how often they used it, and other comments such as crowded conditions and possible future additional services.

Of the 788 people interviewed, 659 were undergraduates and the remainder was comprised of graduate students, faculty members, staff members, visitors, and parents. It is interesting to note that while 51% of the students held meal tickets, 41% stated that, as a rule, they ate only hot meals there. Take out food proved to be the least popular, as expected.

When asked, "How often do you use the Hatch, as a rule?", 33% replied once a day, 30% more than twice a day, 29% twice a day, and only 8% less than once a day. The majority felt that the present crowded condition prevented them from using the Hatch more often. 52% stated that if the Hatch were larger or there was any improvement in the seating capacity, they would use the Hatch more often.

There were 1,434 comments on possible additional services that may be available in the future. 531 interviewees were in favor of a separate coffee bar, and 391 would prefer to have an open cafeteria to the present system. The votes then dropped to 195 each in favor of a waitressed service dining room and meeting rooms near the food line. Only 122 thought that vending machines should be installed in the Hatch.

Since it would be impossible to list each individual comment, the following are the items most commented on:

Take out juke box—27 comments
Juke box is O.K.—10 comments
Need good background music—7 comments
Faster service—5 comments
Better ventilation—5 comments

This program is headed by Mr. W. D. Scott, Chairman of the Student Union Planning Committee. The Student Union Activities Office concurrently conducted a survey on how the Union can better serve the student body. This survey is called the Total Building Facilities Survey and the results will be known before the Christmas break.

UMass Novice Debate Team Fares Well At Mt. Holyoke

The novice team of the UMass debating society made a fine showing at the annual Mt. Holyoke debating tournament last week.

In six rounds of debating, the novices, some of whom had not debated before the tournament, defeated Mt. Holyoke, Amherst, and Williams Colleges. In addition, John Morton, a freshman at the University, ranked third out of the 20 competing debaters.

The UMass delegation placed third in the wins and losses column with a 3-3 record. In team points, however, they ran a close second to Amherst College with 175 team points. Amherst scored 183 points.

A week previous to this tournament, the varsity segment of the debating society fared well in the first annual Yankee Conference Debating Tournament. Mike Farrell was awarded the second place negative certificate while Steve Jenkins, president of the club, placed second in affirmative speaking.

The team also broke even in this tournament by winning three while losing an equal number. The negative team, who won two of their three debates, placed fourth while the affirmative ranked third by winning one round out of the three.

UMass defeated UConn, URI, and University of Maine. The two losses of the affirmative team were by two points or less, explaining why they were able to rank third in the tournament.

Formal Ceremonies Held To Dedicate Brett House

A prominent alumnus and member of the Board of Trustees at UMass was honored Sunday at 2 p.m. when a new four-story dormitory was dedicated and formally named for him.

The dormitory for men students was named for Alden Chase Brett, a graduate of the University in 1912. The modern L-shaped building with special study rooms on each floor houses 252 students. The dormitory was built by the University Building Authority.

President John Lederle presided over the dedication ceremonies. The invocation was given by the Protestant Chaplain, Rev. J Lynn Springer. Other participants include Mr. George Pumphret of the University's Board of Trustees and chairman of the UMass Building Authority, and Mr. John W. Haigis, member of the University's Board of Trustees and chairman of the Committee on Buildings and Grounds.

John C. Maheu, Jr., President of Brett House and a member of the Class of 1966, spoke on behalf of the student body.

Dedicated by Boyden

Formal dedication of Brett House was made by Dr. Frank L. Boyden, Chairman of the University's Board of Trustees. The program closed with a response from Mr. Brett.

Mr. Brett was the only president of the UMass Building Association that built 19 dormitories, two faculty housing units and the S.U. during the last 20 years. Since 1960, University dormitories have been built by the University Building Authority.

Retired treasurer of the Hood Rubber Co., Mr. Brett is a retired director of the Second Bank State Street Trust Co. in Boston, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Boston Mutual Life Insurance Co., and president and director of the Arrow Mutual Liability Insurance Co.

During World War II, Mr. Brett served as assistant director of purchases for the War Production Board. He has been a member and vice president of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce and Boston chairman of the Committee for Economic Development.

Received Honorary Doctorate

In 1954 Mr. Brett received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the University. He served the University as a president of the Associate Alumni and received the Alumni Medal in 1960 from that organization for distinguished service to the University. He established the UM Foundation Inc., an organization formed to receive and administer gifts for the University.

He is also an honorary member of Adelphia, senior men's honor society at the University. At this year's commencement he was elected to membership in Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary Business Administration society. He has held a number of other prominent positions in his career of service to the community and the Commonwealth.

THROWING STONES

Recently, in popular literature and slick magazine publications, there has been a rash of articles concerning the morals of college students today. Whether the assertions in these articles are right or wrong, there still seems to be cause for hope. The administrators of the University of Massachusetts are concerned with this question, and are doing everything they can to strike a happy medium with respect to control and freedom in student affairs. In fact, their confidence is a little overwhelming.

Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women at the University, says that morals, like religion, are a personal matter. But she is quick to add that one ". . . has the obligation to live according to the moral standards and laws of the country or state . . . and if there is disagreement, to work for change through due process of law." This seems to be a fairly realistic point of view, although the question that is constantly being asked seems to have more to do with whether or not the women under the Dean's jurisdiction feel as she does about the question.

In this regard, Dean Curtis outlined what she felt should be the student's point of view. "Morals," she said, "do not give us many absolutes; they are culturally conditioned. But educated persons have the responsibility to try to establish high moral principles and practices in society, principles with reference to honesty, integrity, and the welfare of every individual. There should be no discrimination with regard to race or sex . . . While in school, growth is the most important thing to the student. Every person should use the opportunity to fulfill his or her finest potentialities for intellectual growth and personal fulfillment. To do anything which harms or handicaps another's fulfilling his finest capabilities is morally wrong."

Sounds somewhat like an extension of the Golden Rule, doesn't it? Well, what's wrong with that? After all, what are moral judgments worth if they affect only oneself? There are, indeed, very few such judgments, because we are forced to live and deal with others by the very nature of our lives.

As University Dean of Students, William Field, put it, the college campus is no longer an island divorced from the rest of the world. We can look to the college for the higher standards by which we are to organize our lives, but we must remember that the interchange between school and society at large is on the increase and that the college often gets as much as it gives. We must remember that the life of the student is influenced as much or more by forces from beyond the campus on which he has made his temporary home as it is by the platitudes and high ideals by which outsiders expect him to govern himself. If those who write articles criticizing the morals of college students will look around them, perhaps they will see where the supposed decadent influences pervading college life are really coming from.

How does that saying about people who live in glass houses go?

Henry Scott

A CONCERT FOR FUN

by NEAL ANDELMAN '63

Last night at 8:05 a grin walked on stage at Bowker Auditorium followed by one of the most talented and humorous pianists this campus has ever seen. One can not describe the frivolity and facial expressions of Mr. Henry L. Scott—you just had to be there.

Mr. Scott demonstrated the three basic types of piano players. He portrayed the "whistle-hummers," and the "breathers" with the greatest of oral dexterity. He portrayed the sitters with the greatest "posterior dexterity."

Legitimate music such as Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody was performed in a serious manner which provided the perfect balance for the lighter moments in music.

When Mr. Scott portrayed a five year old pianist at his first public recital, the boy caught his hand in the piano bench and missed every other note. At seventeen the boy caught his hand in the piano bench and still missed every other note, only now he did it a lot faster. At ninety-five he missed tne piano bench.

Highlights of the second act were Mr. Scott's portrayal of a silent movie pianist, "Rhythm at any price," and three ways to compose a hit record.

The first method was to "remember a melody that no one has thought of recently." The second method is to "think up a wonderful fingering, and then think up the notes to go with it." The third method is "to take a composition by one of the great masters, and then decompose it."

Towards the end of the concert Mr. Scott announced that he played on a Steinway piano exclusively—and that he had been asked to say this by the Baldwin Co.

For the second time this year (Number one was the Circle in the Square Players) the Distinguished Visitors Program has scored big!

ANY FOUR YEAR OLD

To the Editor:

I was much dismayed by the character of the material which appeared in last year's Literary Magazine; I hoped that this year's students would see a change in the character of the "literature" published therein. However, on reading the current issue of Caesura, I observe that the quality of the articles has, if anything, deteriorated.

In general, Caesura is nothing but an accumulation of degenerate trash. Crudeness and vulgarity seem to be the prerequisites for "literature". Joe, Waldo, and "Whores Say Their Prayers" exemplify this fact all too clearly. I need not go into detail about the content of these articles. A brief skimming of them will convince most readers that a four-year-old could write more intelligently.

The Student Senate appropriated $3,346.50 for the magazine for the fiscal year 1962-63. Unless the staff of the "literary" magazine can find better ways to spend $3,346.50, I suggest to the Senate that further appropriations for Caesura be discontinued.

Chorale Concert

HALF BAKED

by CHARLES ROUNDY

The Chorale concert last Sunday evening proved to be a disappointment. The choice of music was a limiting factor; Bach's Magnificat requires far more rehearsal time than students can afford, and there is little chance for the chorus to really sing. They have "the big sound" and the Magnificat doesn't. Fantasia on Christmas Carols by Vaughan Williams was about half as good as it should have been.

But the concert wasn't without merit. The diction was articulate and precise, the attacks vibrant; the balance and blend of voices was remarkably pleasant. The musicianship showed a conscientious desire to present the best possible.

Accompanist Philip Beaudry did a highly commendable job, and the soloists were capable. Clarinetist was none other than Joseph Contino, and flutists Norma Wolfson and Paulette LaPlante deserve mention.

As a whole, however, the concert sounded half-baked—probably because it wasn't in the oven long enough. But the potential is there, and in the future, if the "cook," Director John R. King, chooses an easier recipe, everything will come out much better. As a spectator, I suggest the recipe include more chorus work, fewer solos and music within the capability of the Chorale.

Confusion To Color

To the Editors:

After giving due consideration to the articles by both "G.M." and Jim Trelease, and having listened to some of Mr. Trelease's broadcasts, I find myself in full agreement with "G.M.". Mr. Trelease seems to think that nicknames add color and individualism to the sport. In his attempt to add color to the team I believe that he has overstepped his bounds of poetic license; moreover, in his attempt to nickname the entire team, Mr. Trelease has succeeded only in adding confusion rather than color to the game.

I.D.'s and the Police

To the Editor:

This letter is to inform the University of Massachusetts "Police Force" that they are not above University regulations but under them. The specific instance occurred on Sunday, December 9, 1962 in the south wing of the fourth floor of Van Meter House at approximately 11:00 p.m. The Police Officers took ID's in complete disregard of University regulations which state, and I quote, from the UMass Handbook ('62-'63 edition, p. 54): ". . . Campus Police . . . are entitled to examine an I.D. card . . . but under no circumstances is the student required to surrender his card to anyone." When informed of this rule the Police Officers said they could and actually did take four I.D. cards.

"Marble Mouth"

To the Editor:

Re Mr. Trelease:

Yes, there is color and personality in sports, and these do show up in nicknames of the athletes.

But the appeal of a sport does not lie in verbose and ridiculous descriptions of the actions and players involved. Instead the appeal lies in an understanding and appreciation of the players and the skills involved. As far as broadcasting is concerned, nothing can replace a concise and comprehensive coverage of a game.

As you say, there are many, many colorful nicknames in the realm of sports. But if you have as much knowledge of sports as you imply, you must realize that there are far more players who are addressed only by their Christian names. Even in cases where players have colorful nicknames they are still frequently addressed by their Christian name.

The nicknames you listed arose from admiration and as a representation of the player and his skills. They were not expressly coined to provide the color you feel is needed.

If you are so set on colorful nicknames, how about 'Marble-Mouth" for a sportscaster?

UM Tradition — Hatchet And Pipes; Customer Count 6400 Daily

When the Hatch was not and UMass was Mass State, members of the campus community had their coffee between classes at the C Store, located where Machmer Hall now stands.

by JOAN ST. LAURENT '66

"Let's go to the 'C Store' " was as common a saying six or seven years ago as "let's go to 'The Hatch' " is today on the UMass campus.

The 'C Store' was located in Old North College where Machmer is now. It included a post office, barber shop, book store and small diner used only for coffee and sandwiches.

Dean of Students William Field recalls that when the S.U. was in the planning stages, a student-faculty board decided to try and keep the spirit of the 'Redmen' and Metawampee in the naming of various Union areas.

For the dining area where students would congregate, Field said they searched for a name that would catch on, that people would remember easily and that would keep the Indian theme.

The Hatchet and Pipe Room was finally agreed upon with the foreknowledge that students would probably nickname it 'The Hatch'.

The original purpose of 'The Hatch', said William Scott, Director of the S.U., was only for serving snacks. But in October 1957 it opened serving plate lunches, which sold at the rate of about 450 for any given meal.

The S.U. annual report gave the average daily Hatch customer count in 1957 as about 3474. As the number of students increased, so did the number of customers. Today the average daily count is 6400.

When the S.U. was first built, Field said, many persons scoffed at the proposed enormous size of 'The Hatch', which seats 465. But now, only five years later, plans are being prepared to increase its size.

Red Socks, Silver Fox Meet In UConn Torture Chamber

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Even if Macbeth's weird sisters did not say, "Fair is foul and foul is fair when red socks meet the silver fox in the tortnre chamber," there is still no reason to doubt its validity.

It is like a great war when Matt Zunic, with his charmed red socks, and graying Hugh Greer, with the shiftiness of a fox, send their armies to battle on the hardcourt each year. Zunic is a passionate, rallying, oath swearing field general. His fierce desire for victory is unquenchable and his knowledge of the game unfathomable. One winter afternoon two years ago, he had his team running plays without a ball in a parking lot outside a basketball arena because another team was using the court inside.

Greer is a cold, dispassionate and crafty leader. His discipline and hunger for victory once drove him to put his team through a two hour workout at one o'clock in the morning when his club disembarked from the long 120 mile bus ride back to Storrs after losing to conference rival Rhode Island. Zunic is kinder than Greer. Matt gives his teams Thanksgiving and Christmas off; just the days—not the nights. Both men spell "dedication" with capital letters.

Tonight these two generals will battle with the customary viciousness in their attacks. And they will clash in New England's most awesome theatre of of war. The Connecticut Field House deservedly earned the title — the Torture Chamber — from the press several years ago. Long a dominant power in New England basketball, the University of Connecticut cultivated an enthusiasm and fever for this sport till now it stands as a sixth man on the court for the Huskies.

UConn fans fill the Torture Chamber 4,500 strong for every game, beginning early in the freshman preliminary. By the time the varsity takes the floor, a passionate, ceaseless roar fills the air. Players must use hand signals instead of shouting a play's number. The din is deafening. Radio announcers and working press must cup their hands to ears in order to hear. For the visitors, the incessant thunder is disheartening and confusing but to the Huskies it is sweet music.

UMass has not beaten Connecticut at the Torture Chamber in 26 years; not since 1936 and that is a long time. In recent years it has grown unbelievably close, but for former Coach Bob Curran and Matt Zunic it was agonizingly close. In 1958 Curran's Redmen led 67-66 going into the final minute of play. Ned Larkin, a slick, ball-handling backliner, took possession of the ball for UMass. Suddenly UConn's Jack Rose was racing down the court and scoring for the Huskies. Curran and UMass fans screamed, "Foul!" but the Connecticut fans cheered louder and officials said nil. Final score: UConn 71, UM 67.

In 1960, Zunic coached the Redmen to a 44-28 half-time lead. Before the night was over, UConn came from 16 points back, Mike Mole "fouled out" with only four fouls, and the Huskies won 72-70. Concerning the Mole incident, UConn's official scorer showed five fouls for the UMass guard, UMass' scorer Dick Bresciani cried four, and the two sportscasters working the game announced four. But the official scorer demanded five and Mole sat it out while the lead diminished to zero.

Last year, a confident Hugh Greer walked into the UMass locker room after beating the Redmen 72-56 for the second time that season. He shook the hands of departing seniors Fohlin, Leslie and Mole. The Silver Fox was talkative and confident of the YanCon crown. "Oh, well," he hummed. "We're not out of the woods yet." Peter Bernard mumbled, "You better believe THAT." If Greer did not, UConn did. Maine knocked off the Huskies the following week and the Greermen never really got "out of the woods" as UMass took the conference—despite the two losses to Connecticut.

At 8 p.m. this evening, "Foul may be fair and four may be five" when Red Socks meet the Silver Fox. No one will be "out of the woods" as a result of tonight's contest but they will be in the Torture Chamber where anything goes. And after 26 years, it is due to go for the Redmen.

UConn Tickets

Tickets for the UMass-UConn basketball ame at Storrs tonight are available in room 10A of the Men's Physical Education Building. The price is $1.00 per ticket.

Lussier, Majeski On UConn All-Squad

The Redmen's Sam Lussier of Massachusetts and Pat McCarthy of Holy Cross, a couple of explosive backs who have already reaped several New England honors this fall, dominated the balloting for the Connecticut all-opponent football team for 1962.

McCarthy, a quarterback, and Lussier, Vic Fusia's halfback who rewrote the UMass record book, each received 31 out of a possible 35 votes.

There were four members of the Holy Cross team selected, two each from Massachusetts and Boston University and one each from Delaware, Rutgers, and Rhode Island.

A surprising note was the fact that Yankee Conference champion New Hampshire failed to place a man on the UConn team.

The all-opponent team, announced today by Coach Bob Ingalls follows: Paul Majeski, Massachusetts and Bill Craft, Rutgers, ends; Alan Arbuse, Rhode Island and Dennis Golden, Holy Cross, tackles; Bill Budness and Bill Lesinski, Boston University, guards; Jon Morris, Holy Cross, center; Pat McCarthy and Al Snyder, both of Holy Cross, Sam Lussier, Massachusetts and Mike Brown, Delaware, backs.

WHO HAS THE AUTHORITY?

To the Editor:

I would like to know what gives Mr. Rice the authority to pick an All-American team. I doubt that he has ever seen in person any of the players listed. I am sure he has watched most of these athletes on television but his choice of Preacher Pilot of New Mexico State is impossible. New Mexico State never appeared on television and I am quite sure Mr. Rice did not attend any of their games. I think I could have selected this team by reading the New York Times on the two days the A.P. and U.P.I. announced their All-American teams. However, I feel this is not only a poor way to pick an All-American team, but it is also a dishonest way.

To the Readers of the Collegian:

In a letter to the Collegian's sports editor received yesterday, the choice of the 1962 All-American football team was questioned as well as the right of the staff member to pick such a team.

R.M. first questions the right to pick Preacher Pilot who played for a team lesser known than some of the Big 10 or Southeastern Conference teams. Other than Terry Baker, Heisman and Maxwell Trophy winner, Pilot is the most valid choice on the team. Pilot, last year as a sophomore, scored 21 touchdowns, second in the country to Pete Pedro and led in total points with 138. His rushing total of 1278 yards also led the country last year, the third straight time a New Mexico State back held that distinction, and that total was only 292 yards off the collegiate record of 1570 set in 1948 by a far less famous runner than Pilot—Wendt of Texas Mines.

A minor ailment slowed Pilot early in the season, but he came back to make it four in a row for State in the rushing derby. This past year his running total reached 1247, his one game scoring record was 30 points on five touchdowns against North Texas State, and he tied for the lead in touchdowns at 18 with Cotton Clark of Alabama.

R.M. then reverses himself and accuses me of copying from the other All-American squads which in my opinion are press agents' teams. That is the reason why I did not copy the selections of Roger Kochman and Jerry Stovall from the wire services or from the coaches' team.

Stovall placed first on all three teams, but he did not place in the top 15 of the NCAA's rushers while playing for an almost entirely running team. The same is true of Kochman, and neither was among the top scorers. To my knowledge, the main objectives of the game of football are to score or to move the ball so a teammate can score. Pilot and Mel Renfro achieved those results!

I admit I picked both tackles and the center from hearsay, but they were the pre-season picks for that honor, and they were chosen by all the other teams picked to date. If R.M. disagrees with me, he also disagrees with Bert Rose and Norm Van Brocklin of the Vikings who picked both Bell and Dunaway on their first two rounds, and with Tom Landry of the Cowboys and Mike Holovak of the Patriots, each of whom is hoping for Jordan's services.

If these are the best football players in college, and it seems to me that they are, then who hasn't the right to say so?

Redmen Start Defense Of Crown At Storrs Tonight

UMass Out To Break 26 Year Old Losing Streak

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Tonight is the big one. Tonight at Storrs, Connecticut, the Redmen basketball team will open its defense of its first Yankee Conference crown in an attempt to do what Redmen teams have failed to do for 26 years. Tonight the Redmen will be gunning for their first win on UConn's home court since 1936.

There is a good reason why Coach Hugh Greer's Huskies have been so successful in dumping the Redmen year after year on their home ground, in the past decade especially. Mainly because in his 16 year tenure Greer has had some of New England's top roundball quintets. But added to this is the infamous UConn home crowd that has been known to un-nerve many an opponent, in addition to UMass. So with this in mind Matt Zunic and Co. have two opponents to handle tonight: the Huskies and the howlers.

Coming up with an impressive win over Rutgers last Saturday the Redmen showed that they have the scoring points to upend Connecticut. Seeing them in action against Stonehill and B.U. earlier this month caused many fans to wonder if Zunic's Sophomore-Junior laden five would mature quick enough to stand up against the likes of UConn.

With a team total of 87 against Rutgers and with 4 of 5 starters hitting double figures against the same, the Redmen may have come of age sooner than most people expected.

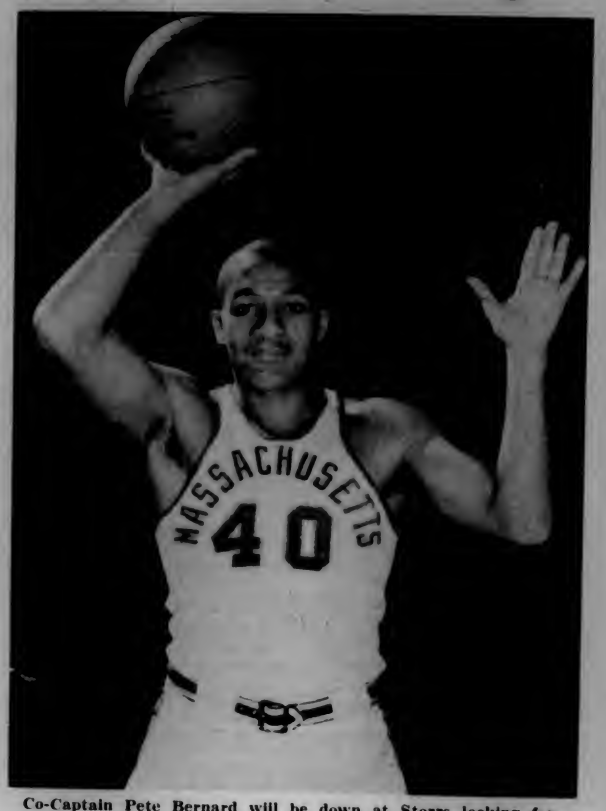
Starting tonight will be the same five that began the rout of Rutgers. Rodger Twitchell and Dan Laakso will be up front, sophomore Charlie O'Rourke will be at the pivot post and in the backcourt will be the two gentlemen that conspired for a total of 46 points last Saturday. And with a total of 26 rebounds in two games big John Reynolds cannot be kept under wraps for long, especially when the UConn front men average 6-8.

Forward Rodger Twitchell is currently leading the UMass scoring totals. In three games the "Jolly Rodger" has dumped in 50 points for an average of 16.7 a game. From the floor Twitchell has clicked on 21 of 33 attempts for a shooting mark of .637. Guards Clarence Hill with 40 points (13.3) and Pete Bernard 38 (12.7) rank second and third respectively in the scoring honors.

On the other side of the ledger Connecticut, with wins over Yale (61-49) and Boston College (63-53), will be going with a team that is big and experienced. In the forecourt will be 6-7 Toby Kimball. Joining him will be 6-6 Jerry Manning. At center goes 6-10 Ed Slomcenski while the backcourt will have Andy Czuchy, 6-0, and Don Perno, 6-1. Greer has 6-7 Bob Haines and 5-9 Dale Comey to throw in should he need them.

Manning is top Husky scorer in two outings with 27 points. Close on his heels is Dale Comey with 26. Big Ed Slomcenski, although scoring just 10 points this season, has a career average of 17 a game against the Redmen.

So with this impressive on-paper record of the Huskies in their minds Zunic and the Redmen hope to do a lot of erasing of the picture tonight at Storrs. They hope to erase their long string of losses at UConn, the bugaboo of the crowds, the fallacy that the bigger team always wins, and the current popular notion that they are not good enough to hold on to their Yan-Con crown. To win this one is to win the big one.



Co-Captain Pete Bernard will be down at Storrs looking for revenge in tomorrow night's encounter with the UConn Huskies in the "Torture Chamber." Pete, a junior, is the third highest scorer on the squad with 38 points in three games.

Freethrow Contest

Don't forget to enter the free throw contest being held at the Men's cage from 12:00 noon to 1:00 p.m. every day until this Friday. No equipment is necessary so drop in for ten minutes, and try your skill from the foul line. A prize is offered for the best shooting percentage out of 25 tries, and all male students are eligible including faculty and graduate students.

Redmen Out To Pin Loss On Powerful Lord Jeffs

by DICK McGLAUGHLIN '64

This evening at 7:00 p.m., the wrestling team renews its annual cross town rivalry with the Jeffs of Amherst College.

Though little is known of the Amherst team, as this is their first match, it is expected that they will be, as always, a powerful squad. Last year, and in past years, they have handled the matmen of the U of M rather roughly; but the feeling among the charges of coach Douglas is that the time is ripe for a change.

The University team is fresh from a heart breaking loss to WPI and burning to show that there is more wrestling skill here than has been the case in the past, and was shown in the WPI match.

This will be a key match for the Redmen. Amherst, as has been repeatedly stated, is a tough team which traditionally shows well in the mat sport. A win in this match could well set a trend for the remainder of the UMass season.

Senate Defeats "Cume" Bill With 33-9 Roll Call Vote

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

By a resounding 33-9 roll call vote, the Student Senate defeated the so-called "Cume Bill" which would have required all persons wishing to hold office in any RSO organization or board to maintain the graduating average of his class. The bill was drafted to "minimize the disruption which results when an officer leaves the campus because of academic deficiencies."

Senator Jon Fife '64 (Van Meter) presented the bill. He stated that the "bill was brought for a purpose . . . that organizations have shown a lack of responsibility. This is an attempt to prevent this, thus safeguarding student tax money."

Constitutionality Challenged

He was immediately challenged by Senator Richard Potter '63 (Van Meter) who challenged the constitutionality of the bill on the grounds that the Student Government Constitution states that any student "in good standing" may run for the office of Senator.

He said he felt, as did Senators Dave Mathieson and Ross Jones, that it was not the duty of the Senate to explain what a student "in good standing" meant.

Some Senators said, as did Bob McDonnell '65 (Brett), that it was "a necessary bill" and that "It is the students' will, and we must pass it for them." He charged that the opponents of the bill were those "who the bill would hurt the most."

At this point Senator Ross Jones '65 (Brett) objected, claiming that Senator McDonnell was casting aspersions on those Senators opposing the bill. Senate President Donald Cournoyer '63 (Fraternities) told Senator Jones that since Senator McDonnell had mentioned no names, he was casting aspersions on no one.

Senator Marilyn Singer ('65-At-large) opposed McDonnell's position on the grounds that the people in the organization know the situation of the person running; therefore they should decide whether the person should hold office; Senator Jones concurred, and further added that he doubted whether the bill would actually minimize confusion, due to the effect that it might have on people now holding office, since their loss might cause more confusion to an organization than might be avoided.

Need Not Shown, Says Boyden

Senator Dick Boyden ('65-Commuters) charged that there never, in the course of the debate, was a clear need for the bill shown. This charge was left unanswered, and could have influenced the vote.

Among the major arguments against the bill was that it did not protect the person it had most intended to protect—the freshman. Since he has no marks, for reference, the freshman may run for any office, and hold it even though he may later receive a grade lower than his graduating average.

SENATOR ROSS JONES

The effect of this oversight was brought forth when Senator Boyden said that freshman class presidents leave for academic reasons.

In a rare move, Senate President Cournoyer left the podium and stated that he felt the bill protected the students that need the most protection—freshmen and sophomores.

He stated that "these are the trying years". As he began to leave the floor, Senator Jones stated that the President should, in such a controversial case, remain on the floor after speaking. This remark seemed to irk some of the Senators.

Senator Margaret Pitoniak ('64-Johnson) told him that the President has a right to speak if he wished, and that he should not be denied his rights.

Senators Karen Reilly ('63-Thatcher) and David Clancy ('64-Fraternities) argued that averages are not a true indication of ability. They further stated that the different majors have different average "cumes", thus the bill would discriminate against those such as science majors, who are prone to low averages.

Bill Back To RSO

The question was then called; Senator Jones rose and requested a roll call. Senate rules require the person requesting this to have five Senators stand with him. As he finished speaking the whole Senate stood with him in requesting the roll call. After Senate Secretary Dolores Matthews called the roll, the bill had been killed by an overwhelming majority.

The bill will now go to the RSO Committee for possible compromise. This is the same committee that, two years ago,

Elections For Carni Queen Rescheduled

Winter Carnival officials have announced that elections for the five finalists to compete for Winter Carni Queen will be held in the S.U. Lobby Monday, instead of on Friday as originally scheduled.

Officials said Carni Queen Nominations have been submitted from all dormitories, fraternities, and sororities.

The identity of the girl selected to represent the University as Winter Carnival Queen will be withheld until the carnival Ball, when she will be crowned by President Lederle.

Winter Carni Publicity Committee officials said they "expected a large turnout for the elections" and expressed hope that "many students would indicate their choice of queen for one of the University's most prominent events."

Student Rights and the 'Cume'

The "cume bill" is not so dead as some may think. Even after its overwhelming defeat Wednesday night, the bill can still be kept alive. It will go now to the RSO committee, who may attempt to draft a compromise bill. If so, and this too is defeated in the Senate, the bill will then go to President Lederle for his decision on the matter. In such a case he will not just be deciding on a bill, he will be choosing whether to follow the lead of the student body, as expressed in the Senate, or RSO. We hope that the President will not have to make that choice. The RSO committee knows that the bill is not wanted; however, it is a question whether they will act on this knowledge, or attempt to override the Senate. It is our hope that they will kill the bill.

It has been said that the students are not ready for this bill. We feel that this is not true, for it implies that they will someday be ready to accept it. We feel that the students will never accept a bill that is such a violation of the right of a student to participate fully in the life of the University. Therefore, we would ask those who proposed the bill to turn their attentions toward measures which will further, not hinder, the rights of the individual student. —E.C.M.

STRIKE

Recently, Orville Dreyfus wrote a letter to the 5,000 employees of the New York Times informing them that if they were to obtain an $8 weekly raise (plus benefits) it would cost the newspaper $2,500,000 a year, more than the Times has made in any of the last five years. Despite this protestation, both sides in the current dispute remain firm in their demands.

The strike in New York accounts for a 10% decline in the circulation of newspapers in the United States. This is roughly 6,000,000 papers a day. Yet, the implications of the strike transcend immediate problems in that they underline the growing difficulties of the press in this country.

But for the facts that the strike will probably account for the death of one or two of the papers concerned and an inevitable drop in circulation of those which survive, the present situation reflects difficulties which have been increasing in the post war era. Problems of automation and cost spirals present themselves. The former is in fact an issue of the present strike. The latter is well illustrated by comparing the cost of newsprint at the end of the war—$63 a ton, with the current price—$135 a ton!

In this harsh economic situation it is not surprising that in 37 of the 50 states there exists no significant competition among metropolitan dailies. The inroads which television has made upon the advertising dollar is certainly a contributing cause. Indeed, in the last three decades we have lost 80 metropolitan dailies!

As Robert Barrom of WGBH has said, it is evident in this strike that "the responsibility has not been handled as it should by both parties." This is usually the case in labor-management disputes. All too frequently, as has been pointed out, the leader of the union is placed in the position of the politician who must produce or be eventually discarded. Management, either reacting to this, or having prolonged an unjust wage situation in the first place, remains inflexible, attempting to balance loss of face against an objective consideration of the financial situation.

Nevertheless, the present difficulties must be overcome in the interests of democracy, interests which go far beyond transient conflicts but which are closely related to the neds of many millions of people to be informed. —M.P.

Academic Honesty

Academic honesty is an essential facet of any university system. However, on this campus, it is an area which has not been emphasized to its proper degree. In one form or another, every university student has come in contact with dishonesty. We all recognize the necessity of alleviating this problem . . . . but, what can we do?

In exploring the possible solutions, we have talked with members of the faculty, administration and student body. It is the general consensus that a campus-wide honor system would be impractical in light of the existing conditions. For example, introductory course exams are administered under extremely crowded conditions—susceptible to cheating. Most of these exams are of an objective form which further increases the possibility of dishonesty.

Although the ultimate goal of an honor system is to include the entire university, for practical purposes we suggest at this time the institution of a formal academic honor system on the Junior-Senior level. Under this system every Junior-Senior course examination would be administered without supervision. Faculty members have indicated their willingness to cooperate in such a plan.

Part of the success of the plan would depend on the administering of exams which first are not susceptible to cheating, that is to say some form of essay exam, and second, which are a fair indication of the student's knowledge of the subject.

Its ultimate success, however, depends upon the willingness of the students to assume the responsibility for their own actions and those of their classmates. This system will be effective only if the students are dedicated to the value of academic honesty.

Proctored exams are an insult to one's intelligence, moral values, and sense of responsibility. In order that this system may be effectively instituted, we must first prove that we are desirous of being treated as responsible adults and second that we are worthy of this responsibility.

Will such an honor system be endorsed by the student body? If so, we will present it formally to the administration.

STUDENTS SI!

To the Editor:

Re: The previous letter to the Collegian concerning the inability of students to use the bowling alleys because of non-campus bowling leagues. It seems as though the use of the Student Union pianos is now prohibited by outside groups.

This morning, while both practice rooms were being used, a fellow came in and told us to stop playing because the sound was disturbing a conference in the Commonwealth Room. It now seems as though the students cannot relax between classes with a little music because of the influence of outside groups.

Once again, the Student Union was built by the students for their use. We support the Union through the fees. It is a poor situation when the students cannot use their own building. How long will these abuses of our privileges continue?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OVERWHELMING ACCEPTANCE

To the Editor:
Re Mr. Gerald Myers:

Although I'm only a freshman and this is my first encounter with Caesura, I'm afraid I must take offense at Mr. Gerald Myers' letter. I have had the pleasure of reading this current issue of Caesura from cover to cover with much relish and delight. I have discussed it with friends and classmates. Everyone seems to have enjoyed it.

Perhaps the reason why you, Mr. Myers, have not enjoyed it as much as I, is that you have not attempted more than a slight perusal of the magazine. If I too, had only "skimmed" the pieces you mentioned, looking for off-color words and phrases, no doubt, I too, would have gained little from the publication.

The fact is that "Joe", "Waldo", and "Whores Say Their Prayers" (to mention those pieces you seem most concerned with) in my humble opinion, contain a wealth of profundity and insight.

In "Joe" the author has shown us a picaresque episode of ourselves let loose in the big city. Especially skillful is his realistic imagery and frank tone which help to set the mood.

"Waldo", which at first seems comical, turns out to be, upon reflection, actually a tragedy which offers deep social comment and much food for thought. As far as "Whores Say Their Prayers" goes, it would be an insult to any college reader to attempt to explain this simply sparkling nugget of poetic truth—but since you are obviously a slow learner, Mr. Myers, let me just say that the poem's genius lies not in its multi-meanings or construction but in its function as a hymn of the sensualist. If you insist on keeping your mind in the gutter, please don't try to drag anyone else down there with you!

In conclusion, Mr. Myers, let me say that if all the students here at UMass were as narrow-minded and ignorant as you, the magazine certainly would be a waste. However, since overwhelming acceptance of the magazine seems to indicate a much higher level of reading comprehension and appreciation than the depths in which you obviously labor, it would seem imminent that the publication should fare favorably in the financial chambers of the Senate.

ON PRAYER

To the Editor:

Re: "Whores Say Their Prayers," by Paul Theroux.

Paul Theroux Says His Prayers
Under the moon,
He lies and howls
For the health of mankind,
For eternal world peace,
And for the preservation of life;
While choking his mother
With one hand,
Crushing his pet dog (with The other)
And raping his rosary beads
With wild abandon.

WANTED

To the Editor:

In this season of happiness and presentation of gifts, WMUA is second to no one in magnanimity. We here at WMUA have been following with interest the eager epistles of those opposing the "Marblemouth" Trelease style of sports play-by-play. And now we are happy to announce that there is indeed a remedy for the situation. As most people know, (although maybe some didn't until now), Jim Trelease and Barry Brooks are both seniors. This necessarily implies that neither will return in the Fall of 1963. It follows, then, that these two will not be bringing the games to the ears of the listeners through the Redmen Sports Network. The obvious question then is "Who will do it?" Here is where you, the avid listener, critic, or even casual observer, come in. Finding a replacement for Messrs. Trelease and Brooks, contrary to some people's opinions, is no easy task. Therefore, we would request that any persons interested in taking over from the present crew, whether you are interested in doing the engineering at the game, the color, or indeed the play-by-play itself, come down to the station—located in the Engineering Building—and make your presence and aspirations known. We will be glad to inform you of what is expected of you and how you can audition. We'll be waiting!

Don Ronen Performs For Chanukah Supper

The Hillel Foundation's Chanukah Festival this Sunday, December 16, will feature folk singer Don Ronen.

Born in Tel Aviv in 1933, Mr. Ronen later served as an officer in the Israeli army as head of the educational activities of the Gadnah, the Youth Forces.

Sent by the army to study at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, he was graduated from the faculty of education and faculty of law. He headed student delegations to International Conferences in Norway and Scotland, as well as student folk dancing groups which toured and performed on television in the United States.

He was a teacher in the Institute for Jewish Youth Leaders from abroad and a seminar for Jewish teachers in Jerusalem. He also served as Director of the Youth Department of the Board of Education in the municipality of Jerusalem.

Mr. Ronen is now working on his Ph.D. at New York University, while representing the World Educators' Council for the J.N.F. and serving as emissary from Israel to the Youth and Education Department of the J.N.F. in the United States.

Anyone who would like to see Don Ronen, as well as the S.Z.O. folk dancing group perform, and enjoys eating potato lutkes is cordially invited to attend, free of charge, the Chanukah Festival at 7 p.m. Sunday, in Line 1 of the Dining Commons.

Pall Mall Presents~
GIRL WATCHER'S GUIDE

SWEET-TOOTHED CUPCAKE

CAMPUS TYPE V

The natural habitat of the Cupcake is the Home Economics kitchen. She believes, as her mother did, that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. While this viewpoint might be considered unsophisticated by many of today's more enlightened male students, none of them has ever been known to turn down a tin of her Fudge-Frosted Nut-Filled Brownies. She really has a way with a dish and, as you can see, she's quite a dish herself.

Just as the Cupcake has found the perfect recipe for Frosted Brownjes, the makers of Pall Mall have found the perfect recipe for a delicious smoke. Taste Pall Mall's natural mildness and see what we mean.

Pall Mall's natural mildness is so good to your taste!

So smooth, so satisfying, so downright smokeable!

Colleges, Armed Forces Back Voluntary ROTC Proposal

Washington—The Defense Department has wrapped a clock of secrecy around the details of a new ROTC program which will soon be offered at American colleges and universities on a voluntary basis.

It is clear, however, that the services are backing away from the large, compulsory programs they have been using to get needed officers. Instead, incoming freshmen would be thoroughly screened by tests and interviews. Those qualifying would be offered scholarships to cover the costs of their education.

Students who accept the government's offers wouldn't take part in any military training until the summer between the sophomore and junior year. Then they would go to summer camp, and continue their training on campus during the junior and senior years, with a second summer training period coming after graduation.

While the new program wasn't expected to get to Capitol Hill before 1964, it now appears that the proposal will be taken up early in the first session of the 88th Congress, which convenes in January.

Defense Secretary Robert McNamara has approved the changes agreed upon by officials of the Army and Air Force.

The amount of the scholarships is one point that the Bureau of the Budget may alter. Scholarships now granted under a Navy program which is the prototype of the new program range between $1,000 and $2,000 per year.

The amount of the scholarship is crucial because it will receive very close attention from the House and Senate Armed Services Committees.

Also unclear is when the students would be commissioned. One faction in the Pentagon is pumping for commissioning on graduation. Another hopes to delay it until after the second summer camp. Whatever decision is finally made by the Pentagon and the Bureau of the Budget will get a Congressional "going over."

Many institutions are showing that they don't have to wait for congressional action. Land grant universities are required only to offer military programs—not mandatory ones.

The services, especially the Air Force, have been on the losing end of the mandatory ROTC programs. At any large land grant university, where law requires a military program, thousands of freshmen are "force-fed" their first taste of military life.

Under the compulsory program, it is common to find Freshmen ROTC programs for over 1,000 students which produce only 30 or 40 officers at graduation.

Okla. Symphony To Present Work Of Elliott Schwartz

"Symphony in Two Movements," composed by Elliott Schwartz, instructor of music at the University of Massachusetts, has been selected for broadcast performance by the Oaklahoma City Symphony Orchestra. The composition was played before a live audience on Dec. 2 and will be broadcast on Jan. 6.

Composed in 1960, the work was also performed in May, 1961, at the American University Symposium of Contemporary Music in Washington, D.C.

The Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Guy Fraser Harrison, is well known for its sponsorship of contemporary American music. In 1960 the orchestra was one of six in America to receive a Ford Foundation grant for commissions of modern orchestral works.

The orchestra has been presenting contemporary music concerts since 1950 for broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System, the Voice of America, WNYC in New York, and the Armed Forces Radio Network.

Mr. Schwartz has been an instructor at the University since 1960, teaching piano, music theory and composition in addition to devoting time to his own works.

His compositions have recently been performed at Baltimore, Md., at the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut, and at the New School for Social Research in New York City.

A board chairman talks about tomorrow's executives...

The Bell System has always sought men who could keep telephone service constantly improving. Men with exceptional engineering talent, men with equally outstanding managerial potential. Such men are widely sought on college campuses across the United States. And with the future of communications unfolding so rapidly, the search has intensified.

But still there is the old question to be answered, "What kind of man handles a business challenge best?" A midwestern college audience recently heard these comments in a talk by A.T.&T. Board Chairman, Frederick R. Kappel.

"...We took the records of 17,000 college men in the business who could fairly be compared with each other, and, examining their records, sought the answer to the question: 'To what extent does success in college predict success in the Bell System?'...

"...The results...

"...The single most reliable predictive indicator of a college graduate's success in the Bell System is his rank in his graduating class.

"A far greater proportion of high-ranking than low-ranking students have qualified for the large responsibilities....While a relationship does exist between college quality and salary, rank in class is more significant...

"...What about extracurricular achievement?...Men who were campus leaders reached our top salary third in slightly greater proportion than those who were not. But it is only real campus achievement that seems to have any significance. Mere participation in extracurricular goings-on does not...

"...What we have here, as I said before, are some hints —rather strong hints—about where to spend the most time looking for the men we do want, the men with intelligence plus those other attributes that give you the feel, the sense, the reasonable confidence that they will make things move and move well....They want to excel and they are determined to work at it...

"...Business should aspire to greatness, and search diligently for men who will make and keep it great..."

SORORITY NEWS

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The pldege raids have already started, and though at times we may be provoked, we can't help but be proud of our twenty-seven new pledges who are Linda Bodwell, May Ellen Hayes, Jackie Luke, Joan Mendrek, Carol Rosch, Sally Strout, Gisela Wagner, Carol Atwood, Anita Beaupre, Barbara Collins, Diane Del Genio, Barb Esielionis, Marilyn Jordan, Terry Joseph, Joyce Lodico, Jean McFadyen, Sharon Merrill, Arlene Nataupsky, Diane Oaks, Lorraine Osbourne, Joan Panttila, Joanne Piela, Maureen Ricketts, Natalie Roulston, Stephanie Rowland, Sandy Ruscetti, and Pat Sattler.

Thanks loads, Beta Phi's for a wonderful exchange supper. We all enjoyed, too, an exchange before Thanksgiving with our neighbors "The Thetas."

Christmas is here once again and the spirit has not missed Alpha Chi. The Christmas tree was decorated last week-end. Secret Santas are scurrying around with little gifts hoping no one will find them out. Everyone is looking forward expectantly to a spaghetti supper, wrapping party, and Christmas party with Beta Kappa Phi and a Christmas party with Lambda Chi Alpha this week-end. The pledges are planning their own surprise for these parties. On Monday we will have our own house Christmas party complete with Santa.

Congratulations to two of our sisters—Deena Ferrigno for her excellent portrayal of the maid in Tartuffe and Cary O'Connell who was selected as a Phi Kappa Phi.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Lambda Delta Phi is happy to announce that the following girls have become pledges: Merle Braveman '66, Loretta Jennings '66, Patti Liberman '65, Linda Leen '66, Jean Tolland '66, Charlotte Werlin '66, Janet White '65, and Phyllis Viall '64.

The sisters, and pledges, of Lambda Phi were surprised and very pleased to receive the Scholarship Tray at the Panhellenic Tea last Sunday. We would like to extend our congratulations to Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Kappa for their excellent scholastic averages.

The sisters at 389 N. Pleasant would like to thank their wonderful housemother, Mrs. Marshall, for the party she gave the house Tuesday night. It was a delightful surprise!

This coming Sunday the sisters and pledges of Lambda Phi will hold their annual Christmas party.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Phi would like to welcome its twenty-three new pledges who were pledged on December 5th. They are: Ruth Owen, Karen Ploeger, Maureen Richardson, Roberta Rayfield, Geraldine Tomaselli, Ann Walsh, Pamela Brady, Patricia Vernelle, Elizabeth Shelly, Elizabeth Hallberg, Marion Smith, Bea Shafer, Julie Alger, Carol St. Auben, Bonnie Stokes, Katy Watson, Donna Bangs, Carol Gennari, Susan Morris, Jan Cieplik, Mary Ann Kuczynski, Michelle Wyatt, and Betsy Thorin.

The seniors honored Karen Kober with a wedding shower Monday evening at the chapter house.

Pi Phi was very pleased to receive the second place award at the Pan Hel Scholarship tea held Sunday at Sigma Kappa.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau are very proud to welcome our twenty-two pledges: Leslie Arnold, Barb Berkovich, Susan Berkowitz, Roberta Bernstein, Louise Brown, Liz Cotton, Bev Finklestein, Gayle Fishman, Joyce Gilman, Gail Gordon, Ann Kaplan, Louise Lasky, Lesley Lazin, Karin Liner, Loren Makaba, Andy Michelman, Gail Moseon, Liz Needleman, Jane Shaufer, Susan Tye, Bette Veneri, and Sally Webb. The pledge class is a great crew of girls whom we heartily greet with much enthusiasm.

We also hail at this time, our own Thespian, Nancy Baker whose performance in Tartuffe as Elmire was outstanding.

Little Jimmy, hospitalized in Springfield with third degree burns over most of his body, had an extra little surprise this Thanksgiving. He received a 'Candy Card" from the sisters.

The S.D.T.'s wish to extend holiday greetings to all!

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

After a very busy two weeks of rush parties, bidding, and pledging the Tri Sigmas heave a deep sigh of satisfaction and settle down to the business of becoming better acquainted with their twenty-two new pledges.

George Rodgers Heads Fraternity Mgrs. Assoc.

Meet the man responsible for fraternity logistics—the Fraternity Manager, George Rodgers. George, as everyone calls him, is head of the Fraternity Manager's Association.

His job is not a simple one; it entails buying high quality food and services for the houses at low cost, maintaining records, auditing house books, issuing monthly financial reports, wisely investing F.M.A. funds, being a friend and advisor to fraternity men, and acting as a mediator between the fraternities and the administration every so often.

As he does with everything else, George makes it sound easy. He describes his job in these words, "...to coordinate and give continuity to farternities and fraternity men", and, "most enjoyable". The fact that he has done such an excellent job is in part due to this attitude.

After graduating from Colgate and B.U. Law School George went on to pile up many years of experience in the food processing industy. Now that experience is helping the fraternities. Using the mass purchasing power of the houses through the F.M.A., George has improved the foods and services while decreasing costs.

Each year the Houses elect a new group of house managers, stewards, and treasurers. As always, George is available to give them professional advice on how to handle their new jobs. As Q.T.V. Treasurer Jack Marsden put it, "George has been a big help to me".

Dan Melley, I.F.C. Advisor, says of George, "he is the modest hub of the fraternity system. Fraternity activities seem to rotate around him. He is usually called in somewhere along the line for advice and counsel."

The cost to the services doesn't justify the number of new officers gained. Increasingly more important, however, is the battle for classroom space on campus. The student population explosion is crowding ROTC out of facilities.

The Navy pioneered the selective program with scholarships under its "Holloway Plan."

Air Force officials borrowed the idea and made some changes of their own. After consultations with the Army the new ROTC program emerged.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS SPECIAL

Plenty Of Bowl Games In Store For TV Football Fans

by AL RICE '66

The post-season football bowl season kicks off tomorrow at Philadelphia and New York when Oregon State meets Villanova at Philadelphia Stadium in the Liberty Bowl and Miami meets Nebraska in the Gotham Bowl at Yankee Stadium.

Among the bowl games participated in by the major colleges, the Gotham Bowl is the baby of the family, this being the second year of its existence. Last year tenth ranked Utah State, with a line that sent three men to the National Football League, was upset by Baylor in a less than spectacular game, but this installment should be considerably more interesting to the spectators.

Miami has one of the top quarterbacks in the country in George Mira, a junior who had the second highest total of completions in the nation behind Don Trull of Baylor. Behind Mira is hard running fullback Nick Ryder drafted by the Detroit Lions and the New York Titans. Nebraska had its most successful season in years and nearly won the Big 8 title except for a loss to Oklahoma on the last day of the season.

Nebraska has a well balanced attack behind quarterback Dennis Claridge and running backs Bill "Thunder" Thornton and Willie Ross. The Cornhuskers finished up with an 8-2 record compared to last year's 3-6-1 record. Miami went 7-3 this year but their losses were to powers like Alabama, LSU, and Northwestern. Nebraska's offense should run without too much difficulty against Miami, but they won't stop Mira. Prediction: Miami, but not by a lot. Gametime is 11 a.m. on ABC-TV.

The Liberty Bowl pits Terry Baker and Vern Burke against a strong Villanova team that UMass fans aren't about to forget for a long time. Oregon State doesn't have a lot besides Baker and Burke, but it doesn't need it.

Baker won the Heisman Trophy, the Maxwell Trophy, and enough other awards to fill two inches of this column. Burke scored ten touchdowns of the 15 Baker threw, and set collegiate records with his 1007 yards on receptions and a total of 69 passes caught. Villanova also has a strong offense with quarterback Richie Richman, halfback Larry Glueck, and fullback Billy Joe rolling up the yardage. Captain Charlie Johnson heads up a Villanova line that is going to have to put a constant rush on Baker if the Wildcats expect to win. Prediction: OSU by 15 points. Gametime is 1 P.M. on NBC-TV.

A week from tomorrow in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston, in its third season as is the Liberty Bowl, Missouri of the Big 8 faces Georgia Tech of the Southeastern Conference. Missouri has a good line with guard Tom Hertz, tackle Jerry Wallach, center Jim Vermillion, and end Conrad Hitchler, first team Look Magazine All-American, and a good offense in Jimmy Roland and Paul Underhill. Tech has a better line in Dave Watson and Rufus Guthrie, both All-Americans as guards, and Larry Stallings, a linebacker. Their offense is top-notch with junior Billy Lothridge, a triple threat man, at quarterback. Prediction: Georgia Teach by 10 points. Gametime 2 P.M. December 22. CBS-TV.

The following Saturday has Penn State against Florida in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville in a mismatch if there ever was one. Penn State and Pete Liske, Dave Robinson, Roger Kochman and Company will trim Florida by plenty.

The game is on CBS, and later in the afternoon is the East-West Shrine Game from Kezar Stadium in San Francisco. It usually turns out to be the best of all the post-season games. NBC has it at 4:45.

For the confirmed New Year's Day bowl watchers, the best bet this year is the Orange Bowl with Big 8 champs Oklahoma, Bud Wilkinson's first good team in a few years, against Bear Bryant's Alabama Crimson Tide. Soph Joe Namath leads a powerhouse offense for Bama, and their third ranked defense should stop Joe Don Looney, Jim Grisham, and Monte Deere of the Sooners.

Time is noon on ABC followed by the Sugar Bowl with SEC champ Mississippi and Glynn Griffing against Arkansas and Billy Moore in a passing war. Mississippi was favored and lost to Texas last year, but they will be a winner this year.

Big 10 champ Wisconsin goes against Big 6 winner Southern Cal in another passing duel in the Rose Bowl. Ron Vanderkelen and Pat Richter of the Badgers will emerge victorious over Pete Beathard and Hal Bedsole, but an upset at Pasadena would be the least surprising of any in the four games.

Li'l Redmen Pin Losses On Worcester, UConn Freshmen

by NEIL BAKER '66

The freshman basketball team rolled to their second and third victories of the season as they crushed Worcester Junior College and the University of Connecticut freshmen.

Romp Over Worcester

Saturday night's encounter against Worcester was no contest at all. The Little Redmen never fell behind and at points in the game rolled off strings of 8, 10, and 19 straight points.

With about nine minutes left in the contest, the score stood at 77-34 at which point the subs took over with the final score ending at 95-49. Five players hit in double figures with Edwards (16), Gamble (14), and Driscoll (14), leading the field.

Timmy Edwards was high man in clearing the boards with fifteen rebounds collected. The Redmen hit on 22 of 34 attempts from the floor for a sizzling 57 percentage. But the frosh hit on only nine of 21 charity shots for a feeble 43 percentage.

Topple Husky Frosh

Wednesday night the club got its first look at the Torture Chamber as they met in the preliminary contest before a crowd that ranged from about 600 at six o'clock to a howling throng of over 4000 late in the fourth period. The frosh ran to its second straight victory and built its record to 3-1 by scalping the Husky frosh 83-71. The Li'l Redmen ran its streak to 80 minutes of never being on the short end of a score.

The Leamanites got off to a quick 10-2 lead and built up a 23-9 advantage before half of the first stanza was up. UConn's Tom Holmes dumped in seven straight to help cut the lead to 25-21, UMass four-up. But, a quick splurge, sparked with double-scores by Timmy Edwards and Jack Forst shot the frosh to a 41-28 halftime advantage. Forst, Edwards, and Craig Farmsworth gave the Redmen a 59-40 advantage, from where they coasted to the final buzzer.

Timmy Edwards led the scoring parade for the third straight week with 29 points. He was also the big man off the boards with 21 rebounds.

Top Five Redmen scorers through four games are Edwards (82, 20.5 average), Ira Gamble (52, 17.3), Jack Forst (41, 10.3), Ed Driscoll (40, 10.0), and Jacobs (36, 9.0).

The big rival game of the night had Hills South sweeping over Hills North 37 to 25 while Mills beat Hampshire easily 32 to 22. In the final games of the evening Greenough romped over Plymouth 43 to 19 but Chadbourne had more trouble in subduing Wheeler with a final score of 36 to 28.

Huskies' Bite As Bad As Bark; Rout Redmen 85-61

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Redmen hopes of grabbing an early top spot in Yankee Conference standings were dealt a swift blow Wednesday night at Storrs, Connecticut, when the undefeated UConn Huskies outmuscled and outshot the Redmen while picking up an 85-61 win.

It was the first Conference tilt for both schools and added strength to pre-season predictions that the UConns were the ones to beat for the title. Wednesday's victory was the third in a row for the Huskies while UMass now stands 2-2.

Connecticut jumped to a quick 7-0 lead before Rodger Twitchell, high man in the game with 26, could make UM's first score. But the Redmen could not take it up from there. They had trouble making the close ones underneath when they had the shots. From outside they would hit the rim and bounce out. Poor passing added to the Redmen woes and helped the Huskies build up a 29-9 bulge at the 8:25 mark.

UMass did come to life for a brief period in the first half to make people think they may not be counted out so easily. With Rodger Twitchell leading the way with his jump shots and free throws and Charlie Kingston adding a couple of long bombs, UConn found that its 20 point' lead had dwindled to 5, 38-33. The Huskies added 3 more quick ones before the half ended and left for the locker room enjoying a 41-38 margin.

At the start of the second half the Huskies picked up steam and were never seriously challenged again. Halfway through the period UConn had built their lead to 14, 59-45, and coasted home.

Redmen shooting at the start of the second half had not improved to offset the damage that Toby Kimball, Dom Perno, and Andy Czuckry were doing in the meantime. Only Rodger Twitchell could keep the Redmen above water with his foul shooting but he departed via the foul route, too late in the game to matter.

Enjoying a comfortable edge, Husky coach Hal Greer put his subs in but they kept up the hot shooting the starting five began. UConn had a 54 percent night from the floor as UMass finished with a cold 31 percent.

Jolly Rodger

High scorer for both sides was Rodger Twitchell with 26, 17 of them coming in the first half. Rog was the only Redman to make double figures. UConn was paced by Toby Kimball with 22 and Dale Corney with 14.

Kimball, a 6-7 sophomore, can move and move well for a big boy. Besides displaying his fine shooting talents he pulled in 15 rebounds for the Huskies.

Mad Matt

Matt Zunic, always a popular figure at the UConn Field House was not too popular with the officials Wednesday night. Protesting a call on Redmen center Charlie O'Rourke, Matt had the whistle blown on him for a technical foul.

After the game Coach Zunic said that he was pleased with the way that UMass had fought back from a 20 deficit to almost pull it out. But he added that they made too many ball handling mistakes and UConn was only too ready to turn them into points.

About Yankee Conference hopes Zunic said, "They had us counted out last year after we lost to UConn but we came back". The Redmen get their chance to seek revenge with UConn on February 12 when the Huskies come to UMass in a return match.

The Redmen travel to Medford tomorrow night to face the Tufts Jumbos.

Summary:

UConn	B	F	Pts	UMass	B	F	Pts
Manning	4	0	8	Twitchell	8	10	26
Slomcenski	2	1	5	Laakso	3	2	8
Kimball	9	4	22	O'Rourke	1	0	2

Fahey	4	0	8
Totals	32	21	85	Totals	21	19	61

Score at halftime: UConn 41, Umass 38.

Co-Captain Rodger Twitchell of "Smiling Matt Zunic's" Redmen basketball squad dumped in twenty-six points against UConn Wednesday night and has scored a total of seventy-six points in four games for a nineteen per game average.

Sloppy Third Period Gives Lord Jeffs Win Over UM

by AL RICE '66

A sloppy third period by the UMass hockey team allowed Amherst College two goals that erased a Redmen lead and gave the Jeffs a 4-3 win, the first in their last 15 games, at the Amherst College rink Tuesday afternoon.

Each period was monopolized by one club, as the Jeffs took control in the first frame when UMass had no organization on the ice. The Redmen came back in the second period to put the pressure on Amherst while scoring three goals, two by captain Gerry Clinton, and to take a 3-2 lead.

The third period reverted back to the first when UMass played sub-par hockey. After they were in the lead, Mass slacked up enough for Randy Reis to even the game up with a goal at 7:48 and for Charlie Ayers to drill home the winning score with about six minutes remaining.

The first period went by with no scoring until Sandy Washburn of Amherst slapped one past Skip Bowen with Dick Foster assisting with one minute and a half remaining. Mass had the lion's share of the shots in the first period, but Amherst netminder Dave Stringer turned aside 11 Redmen attempts at scoring. Numerous other chances went by when the Redmen couldn't move through the Jeffs' defensemen who weren't nearly so tough as the Penn team they faced last week.

Washburn upped the count for the Jeffs after only 2:45 had elapsed of the second stanza with an unassisted score. It didn't take the Redmen long to get back in the game at that point, however, and they completely outclassed Amherst for the next 17 minutes. Just over a minute later Jim Mahoney registered the first goal for Mass with Dave Higgins and Dick Phillips picking up assists. Gerry Clinton knocked in a pair to reverse the lead at the two-thirds mark. His first came at 13:27 from Mahoney and Bob Callahan, and his second scored on a long shot past Stringer for an unassisted tally.

UMass looked like it was going to hold the lead with no trouble, but Reis smacked the puck into the net with about 12 minutes remaining to tie the score and the Redmen weren't the same afterwards. Their offense lost its punch and the defense allowed one more goal that won the game for the Jeffs. Ayers scored the clincker with an assist by Washburn who chalked up three points for the day.

The Redmen meet the Williams College skaters at Williamstown tomorrow night.

Wesleyan Beats Mermen; Rothschild Double Winner

by DON GRANT '64

The Varsity Swim Team lost to Wesleyan University 33-62 Wednesday night in Middletown. Such a defeat was a shock since the Redmen have been within 7 and 4 points of victory against M.I.T. and Amherst, respectively, and Wesleyan was rated no better than the UMass swimmers—on paper.

The Mermen were held to only 3 firsts instead of the customary 7. Freestyler Mike Rothschild touched first in the 200 yd. sprint and gutted home ahead in the 500. Co-Captain Bruce Morton won the 200 yd. Individual Medley, and Dan O'Mara swam second. Bruce was second in the 200 butterfly.

In close contests; Mike Bjornholm second in the 200 yd. backstroke and the 50 yd. freestyle; John Grybko and Charles Monnier 2, 3 for the 200 yd. breaststroke; and John Francisco second in the diving.

The next meet is with Coast Guard Academy here on January 11th.

Special Forces Undergo Training At Fort Devens

Cadet Lt. Dick McLaughlin demonstrates bayonet techniques for the rest of the unit training in this phase at Fort Devens.

The newly formed Bay State special Forces saw their first concentrated block of field training at Fort Devens recently. This is the first of a series of weekend operations that has been scheduled for the unit.

The training included an introduction to trainfire, the Army's new method of rifle instruction. In keeping with the spirit of this instruction, which emphasizes actual firing, the unit went to the range and fired their introduction in live fire practice. Also included was instruction in the use of hand grenades, including the throwing of live grenades; and practical work on the use of the bayonet.

Although it was not a part of the actual time spent in training, considerable practice was also received in marching and military formations, and other fundamental military skills.

The officers who evaluated the training pronounced the weekend a success, which augured well for the future of such training for the unit.

Although the weekend was a tough physical workout, the men themselves said they felt that the time was well spent; and that the weekend had been enjoyable as well as instructive. Many said they felt that a major result was an increase in the already high morale of the unit.

New Ideas In Education, Agriculture Featured Topics At Extension Lectures

Modern concepts in education, agriculture in our current society and the role of the Extension Service were featured topics providing the framework for discussions and workshops at the annual Cooperative Extension Conference Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at UMass.

New horizons in home economics and the future of agriculture were main talks given by Dean of Home Economics Marion Niederpruem and Dean of the College of Agriculture Arless A. Spielman.

The conference was held in the SU. Opening address by two nationally prominent speakers include Samuel Lubell, director of Opinion Reporting Workshop, Columbia University School of Journalism, speaking on "Agriculture in Our Current Society—The Implications for Extension"; and Clarence M. Ferguson, professor of Extension Education at the University of Wisconsin Agricultural Center for Advanced Study, talking on "Changing Times." Professor Ferguson is a former administrator of the Federal Extension Service and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

Extension conference participants in the three areas of agriculture, some economics and 4-H then met separately to discuss these two main addresses.

Wednesday workshops were on the subjects of how best to serve commercial agriculture, modern concepts of education, regionalization of Extension agents in agriculture and issues in adult education.

Thursday's program saw the presentation of Extension papers by state and county Extension personnel, the review of recent Extension communications studies conducted by Boston University and closing remarks by J. Richard Beattie, associate director of Extension and conference program chairman.

The Mass is an Angel release with Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, Marga Hoffgen, Nicolai Gedda and Heinz Rehfuss, with Herbert Von Karajan conducting the Chorus and Orchestra of the Society of the Friends of Music, Vienna.

This special broadcast will take place at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 18. It will last slightly over two hours. WMUA is located at 91.1 m.c. on FM radios.

Stockbridge Students Tour Look Park, Study Layout

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

Our Chaplains Of Three Faiths Offer Blessings For Holidays

It hath been told thee, O man, what is good,
And what the Lord doth require of thee:
Only to do justly, and to love mercy,
And to walk humbly with thy God.

Micah 6:8

Chanukah, perhaps more than any other holiday in the Jewish calendar, emphasizes the ideal of religious freedom. Originating in the successful defense of Judaism against the onslaught of Syrio-Greek paganism, the observance of Chanukah through the ages has been the occasion for a yearly affirmation of Jewish devotion to freedom of religion, not only for ourselves as Jews, but for all men.

This year we again make that affirmation. As we look forward with our Christian friends, towards the observance of respective holidays, may the freedom in which we do so continue to flourish, that we may be enabled to enrich our lives with the religion of our choice, in devotion of God and in service to our fellow men.

Rabbi Ruchames
Jewish Chaplain

Each year we relive at this time the greatest event in the Christian world. Each year it is always refreshingly new. The birth of the Son of God brings to our hearts the warmth that only He can give—a warmth for Him but also a warm love for each other.

What a pity if we were to limit this to a single season of the year. Surely we would fail to learn the lesson the Infant King wanted to impart—a lesson that could transform the face of the earth. The language and lesson of love as it was taught by the Master provides us with the equipment which cannot but produce the Peace at home and abroad we all so ardently desire—Peace within ourselves, with our neighbors and among nations.

Within our campus community we have the opportunity of showing our appreciation of the meaning of this holy season. Coming from a variety of traditions, we must live each day with the respect, admiration, and love for each other that He had for all. We must be leaders in bringing to others the message of that first Christmas. In this way His Divine Will can be fulfilled in such a meaningful way.

As we leave to spend these days with our dear ones, be mindful of our University family and unite in a true spirit of prayer, one for the other, that the blessings of Christmas will abide with us throughout the year. This will be our assurance of the Happy Christmas we repeatedly express with such joy.

To all of our students and staff I offer my heartfelt wishes for a Blessed Christmas. May the Christ Child watch over you and your families and fulfill your every need and desire.

Father Power

It is still with us. Factories are still producing. Stores are still selling. Lights dance on the trees again. Choirs sing. Mailmen deliver little cards. Families exchange gifts. Candles flicker in churches. And infant Christ lies naked on the snowy common.

A little while ago we wondered if it would come around again. But here it is. Our army prevailed. Our prestige remains strong. Our way of life continues.

Yet is it enough just to go on through another Christmas, to survive, to endure old hostilities and injustices, to wear old masks, to struggle on the old success ladder, to buy and buy, to sell and sell? Not if you want to live in peace, if you want to have the understanding of others around you, if you want to be creative, if you want a sense of fulfillment in your life.

Simply adjusting to the old round isn't enough if you want more than that. Peace comes to those who seek to establish it. A sense of being understood comes to those who seek new understanding of others. Creativity comes to those who make sacrifices to accomplish something new and uplifting. Fulfillment comes when your life bears the fruit of the divine love which lives in you as you commit yourself to it and seek to bring out the higher qualities in the lives of others around you.

The Reverend Jere Berger
(Episcopal Chaplain for the Protestant Chaplain's office)

Pres. And Mrs. Lederle Extend Cordial Wishes For Holiday

In an era dominated by crisis and unrest, it is highly appropriate that we have an opportunity each year to pause, under conditions that are both festive and solemn, to direct ourselves to matters of the spirit and to a renewed hope for peace in the world.

As you depart for this festive vacation, I urge you to consider the world's problems and to try, even in some small way, to contribute toward an increase in the goodwill among men.

Let us join with charitable organizations in helping those who are not so fortunate as we. Let us arrange to give some service in hospitals or other institutions ministering to the aged and the ill. Let us give thought to those in our society who, though they are Americans, must fight to gain the rights which the rest of us take for granted.

We should not, it seems to me, be merely passive viewers of the holiday scene. We should utilize this pause in our day-to-day routine to think on the defects in man's spiritual condition and means for arriving at even small improvements. I believe that the greatest values of the season reside in this sense of participation in what one writer has called the "holiness of the heart's affection." For all of us, this can indeed be a high purpose and an appropriate way to confirm our desire for peace on earth, good will among men.

Mrs. Lederle and I wish to extend to all of you our most cordial wishes for a very happy holiday season.

UMass Dept. Members Publish Poetry Volume

Four poets and an artist, all of UMass, have combined talents to produce A Curious Quire, a volume of poetry and lithographs recently published by the University Press Committee.

The book, containing 76 poems by poets Leon Barron, David Clark, Stanley Koehler, and Robert Tucker, is illustrated with five full-page lithographs by Donald Matheson. The four poets are all members of the University English department. Mr. Matheson is in the art department.

The new book is the University's first publication of this kind. A Curious Quire is divided into four sections, with a lithograph placed at the beginning of each of these. The sections are entitled "A Winter Gardener," containing 19 poems by Stanley Koehler; "Alter Egos," with 17 poems by Leon Barron; "Broken Reflections," with 18 poems by David Clark; and "A Way of Looking," a group of 22 poems by Robert Tucker. Mr. Matheson's lithographs are semi-abstract prints providing an artistic "equivalence of spirit" to the poetry.

Some of the contributions of the four poets have previously appeared in such publications as "The Massachusetts Review," "The Sewanee Review," "Voices," "Folio," "Approach," "The Dublin Magazine," "The Kenyon Review," "Poetry," "The Transatlantic Review," and "Amherst Poets 1959." Donald Matheson's five lithographs, full size, will be separately collected in a portfolio for book and art stores.

Annual Winter Carni Concert To Feature Chad Mitchell Trio

The exciting sounds of the Chad Mitchell Trio, a fast-rising vocal group in America today, will be featured at this year's Winter Carnival Concert, on February 10, 1963, in the Cage.

A highly musical group that combines the finest folk songs of the past with pungent musical comments on the world of today, the Chad Mitchell Trio is a group consisting of singers Chad Mitchell, Mike Kobluk and Joe Frazier.

Drawing their material from virtually every possible source—other folksingers, the Library of Congress, field recordings, chic Manhattan satiric night club revues—the boys, in collaboration with musical director Milt Okun, arrange their material in the fresh, distinctive sound that has made them a vital part of the folk and popular music world in just a few short years.

Top night clubs, television shows and records have felt the impact of the Chad Mitchell Trio. They have chalked up critical coups at such top night spots as New York's famous Blue Angel, the chic Empire Room of Chicago's Palmer House, the offbeat Padded Cell in Minneapolis, and that center of Hollywood night life, the Crescendo.

TV viewers will recall their performances on the Pat Boone, Bell Telephone, Bob Newhart, Today and Peggy Lee shows, and on record dealers' single discs such as their "The Birch Society" and the Kapp albums "Mighty Day on Campus" and "The Chad Mitchell Trio At The Bitter End."

In addition to an extensive number of wallopingly successful appearances at colleges across the country, the Chad Mitchell Trio has given special concerts at New York's Carnegie Hall and Town Hall, at Orchestra Hall in Chicago, and made a 15-week tour of Latin America for the U. S. State Department that brought a raft of "oles" from our neighbors to the South.

The date for this dance, said a Reveler spokesman, was chosen to afford an activity for all students on a weekend night following soon after the return from the holidays.

Twelve Month School Year Recommended By Committee

The following article by William Fripp is reprinted from the December 14 issue of the Boston Globe.

Summer vacations may be a thing of the past for the 16,000 students at UMass and the other state colleges.

The possible end of the three-month break was highlighted Thursday when the Joint Ways and Means Committee, which sat during the legislative recess to study state finances, recommended operating the state's institutions of higher learning 12 months a year.

Between 20 and 30 percent more students could be accommodated if the institutions operated on a year-round basis, the committee reported.

Moreover, the change in the length of courses would permit the state to take a breather in its program of building more facilities to handle the growing enrollment in all the institutions.

"I would estimate that the increased utilization of plant facilities would reduce capital outlay over the next few years by some 20 percent," said Prof. Leo Redfern, director of the university's Office of Institutional Studies, who spoke for the university in the absence of President John W. Lederle.

But he added that year-round operation would not be an altogether cheap program. Teaching costs would go up, requiring a substantial hike in the operating budget.

Noting that the university already has an eight-week Summer session and two intensive three-week courses after commencement and just before the Fall opening, Redfern said, "We're geared for a full-year trimester operation."

About 50 percent — or 1000— of the students enrolled in the university's summer school are regularly enrolled UMass students, he added.

President Lederle, he said, has instructed a committee made up of university faculty to examine the problems faced under year-round operation. The problems under consideration include scheduling and calendaring, faculty vacations and salary changes, and how to convince students of the advantages of going to college for 12 months.

Probably the biggest problem is what to do about the students who depend on summer jobs for their college education, Redfern noted. But he pointed out that under the plan a student could elect to absent himself for a semester, if need arises, and resume his studies later without penalty.

A committee established by Education Commr. Owen Kiernan to study the possibility of 12-months state colleges is expected to make its recommendations next month.

'Lil Redmen Rout Aces; Edwards High Scorer

by NEIL BAKER '66

The freshman basketball team extended their win skein to three games as they completely routed the American International frosh 74-42, at Springfield College Saturday night.

The Little Cagers proceeded to run circles around the small, inexperienced Aces. They stole passes, grabbed rebounds and pulled off plays . perfectly against a weak AIC defense.

Slow Start

The frosh got off to a slow start, and at 3:45 of the first half were behind 7-5, Tim Edwards netting all five Redmen points. A layup by Edwards (his seventh straight point) and a short jumper by Craig Farnsworth gave UMass a 9-5 edge. But two quick fouls on Ira Gamble gave the Aces a chance to knot it up at nine-all. But, this was about the extent of the contest.

Aces Routed

The score reached rout proportions as the frosh proceeded to rack up a 29-5 advantage in twelve minutes. Jack Forst, Craig Farnsworth, and Tim Edwards took complete charge of the scoring with fifteen points before the Aces took time. The short rest didn't help the home court boys. Ira Gamble resumed the massacre with a hook from the post preceeded by four more by the "Gam". Ronnie Merrill dropped a pair of 30-foot bombs on target, with Larry Jacobs ten-footer making the score 38-14.

The clock ran out at the half with the score UMass 46, AIC 18.

Lead By 41 Points

The Redmen started the second half with a streak of eight straight points, one a long pop-shot by Paul Gullicksen, and ran their lead to 54-18. The "game" continued to drag on, when at 10:40 of the second stanza the Redmen were leading 62-21, and it was just a matter of time before the game ended.

Up 'n Down... Edwards was high man for the evening, even though he only played the first half. He was also the only Redman in double figures... Ira Gamble experienced his poorest night of the season netting a mere eight points and accumulating four fouls, one a technical. Most frustrating moment came when an attempted "stuff" bounced off the rim of the basket. "It was a terrible blow to my ego," he mournfully commented after the game... The team as a whole continued to excel from the floor, hitting on 35 of 69 shots for a 51 pc.... Redmen fouls totaled seventeen, compared to the Aces seven...

Art Granfield was high man for the Aces with 16 points... Coach for the AIC frosh is Art Ditmar, former pitcher for the New York Yankees and K.C. Athletics... The Redmen are tourney-bound this weekend as they head towards West Point for a four-team tournament. The Redmen will play Manlius Academy, while the West Point frosh engage St. John's (NY). The winners play for the tourney championship the following day, while the losers vie in a consolation game. The tourney dates are the 21-22nd.

Tim Edwards continues to lead the scorers. Top five: (98 points, 19.6 average per game), Ira Gamble (60, 15.0), Jack Forst (43, 8.6), Ed Driscoll (42, 8.4), and Larry Jacobs (40, 8.0).

All organizations with members living on campus over the weekends who are interested in playing basketball should form a team. Eligibility rules are the same as in the Fraternity or Dormitory-B Leagues and can be found in the intramural handbook.

Williams Bombs Pucksters, 10-3; Hat Trick For Glew

by AL RICE '66

Hat tricks accounted for nine of the 13 goals scored Saturday night when Williams College turned on the power and bombed the University of Massachusetts hockey team 10-3. Tom Roe and Andy Holt each drilled in three goals for the Ephs and Charlie Glew scored a trio for the Redmen, but the rest of the UMass team was handcuffed by the Williams squad.

The barrage started in the opening period and kept up all the way. Roe and Holt each tallied a pair in the first twenty minutes. Roe registered the first goal with less than a half minute of the game gone. He later connected at 17:20. Both the goals were unassisted. Holt notched his first with two minutes down with an assist going to Burger. Roe and Peterson assisted on Holt's second goal with 21 seconds left in the period.

Roe jumped the margin to 5-0 after 42 seconds of the second stanza with Holt picking up the assist. The UMass six broke the ice at 9:43 when Glew knocked in his first score against Williams goalie Jack Rich.

The Ephs' second line knocked in one more goal when Joe Maxwell scored assisted by Lugie and Greenlee. The first unit also scored again when Burger registered his second point of the night assisted by Holt and defenseman Ron Heath. Williams added one more goal as the second period ended to give themselves an 8-1 advantage.

The last period had each team putting in two goals. The Ephs pushed the total to 10-1 before Glew finished his night with scores at 19:11 and twenty seconds later at 19:31 in the waning moment of the game.

The big man in the scoring for Williams was Roe who picked up three assists in addition to his goals. Roe, a senior, holds the Williams career scoring record with a total of 155 points in two years. He led the Brown Invitational Christmas Tourney in points last year. The tournament begins its 1962 session Thursday and Williams is again entered so he has a chance to retain that scoring honor. UMass is also entered in a different division and meets Hamilton College at 1 p.m. Thursday in the first round.

Redmen Wipe Out Early 19-0 Jumbo Lead; Win 74-63

by STEVE HEWEY '63

The University of Massachusetts basketball squad spotted Tufts University a 19-0 lead Saturday night at Medford and then spent the rest of the first half getting it back before picking up its third win of the season, 74-63. Thanks to some fine outside shooting by guard Charlie Kingston who netted 16 of his 20 points for the night in the first half, the Redmen were able to catch up and go ahead in the last minute of the half, 38-36.

A defensive mixup on the part of UMass enabled the Jumboes to work men free behind a screen and from there they popped in 7 of their first 10 attempts from the floor. The Redmen in the meantime were victims of their own hurried passes which went astray and their stone-cold shooting. The Redmen had goose eggs on the scoreboard until Rodger Twitchell tossed in a jump shot at 13:27 to make it 19-2.

The Tufts shooting, which had been blazing hot in the opening minutes turned cold after the first seven minutes and the Redmen began chipping away at the lead. With Twitchell, Bernard, Kingston and Reynolds mixing up the floor shots with an occasional free throw, the Jumbo lead melted down to 12, 28-16.

Then with 6 minutes left Charlie Kingston made good on two jump shots from the top of the key. Charlie O'Rourke tossed in one from underneath, and UMass was down by only six, 28-22. After Tufts Coach Woodie Grimshaw called for a time out to put some life back into his boys, a Jack Reynolds jumper and a pair of Twitchell foul shots brought the Redmen to within two, 28-26.

Both teams traded baskets before Tufts spurted to a brief six-point lead. Rodger Twitchell took the edge off this with four straight free throws. Little 5'8" Vandy French scored on a layup to make it 36-32 Tufts.

With 58 seconds left Charlie Kingston took charge for UMass and scored six straight points on two driving layups and a 25-foot jump shot to put UMass ahead for the first time, 38-36.

Tufts knotted the score 38-38 as the second half got underway. But Charlie O'Rourke put the Redmen ahead to stay with a layup a few seconds later. Kingston, Twitchell and Reynolds continued to build the UM lead to 48-41 with 6 minutes gone in the half.

Then came an unexpected interruption. Pete Bernard and Tufts' Paul Berger went diving after a loose ball. Both came to their feet shoving each other, and when Jumbo forwards Paul Goldberger and Bob Dalton confronted Bernard, the Redmen bench cleared and rushed to keep the odds even. The Tufts bench followed suit. A spectator decided to join the party and headed for Pete Bernard. When order had been restored, the exuberant spectator, garbed in formal attire, was escorted from the court, appearing to have gotten the worst of the melee. Both Bernard and Berger were given the heaveho by the officials.

The Redmen had trouble getting started again after the fracas and Tufts crept within 3, 48-45. After calling time out, however, they began to click once again and built up a 55-47 bulge. After Rodger Twitchell fouled out with 9:15 remaining Clarence Hill came to life and picked up the slack. He scored all his 12 points in the last eight minutes.

The closest the Jumboes could come after the 8:00 mark was seven points, 67-60. Clarence Hill's key baskets killed all hopes of a Tufts closing rally.

The win over Tufts gives the Zunicmen a 3 and 2 record while the loss was Tufts' fourth against one victory . . . It was a big night on the boards for Redmen center Charlie O'Rourke. The sophomore pivot man pulled in 24 rebounds to erase the old UMass record of 20 set by Don Black in January '61 against Northeastern . . . Ever wonder why they call Jack Reynolds the "Big Stallion"? Well, once he gets on the court he runs all night like a race horse. He's everywhere right up front, especially under the boards where he rears up and pulls down those rebounds . . . The next action for the Redmen will be at Trenton, N.J. on Dec. 27-28 where they will compete in the Trenton Invitation Tournament.

Sophomores Charlie O'Rourke and Charlie Kingston. O'Rourke broke the UMass rebound record by pulling in twenty-four rebounds in Saturday night's game against Tufts. Kingston was high scorer for the Redmen putting in eight from the floor and four from the free-throw line for a total of twenty points for the night.

DECK THE HALLS

When you think of Christmas gifts you naturally think of Marlboro cigarettes, leading seller in flip-top box in all fifty states—and if we annex Wales, in all fifty-one—and if we annex Lapland—in all fifty-two. This talk about annexing Wales and Lapland is, incidentally, not just idle speculation. Great Britain wants to trade Wales to the United States for a desert. Great Britain needs a desert desperately on account of the tourist trade. Tourists are always coming up to the Prime Minister or the Lord Privy Seal or like that and saying, "I'm not knocking your country, mind you. It's very quaint and picturesque, etc. what with Buckingham Palace and Bovril and Scotland Yard, etc., but where's your desert?" (Before I forget, let me point out that Scotland Yard, Britain's plainclothes police branch, was named after Wally Scotland and Fred Yard who invented plain clothes. The American plainclothes force is called the FBI after Frank B. Inchcliff, who invented fingerprints. Before Mr. Inchcliff's invention, everybody's fingers were absolutely glassy smooth. This, as you may imagine, played hob with the identification of newborn babies in hospitals. From 1791 until 1904 no American parent ever brought home the right baby from the hospital. This later became known as the Black Tom Explosion.)

But I digress. England, I was saying, wants to trade Wales for a desert. Sweden wants to trade Lapland for Frank B. Inchcliff. The reason is that Swedes to this day still don't have fingerprints. As a result, identification of babies in Swedish hospitals is so haphazard that Swedes flatly refuse to bring their babies home. There are, at present, nearly a half-billion unclaimed babies in Swedish hospitals—some of them well over eighty years old.

But I digress. We were speaking of Christmas gifts which naturally put us in mind of Marlboro cigarettes. What could be more welcome at Christmas time than Marlboro's flavor, Marlboro's soft pack, Marlboro's flip-top box? What indeed would be more welcome at any time of year—winter or summer, rain or shine, night or day? Any time, any season, when you light a Marlboro you can always be certain that you will get the same mild, flavorful, completely comfortable smoke.

There are, of course, other things you can give for Christmas besides Marlboro cigarettes. If, for example, you are looking for something to give a music lover, let me call to your attention a revolutionary new development in phonographs—the Low-fi phonograph. The Low-fi, product of years of patient research, has so little fidelity to the record you put on it that if, for instance, you put "Stardust" on the turntable, "Melancholy Baby" will come out. This is an especially welcome gift for people who have grown tired of "Stardust".

Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night.

by DICK McLAUGHLIN '64

The UMass matmen journeyed to Amherst last Wednesday night in search of their first victory of the season and in hopes of spoiling the season's opener for Amherst. However, all such hopes lay broken one short hour later. The Lord Jeffs had, as expected, their usual potent team, and they proceeded to demonstrate this for their visitors.

Burnham Victor

UMass got off to a good start when Jerry Burnham won his opener. This match must be a point of praise for little (123 pounds) Jerry who went in after missing almost the entire last two weeks of practice with a torn cartilege in his knee which was still bothering him last evening. Boris Chevone lost a tough match in the second event of the evening but Mike Rivers put the Redmen back on the right side of the column with a well wrestled win at the 137 pound weight class.

From there on, however, there was little for UMass supporters to cheer about. The Jeffs demonstrated some very fine wrestling at the higher weights as they nailed down three pins and added five more points when Bob Ellis, after a fine display of courage was forced to retire with a sprained ankle. What it all amounted to was that in the end the Redmen were on the short end of a 26-6 score.

JV's Win

After the varsity match the junior varsity from Amherst played host to their Redmen counterparts. As happened last week at Worcester, the future squad looked very good in registering a solid 16-11 win, in spite of having to surrender a five point forfeit due to inability to fill the hundred thirty pound weight class.

SENATE FILE

Women's Affairs Committee Deals With Elections, Rules

Student Government on a college campus must be truly representative and protect the interests of the entire student body. Because of the multiplicity of problems which are brought before the Student Senate, the Senate must channel these matters into committees where they can be given proper attention by a small number of individuals who are qualified to deal with these problems.

All matters which concern women students are sent to the Women's Affairs Committee. It is headed by Ann Griffin ('63 At-Large) and is composed of all women senators.

Specifically this committee conducts the election of members of Women's Judiciary and makes recommendations to the Dean of Women with regard to the selection of Women's House Counselors. It also renews the rules pertaining to the women each spring and determines the Handbook rules for the following year. This year the major change was the extending of the closing hour for the juniors to eleven o'clock and for the seniors to twelve o'clock.

In general this committee acts as a liason between the women students and the Office of the Dean of Women. Suggestions, grievances and questions are brought to the attention of the dormitory or sorority senator who in turn brings the matter before the Women's Affairs Committee to be discussed. Each week the chairman of the committee meets with the Dean of Women to talk over current issues.

NewTextbook Authored By Dr. Robinson

An assistant chemistry professor at UMass, Trevor Robinson, is author of a new book to be brought out in January by Burgess Publishing Company, Minneapolis.

The book, The Organic Constituents of Higher Plants, is primarily designed for courses in plant chemistry or biochemistry. It also can serve as a reference text for workers in pure or applied fields who deal with the chemistry of plants.

Dr. Robinson is a graduate of Harvard (B.A., 1950; M.A., 1951), University of Massachusetts (M.S., 1953) and Cornell University (Ph.D., 1956). His first post-doctorate job was with the department of bacteriology and botany at Syracuse University, the position he held prior to coming to the University.

Dr. Robinson, who has contributed articles to several scientific and technical publications, is a member of the American Society of Plant Physiologists, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and Sigma Xi.

SZO To Hold Special Event Tonight At 8

The UMass Student Zionist Organization will present a special program tonight at 8 p.m. in the Hampden Room of the S.U. to discuss the Israeli Supreme Court's recent decision regarding the application of a Carmelite monk, Brother Daniel, for Israeli citizenship under the Law of Return, which grants to all Jews the automatic right to citizenship.

The Court, by a 4-1 decision, ruled that Brother Daniel, or any Jew who "converts to Christianity is not called a Jew" under the Law of Return.

The discussion will center on the importance of the decision for American Jewry and the question of "What is a Jew?"

The progam is open to the public.

He is included in a current traveling exhibit, "The Face of Poetry", and has recorded his poems for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and The Library of Congress.

Langland is one of 26 college teachers being featured on "Meet the Professor" this season. The program is produced by the Public Affairs Department of the ABC News, in cooperation with the Association for Higher Education.

Peace On Earth . . . Goodwill To Men

Season's Greetings from the Photo Staff

CHRISTMAS PERSPECTIVE

by G. MASSELAM

To the peoples of the world:

Reluctantly and with a great deal of sadness I offer my resignation as the symbol of Christmas. This decision was not an easy one, but came with much strife and turmoil. During the past century I have come to be manipulated by persons for their own interest; and also my real purpose has been lost in the confusion of men's minds. It's a simple purpose: to try and bring a little peace and joy to a world of trouble and crisis with the simplicity of giving. To feel the beauty of "peace on earth, good will to men" lost in the materialism of men's minds; to see a woman, an old woman in a Salvation Army uniform shivering on the sidewalk as bustling shoppers and businessmen rush by, their interests lost in the hysteria of buying and selling; to sense the detached concern instead of a real involvement as a man drops a nickel in a cup or as one group has a party for a less fortunate group, have compelled me to decline participation in Christmas any longer. Oh peoples, no matter how hard you try, you will never replace love with gifts and money.

Sincerely yours,
Santa Claus

Scene 1: Two businessmen having just read Santa's letter.

Oswald: I don't believe he could do something like that to us, Clyde.

Clyde: I know! Especially after we had been so good to him. He just hasn't been very fair to us.

Oswald: I don't think I should have bought that new sleigh for him. No gratitude at all.

Clyde: Well, what about me? I got him started by letting him open up shops in my department stores. He would never have been as famous if I hadn't persuaded him to lease copyrights on his beard and clothes. And to leave us when Christmas is so close. All those disappointed shoppers! And to think of all the fringe benefits I gave him.

Oswald: At least we won't have to listen to all his philosophizing. He always put up a fight when it came time to raise the prices of toys at Christmas, or when we put up those signs saying Merry Christmas.

Clyde: I can hear him now. "We ought to consider the true nature of Christmas."

Oswald: In a way it's a burden lifted by not having him around.

Clyde: Listen Oswald, I'm not taking this lying down. He can't do this to me. The only way to deal with scoundrels like Mr. Claus and all his reindeer is to put pressure on him. We have to make him feel guilty for the harm he's causing. It's only for THE PUBLIC GOOD. After all we have been too good to him. It isn't right for him to act this way.

Oswald: I know, you're right.

Clyde: I'm going to contact Senator Fleeting, now. Come on!

Oswald: Okay.

Scene 2: At the office of a leading legislator, Senator Fleeting.

Enter Clyde and Oswald.

Senator: What can I do for you gentlemen?

Clyde: We have a terrible complaint.

Senator: Oh sure, glad to be of help. What seems to be your problem?

Clyde: Well, Santa Claus has ditched us right before Christmas in the middle of our best season.

Senator: (Aside) Good for him!

Oswald: We'll be lucky if we break even.

Clyde: You've got to help us, Senator. You've got to put pressure on Santa Claus. He's got to learn just what is right.

Oswald: He's not being very fair to us, Senator.

Senator: Did he have some sort of contract with you?

Clyde: No.

Senator: Well then, there really isn't much I can do.

Oswald: But you have to do something, Senator Fleeting. There's a miscarriage of justice here.

Senator: If Santa Claus has made up his mind, we shouldn't force him. After all, it isn't the American way of life. In fact, after reading his letter, maybe there's something to what he says. Maybe we are submerged in the confusion of materialism.

Oswald: But Senator, think of all the little kiddies who won't have a chance to see him in our stores. Think of all the mothers who will have to explain to their crying children what happened to Santa Claus. Think of all the fathers who will have to play Santa Claus. (Aside.) That's the problem, Senator, you aren't thinking. Don't you see, Senator, it's only for THE PUBLIC GOOD.

Senator: Really? I don't think Santa has committed a crime. There probably is some justification for what he did.

Clyde: You have a short memory, Senator! Have you forgotten District 20? It's one of your key strongholds. Well it just happens that we know a lot of people, influential ones at that, who could really make a difference to you.

Senator: Now how could I ever help you?

Clyde: Pass a law coercing Claus to come back. After all its for THE PUBLIC GOOD.

Senator: I couldn't . . .

Clyde: Senator?

Senator: Now, gentlemen . . . please . . .

Scene 3: Floor of Legislature.

Senator: What will Christmas be without him? Think how much he is needed! I implore you, members of the legislature, to consider our society without a Santa Claus. There are so many of us who in one way or another have become dependent on him. We represent the people. It is our job to watch out for their needs, to help them take care of themselves. After all we must watch out for THE PUBLIC GOOD. Therefore I move that Santa Claus be coerced to return to Christmas . . .

Well, the bill was passed with only a little discussion. It's sort of sad to see a people groping for that which they don't have. As you might have guessed, they couldn't find Santa Claus anywhere in the world. They couldn't even find his home, his workshop, sleigh, or even a reindeer track. Although there are some who say that if you listen real close on a snowy Christmas Eve, you can hear a voice, deep, but softly saying, "A merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night."

Massachusetts Review

A Special Thoreau Number

The autumn 1962 number of the Massachusetts Review will be out on Wed., Dec. 19. This is a very special number of the M.R. for two reasons; First, it marks the occasion of a notable grant of money recently given to support the Massachusetts Review. The Research Council of the University, composed of both scientists and representatives from the humanities, voted unanimously for a yearly grant of $10,000 for the magazine. This unanimous recommendation was then strongly endorsed by President Lederle, and finally endorsed by the full board of trustees. This grant has literally saved the Massachusetts Review from suspending publication this winter and makes possible a future of unlimited potentiality.

Secondly, the autumn issue of the M.R. is a special one because it contains an extraordinary tribute to honor the centennial year of the death of one of the greatest figures in the history of Massachusetts: Henry David Thoreau.

Thoreau's influence during the past one hundred years has been national and international in its scope. The autumn issue of M.R. is in a real sense international in its significance. It is not pretentious to say that nothing like it has appeared before. It includes essays and testimonies on Thoreau from the great Jewish philosopher Martin Buber of Jerusalem; the Rev. Trevor N. W. Bush of South Africa; Jawaharlai Nehru, Prime Minister of India; and Richard Drinnon of England.

The number contains art work of Thoreau by Leonard Baskin, Malvina Hoffman, and Jo Davidson. There are five pictures of Thoreau and the Thoreau family.

Martin Luther King, Jr. writes on Thoreau's "Legacy of Creative Protest." Professor William Stuart Nelson of Howard University discusses Thoreau's influence upon current American non-violent resistance. Leo Stoller, eminent Thoreau authority, writes on the proposition "Civil Disobedience: Principles vs. Politics." Willard Uphaus writes a "Conscience and Disobedience." Richard Drinnon, a world authority on anarchism, has contributed an essay entitled "Thoreau's Politics of the Upright Man."

But not all essays for this centenary deal with Thoreau's relation to American politics. There are other essays dealing with biography, literary style, and others that treat Thoreau as a naturalist. The eminent American critic Stanley Edgar Hyman has written an account of major Thoreau scholarship and criticism between 1914 and 1962.

It is an artistic achievement that this 132-page tribute to Thoreau has not been allowed to distort the familiar format and rhythm of the M.R. This number still contains short stories, poetry, book reviews, criticism, and memoirs, including an important review by Thomas O'Donnell of the UMass faculty on Robert Frost's latest book. Mr. O'Donnell measures this book against the whole Frost canon.

Such a significant collection of essays and art is a notably appropriate means for the Massachusetts Review to honor the Centennial Year of the University of Massachusetts.

UMass Art Collection Displayed In Bartlett

The first exhibition of the UMass art collection opened yesterday from 3-5 p.m. in Bartlett Hall at the University. It will continue through Saturday, Jan. 26.

The collection, just a year old, is the result of gifts from artists, galleries, students, faculty, alumni, and friends of the University who gave through the Art Acquisition Fund. The Fund was initiated by the Department of Art in January 1962 to provide students with a study collection of original works of art.

The chief aim of the program is to acquire drawings, but the collection also includes paintings, prints, and sculpture. Most of the donations have been in the form of original works, but a number of drawings in the current group of acquisitions were purchased with money donated to the fund.

Collection To Be Housed In Fine Arts Center

The collection, which is well on the way to becoming an important one, will eventually be housed in the gallery of the proposed Fine Arts Center. New acquisitions will be exhibited annually.

Some of the artists with national and international reputations whose works will be seen in the current show are: Michael Ayrton, Leonard Baskin, Hyman Bloom, Cameron Booth, Robert DeNiro, Arthur Deshaies, John Grillo, Mervin Jules, Matsumi Kanemitsu, Lawrence Kupferman, Robert Mallory and Gerhard Marks.

First Year Goal $10,000

Walter Kamys of the University's art department is the Director of the Acquisition Fund. Mr. Kamys points to a two-fold purpose for the new art collection: "To provide students with original works for study of meaning, style and technique and supply the University with the nucleus for building a gallery of original art which will be a strong contribution in this field."

The art teacher says that contributions toward the first year goal of $10,000 can be made to the Art Acquisition Fund, UMass, Amherst, Mass. Contributors will be listed in appropri-

Fritz Mahler To Conduct Hartford Little Symphony

Fritz Mahler, distinguished conductor of the Hartford symphony, will appear with the Hartford Symphony Chamber Orchestra tonight, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The event is being presented by the UMass Concert Association.

The Little Symphony, enthusiastically received at the University last year, is returning by popular demand. The group consists of the principal players of the Hartford Symphony and includes five violins, one viola, one cello, one string bass, harpsichord and oboe.

Compositions by Handel, Purcell, Klaus Egge and Tschaikovsky will be played at the event, which is open to the public. Tickets may be purchased at the door. Students will be admitted by I.D.

The program to be played by the Hartford Little Symphony includes two operatic selections —Handel's Overture to "Theodora" and Purcell's Suite from "Abdelazer or the Moor's Revenge"; Tschaikovsky's Serenade for Strings in C Major; and a concerto by the contemporary Norwegian composer Klaus Egge. Featured will be pianist Raymond Hanson, Head of the Department of Piano at the Hartt School of Music, University of Hartford.

Mr. Mahler has appeared several times with the Hartford Symphony on television. The orchestra received many favorable comments for its public service performances in the Connecticut area. The orchestra and its conductor have become famous for their recordings of the Requiem by Berlioz and Orff's "Carmina Burana."

The University series, conducted under auspices of the Concert Association, will present four additional concerts during the academic year. These include a concert by George London, operatic baritone, and performances by the Handel and Haydn Choral Society of Boston, the Hague Philharmonic and the Paganini String Quartet.

Debating Society Invited To Attend Tournament

The UMass Debating Society has announced that it has been invited to attend the annual debate tournament held at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia.

This tournament, one of the biggest and most select in the country, includes universities from California to Maine. The tournament is by invitation, meaning that its sponsors decide which schools are worthy of invitations. This is the first time the University has been included.

Mr. Jay Savereid of the University Speech Dept., coach of the debating society, is presently investigating travel arrangements for the 600 mile trip. The tournament is three days long, beginning February 1.

Faculty Senate Committee Submits ROTC Proposals

The Faculty Senate at its December 13 meeting formally accepted the report of the Senate ad hoc Committee on ROTC which called for an end to compulsory ROTC on the UMass campus.

Before the proposal of the Committee is effected, the recommendation must be approved by the University Board of Trustees. University Executive Secretary John Ryan said they will probably take it up at their January 16 meeting.

The Committee, set up early this Fall, made the following recommendations in their report to the full Senate:

that a) The University adopt voluntary ROTC starting in the Fall of 1963—this means both freshmen (Class of 1967) and sophomores (Class of 1966).

b) Students electing the first two years of voluntary ROTC should receive not more than four academic credits toward graduation for satisfactory completion of the basic course (first two years).

At the meeting, Dean of the College of Agriculture Fred P. Jeffrey, a member of the six-man committee, moved acceptance of the report by the Senate.

Other Committee members included Prof. Charles E. Carver, Prof. Benjamin Ricci, Prof. Bronislaw Honigberg, Prof. Joseph Langland and Prof. William P. MacConnell.

An earlier Senate committee was set up two years ago to study the problem.

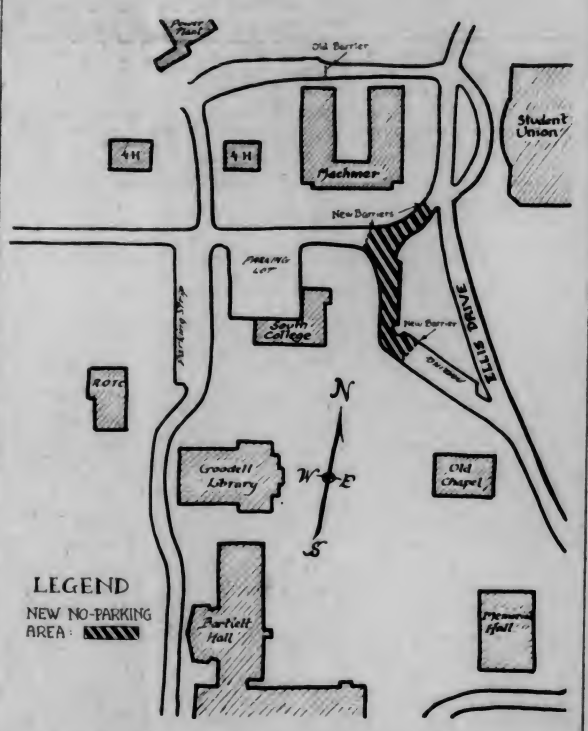
Voluntary vs. compulsory ROTC on this campus has been a controversial issue among students as well as faculty for several years.

At the meeting Colonel Albert W. Aykyod, head of the UMass AROTC department, indicated that he would distribute to Senators copies of documents entitled 1) Current status of the Army ROTC program, and 2) ROTC — Keystone of versatile leadership for the Armed Forces, by Dr. Asa S. Knowles.

Actually, the Pentagon now requires that Land Grant universities only offer military programs—not mandatory ones.

Washington sources have stated that the services, especially the Air Force have been on the losing end of the mandatory ROTC programs. Sources have said it is expected the 88th Congress will take up, early this year, Service proposals for new ROTC programs.

Master Plan Creates Safer UM Campus



The University administration took steps last week to make the central part of campus an area "for pedestrians only."

In a move designed to provide greater convenience and safety for students and others in the South College area, the administration has set up barriers closing the drive in front of South College to all vehicles. Hereafter the drive will be a sidewalk permitting a speedier and smoother flow of pedestrian traffic in this section of campus.

The next step will be to close off Ellis Drive from Memorial Hall to the north end of the S.U. Barring vehicles from this area will give pedestrians the entire central campus in which to walk with ease.

Designed as part of the new Master Plan development, the changes represent an effort to lessen congestion in the most heavily traveled areas of campus and to promote greater safety for all.

At present, access to the parking lot in the rear of South College may be had from the west or the south by using the road in back of the Cage and Goodell Library. Visitor parking is provided for in a new section north of Old Chapel.

Drivers who approach the South College parking lot from the north may use the follow-

New Judicial Area Courts Established

The new UMass Area Courts of Justice have been formally established in order to relieve the Men's Court of Justice of some of its many duties.

The new boards will be responsible for the misdemeanors which take place in the area of the men's dormitories.

The main reason for this addition to the judicial branch of student government is to maintain control by the students over the increasing student population. Each dormitory is represented in the courts. One student from each dormitory was chosen by the Men's Court of Justice after all applicants were interviewed by the Court.

The members of Area I Court of Justice are James Allen (Baker), Philip Reed (Greenough), Paul Dexter (Chadbourne), Tony Amico (Van Meter), and Paul Lavine (Butterfield). The members of Area II are Stanley Wade (Mills), Leonard Caldeira (Hills South), Robert Johnson (Gorman), Donald Warren (Hills North), Manuel Smith (Wheeler), and Richard McLaughlin (Brett).

NOTICE

The Distinguished Visitors Program is distributing a questionnaire to the faculty and student body concerning the selection of programs for next year. The questionnaire will be distributed to a representative sample of men's and women's dorms and also will be available at the lobby counter in the S.U. The deadline is Saturday, January 12, at 12 p.m. for depositing the questionnaires in a box in the lobby of the S.U.

ONE DOWN, TWO TO GO

The long battle is almost over. After years of picketing, editorializing, referendums, meetings, and angry letters to the editor the sought after goal of voluntary ROTC seems near at hand. The Faculty Senate has approved the UNANIMOUS decision of the ad hoc Committee on ROTC to put ROTC on a voluntary basis with credit provided towards graduation for those who take the basic course.

We do not begrudge the time lapse between the formation of the ad hoc Committee on ROTC (once the committee was formed) and the passage of their recommendation. A careful study of the problem was wise and indeed necessary.

The Faculty Senate's decision, however, is really a recommendation that must be approved by President Lederle and the Board of Trustees; if either the President or the Trustees fail to approve the measure, ROTC will remain on a compulsory basis.

We support the decision of the Faculty Senate on this matter. Voluntary ROTC has been long overdue. We remind both the President and the Board of Trustees that voluntary ROTC is desired by a decided majority of the male members of the student body and by the Faculty Senate.

In the last few years there have been several charges against groups supporting the abolishment of compulsory ROTC. Pickets were labeled as irresponsible and childish. Synthesis was labeled as being various shades of red, and many individuals, students and administration, were labeled as being thoughtless and stupid. It is interesting to note that the pressure of these groups and individuals, whatever one's opinion of their actions might be, was a key force in prompting the Faculty Senate's action.

We would remind all those who were so willing to brandish labels that without these several groups ROTC would still be under a compulsory basis with not much hope of a change in that situation in the future.

Just One Twentieth of a Dollar

The Collegian reminds its readers that first class mail postage charges have been raised to five cents per letter. If first class rates have increased, then can second class rates be far behind?

The slight increase may not seem to involve too great an amount for any individual, but to the magazines (who use second class mail) with limited budgets, any increase may be a death knoll. Unfortunately, many of the better literary magazines fall within this classification.

The slight increase in postage will undoubtedly increase the revenues of the Post Office Department, but it will certainly not cover the deficit of that branch of the government.

Considering the hardships that such a raise might incur, we question if this is the best action for the government to take. If we can spend millions for missiles, then we assume that we can spend a little bit more on our post office department and eliminate the postal rate raise. We also hope that the price of stamps stops at a nickle.

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE

It may be a little late for New Year's predictions, but we are not going to let that stop us. Here are the Collegian's predictions for the rest of this academic year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHAT ELSE IS NEW?

To the Editor:

As one is constantly reminded that we are nearing the end of a "Century of Progress" I wonder how we ever made it. Even considering the large amount of red tape that surrounds almost every state project it is very discouraging to see the slow pace that we move forward at . . . . why did it take a year to fix the leak in the Student Union by the stairs leading to the balcony? . . . . why must all the students who work for the University wait a month to get paid? . . . . why has the University allowed those doing contract work on campus leave the grounds in such a mess (what chance does the recently planted grass seed have to last through the marching armies and eroding rains. I realize that fall is the time to plant grass, but is winter?)? . . . . are we going to get litterbaskets for campus? . . . . is the walk by the infirmary part of a five year plan, if so, we have 4 years to go until we get a new walk and steps?

If we don't start to move ahead faster we can celebrate the Centennial Birthday in style . . . the mud of 1863.

CHEERS!

To the Editor:

Looking back at the University of Connecticut basketball game at Storrs, the only thing that rivals the UConn student spirit is the apathy of the UMass student body. Although the Redmen were treated with the utmost disrespect and unsportsmanlike conduct, the solid and unified support shown by the Huskie rooters puts UMass to shame. The UConn students were not afraid to "let down their hair" and show their feelings. If the UMass pseudo-sophisticates were not afraid to do the same, the results could turn the Curry Hicks cage into a "torture chamber" for opposing teams. There is nothing degrading in showing your support of the team, whether it be by a spontaneous chant or an organized cheer. The people running around the court during time outs are not selling refreshments, they are there to lead you in your support.

This university will never go "big time" in anything until the student body begins to think "BIG."

"NOT DEAL HONESTLY WITH HUMAN LIFE"

To the Editor:

While it is regrettable that Mr. Mayer finds the last issue of Caesura offensive on moral grounds, I think he should ask himself whether any of the pieces to which he objects exploit evil for its own sake or tend to make the reader admire it. Certainly these pieces did not strike me as doing so.

To ask that literature not portray evil is to ask that it not deal honestly with human life, in which evil is an inextricable element. To judge literature on this basis would require us to condemn most of the great literature of the past, even large sections of the Bible.

Very truly yours,
Howard O. Brogan, Head
Department of English

The Collegian regrets that due to our publishing schedule this letter could not be included before the Holiday vacation. We feel, however, that Mr. Brogan's letter is still quite timeworthy since the literary merit of Caesura has not faded over the last two weeks.

A GUIDE FOR THE UNMONEYED

R. L. Sigafoos was a keen, ambitious lad, and when he finished high school he wished mightily to go on with his education. It seemed, however, a forlorn hope. R. L.'s father could not send the boy to college because a series of crop failures had brought him to the brink of disaster. (R. L.'s father raised orchids which, in North Dakota, is a form of agriculture fraught with risk.)

It was, therefore, squarely up to R. L. He could go to college only if he worked his way through. This was a prospect that dismayed him. He had a deep-seated fear that the task would be too great, that he would never be able to carry on a full, busy college life and still find time to do odd jobs and make money.

Racked with misgivings, R. L. paced the streets, pondering his dilemma. One day, walking and brooding, he came upon a park bench and sat down and lit a Marlboro cigarette. R. L. always lit a Marlboro when he was low in his mind. R. L. also always lit a Marlboro when he was merry. The fact is there is no occasion—happy or sad, pensive or exuberant, cheery or solemn—when Marlboro with its fine filter and fine flavor is not entirely welcome, as you will discover when you go to your favorite tobacconist and buy some, as we—the makers of Marlboro and I and R. L. Sigafoos—hope you will do real soon.

Sitting and thinking and smoking a Marlboro on the park bench, R. L. was suddenly interrupted by a small, quavering voice which said, "My boy, you are troubled. Can I help?"

I Gave a Fencing Lesson to the Dean of Women

Seated beside R. L. was a tiny, gnarled man with wispy, snow-white hair. His skin was almost transparent, showing a delicate tracery of fragile bones beneath. His back was bent, and his hands trembled. But his eyes were bright and clear. R. L. looked into those eyes, into the wrinkled face. He saw wisdom there, and experience, and kindness. "Do you think, sir," said R. L., "that a boy can work his way through college and still enjoy a rich, full campus life?"

"Why, bless you, son," replied the stranger with a rheumy chuckle, "of course you can. In fact, I did it myself."

"Was it very hard?" asked R. L.

"Yes, it was hard," the stranger admitted. "But when one is young, all things are possible. I, for example, used to get up at five o'clock every morning to stoke the furnace at the SAE house. At six I had to milk the ewes at the school of animal husbandry. At seven I gave a fencing lesson to the Dean of Women. At eight I had a class in early Runic poets. At nine I gave haircuts at the Gamma Phi Beta house. At ten I had differential calculus. At eleven I posed for a life class. At twelve I watered soup at the Union. At one I had a class in Oriental languages. At two I exercised the mice in psych lab. At three I gave the Dean of Women another fencing lesson. At four I had qualitative analysis. At five I went clamming. At six I cut meat for the football team. At seven I ushed at the movies. At eight I had my ears pierced so that at nine I could tell fortunes in a gypsy tearoom. At ten I had a class in astronomy. At eleven I tucked in the football team. At twelve I studied and at three I went to sleep."

"Sir," cried R. L., "I am moved and inspired by your shining example!"

"It was nothing," said the stranger modestly, shaking his frail white head. "It was just hard work, and hard work never hurt anybody."

"Would you mind telling me, sir," said R. L., "how old you are now?"

"Twenty-two," said the stranger.

Four Submit Papers On Weed Control

More than 125 scientific papers, four by UMass scientists, dealing with weed control in the Northeast will be presented at the 17th Annual Northeastern Weed Control Conference to be held in the Hotel New Yorker, New York City, on January 9-11.

Among the 700 state, federal and industry workers from 15 northeastern states attending the three-day affair are three scientists from the College of Agriculture at UMass, who will present the following papers:

Dr. Jonas Vengris, assistant professor of agronomy, "Annual Weed Control in Field Corn by Atrazine" and "Nutgrass Control in Field Corn" in separate presentations Thursday afternoon, January 10; Dr. William J. Lord, Extension pomologist in the department of horticulture, "Control of Poison Ivy Under Bearing Apple Trees" on Friday morning, January 11; and Dr. Alina K. Palacz of Poland, a post doctoral fellow in the department of agronomy, "The Developmental Anatomy of Seedlings of Barnyard Grass" on Friday afternoon.

Dr. Palacz's paper was prepared in connection with research done jointly with Eugene C. Putala, assistant professor of botany at the University.

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?

You bet I would, and I'll tell you why. Army officers live better than I expected. Take me. At the Army Signal Research Lab in Fort Monmouth, I get a chance to put my engineering background to good use. I keep on top of new developments. The experience is terrific, and it's going to pay off whether or not I stay in the Army. From Fort Monmouth I can go to a play in New York one weekend, and visit Washington the next. On my officer's salary I can afford it. Of course I have an active social life on post, too. Officers' club. Parties. Dances. You name it. My advice to you is this: if you have only two years to go for a commission, get it. Once on active duty, you'll be mighty glad you did."

TOURNAMENT NEWS

Iona Topples UM At Trenton

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Tournament fever had the greater part of the college basketball world in its clutches over the holidays. Some teams survived with no ill effect. Others succumbed and expired the first night. Unfortunately for the Redmen the latter was the case.

Making their first appearance in the Trenton Invitational Tournament on the 27th and 28th of last month, the Redmen fell to Iona College 64-56 in the opener. The following night UMass took out its revenge on Rider College, nailing them with a 91-81 loss in the consolation game.

The Iona contest saw UMass unable to take advantage of an early big lead over its smaller opponent. Iona hung right in there and trailed the Redmen by only two at halftime, 29-27.

With four and a half minutes gone in the second half Iona made its move and surged in front 35-31. UMass tried to regain the lead but faltered. The closest they came was 43-40.

The only bright spot for UM coach Matt Zunic in the Iona game was the return to action of forward Mike Johnson. And return to action he did. Sidelined with an injured hand for the past five games, Johnson flipped in 15 points to lead the Redmen while he also grabbed 15 rebounds.

UMass had outscored Iona from the floor netting 24 baskets to Iona's 20, but from the foul line Iona made 24 to UMass' 8.

The next evening UMass regained some of its lost pride by running up its best game point total of the season, winning over Rider 91-81 in the consolation contest.

The Redmen set the pace and held Rider in hand all the way but for one brief spell. Going into the second half UMass led 40-31 but Rider, with an eight point surge crept within three points, 42-39.

Charlie Kingston and Jack Reynolds put the pressure on Rider, defensively and offensively, to halt the threat. UMass began to roll from there and led at one point 70-55.

In picking up its fourth win of the year UMass placed five men with double figures in the scoring column. Head man was Pete Bernard with 22. Rodger Twitchell, held to only seven the day before, netted 16 as did Charlie O'Rourke. Jack Reynolds and Charlie Kingston both contributed 10 points each.

Redmen Overtime Victors; Finish Fourth In Tourney

by AL RICE '66

Steve Kosakowski's UMass hockey team finished fourth in the annual Christmas Tournament with a 1-2 record competing with some of the top hockey teams in the East. The Redmen beat Hamilton College 2-1 on a goal scored by Jim Mahoney in overtime and then lost by convincing scores to Brown and Bowdoin, a pair of ice powerhouses. Brown, the tourney host and eventual winner, prevailed by a 9-0 shutout, but UMass was far superior than the score indicated. Though Massachusetts net-minder Skip Bowen allowed nine shots past him, he stopped the unheard of total of 64 Brown shots.

Redmen Shorthanded

The Redmen played without two of their four regular defensemen which forced Bowen to become a human wall against the Brown shots. The Bruins, with five Canadians on the team, continually bombed away scoring attempts against the Redmen.

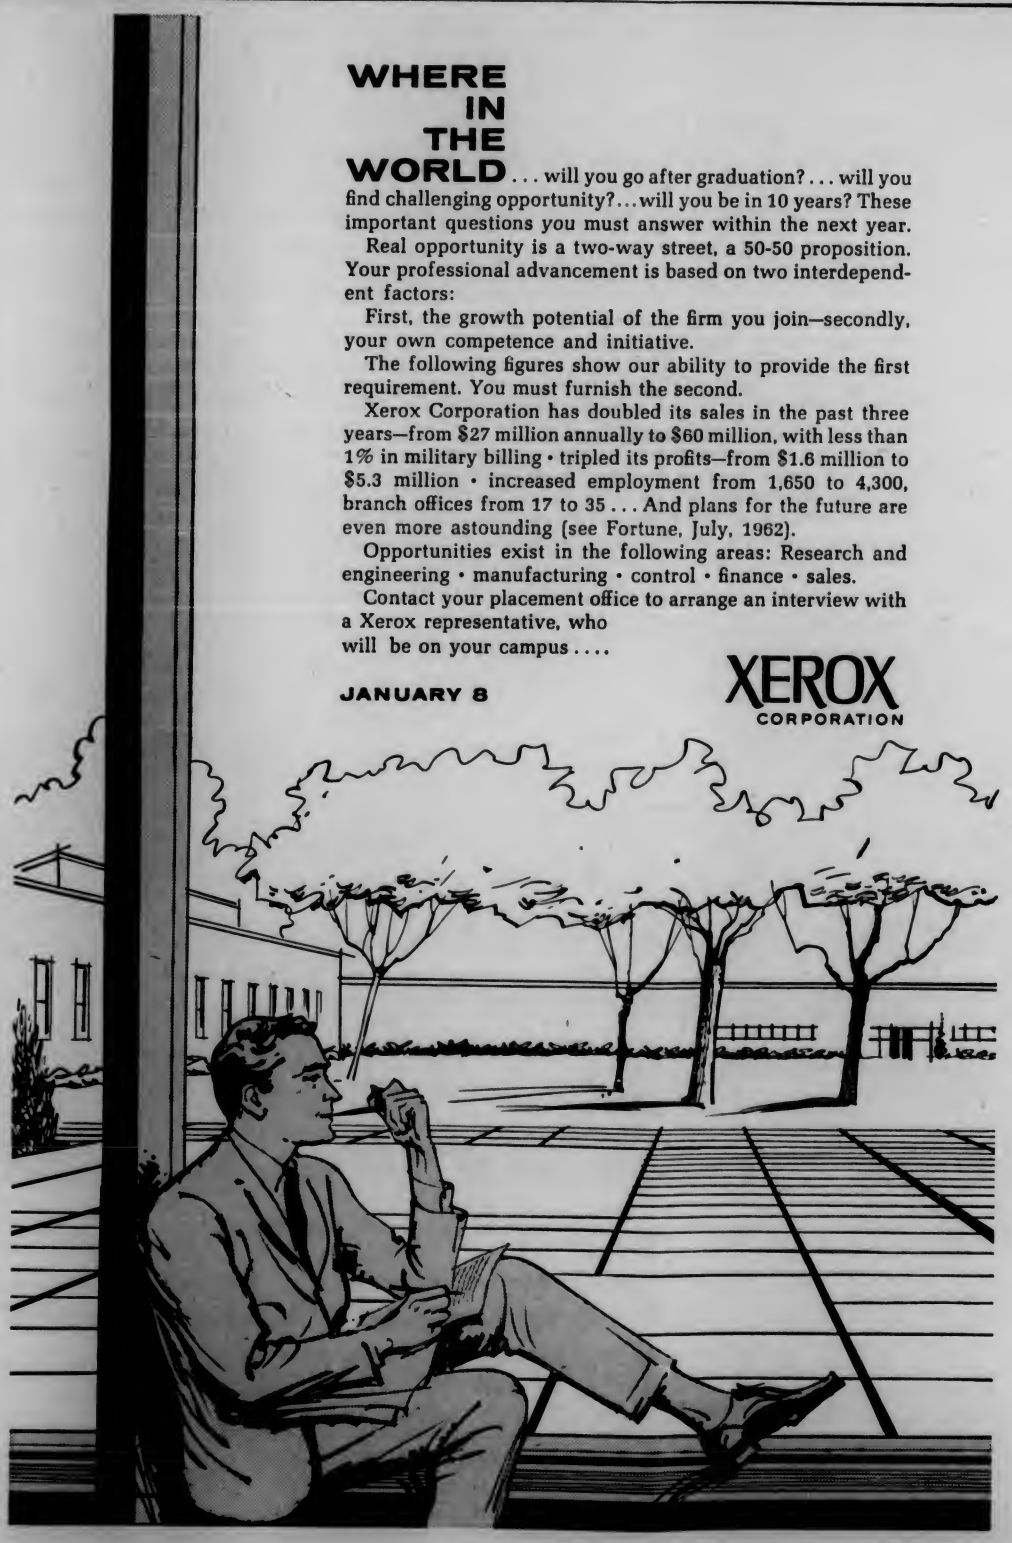
Bowdoin handed Mass a 9-2 setback in the final contest and held a shutout until Gerry Wolfe scored with an assist going to John Lasher. Mahoney assisted by Captain Gerry Clinton added one more to the total late in the game, but it came far too late. Bowen again was forced to work extra by the tough Bowdoin wings. The Polar Bears had top grade skaters going against the Redmen who were consilderably worn down after their encounter with Brown the previous night.

The overtime win in the opening game enabled the Redmen to finish fourth by putting them in the first game winners bracket in the tourney schedule.

In that opening contest Bowen had it a little easier in the save department with 39 to his credit, as the Hamilton six, though better skaters than UMass, was held to fewer shots than either Brown or Bowdoin by the fine position play of Massachusetts.

Bowen, Clinton Make All-Stars

The tourney finished with Brown first with a 3-0 slate followed by Norwich, Bowdoin, and UMass in the first division. Goalie Skip Bowen and defenseman Gerry Clinton were the Mass representatives to the All-Star team as each copped a second squad berth.



Redmen Win Over A.I.C. In '63 Opener

The freshman basketball team opened the 1963 portion of the season with an 80-43 victory over the A.I.C. frosh at the cage Thursday night.

The little Cagers got off to a quick start, jumping into a 9-0 advantage on the strength of two field goals and a free throw by center Jeff Boyle, and baskets by Tim Edwards and Ira Gamble. The frosh kept scoring over the much slower Aces, with the halftime score ending at 37-25, Gamble pouring in fourteen of the points.

The Li'l Redmen pulled away at the start of the second half and ran up a 54-27 lead with 14 minutes left.

Johnson Scores 20, Pulls In 15; O'Rourke Tallies 22 In AIC Tilt

by STEVE HEWEY '63

UMass forward Mike Johnson paced the University of Massachusetts to its third win in a row, an 83-80 taming of UNH's Wildcats Saturday night at Durham, N.H.

Johnson, sidelined for the early part of the season with an injury to his shooting hand, showed no ill effects against New Hampshire as he tossed in 20 points and gathered 15 rebounds.

The host team spotted the Redmen an 8-0 led at the start but made things rough for the visitors through most of the contest. Forwards Jim Higgins and Jim Rich rallied their mates long enough to move in front 17-16 at the midway point in the first half.

Johnson did a little rallying of his own for UMass, lighting the fire that let the Redmen leave the court at halftime with a 35-33 edge.

The second half showed that there was still a lot of life left in the Wildcats. They swapped the lead with the Redmen on several occasions. They held a 70-67 command when Johnson fouled out at the 6:25 mark, his work done for the night. Someone else had to set the pace for UMass.

Pete Bernard and Clarence Hill, the Redmen backcourt combo, picked up the slack and pushed the game out of New Hampshire's reach with a pair of hoops.

With only a few seconds left and UMass out in front 83-76, New Hampshire got a couple of quick baskets to make it look close.

In notching its first Yankee Conference win of the season against one loss, UMass had its best shooting night. The Redmen made good on 56 percent from the floor and 25 of 32 attempts from the foul line.

The win over UNH gives UMass a 6-3 slate overall. New Hampshire now stands 2-8 for the season and 0-3 in Conference standings.

Double Dribbles

Missing from action in Saturday night's conquest of UNH was Redmen forward John Reynolds. Reynolds, a big man on the boards all season for Coach Matt Zunic, tore several ligaments in his left ankle and will be out for the remainder of this semester. The injury occurred in last Thursday's UMass victory over AIC, 71-55.

In the AIC contest Massachusetts was troubled by their smaller opponents for most of the first half before opening up a 34-29 lead at the half. The second half was somewhat easier. The Redmen ran up a 44-29 lead and coasted home. AIC never came closer than 10 points after that.

A week before the current basketball season opened up Coach Calverly of URI commented on UMass chances of capturing its second straight Yan Con hoop title. Said Calverly, the all time high scorer at URI and now head coach, "Massachusetts does not show me a thing."

Tomorrow night at Kingston, Rhode Island Coach Matt Zunic hopes to show Calverly a lot of things including a scoreboard showing the Redmen in front at the final buzzer. Last season UMass dumped the Rams, 77-69, at home, and several nights later turned the same trick at Kingston, 73-63.

This year's edition of the Rams, led by last season's Yan Con scoring champ Charlie Lee, appears ready to give UMass a battle royal. Over the Christmas vacation URI easily handled St. John's 65-57. In the Queen City Tournament at Buffalo, N.Y. Rhode Island played a nip and tuck game with Arizona State, at the time ranked 6th in the nation, before the Arizona boys prevailed 89-83.

Mike Johnson, Redmen forward, tallied twenty points and pulled in 15 rebounds to lead UMass to Saturday's win over New Hampshire. Mike had been sidelined for five games, returning to the lineup in the UMass-Iona game during the vacation in which he scored 15 points.

Powerful Norwich Beats UMass Six

by AL RICE '66

The University of Mass hockey team bowed to the superior forces of Norwich University by an 8-2 score Friday night at the Amherst College rink. UMass spent the whole game on the defensive against the Vermonters who kept play in the Redmen's zone throughout the contest as a result of the loss of two of the regular UMass defensemen.

Norwich's John Kennedy scored first with 5.20 gone with a goal assisted by Dick Coe and Bob Skinner. Both Kennedy and Coe made the all-star team of the Christmas Tourney held in Providence during the vacation. Mass came back to tie the score four minutes later when John Clayton scored an unassisted goal off Norwich goalie George Philley, but Norwich added two more in the next two minutes to take a safe lead. Pete Hanson and Ken Howard drove in the Cadets' goals.

Kennedy started off the second period the same way he did the first with a goal at 7.02 assisted once again by Coe and Skinner. John Lasher tallied for the Redmen one minute and ten seconds later for their only other goal. Skinner scored two goals himself to account for a total of four points in the game. Matt O'Keefe and Dan Grip also registered goals for Norwich.

The worst of the Norwich attack came in the opening period when they forced UMass goalie to make 18 saves. The pressure let up a little in the second period when he stopped nine. The Norwich goalie had considerably less work as the game progressed as the Redmen slowly ran out of gas.

Jacques Callaert Painting Collection On Display In Commonwealth Room

A collection of impressionistic oil paintings by Jacques Callaert of Ostende, Belgium is on exhibit through January 14 at UMass in the S.U. Callaert, recently interviewed on television (Channel 40) by Barbara Bernard, paints landscapes, seascapes, still-life, and also portraits.

During 1959 and 1960 he made a 12,500 mile trip through equatorial Africa, studying and painting as he traveled. His large collection of African canvasses includes paintings of native dancers, jungle scenes, colorful ceremonial masks, and faces of some of the many natives he encountered.

Jacques Callaert's European travels are reflected in the paintings of quiet Spanish villages, sunlit Italian rooftops, shore scenes and seascapes which will be included among the 25 pictures in his Amherst exhibition. The exhibit will also present canvasses of the artist's impressions of the United States painted during his two months in this country.

Jacques Callaert's paintings are now on display in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U.

Callaert's bold impressionistic style emphasizes the use of color and texture, and a palette knife rather than a brush is his principal tool. Although several of the paintings to be shown have been sold previously, most of the canvasses on display will be available. Interested persons are invited to consult with the artist, who will be present at the exhibit at least part of every day.

Selection Of Dairy Princess Made Soon

Selection of the Massachusetts 1963 Dairy Princess will be a special banquet feature at the 13th Annual Dairy Farmers' Seminar to be held at UMass Jan. 23-24.

The seminar provides dairymen in New England with an opportunity to learn about the latest research on problems facing them and about new developments affecting their future.

Sponsored by the Massachusetts unit of the American Dairy Association, the selection of a Bay State dairy princess will highlight a program of awards and entertainment at the banquet, says Clarence M. Parsons, Extension dairyman and general chairman for this year's seminar.

Young women interested in entering the dairy princess contest should be sponsored by some local organization. For details, they are asked to contact Carl Hedin, manager of the American Dairy Association at 343 Winter Street, Waltham 54, Mass.

LRAPC'S Report Passed By Senate

The University Faculty Senate has accepted the first report of the University's Long Range Academic Planning Committee, which was set up in February of 1961.

According to Dr. Leo Redfern, Director of the Office of Institutional Studies, the acceptance does not imply approval or disapproval and from time to time the Senate may discuss or act on particular items and policy suggestions made in the report.

Four main lines of study were carried on by the Committee: (1) examination of general principles and concepts; (2) background readings and information; (3) off-campus consultations; and (4) a series of information sessions with deans, division heads, administrative officers and visiting consultants.

Discussing the multiple role of the University and its responsibility of serving the people, the report lists teaching, research, and extension as the three major instrumentalities through which the University renders educational service. It states that judgment and standards are the constructive and controlling factors of University life.

Responsibilities of a State University

According to the report, the main responsibilities of the state university are to provide appropriate educational opportunity to the students within the commonwealth and to achieve excellence.

From their studies the members of the Committee derived four great objectives: "To provide for high quality university education . . . , To establish the University as a graduate and research center . . . , To extend the University outreach . . . , and

Three Coeds Honored By Magazine

Beth Peterson '63; Mary Agnes Pelton '64; and Margaret-Ann Mason Loomis '64 will represent UMass this year on Mademoiselle magazine's national College Board, it has been announced.

The annual College Board Competition is designed for women students with talent in art, writing, fashion, merchandising, promotion, or advertising. Board members were selected on the basis of entries that showed their interest and ability in one of these fields.

As College Board members, they will report news from their colleges to Mademoiselle. They are eligible to compete for the twenty Guest Editorships that will be awarded by the magazine in May. To win one of the top twenty prizes, they must submit a second entry to show their specific aptitudes for magazine work.

The twenty College Board members who win Guest Editorships will be brought to New York City for the month of June to help edit, write, and illustrate Mademoiselle's 1963 August college issue.

Psychology Department Awarded $100,000 NIH Research Grant

A research grant of more than $100,000 has been received by the UMass Psychology Department from the National Institutes of Health, Provost Gilbert L. Woodside has announced.

The grant will be administered by Dr. Seymour Epstein, professor of psychology at the University, in a five-year study of "approach-avoidance conflict."

One of Largest Awards In UMass History

The award is one of the largest single grants ever made to the University in its 100-year history. It will enable Prof. Epstein to continue his seven-year study of measurement of unconscious conflict in human behavior.

Earlier this year, Dr. Epstein presented results of his research at the Nebraska Symposium on Motivation.

"We are trying to determine those things which disturb a person—whether he recognizes what they are or not—and his characteristic ways of dealing with the disturbances," says Dr. Epstein.

Studies With Parachutists

Earlier work with parachutists, he states, provided an excellent opportunity to investigate how people deal with conflict, for the novice parachutist invariably experiences intense fear and yet jumps despite it.

In his approach to measuring conflict in parachutists, Dr. Epstein studied their responses to sequences of pictures and word association tests connected with parachuting.

Variations Recorded

Variations in the jumpers' level of anxiety and fear were recorded at two-week intervals before and after the jump, and immediately prior to the jump.

Dr. Epstein was able to determine from these studies that the highly experienced jumper is not without fear, but has learned to control his fears and anxieties while parachuting.

The University psychologist noted that those who controlled their fears and anxieties while jumping, tended to experience fear at some time well before the jump, and released the fear in some way after the jump.

Pregnancy and Surgery Anxieties To Be Investigated

Dr. Epstein says, "Techniques similar to those which have already proved to be extremely accurate in gauging conflict in parachuting will be used to investigate anxiety associated with pregnancy and surgery. The next step will be to investigate specific areas of conflict in psychosomatic and other emotional disorders."

Psychologists and psychiatrists believe that disorders such as ulcers, hypertension and asthma often have a psychological basis, according to Prof. Epstein, or they are at least aggravated by emotional factors.

"Knowledge Would Improve Treatment"

"More thorough knowledge of what these emotional factors are would improve our scientific understanding and treatment of these disorders," he says.

The 38-year-old scientist, who combines teaching and research in a busy schedule, hopes that more exact knowledge about a person's conflicts can be used to shorten the time now required in treating mental patients by psychotherapy.

Entering his tenth year on the University staff, Dr. Epstein was born in Brooklyn, New York. He was graduated from Brooklyn College in 1948, and received his M.A. and Ph.D. in clinical psychology at the University of Wisconsin He has been a teacher-researcher on the University faculty since 1953.

Prof. O'Donnell Appointed Visiting Lecturer At Madrid

Dr. Walter G. O'Donnell, Professor of Management in the UMass School of Business Administration, has received an award from the U.S. Department of State to serve as a visiting professor at the University of Madrid during the Spring semester of 1963.

There he will conduct an advanced graduate seminar on new developments in administrative theory and practice.

Some side trips from Spain to other European countries are planned in order to give lectures in other universities and industrial organizations where interest in his research has been shown.

A member of the University faculty since 1956, Professor O'Donnell has specialized in the newer theories of organization and corporate decision making, with emphasis on the philosophical, sociological and psychological elements in organizational and administrative behavior.

Last summer he served as visiting professor at the University of Puerto Rico as planning consultant of a graduate program to the Dean of the College of Business Administration there.

Forestry Honor Fraternity, Xi Sigma Pi, Installed Here

The Psi Chapter of Xi Sigma Pi, national forestry honor fraternity, was recently established at UMass with a special ceremony held at the SU.

Dr. Kenneth L. Cornell, national forester, presented the chapter's charter to Prof. Arnold D. Rhodes, head of the department of forestry and wildlife management at UMass.

Twenty-one students and faculty members received membership certificates.

Xi Sigma Pi, founded in 1908, is represented by chapters at 22 of the 26 accredited forestry schools in the U.S. One of the fraternity's main objectives is to secure and maintain a high standard of scholarship in forestry education.

Chapter members of the UMass chapter are: P. S. Verrier, T. S. Foster, R. G. Babeau, R. R. Goyer, T. P. Leavitt, R. R. Peoples, R. C. Ellis, H. C. Perkins, R. F. Lucas, W. H. Davidson, R. L. Hilton, J. S. Swart, F. M. Hunt, R. S. Bond and J. C. Mawson.

Also, Professors H. G. Abbott, B. R. Hoadley, C. R. Lockard, W. P. MacConnell, A. D. Rhodes, J. H. Noyes, D. L. Mader, W. B. Becker and H. B. Gatslick.

EXAM ABSENCE

Students who are forced to miss a final exam should feel obligated to inform the professor immediately of the reason for the absence. Instructors are required to report grades 48 hours after each exam; they must be notified if an incomplete is to be reported instead of a failure.

Ex-Governor Will Teach Politics Here

Michael V. DiSalle, governor of Ohio from 1958 to 1962, has been appointed Distinguished Visiting Professor of Practical Politics at the University of Massachusetts for the second semester of the 1962-63 academic year.

DiSalle, defeated in his recent bid for re-election, will assume the UMass position which was established under a Ford Foundation grant to the university's government department. The program is designed to bring to campus persons who have held top-level positions in federal, state or local governing bodies. Appointees serve on a one-semester basis, teaching undergraduate and graduate courses in government and giving public lectures.

PRODUCTIVE STERILITY

One only has to look at the dynamism of the Greek city states, of the vitality of the cities of Italy during the reign of the Renaissance, or the productivity of the enlightenment in Europe to be aware of the potential for creativity which can exist in a civilization.

But there is the civilization of the United States; perhaps one of the most properous nations in the history of man. With the basic tenet of freedom of will for all, the United States has risen to economic heights never known to the world.

In this industrial complex of machines and emotions we have become impersonal, not only to government, not only to business, but also to our closest relations. Perhaps in this light it is significant to know that 20% of America is involved in some form of psycho-therapy. This fact not only alludes to an inability to relate with others, but also a basic dissatisfaction with our lives as being led.

Nevertheless we are a people who are unable to deal with this problem. Like a beast we relax, and move only when prodded. Through the mass medium of television we have become a lackadaisical society. Of course television is not the only reason for a lack of motivation, but is indicative of a denial of any vital thought which is the basis of a democracy. The man who becomes our political leader is the one who pleases us the most; the products we purchase are those of the man who manipulates our minds in the most subtle way; our spiritual leaders are those who have the greatest wit. It is significant that as the cold war becomes more threatening we exclude any other form of opposite political belief.

Instead of the "Affluent Society," a more suitable name for us would be the absorbent society. Our centers of intellectual ferment, our universities, have become the seats of reactionary conservatism. Also, they are plagued with a detached, non-concerned student body.

As our surburbia grows, our tendency to conform, on all levels, increases. Values become enmeshed with "what is the most suitable thing to do." Evidence to this lies in our slum areas, in our high divorce rate, in our high rate of suicides, and in our expanding rate of juvenile delinquency. In this maze of meaninglessness it becomes more difficult for people to discover just who they are. Our university campuses again speak to this point.

Is it true that we are only motivated by self interest? In looking at our governmental structure and the important role of interest groups one discovers that one of the most important reasons for activity is economic enhancement. We vie to outdo the other; but what happens to the ones who are unable to help themselves? We only have to look at our slums.

Our cities are not creative like the city-states. Our cities are not beautiful like those of the Italian Renaissance. The activity is that of people entering in the morning, doing their work during the day, and leaving at night. Nevertheless, we, the peoples of this free society, have the potential to do what we want to do, to be what we want to be, and to live as we want to live. The desire to be active, vital individuals lies dormant under the industrial complexity of mechanization.

We must become aware of our feelings and those of others to lift this blanket of dormancy. The courage lies within us, and if we do not summon it, this lack of vitality may lead to our ruin. —G.M.

PERSPECTIVE

by G. MASSELAM

Finals are coming. Everything is somewhat normal; but here and there one can feel something brewing. The Library is more crowded, less people are in the Hatch, the dorms are quieter, seats in classrooms are more sparsely occupied. And if you look very closely at the faces of other students you can see their mouths somewhat drawn, their eyes nervously scintillating from one place to another. Some are more attentive, others preoccupied. All seem to be intent. Clocks are being watched. People are concerned with time and where it's going. Papers are being finished, as exams are impending.

One begins to wonder whether he will have time to fit in all the studying needed for exams. Things are looking blacker than they have in a long time. There's laughter, but it's tense. As people think about the semester past, some are regretful, and there are some who are hopeful. If you listen closely you probably can hear once in a while, an utterance of determination. Also some are already looking towards next semester. Most everyone wishes that it would all be over. The sun is dreary and the clouds reflect discouragement.

It's important, when things get pressured, as they are, to take a general view of our purposes at the University. It becomes so easy to involve ourselves in the pressures and the discouragements of what we have to do, that the experience itself loses any vitalization and appeal, and any helpful meaning that it may have had, vanishes. Finals represent an important learning experience in the semester work as a whole; that is how that which was done in the beginning of the semester relates to that we have had in the latter part. Any study is progressional and is built on some previous knowledge. Finals afford the opportunity to grasp the stages of developments in one cohesive pursuit. Also they help the student in realizing his own intellectual growth and makes him aware how much he has learned. One of the real sadnesses comes when we get caught up with the frenzy of meeting the deadlines of exams by pulling "all nighters" and other taxing means that the learning experience becomes so tedious all we want to do is forget about it. Perhaps one way to alleviate this problem is to have a reading period before exams or to make exams more of a general nature. We are not complaining about the difficulty of the exams. It's just that certain values are lost in the present program.

It's also important to take a general perspective at our whole purpose. We are here at the University in order to learn intellectually about ourselves and the world, to grow emotionally and become more rational beings, and to decide in what areas we will channel our energies and lives. Before we enter the frenzy and the pressure of finals it's important to remember that they are only a part, a very important part, of our educational process and effectiveness and meaning is only relevant to the type of experience we have—both intellectually and emotionally.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MORE NEW YEAR'S PREDICTIONS

To the Editor:

Re prediction number 29 appearing on the editorial page of the Collegian on January 7 ("The Collegian will receive at least 25 letters to the editor about these predictions."): I am quite sure that there are not twenty-five people on this campus who would take the trouble to give this article a second thought.

A.R.M.

Well, only 24 more to go.—Ed.

To the Editor:

I would like to add my prediction for the new year along with those that have appeared in the Collegian: I predict that the new dormitories which are supposed to be ready for occupancy in September of 1963 will not be finished until second semester, but that the University will accept students for these spaces for first semester. I predict that several hundreds of students will live in "tripled" rooms.

One of Three

To the Editor:

In accordance with one of the Collegian predictions, here is my one twenty-fifth of the response.

I am predicting hopefully that the good relations among the major campus organizations will continue throughout this year and into the next. The fall semester of 1962-63 has been the first time during my stay at the university that a closeness, compounded of good will, mutual effort, and a desire to better this institution has been formed and maintained.

Let us all sincerely hope that personnel of the Collegian, WMUA, the Index, and the Student Senate, all of which have been at odds with each other during other years, will keep up their harmonious relationship, instead of competing for leadership and glory in the complex organization of the university extra-curricular.

A member of '63

To the Editor:

Here's my two cents worth on New Year's predictions: The old Chapel Bells will appear on the new United States Half Dollars.

A Cracked Student

LET'S HAVE NICE ICE

To the Editor:

I would like to call your attention to the horrible condition of the ice on the Campus Pond.

At least one person has already broken a skate in one of the many cracks that are hidden by an inch of ice shavings. If this condition exists much longer someone could be seriously hurt.

An hour and one half's work by the maintenance department every two or three days could result in good skating conditions. All that would be required is the sweeping of the ice and the spreading of ¼ to ½ an inch of water. Since there is a fire hydrant about thirty feet from the west side of the pond, I can see no reason why this could not be done with a minimum of time and energy.

Rules Are Set Up For On-Campus Phone Calls

Two telephone extensions from the University switchboard are now installed in every dormitory, under arrangements made by the Student Senate.

The cooperation of all students in the proper use of these extensions will be necessary if they are to be continued. The following rules have been announced for their use by the Dean of Students' office.

1) No off-campus calls of any sort can be made, nor can calls be placed to residence hall pay stations; nor can incoming calls from off-campus or residence hall pay stations be received at any of these extensions.

2) The extensions may be used only between the hours of 4 p.m. and 11 p.m. on weekdays, and from 1 p.m. until 11 p.m. on weekends.

3) No operator service for either information or assistance in placing calls should be requested. You must know the campus number you are calling and dial the number directly.

4) Limit the length of your calls to give others an opportunity to use the extension and to reduce the load on the automatic switching equipment.

5) Do not dial the Head of Residence number for personal calls.

Ronald E. Pearson of Millbury in Worcester County, a freshman in agriculture at UMass, recently joined two upperclassmen as the winner of a $200 scholarship.

The scholarships are given annually by the Humble Oil & Refining Co. to students at the university on the basis of their outstanding 4-H activity and scholastic aptitude.

Pearson was presented his $200 check by Douglas M. Richter, Humble Oil sales manager of Springfield. Scholarships are limited to four-year students taking courses in agriculture or allied fields.

Also receiving scholarship checks for the third and fourth times were John Reisen, a senior; and Jonathan Goldthwaite, a junior.

Pearson, 18, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pearson and for eight years has been a member of the Millbury Jolly 4-H Club in dairy, garden, tractor and electricity.

Agriculture Staff Member Retires After 37 Years

Earle S. Carpenter, on the UMass faculty since November of 1925, retired on December 31 after 37 years as a Cooperative Extension and College of Agriculture staff member.

Professor Carpenter was in charge of exhibits and Extension courses from 1925-29, at which time he was appointed secretary of Extension, a position he held until 1946. In 1946 he was named Extension communications specialist in television and visual aids and promoted to his present rank.

A graduate of Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1924 with a B.S. in floriculture, he obtained his M.S. in the same field from Iowa State University in 1925.

During his long tenure, Carpenter helped establish or innovated many advances in the adult education field and communications. He created the first motion picture library as part of Extension helped develop a uniform premium list for Massachusetts fairs, and created the display and poster contests in the state as part of National 4-H Club Week. He was instrumental in developing and then coordinating state and county Extension Service television programs seen on five different stations in the Commonwealth.

He taught an Extension Method course for 10 years, established the publication Program Hints for rural organizations, and was the originator of Chalk Talk, a periodical for Extension personnel.

Professor Carpenter has received recognition for his work, including a 25-year award in 1956 from the American Association of Agricultural Editors for outstanding contributions to agricultural communications work. In 1961 he received the association's TV script award, and at State 4-H Leaders' Day was presented a plaque for outstanding service to the 4-H program.

Rams Squeak By Redmen In YanCon Thriller, 86-80

by STEVE HEWEY '63

The University of Massachusetts lost a heartbreaking YanCon basketball contest to URI last night, 86-80. Despite 27 and 22 point performances by Rodger Twitchell and Mike Johnson, a Redmen second half rally fell short in the final minutes.

Trailing by as many as 13 points in the second half, 70-57, UMass chipped away at the Ram lead and narrowed the edge to 80-78 but some pressure foul shooting in the final minutes by the Rams protected the victory.

The Rams jumped off to an early 9-2 lead with baskets by Charlie Lee and Steve Chubin. Mike Johnson, working expertly in the pivot spot strung together six points to enable the Redmen to tie the contest at 10 all.

Rhode Island took the lead briefly again until UMass forward Rodger Twitchell hit on a jumper to give UMass a 16-14 command. UMass led 18-16 for about a minute until Denny McGovern started hitting on his one-hander to tie the game at 20-20.

From this point the Rams got hot. They tossed in four straight baskets and a pair of free throws to surge into a 30-26, to six points, a lead that URI held until Steve Chubin and McGovern added four more to give URI its biggest lead of the night.

Clarence Hill baited the Redmen out of the 10 point deficit with six straight points to cut the Rams lead to six, 46-40, at halftime.

Despite the great rallying effort by UMass, this six point spread was still to be the telling difference. Rhode Island led by a mere 2 points, 80-78 with 2:10 left in the game and had possession of the ball.

UMass wanted that ball but to do so had to foul. It proved to be just what URI needed. Steve Chubin and Ron Rathstein put in six in a row from the line to ice the victory.

The Redmen for the second straight game hit over 50% from the floor making good on 53%. Rhode Island was 48%. The sub-par foul shooting by the Redmen told the story.

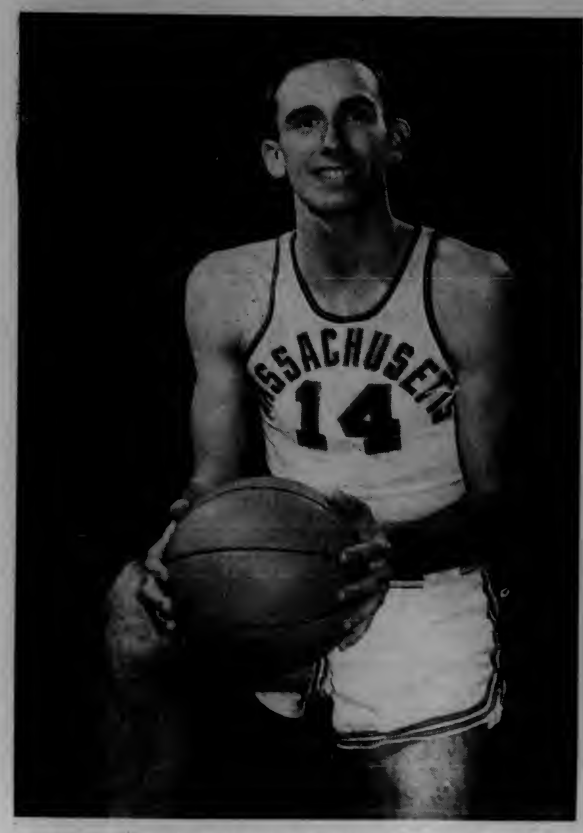
Rhode Island scoring was preceded by Steve Chubin with 25, Dennis McGovern with 19 and Charlie Lee with 21.

Tomorrow night finds the Redmen hosting Holy Cross. The Crusaders, last year, with All-American forward Jack Foley dumped UMass at Worcester by 40 points.

This year they are without Foley but still must be considered potent. Last Saturday they took UConn 74-50, hitting an almost 60% from the floor. UMass played earlier in the season, but lost decisively to UConn.

This game, as with UM-HC games in the past years, will no doubt be a sell-out. Get there early to get your seat!



Redman co-captain Rodger Twitchell scored 27 points in UMass' valiant effort to beat the Rhode Island Rams in Kingston last night.

Stockbridge Shooters Beat Harvard; Lose To N.U. Frosh

In a triangular match held at the NU range, a strong Northeastern Freshman Rifle Team handed the Stockbridge School Riflemen a 41 point defeat, while the Aggiemen were topping the Harvard Freshman by 43 points.

Kolouch with a 287 and Murphy with 284 were high guns for Northeastern and Harvard over the 3-position course, while Porter led the Stockbridge team with his 277. As this was the opening shoulder - to - shoulder match for the Aggiemen, first-night jitters took their toll with snowbirds showing on a few targets.

Vandalism Costs UM Pucksters Free Ice

by JIM TRELEASE '63

It was learned recently that during the UMass-Penn hockey game at Deerfield Academy's enclosed rink, several prized art prints were stolen from the lobby of the arena. As a consequence, the Deerfield institution has placed a ban on the use of their rink by schools other than their own.

With this ruling, the University of Massachusetts loses the opportunity for $1200 worth of free ice, since the rink was donated for our use without charge. And consequently, UMass must now play and practice at Amherst College's open rink, risking fair weather against foul. In the past, with the enclosed arena washouts were impossible but now all teams competing against the Redmen must take the chance of "no game" when they play at the open Amherst facility.

What we hope is that if students were responsible for the thefts at Deerfield, they will realize the after-effects of their foolishness and see fit to return the prints. And the incident should also point out to all spectators the consequences of their actions at athletic events and their responsibilities to the teams involved.

Redmen Ski Squad In Heavy Training

by DICK HURLBURT '64

The UMass Varsity Ski Team has been preparing for its second season since early November. All candidates ran five miles a day for two months to toughen up their leg muscles for the coming winter events. The 1963 squad was chosen from a field of 25 men at Mt. Snow in Dover, Vt., on December 15.

During Christmas vacation the team held its winter training camp at Mad River Glen, Waitsfield, Vt., and at Killington Basin in Sherburne, Vt. Weekend practice sessions will continue until the first meet, which is scheduled for January 27 at Thunder Mountain in Charlemont, Mass.

Coach William MacConnell has announced that the eight men on this year's team are as follows: Richard Hurlburt '64, Captain, West Springfield; Clark Bowlen '63, Manager, Greenfield; Donald Burgess '64, Greenfield; and Tom Clark '65, Pittsfield. All are veterans from last year. New this year are Eric Schule '63, Greenfield; Norm Carpenter '64, Greenfield; Walt Swirtek and Carl Abbey '66, South Hadley.

AAU-NCAA Feud Wrecks UMass K. of C. Games Plans

by JIM RYAN '65

Due to the current raging AAU-NCAA power struggle, members of the UMass indoor track team will be unable to compete in the Knights of Columbus Indoor Games to be held in the Boston Garden on January 12.

Coach Footrick has 12 boys tentatively entered in the meet, but unless there is a settlement between the two organizations before Saturday they will not participate. The K of C meet, an AAU event, has not been sanctioned by the National Collegiate Athletic Association or its little brother in the East, the E.C.A.C., which recently urged its 130 members not to compete in meets sanctioned only by the AAU.

The basic dispute arose as a result of the N.C.A.A.'s desire to attain more control over U.S. amateur athletes. The N.C.A.A. feels that the great majority of our Olympic athletes come from colleges and should therefore be under N.C.A.A. control when competing in national and international events.

The AAU has announced its refusal to sanction any meet which is sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Federation, the agency through which the N.C.A.A. administers its track and field program, and has threatened to bar from international competition any athlete who takes part in a meet not sanctioned by AAU. Right now the NCAA is meeting in Los Angeles to consider a bill whereby its member schools compete only in meets sanctioned by the U.S.T.F.F. If it is passed, any athlete who participates in an AAU event will be punished by a one-year suspension from NCAA competition. President Kennedy recently appointed General Douglas MacArthur as a referee in the matter. The main issue for arbitration is a method whereby the U.S.T.F.F. and the AAU can conduct separate programs without threat of ineligibility for international competition through the period of the 1964 Olympic games.

High Jumper DICK WARD

Dash Man LOREN FLAGG

UMass athletic director Warren McGuirk is at the Los Angeles meeting, and as of this writing no word has been received from him of a settlement which would allow the boys to participate in the K of C meet.

As Coach Footrick said, "This leaves us right in the middle." Mr. Footrick has a very good two-mile relay team this year. He has six boys entered for that event from which he will select four. The six are Dave Balch, Bob Pendleton, Jim Wrynn, Bob Brouillet, Ken O'Brien, and Tom Panke.

Scheduled to compete in individual events were Loren Flagg, 50-yd. dash; Bob Brouillet, two-mile run; Jim Wrynn and Dave Balch, mile-run; Dick Ward, high jump; and Dave Sodowsky, pole vault.

YANCON NEWS

UConn Hoopsters In Three YanCon Tilts

The University of Connecticut basketball Huskies will be out to catch up on Yankee Conference leader Rhode Island with three Yankee Conference battles slated this week, beginning with the New Hampshire Wildcats at Durham, last night at 7:30.

With an 85-61 victory over Massachusetts in their only YanCon outing, the Huskies can make a great deal of headway in the loop race by winning over New Hampshire on Tuesday; and following up with victories over Vermont (Friday) and Maine (Saturday), both home dates. Rhode Island leads the league with a 4-0 record, followed by Connecticut (1-0), Maine (2-1), Massachusetts (1-1), Vermont (1-4) and New Hampshire (0-3).

Connecticut hopes to regain its shooting touch against the Wildcats. The Huskies experienced one of their worst shooting nights in years, hitting for a very anemic 29 per cent, while losing to Holy Cross in Worcester, Saturday night, 74-50. That set the UConn won-lost mark at 4-3 for the season.

While the Huskies were losing to Holy Cross, the New Hampshire Wildcats nearly knocked over defending YanCon champion Massachusetts at Durham, Saturday night. Although they jumped off to an 8-0 yead, the UMass Redmen found themselves behind several times in the late stages of the game. Only a very hot shooting performance (56 per cent) saved the Bay Staters who overcame a 70-67 deficit in the last five minutes to win, 83-80. The New Hampshire victories this season were recorded against Boston University and Stetson. Losses came at the hands of Northeastern, Vermont, St. Anselm's, Rhode Island, Davidson, Jacksonville, Oglethorpe and Massachusetts.

The leading scorers for New Hampshire Coach Bill Olson's combine are a pair of 6-3 juniors, forward Jim Rich (17.8 average) and guard Ron Cote (12.8). The other starters are 6-5 forward Norm Higgins (6.8), 6-4 center Jim Ball (7.8) and either 5-11 Paul Larkin (3.2) or 6-1 Paul Leavitt (4.6) at the other guard post. Rich, who paced all scorers with 21 points against UMass, is averaging 25.3 in YanCon play.

Leading the Connecticut five, both in scoring and in rebounds, is the 6-7 sophomore sensation, Toby Kimball, who has a 14.4 scoring average and a 15.9 mark in the rebound column. The rebound figure should place him near the top ten in the nation in this category.

LRAPC's Report ...

To establish the University as the Capstone of public higher education ..."

Regarding admission standards, the report recommends not only a multiple track approach which would include CEEB scores, high school rank and principal-recommendation, but also suggests closer liaison with secondary school counseling and guidance officers. This method, the committee believes, would diminish the present strong reliance on CEEB scores and class rank.

More Scholarships, Higher Salaries

The report also lists the value of the expansion of scholarship programs in order to aid needy students and also to attract outstanding students to the University by means of special honorary scholarships.

Recommendations are also made for improving salary levels, ranges and adjustments in order to secure qualified staff members. It notes that the average faculty salary of $7,528 was lowest in 1960-61 of any state university in New England.

The need for advanced graduate studies and Ph.D work is also stressed. The report also mentions the need for assimilation into the campus and community of students in the graduate school.

Attention is also focused on plans for a new medical center, which would include a four-year medical school.

In addition, the committee notes the accomplishments of the four-college program and suggests further development in the Department of Astronomy, the establishment of more joint four-college departments, more cooperative research projects, and a coordination of academic calendars and schedules.

Newscaster Savareid Will Appear For DVP

Eric Savareid, distinguished CBS News Correspondent and author, will appear here in a lecture February 12 under auspices of the Distinguished Visitors Program, it has been announced by DVP officials. His topic will be "The Shape of Things to Come".

For many years CBS News

chief Washington correspondent, and CBS London Correspondent for the past two years, Savareid is currently serving as narrator on the CBS Reports program and contributing to CBS coverage of various major news events.

Kassan Memorial Award.

During World War II, Savareid covered battlefronts for CBS News on both sides of the globe. He landed with the first wave of American troops in Southern France, and reported the course of the war through France and Germany.

In the China - Burma - India Theatre, he bailed out in the jungle with 19 others and, a month later, was rescued and led back to civilization by headhunters. At the end of the hostilities, he returned to this country to cover the founding of the United Nations and the San Francisco Conference.

Included in the programming is a special service to Music I students which will be aired from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. nightly. The semester end classical programming by WMUA is an annual event in their schedule which has been acclaimed as a benefit for students studying for the finals.

There will be no more student parking in South Lot next semester. Exceptions to this will be staff members, graduate students, and disabled students.

Scholarship Applications Are Available

David P. Lawrence, Assistant Dirctor of Placement and Financial Aid, has announced that University Scholarship applications are now available for the school year 1963-64.

The scholarship awards are granted on the basis of "need" and "academic ability". The present scholastic requirement of all students is a 2.5 cumulative point average as of the first semester of the current school year.

Lawrence noted that all qualified students are encouraged to file this year because indications are that UMass will probably have more money available for upperclass scholarships.

All applications must be completed and filed with the Placement and Financial Aid Service in Machmer by March 15. Successful applicants will be notified around May 1.

Students interested in the scholarship program should visit with Lawrence in the Placement and Financial Aid Service for further information and application blanks.

The Executive Committee for the Class of '66 said they have formulated plans to construct a toboggan slide for use by the UMass student body during the Carni days.

As a special event, they will feature toboggan competition between fraternities and sororities. Plaques will be presented to the winning teams. The slide will be open to the public after the race.

Those who own their own toboggans may have free use of the slide. Other persons may rent a toboggan from the Freshman class.

Student Senate Is At Odds Over Judging Teams' Budget

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting saw the beginnings of this year's row over acceptance of the University Judging Teams' budget.

Sen. Jon Fife ('64 Van Meter) stated that there "has been a fight in the Senate every year since 1951, with the team's winning by a narrow margin every time."

Reading from an old report he attempted to point out that the problem is not a new one. The report stated, in part: 1) "that the teams tend to be an extension of classroom activity", 2) "while anyone may try out for the teams, they in actuality have to be in a specific major", and 3) "the teams are too faculty controlled and run".

Fife further stated "that the teams are an extracurricular activity in name only." The present cost is "$125 per member."

Senator Richard Potter ('63 Van Meter) argued that the teams were an integral part of the training of the future leaders in agriculture. He said that the University was one of the few institutions in the state that taught the skills of judging.

The discussion was closed by Senate President Donald Cournoyer.

The bill to accept the teams' budget will be further discussed and voted upon at the next meeting.

A motion was made to change the By-Laws so that any appointment made by the President would be tabled for one week in order to allow it to be challenged by an Senator. If such a challenge was forthcoming, the appointment would be voted upon.

After a motion to table the bill indefinitely was defeated by the vote of Pres. Cournoyer, who voted in order to break a tie, the motion was tabled until the next meeting.

The Senate accepted the resignation of Fred Thurberg ('64 At-Large) as chairman of Elections Committee. Sen. Dave Mathieson was named to succeed Thurberg.

Finally, the Senate witnessed the swearing-in of George Jones as Senator for the married dorms and Robert O'Leary as President of the Class of 1965.

MAKING A MARK

It is encouraging to note the growth of the Honors Colloquia program here at the University. The freshmen, sophomores and juniors who have participated in this program are quick to point out its values and the importance of this program in their academic lives.

For seniors, however, there is a unique opportunity to pursue independently a topic in a particular field of interest. This opportunity is known as Senior Honors.

These Honors Projects are carried on with the aid of three faculty advisors who are familiar with the nature of the students research.

The scope of these projects is truly amazing. There are 31 University departments and seven colleges represented by the seniors doing honors work. The projects themselves range from The Concept of Alienation (Sociology) to the Synthesis of Tricyclic Cycloproperyl Derivatives (Chemistry). The departments represented literally range from Accounting to Zoology.

If the scope of the projects is amazing, then the growth of this program must be rated as staggering. Last year there were 48 students from 17 departments and four colleges doing honors projects. This year there are 77 students (a growth rate of over 60%) representing the 31 departments and 7 colleges already mentioned.

This growth can be attributed, in part, to the outstanding nature of the program itself. Many of the seniors now doing honors work stated that they heard about the program from friends who were enrolled in the program last year. When you have a "good thing going, word gets around."

The Senior Honors program is "a good thing."

One of the outstanding features of the program is that it emphasizes the value of research on the undergraduate level. This type of project elevates the student out of the classroom where facts are absorbed, and puts him into the field of research where facts are discovered.

A senior enrolled in this program has transcended the common bounds of students. The intellectual thrill of adding to the total body of knowledge should be encouraged and recognized at every level of the University, and, in turn, outside of the University. If our school is to be truly great we must recognize that our greatness will lie not with our physical plant, the size of our student body, or the number of athletic victories; greatness lies with the students of the University—those enrolled currently and those who have matriculated.

The measure of our success will be the mark the students of the University of Massachusetts make on society, and those participating in the senior Honors projects are most certainly beginning to make their marks. —N.C.A.

GEORGE AND JAMES

It's here! One of the most sensational money-making ideas to come from our government in years. An idea which will surely settle our national debt. The five-cent stamp. To think, for the next several years Americans will have the opportunity to lick the backs of the heads of two of our most honorable citizens; President Monroe, who has at last joined the ranks of status seekers, along with many other national heroes; and George Washington; it's also pleasing to know that Washington has at last been promoted from the one-cent stamp, and now is worth a nickel.

But there's a question. Just who is our national hero? Was Monroe or Washington ever cheered for two hours at a time? Have children idolized them enough to collect their pictures? Have women winced at every move their leaders made? Have forty thousand people come to watch them? Have men cried for them? No. Therefore I recommend a true hero. A man who is really valuable to our country. So valuable that he looks like our national symbol, the bald eagle. Yes, a true ideal, a real image of manhood. Y. A. Tittle, the leader of those dynamic eleven, the New York Giants. Who would be more able to endure the brutal handling of our Post Office department? Certainly Monroe or Washington is much too frail and old to be able to live through snow, rain, and storm. Certainly there has to be some sensitivity involved in our choosing.

I then urge that our government reevaluate their decision on who could do the best job on the five-cent stamp. —G.M.

Mortar Board Comments

As the final examination period approaches again at the Uinversity, most students are confronted with the problem of finding a quiet, convenient place to study. During this hectic period, the serious student may wish to concentrate on his studies in an atmosphere free from petty disturbances due to over-crowded conditions and inconsiderate, noisy students. The dormitory and the library often times do not provide this ideal studying situation. Here, the student may be hampered in his studies by annoying actions of certain individuals who persist in creating disturbances. This problem may be remedied on an individual basis. However, the difficulty of over-crowded conditions as a hindrance to studying might be solved. We would like to present concrete suggestions that may help to alleviate this problem on campus. The first of our suggestions is that the fourth level of Goodell Library may be opened after 10 p.m. Secondly, specific classroom buildings could be opened in the evening during finals.

Concerning the sixth level of the library, Mr. Montgomery, the head librarian, has stated his reasons for not extending the privilege to students during finals. First of all, he feels that from past experience many undisciplined students would abuse that privilege by their annoying actions. Since there are reference books available on this level, many inconsiderate students might take unfair advantage of these books, according to Mr. Montgomery. Then, too, this level would have to be supervised by the library staff. Yet, the budget does not provide money for trained librarians to work on "police duty." Mr. Montgomery further stated that Columbia University has resorted to a system of two uniformed policemen to keep order in the library. Thus, it appears that more space for studying cannot be made available in the library at the present time. The main reason for this decision, according to Mr. Montgomery, is the inconsiderate, unco-operative attitude of certain students.

Our second suggestion, which might facilitate study conditions on campus, is to provide classroom space in Machmer in the evenings. Dean Field has approved this suggestion. Thus, Machmer will be available to students during finals if the library is overcrowded. In conclusion, we have tried to suggest and provide a means in aiding the over-crowded study conditions on campus which hamper serious concentration for finals.

MASSACHUSETTS REVIEW

by M. PALTER

Those who have followed the progress of this quarterly should perhaps be the last to write a critical review, if only for the fact of taking its quality for granted. Thus, it would be unfair to assert that the Thoreau issue surpasses all expectations. Nevertheless, it does. In content, make-up, and editing, it is a triumph.

The principle difficulty in constructing an issue such as this lies, I think, in the tendency towards idolization. Yet, the Review has not fallen victim to this. Indeed, it is significant that the first essay, "Think of This, Yankees!" by Reginald L. Cook mentions Emerson's warning "about being warped clear out of our orbit by another man's thought." The Cook essay was well chosen as the initial statement for it focuses upon contemporary values:

> In this epoch of nuclear energy, missile propulsion, space-and-under-sea technology, electronics and automation, I see only a continuing relevance in Thoreau.

In total, it is a discussion of what Thoreau "should" mean to the twentieth century.

The following essay, "Thoreau and American Non-Violent Reistance," by William Stuart Nelson, stresses the connection between contemporary social movements, specifically the fight of the Negro in America, and Thoreau. Interestingly enough, Nelson, in the course of his statement, makes the same point as Cook, namely that Thoreau's sojourn to Walden did not reflect an escape from life but rather an attempt to come to grips with the living experience and ultimately, one might add, with himself.

A difficulty arises when one approaches Carl Bode's essay, "The Half-Hidden Thoreau." This is a discussion, in a Freudian context, of Thoreau's unconscious. For those who find Freudian-digestion trying, this is an extremely provocative article. (The Freudians, I assume, accept Bode's assertions as a matter of course!) The author asserts that Thoreau never outgrew the Oedipus complex, a hypothesis which is obviously necessary to subsequent conclusions. In the course of his essay, Bode discusses "reference, masculine and feminine, overt and covert, which have a Freudian significance. The towering pine, the shrub oak, the snake in the stream, the unclimbable mountain: these are among them. "In the course of the essay, Bode also mentions Thoreau's "incipient homosexuality." One will either accept or reject these speculations according to one's intellectual prejudices. I tend to adopt the latter view, no doubt due to a lack of adequate scholarly investigation. Nevertheless, it seems that when Bode asserts:

> For Thoreau it was only a step from resentment of the authority of the parent to resentment to the authority of the state.

—he is on dangerous ground, dangerous because at most this is but a partial truth, ignoring other important considerations.

"Civil Disobedience; Principle and Politics," by Leo Stoller is an extremely forceful and, to a degree, embarrassing essay which deals with the relationship between contemporary social movements and self-interest. He makes the point that "our campaign to prevent war . . . is still too thick with emotion and too bare of economics."

The next major essay is entitled "Corn Grows at Night," by Theodore Baird. At the onset, let me suggest that something is bothering the author. In effect, this essay is a reaction against the idolatry which some Thoreau admirers have manifested. Although provocative, the essay continually repulses because of its innuendo and negativism. One would perhaps sympathize with Baird if he had discussed Thoreau in a different manner.

"Conscience and Disobedience" by Dr. Willard Uphaus reflects the indomitable spirit of a man who has endured physical and mental oppression and has emerged triumphant from the moral and intellectual squalor of the mid-twentieth century witch hunt. Those who are not familiar with the case of Doctor Uphaus are especially advised to read this article.

Paul Lauter's outstanding essay, "Thoreau's Prophetic Testimony," discusses Thoreau and the Hebrew prophets Amos, Hosea, the two Isaiahs, and Jeremiah and examines the "stylistic devices to see how he wields them to achieve his prophetic goals."

In "Thoreau's Politics of the Upright Man," Richard Drinnon warns us that:

> Like all ideas, that of a higher law could become a weapon in the hands of groups and institutions.

Drinnon is of course asserting that in a situation wherein this ill-defined higher law is continually invoked, there is in fact no law. The author also touches upon the difference between Thoreau's conception of the neighbor and the subject. This is extremely crucial to any understanding of Thoreau for it explains the difference between complete disaffiliation with society and its limited counterpart, a problem which one sees today in the peace movement.

In another outstanding essay, "Five Ways of Looking at Walden," by Walter Harding, we investigate the appeal of the book on different levels. Harding discusses Walden "as a do-it-yourself guide to the simple life," as a "satirical criticism of modern life and living," as an artistic triumph, as a "guidebook to the higher life," and as a "nature book." This is one of the finest essays in the Review.

While the REVIEW contains articles and essays independent of the Thoreau section, this review, because of space limitations deals only with the section on Thoreau. —Ed.

UM Grad Richard Herman Founds International Camp

(Reprinted from the Boston Globe)

The daring young man without a trapeze sat in his parlor at 7 Highland St., strummed his guitar, sang a few of the 150 international folk songs in his repertoire.

Richard Herman, 24, is daring because he founded and directs a Summer camp at Hillsboro, Upper Village, N.H., where boys from throughout the world live together, develop good fellowship, learn to understand one another.

"These are future citizens of the world."

Interlocken International Camp for Boys opens July 1, extends six weeks. Last year, 13 nationalities were represented there. That's exclusive of counselors, some of whom come from foreign lands.

"Among the counselors, for example, are H. S. Dilgir from Punjab, India, and Tsom Tanaka from Japan, who taught judo."

"What most impresses the 8-to-14 group from other lands about America?"

"I should say that 1) they are amazed about the variety of food and extent of luxuries, and 2) the freedom of choice and decision given American children."

Richard also does folk singing in the off season for profit. His wife of three months, Susan, who's 20, also sings.

"The foreign children all seem to want to be Americans. They quickly pick up American slang."

His motivation to launch that lovely camp on isolated Boulder Lake perhaps stems from the fact he once was an Eagle Boy Scout, and always has been excited about educational and recreational work with lads.

He is a guidance counselor at Brown Junior High School, Malden.

A graduate of University of Massachusetts, Richard was awarded a year of study at Elsinore, Denmark, where he pursued international relations with students from throughout the world.

"All the foreign children love baseball."

Some of the boys who have enrolled are from United Nations families. Others are sons of foreign embassy personnel at Woshington.

Each camper learns to play a musical instrument, including the chalil, a Near-East fife-like thing.

One of the folk songs he sang for Globe men relates the story of international leaders sitting down and signing a paper declaring there'd be no more wars.

Factually, it is titled:

"Last night I Had the Strangest Dream."

Poet's Work To Be Read On WFCR

The voice of the late poet e. e. cummings will be heard reading his own works when WFCR presents "Massachusetts Review: A Tribute to e. e. cummings" Monday, January 14 at 7 p.m. (repeated Tuesday, January 15, 2 p.m.

Robert Tucker, Joseph Langland and G. Stanley Koehler all evaluate the works read by cummings. The strong sarcasm so prevalent in cummings' poetry is the reason for his lack of general acceptance, Langland declares, for "the American public is unsympathetic to sarcasm when it is officially printed."

But all agree cummings is a great lyric poet with a message, a poet who has helped to liberate not only form but thought by the unconventional use of language. And to offer proof, cummings himself reads the works that have brought him fame, illuminating the printed page with the rich sonority of speech.

This special program was produced for WGBH-FM and the Educational Radio Network by WFCR in Amherst, Massachusetts.

WFCR-FM (88.5) is a noncommercial educational radio station supported by Amherst College, Mount Holyoke College, Smith College and the University of Massachusetts.

Education Commissioner Proposes Grant Reform

Newly appointed Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel is expected to fan a smoldering controversy in an attempt to increase the power of that office. At stake is control of over a billion dollars a year which federal agencies grant to American colleges and universities.

His embittered predecessor, Sterling McMurrin, last month resigned the $20,000 a year post, stating that the Commissioner of Education has little to do with coordinating the government's educational program.

McMurrin said that he was unable to perform his job in the face of pressure on Congress and other branches of the government exerted by "bureaucracies of large and powerful educational organizations."

Outstanding Record

Sources in Washington have indicated that Keppel, former Dean of Harvard's College of Education, held out for the power to reform the Commissioner's job before he accepted the office. Officials are certain that there will be a shake-up among the 1,150 persons now working in the Commissioner's office.

Some officials predict Keppel will pioneer more effective distribution of federal funds to education. Presently, the office supervises the distribution of funds only under the National Defense Education Act, aid to federally impacted areas, and aid to land grant colleges programs.

However, recent studies have shown that there are serious imbalances in the government's program of research-grants, with the grants going only to a select group of schools for a select group of subjects. Education officials here indicate that Keppel will attempt to extend his control to funds granted by the National Science Foundation, the Defense Department, and other such governmental agencies.

In any event, official Washington has already taken notice of Keppel, assigning to him such labels as "another Harvard hotshot" . . . "A ball of fire" . . ."no union card" . . . etc.

These are just a few of the descriptions attached to 46 year old Francis Keppel:

—As a Harvard hotshot, he brought the College of Education from a Cambridge wasteland in 1947 to heights as the acknowledged leader in preparation of teachers, school administrators and researchers.

—As a ball of fire, he headed the National Education Association's International Relations Committee; was a member of the 20th International Conference on Public Education at Geneva; was part of the Education Commission for Nigeria; and did task force work for President Kennedy's Federal Aid to Education program.

—Without a "union card"—an earned doctorate degree—Keppel has gone far in academic circles. He was one of the bright young men former Harvard President James Conant selected for big education jobs with only a B.A.

Must Decide Who Runs Show

One of the first controversies Keppel must settle is: Who runs the educational end of the federal government—the Commissioner of Education, or the Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare?

Health Education and Welfare Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze said recently that the Education Commissioner bows to his department on the issue.

Celebrezze is definitely opposed to elevating the Commissioner's post out of his department and up to a cabinet-level.

No one really knows if Keppel's relationship with the White House Staff, including Arthur Schlesinger, will change this.

There's no doubt on Keppel's stand on federal aid to education—it's down-the-line new frontier. Keppel was a member of a committee recommending a $2.3 billion a year increase in federal funds to education.

Where McuMrrin felt bandied about by Washington teacher lobbies, Keppel was welcomed with open arms by the National Education Association.

When Keppel's selection was made, William G. Carr, Executive Secretary of the NEA, terms him "fully committed to a sound program of national school legislation." (The NEA, which represents elementary and secondary schools, has opposed increases in aid to higher education, sought by the American Council on Education.)

Phi Sigma Delta Winner Of Ford Contest Prize

Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity recently won a prize of $125 in "The Lively Ones Contest" sponsored by the Ford Motor Company.

"The Lively Ones Contest" was open to fraternities and other campus organizations in this area. To enter, organizations had to submit letters stating what type of parties they wanted and why. The organizations with the winning entries were each entitled to one party completely financed by the Ford Company.

Phi Sigma Delta wrote its letter on the Christmas Party the brotherhood holds each year for the orphans of the Brightside School in Springfield. The entry won on the basis of originality and public appeal. Ford Motor Company was pleased to see the extent to which community service could be accomplished by fraternal organizations.

The brotherhood decided to donate $50 of the prize money toward the purchase of Christmas presents for the Brightside orphans. The balance went toward the social program which featured "The Lively Ones Party" at the House on December 15. In conjunction with this party the Ford Motor Company sent literally hundreds of mugs, hats, and other party favors.

The winning entry for the House was written by Edward Lyons, a junior on the executive committee and House Rushing Chairman. Ed has a talent for winning contests, especially ones which require writing ability. So far he has also won a Hi-Fi Set and two portable radios.

The sisters at 389 North Pleasant were more than happy to welcome their president, Betsy Walker, and her diamond, back from Christmas vacation. Betsy is engaged to Bud Ferris '63, a brother of Kappa Phi fraternity at Clark University.

Our art major, Mary Agnes Pelton '64, has been selected as a member of the College Board of Mademoiselle on the merits of a folio of campus fashions that she designed. Mary Agnes is planning to enter the competition for Guest Editorships.

Lambda Phi was very pleased to be hostess to Louise Ash '65, of Rochester Institute of Technology on December 18th and 19th. Louise is a member of a local sorority on her New York campus and had included a visit to our Delta Chapter at BU on her trip to Massachusetts.

Kappa Sigma Holds Party

The Kappa Sigma Fraternity held its annual Christmas Party with its sister Sorority Chi Omega, Sunday, Dec. 16 for twenty under privileged children. The children were entertained and Santa arrived at 3 o'clock to give them presents. The affair was a huge success and our appreciation goes to the Chi O's for their wonderful participation and cooperation.

On Monday, Dec. 17 the Gamma Delta Chapter of Kappa Sigma was honored to have as its guest, the District Grand Master, Mr. MacConnell, who is the coach of the Ski Team at the University. Mr. MacConnell addressed the Brothers at supper and presented Brothers Walter Crotty and Robert Hutchinson with the District Scholarships of $100 and $50 respectively.

After the supper the District Grand Master held an executive meeting with the newly elected officers and they discussed the future of the Chapter and the physical appearance of the house.

During the Christmas vacation the third floor of the house was painted by a few of the brothers and their job must be commended.

Pan-Hel Council Presents Sorority Pledge Programs

The sororities at the University of Massachusetts have been added to by many new pledges. The various pledge programs are well underway to inform the new members of the goals, ideals, responsibilities, and direction of each particular women's fraternity on this campus.

It is the Panhellenic Council's desire that each pledge reap much benefit from this training so that she will realize her part in the total Greek system.

The programs of each sorority have been outlined and are presented to demonstrate the unique nature of each and the coordinated goal that they approach.

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

Since this is Iota Gamma Upsilon's first pledge class, we are still indecisive as to the minute details concerning the pledge period. However, as it stands now, our pledge period will be from eight to ten weeks long.

There will be certain pledges' projects and they will be working toward a fifty point goal for minor chores. The pledges will be required to familiarize themselves with Iota Gamma Upsilon's constitution, policies concerning membership, and obligations as pledges by taking the pledge creed as specified in the pledge manual. They will be expected to know the history and songs of Iota Gamma Upsilon.

Through pledge meetings, as well as sister-pledge meetings, the pledges will become acquainted with both sisters and pledges.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

We are very proud of our new pledges who are: Mary Bell, Margery Carlson, Mary Ann Carme, Claudia Doerr, Janet Ford, Judy Furnans, Michele Holovak, Carol Jarvela, Sharon Kalfon, Janice Kwapien, Lee-Ann Latham, Faith Leavitt, Elaine McLaughlin, Patty McShane, Sally Minich, Nancy Oikelmus, Nancy Oliver, Carol Ricci, Ann Schulte, Pat Seibert, Beth Vangelder, Sue West, Sue Hajar, and Barbara Hursh.

The pledges' activities began the night after pledging when they enthusiastically attended our exchange supper with Sig Ep. They enjoyed themselves tremendously as they did at the Christmas party with Theta Chi and they will continue to participate in all of our social activities.

Aside from social events, the pledges have also been studying at Kappa on week nights from which they took time to trim our Christmas tree.

At their first pledge meeting, they elected officers. They are: president, Margery Carlson; vice-president, Mary Bell; secretary, Carol Ricci; treasurer, Claudia Doerr; song chairman, Faith Leavitt; social chairman, Sue Hajar; Historian, Elaine McLaughlin; scholarship, Sue West.

In the future, we have planned a big and little sister skating party and have set aside a weekend for them to stay at Kappa together. Thru our pledge program, we hope to promote scholarship, friendship, and fun.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

The Lambda Delta Phi pledging period runs for a period of eight weeks and consists of weekly pledge meetings. Pledges are governed by the National Pledge Manual, the THRESHOLD, which is comprised of the history, National constitution, and general information pertaining to Lambda Phi. Chapter information, local autonomy, and local rules and customs of the sorority are presented by the Pledge Trainer at the pledge meetings. Pledges are quizzed on the information learned and are given a final examination prior to initiation which they must pass with an 80% or better.

Pledge class officers consist of (1) President, who leads the meetings, (2) Secretary, who records at all meetings and, (3) Social Chairman who is in charge of social events scheduled by or for the pledges. Pledge meetings are run by parliamentary procedure. Various officers of Lambda Phi attend these meetings and explain their respective offices.

Pledges are required to acquire twenty-five pledge points before initiation — ten for scholarship, ten for activities, and five for House Scholarship, which are awarded for A's and B's in hour examinations, for hours spent at the house studying, and for general academic improvement.

Activity points are awarded for participation in Campus Activities. House points are awarded for work done in the house. In addition, before initiation, pledges are required to pass in a pledge notebook, do a pledge project for the house, and perform a skit for the sisters. At initiation, the pledges present their big sisters with dolls which are made to resemble the big sister; the big sister, in turn, gives her little sister a pillow.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

Pledge education is a period of adjustment for the chapter as well as the pledges. It is a period to help the pledges become well-rounded sorority women who can accept responsibility and contribute to group life.

Tri Sigma's pledge period is divided into specific units according to the individual campus and chapter needs. The Colony will be mainly concerned with learning the basic functions of chapter organization as well as national history and traditions.

Each week a quiz is given over questions given out the previous week. Discussion is held at each meeting on different aspects of sorority life such as the social graces, parliamentary procedure, panhellenic, and the financial basis of a sorority. Usually the specific officers and chairman involved report on these.

Specific pledge projects and duties are planned for the period. Good study habits are encouraged and each pledge is guided toward these.

AIC Hands Redmen Pucksters Fourth Straight Setback

by AL RICE '66

American International College handed the UMass hockey team its fourth straight setback Wednesday afternoon at the Amherst College rink.

AIC rolled up a pair of goals in the first and second periods and added a trio in the third to take a 7-1 triumph over the Redmen who have been looking worse each game instead of better.

Joe McCusker, the oldest man on the AIC squad, scored a hat trick with three goals into the nets and picked up one more point on an assist to Driscoll's score in the opening period.

The game, starting at 1 o'clock instead of the scheduled seven due to an Amherst College frosh game at night, began in a hurry when McCusker scored his first after 2.26 had gone by. The Aces picked up three more before Gerry Wolfe scored with an unassisted shot at 1.45 of the final period, the only Mass tally of the contest and only their fifth in the last four games. Driscoll, McCusker, and Wallace did the the damage in the second period, and Trincieri, Lyons, and McCusker again accounted for third period goals.

The outlook for Mass in this afternoon's tilt with Colgate at Hamilton, New York, isn't too bright considering that defenseman Bob Chisholm is still out of action and John Clayton could not make the trip. Colgate is one of the powers in the East and should find no difficulty in scoring against the Redmen. Against AIC even goalie Skip Bowen who has been the shining light all season had a sub-par performance. The first line has been hurt by injury to Charlie Glew and the sophomore second line has not come through for Coach Steve Kosakowski in the way he expected it to.

After Colgate, the pucksters have a long rest until February 6, when the Redmen travel to West Point to face the Military Academy.

Gymnasts Trounced

The Redmen Gymnastics team suffered its second loss of the season against one win on Wednesday when they traveled to West Point and were overrun by a strong Cadet squad.

Despite a first place berth for Dave Yates in Floor Exercise and a second place position for Dave Williams on the Parallel Bars the Redmen came out on the short end of a 66.5-29.5 score. The Gymnasts next meet is at home on February 9, with the always powerful Temple squad.

Freshmen Split; Beat Rhody, 69-67; Edged By HC, 69-68

by NEIL BAKER '66

UMass freshman coach Jack Leaman's hair is turning gray and he's getting a bad case of laryngitis as a result of the last two games. His freshman team has beaten the Rhode Island frosh and came close to pulling a big upset against the Holy Cross freshmen last night.

The Little Redmen traveled to Kingston, Rhode Island, Tuesday night to play the high-flying Rams who sported a 7-1 record, their only loss being to the Brown frosh.

The frosh got off to a quick start, Edwards and Craig Farnsworth connecting on two-pointers. Dick Granat and Mike Fitzgerald led the Rams back to a 14-12 lead with 12:00 left. But Farnsworth and Ira Gamble, with a spectacular first half, hustled the Redmen to a 24-16 lead in only four minutes. Granat and Dave Forsythe led a steady comeback to a point where they were only a notch down, 29-28. The "Gam" connected on his eighth straight point to give the Redmen a three point bulge. But the Redmen managed only a 34-34 verdict at halftime.

The Redmen started out like a house afire, with six straight points to make it 40-34. The two teams kept trading leads, when with 2:45 left, the score was knotted 66-all.

The Rams played control ball, and with 1:35 left, Jack Forst fouled Fitzgerald. On a one-and-one, he missed the second after making the first. Ed Driscoll quickly gave the Redmen the lead with a short jumper for a 68-67 lead. The Redmen gained control of the ball with 0:46 left.

The frosh froze it. Driscoll was fouled again by Mike Arago and made it good. There were eight seconds left. With four seconds left, Jeff Boyle fouled Fitzgerald, giving the Rams a chance to tie it up. But he missed his shot, and Edwards grabbed the rebound, freezing the ball until the whistle, the score ending 69-67.

The Holy Cross game was just as exciting. The little Crusaders, probably the best freshman team in New England, is undefeated beating such teams as Yale, Harvard, UConn and Assumption. The HC frosh, though smaller than the Redmen, are deadly shooters; a typical Crusader team.

After Dick Murphy and Craig Farnsworth exchanged two pointers, the Cross opened up an eight point bulge, leading 12-4 at 14:00. The teams exchanged a few baskets, and the score stood 26-19 with 6:14 left in the half. The frosh then put on a spectacular surge. Driscoll popped in two from the charity line, and Timmy Edwards netted a single free throw. Edwards missed his next free shot, but Jeff Boyle tapped it in for a two pointer. Ed Driscoll drove downcourt and popped in a 20-footer to tie the score at 26-26. Edwards put one more in from the line, then cleared the boards down the HC end, drove in, passed to Boyle, who laid it in. Edwards got the ball down the HC end and gave Paul Gullicksen a long lead pass. Gully passed off to Dricoll who laid it up, giving the Redmen a 31-26 lead. The visiting frosh fought back, with a last second field goal by Tom Mounkhall giving them a halftime tie.

The Crusaders started off the second half as they drove to an early lead, the score 48-41 with 11:23 left in the game. Ed Driscoll converted a free throw, and swished a jumper from the corner to cut the HC lead to four. Edwards missed a free throw after being fouled by "Moose" Stronczek, but Gullicksen tapped it in for a couple. A four point surge by the Little Saints was countered with baskets by Driscoll and Boyle. The Crusaders bunched up five more to give them a 56-50 lead, but the UM's came back on a pair of 25-footers by Driscoll and again by Farnsworth. The Cross surged again to a 65-60 lead with only 1:40 left. Gullicksen laid one up and was fouled, but missed his shot.

The Crusaders froze the ball, but Edwards got possession of the ball and drove for his layup, cutting the lead to one. The HC frosh were forced to go to the foul line twice and calmly proceeded to go 2 for 2 each time, defying the Leamanites strategy. Edwards scored the last basket, but it was too little; too late, Final score: 69-68.

Crusaders Out-play, Out-rebound Redmen; Win 68-61

UMass Second Half Surge Threatens, But Falls Short

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Holy Cross College out-hustled, and for a team with no players really built for it, out-played the Redmen to score a 68-61 victory last night at the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Crusaders out-positioned the Redmen on key occasions for the easy underneath shots and the story telling rebounds. UMass, for a brief spell in the second half, shook their slow habits long enough to come back into a threatening position, but could not get the ball when really needed.

The Cross broke out in front 11-3 in the opening minutes of the game with high scorer Pat Gallagher making four straight from underneath to lead the surge. The Redmen tried to work their big men off the center post, but Twitchell's and O'Rourke's shots from there went in-and-out in early attempts.

Leading halfway through the first half 19-9, the Crusaders refused to cool off and poured in 11 straight points, with John Wendelken and Pete O'Connor leading the way. The Redmen were still having trouble working off the pivot. The big men had the shots, but the basket said no.

With the help of some long jump shots by Pete Bernard, UMass was able to clip the Purple lead down to 8, 32-24 with 17 seconds left in the half. But Pat O'Connor, busy as usual around the basket, caught the Redmen napping and popped in the close on to give his mates a 34-24 half-time lead.

At the start of the second half UMass could make no dent in the Purple lead which never became less than 9. Again, it was the work of Gallagher and some fine sub work by guard Tom Palace that protected the spread.

With 10:25 left in the game, UMass began a rally that the fans had been hoping for all night. Dan Laasko, in for Twitchell, made two in a row and Charlie O'Rourke laid one up to cut the Cross lead to six, 47-41. But, once again, Gallagher broke the Redmen hopes of catching up as two of his baskets put Holy Cross in front again by 10.

Clarence Hill, on some fine driving layups, managed to cut the lead down to seven again, but the Purple, getting those important rebounds and second shots refused to fold. Even though Hill cut the lead even further, 60-55, with 2:18 remaining, Holy Cross still kept a monopoly on the ball.

With 39 seconds left to play and Holy Cross out in front 65-59, UMass had to foul in an attempt to get the ball. Pat Gallagher stepped to the line on a one-and-one and made the first. Clarence Hill was fouled as he went up for the rebound on Gallagher's second shot. Hill sunk both free throws to make the score 65-61.

Holy Cross just held the ball with about 20 seconds to go and waited to be fouled. They were, and wrapped up the scoring with three free throws, ending up on top 68-61.

From the floor, both teams were pretty even, percentage-wise. Holy Cross made 39%, UM 38%. But, rebounding honors went decisively to Holy Cross who pulled down 52 to the Redmen's 44.

Game scoring honors went to Pat Gallagher. The 6'2 junior forward from Cleveland, Ohio netted 22. For the Redmen Clarence Hill was high with 18, the bulk coming in the late minutes of the second half. Rodger Twitchell had a disappointing night scoring only 9, well below his game average of almost 17.

Matt Zunic has yet to beat Holy Cross since coming to UMass as head coach. He is 0-4 against the Purple. In the overall series standings Holy Cross has won 14, while dropping two.

Tomorrow night the Redmen will be hosting Vermont in a home Yan-Con tilt. Vermont has yet to win a Conference game this year and are at the bottom of the pile with a 0-5 record. They are at UConn tonight. Rhode Island is at the top of the standing with a 5-0 record. UConn is also undefeated with a 2-0 record.

ALUMNI PROFILE

Curator Of Nieman Chair Since '46 Is UMass Graduate, Louis Lyons, '18

Louis Lyons is quite familiar with the avenues of Boston trod by the fictional feet of the late George Apley. In fact, Mr. Lyons is quite familiar with areas of Boston, the Commonwealth, and the world, and facets of life in those areas, that Mr. Apley would have refused to admit existed. There are reasons for such sharp contrast.

George Apley was a fictional character, John Marquand's symbol of a coherent class outlook, the epitome of Brahmin propriety. Louis Lyons is a real man, and may be the epitome of the complete newsman.

Once A Newsman—Always A Newsman

Louis Lyons '18, Curator of the Nieman Foundation at Harvard, has spent almost all of the 45 years since his graduation from UMass in the ranks of the fourth estate. His final smell of printers' ink came in 1919 with the Boston Globe, shortly after his discharge from the army with the rank of second lieutenant.

While in the army, Lyons wrote a letter to a friend, describing military life and his experiences during World War I. The letter was seen by a newspaperman friend of Lyons' friend. The newsman recognized talent when he saw it. As a result, Lyons began his four and one-half decade career as a newsman.

Lyons went back to school while working for the Globe in 1919, to Harvard, to brush up on his English. Later, he left the Globe, and spent a three year stint at the University, working for the extension service, and writing a column for the Christian Science Monitor. Lyons has written of this three year period as an informal post graduate course. While he wrote glowingly of his undergraduate days and courses with Sidney Haskell and Alexander Mackimmie, he has said:

I guess more of my education came in a sort of informal post graduate exposure when I worked in the extension service for three years after college and came to know Ray Torrey, John D. Willard, Dean Machmer, Ray Stannard Baker and a few more (Frank Rand and Prof. Patterson in English.)

Formal or informal, the post graduate course was not enough to stifle the smell of printers' ink. Lyons went back to the fourth estate, to Springfield, where he joined the staff of the nationally-known Springfield Republican.

A First Nieman Scholar

During the administration of Calvin Coolidge, Lyons returned to the land of the bean and the cod, and to the employ of the Boston Globe. As a special reporter for the Globe, and later sociological and political reporter, Lyons covered such stories as Lindbergh's return, the Hauptmann trial, and the inaugural of three presidents.

In 1937 a bequest by Agnes Wahl Nieman, in memory of her husband Lucius W. Nieman, publisher of the Milwaukee Journal, established the Nieman Foundation. The purpose of the foundation was to sent journalists back to school for a year, to better equip them for their profession. Three hundred and twelve newspapermen applied for the chance to be the first Nieman Fellows. Nine made it. Louis Lyons was one of the original nine.

Lyons went back to Harvard to study law, political science, and history. In 1939 he became assistant curator. In 1946 he took Archibald MacLeish's old job and became curator.

Louis Lyons is the newsman's newsman. Lyons' articles have appeared in such papers as the Globe, Republican, Christian Science Monitor, and Washington (D.C.) Sunday Star. He was a contributor to Time magazine, and frequently to the Alumnus. He wrote a chapter on Boston politics, which was included in Robert S. Allen's national symposium, entitled, wryly, "Our Fair City". Brooks Atkinson praised Lyons incisive essay.

Lyons' fame as a newsman spread rapidly in the area of printed news media, and rapidly in other media. Louis Lyons became even more widely known when the Peabody award winner began his famous news and analysis program on WGBH.

Louis Lyons is at Harvard now, as curator of the Nieman Foundation, just back from Africa. He is still, as the citation accompanying his L.H.D. read 13 years ago, conspicuous in his ". . . participation in the movement toward a free and responsible press."

The ribbons which have been displayed this week in the S.U. Bookstore window have been won by University pure-bred Morgans during the past three years. All show horses have been trained by Dick Nelson, an Amherst resident. The display was set up by Justine Kelley '64, corresponding secretary of the Equestrian Club on campus.

Band Battle Pits Electras Versus Lights

Both groups have added more musicians to their regular featured groups for the show. The Lights wil have a six man singing group plus organist, so they will have a group of 13 men in the Aurora uniform.

The Electras have added a prominent sax man, bringing their total entertainment group to 20.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY —According to John T. Bonner, Jr., Executive Dean of Student Relations, the university has a housing shortage which could become acute in the next four years. He added that the university is losing many prospective students because of the shortage.

To meet the crisis, the university is currently doubling every single room and tripling every double room in its dormitories.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA — Considering year-round operation, the Academic Senate of UCal will vote on various plans for a full-year calendar after hearing several committee reports on the subject. According to the budget committee, large expenditures will be necessary at first, but money will be saved in the long run.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY — Several incidents of theft caused Syracuse officials to hold a room-to-room search in one girls' dormitory from 1 to 5 a.m. one night. Only five women refused to sign permission slips consenting to the inspection.

Reaction was mixed: some women resented both the hours and methods of the search; others felt it was necessary because of the recent rash of theft. Officials were not satisfied, however, with the results of the search.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON— Local chpaters of Kappa Sigma fraternity and Delta Gamma sorority are under review as a result of recent discrimination incidents involving chapters of these houses on other campuses. UMass English Dept. Starts Ph.D. Program UMass will offer a Ph.D. program in English starting in the fall semester of 1963, it has been announced by Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the Graduate School.

The Department of English is the largest in the University in terms of the number of undergraduate students taught and in the size of staff. Some of its staff members have national and international reputations as scholars and poets.

According to Dean Moore, the shortage of English professors with a Ph.D. degree is critical and is certain to get worse with the rapid expansion of enrollment, since English is the one subject required of all college students.

Dr Howard O Brogan, Head of the Department of English at UMass says that the University's graduate staff in English "offers relatively complete coverage of

Yamasaki To Design New UMass Fine Arts Building

One of America's foremost architects, Minoru Yamasaki, will be the designer of the new Fine Arts Building at the University of Massachusetts, President John W. Lederle has announced.

Yamasaki, currently featured in a Time Magazine cover story, has designed many of the nation's most impressive structures and has won a world reputation in his field.

His planning of the new fine arts center at the University will reflect "a major advance for our students in a vital area of cultural and educational activity," President Lederle said in his announcement.

"Mr. Yamasaki was selected so that the students at our state university would have an opportunity to study the arts in a building which itself will be a major example of American art

Major Cultural Impact

"We believe that our growing student body eminently deserves an excellent facility of this kind. It should, in fact, be a fitting symbol of the total progress made on this campus in the hundred years of the institution's existence. We fully expect that the fine arts center and its program will have an important impact upon the cultural life of the Commonwealth," Lederle said.

Site At End of Pond

The new Fine Arts building to be built at the University, will be placed at the south end of the pond. "It will straddle the present Ellis drive," said Harry Hugill, construction and maintenance engineer. Ellis drive is slated to go.

Plans for the development of an arts center are being discussed, according to Mr. Hugill. A music building with a large auditorium is being considered for the future. The location isn't yet decided.

Building Costs About $3,000,000

The Fine Arts Building, to be constructed at a cost of about $3 million, will be located in the center of campus where it will be a focal point in University life and a major attraction for visitors.

The new building will have specialized facilities for work in painting, sculpture and design and for teaching and production in dramatic art. The structure will also have art galleries, a library and other resources.

Yamasaki is expected here within a month to look at the terrain.

Outstanding Designer

Architect Yamasaki, a native American of Japanese descent, has produced outstanding designs for such projected structures as the Behavioral Sciences Building at Harvard University and the School of International Affairs at Princeton University.

Collects Many Honors

Planner of the Conservatory of Music at Oberlin College, he received the American Institute of Architects' First Honor Award for his work on the McGregor Memorial Community Center at Wayne University in Detroit. He also took the A.I.A.'s top honor for his planning of the St. Louis Municipal Air Terminal in St. Louis, Mo.

Yamasaki is probably best known for his design of the U.S. Science Pavilion at the Seattle World's Fair. The soaring arches of the Pavilion became a familiar feature to millions of people through pictures published throughout the world.

Strong, Inexpensive Materials

Known for his success in keeping costs of construction down, the Detroit architect has a reputation as an innovator in the use of materials that provide great strength at relatively low cost.

Quoted in the N.Y. Sunday Times, Yamasaki has stated that his philosophy of design comes from a conviction that "The development of all the important aspects of man has been based on history. In architecture, too, we should have no reluctance to interpret the richness of the past through logical modern means. Only by building upon our heritage with new ideas will we have the basis for progress in human environment."

Snow Sculpture To Highlight 1963 UMass Winter Carnival

With fingers crossed and eyes searching the skies for signs of more snow, UMass students are making final plans for one of the most exciting Winter Carnival weekends in the University's 100-year history.

Sponsored by the junior class, the Centennial Winter Carnival, "These Wonderful Years," will run from Feb. 8-10, three days packed with outdoor fun and social events.

Main spectator attraction will be the traditional 50 snow sculptures, this year depicting scenes from the University's past 100 years.

On Saturday, most of the Winter Carnival action will be outdoors. Judges will pick the winning entries and award trophies to the toprated snow sculptures on Saturday morning.

Starting at 10 a.m., fraternities will compete with one another in toboggan races in the area around College Pond.

Horse-drawn sleighs will give free rides around the pond beginning at 1 p.m.

A fashion show, "Through the Years," will be staged in Bowker Auditorium from 1-3 p.m. The Winter Carnival Queen and her court plus 20 other UMass students will model the favorite styles of past and present.

At 1:30 p.m., men from dormitories and fraternities will compete in a log-sawing event by the College Pond.

The topnotch skaters of the Boston Skating Club will give an exhibition of their talents at 3 p.m., again on College Pond.

A music festival, featuring the Musigals, the Statesmen and the Amherst College Zumbyes, is scheduled at 4 p.m. on the patio of the S.U. building.

Saturday evening will see the fraternities doing a land-office business in parties.

The weekend of events will open Friday at 3 p.m. with an intramural ski contest behind Lewis and Thatcher dormitories.

Following a fireworks display over the College Pond on Friday evening, the semi-formal Winter Carnival Ball will be held in the Student Union. Buddy Morrow and his orchestra will be on hand to supply the music. The Winter Carnival Queen will be crowned during intermission.

Savareid To Lecture Here Feb. 12

The Distinguished Visitors Program has announced that Eric Sevareid, distinguished C.B.S. news correspondent and author will lecture here on Tuesday, February 12, in the Student Union Ball Room. His topic will be "The Shape of Things to Come."

For many years C.B.S. News chief Washington correspondent and C.B.S. London Correspondent for the past two years, Sevareid is currently serving as narrator on the C.B.S. Reports program.

During World War II Sevareid covered several battle fronts for C.B.S. News. He landed with the first wave of American troops in Southern France, and reported the course of the war through France and Germany. At the end of the war he returned to this country to cover the founding of the United Nations and the San Francisco Conference.

IN MEMORIAM

NOTHING GOLD CAN STAY

Nature's first green is gold,
Her hardest hue to hold.
Her early leaf's a flower;
But only so an hour.
Then leaf subsides to leaf.
So Eden sank to grief,
So dawn goes down to day.
Nothing gold can stay.

AT LEAST IN NAME

James Merideth, the first negro student ever enrolled at the University of Mississippi, announced (in a self-called press conference) that he would enroll for the second semester. His somewhat vague statement seemed to mean that it was insane for anyone to subject himself to what he had gone through, but that he was going to enroll anyways.

Statements from the government announced that it had cost over four million dollars to enroll and protect Mr. Merideth at that southern university.

When negro Harvy Gant announced that he was going to enroll in South Carolina's Clemson College many feared that Clemson would turn into another Oxford. To almost everyone's relief Mr. Gant's enrollment was unhindered in any way. Clemson's campus was swelled by more photographers and newsmen than by peace officers.

Clemson officials asked students to cooperate and not to display any violence, and the student body complied. The legal battle against negro admission would be continued, officials stated, but until legal changes could be made, Clemson would become desegregated. Thus South Carolina became the final state to desegregate its universities.

Why did Clemson enroll Mr. Gant peacefully, while the University of Mississippi had to enroll Mr. Merideth at severe costs of life, property and money? It is rather obvious that the violence at Oxford was not wanted at Clemson by administration or by students.

Those who point to Clemson and state that the Clemsonites were more "civilized" must ask themselves the question what would have happened if Mr. Gant had enrolled at Clemson before Mr. Merideth enrolled at old Miss.

It is ironic that good should come from the violence at Oxford, but there is little doubt that without the object lesson of Mr. Merideth's trials there would have been far more difficulty at Clemson when Mr. Gant enrolled.

Every State has now desegregated its universities, at least in name. The most powerful weapon that can now be levied for the forces for desegregation is time. Given time the exceptions will become the rule.

Fewer Busy Signals

The new inter-dorm phones have certainly been well received. They are in constant use during the prescribed hours and they are very helpful in relieving the congestion at the regular pay phones. Busy signals are far less frequent now than they were just two months ago.

YA-HOO REVIEW

WATER CLOSET JOKES

by PAUL HARRIS

Ya-Hoo has by this time been completely digested by those students who are interested in its contents. It seems that its message closely parallels that of Petronicus in his Satyricon, sex for the sake of indulgence and enjoyment. There are some readers, no doubt, who derived laugh after laugh from the abundance of water closet jokes, and others who found them repugnant.

Supposedly a student supported publication represents those who support it. This being the case, it is regretful that anyone reading the Ya-Hoo who is not a direct part of the University should draw the logical conclusion as to our morality and intellectual level from this particular issue. At this period in the development of our university, any student voice must take into consideration its obligation to further the school in the eyes of those who attend it, and those who support it. Constructive humor in good taste would be more to the credit of the Ya-Hoo staff, and to the University. Those who prefer humor which is off-color will be doing a service if they insist upon its appearance in the proper media.

Through the publication of its Centennial Collagian, Ya-Hoo tried to reach a common denominator for spoof that the whole University community would appreciate and understand. This attempt is commendable; however several puerile remarks did smother its effectiveness. As a whole, the Ya-Hoo does show improvement, and if the incidence of physical reference could be deleted it is worth waiting for another issue.

LOOKING INTO YOUR LAUGHING PLACE

by DAVE AXELROD

The second issue of Yahoo having just been published (see above) the Collegian feels it appropriate to present a series of editorials on humor written by an editor of Yahoo.

Humor is a funny thing. What appeals to one person can be repulsive to the next. Most every humorous situation, however, has a common basis—the unexpected reply. Be they words "from the mouths of babes" or detailed stories leading to a single weak pun, the only thing humorous about them springs from the element of surprise. A few examples can easily strengthen this point.

The riddle has been puzzling man at least since the sphinx. What has given this simple medium such prolonged success? The entire structure is based on setting the straight-man for an answer he would never have guessed. Of course the straight-man expects a clever reply, but he will only laugh if the answer is totally unanticipated. In our sophisticated society the riddle has deteriorated to the child's level: while the child still finds it new, the average adult knows he can't guess the "ridiculous" answer, gives up guessing, and expects to laugh. This loss of the element of surprise laughter is only overcome when the person presenting the riddle can fit it into a situation where it will be taken seriously. Then, his cleverness shines and his audience laughs as he casually gives the answer.

LETTERS TO

POST REGISTRATION

To the Editor:

As one harried member of the university community among many following registration day, I wish to express my strong dissatisfaction with the way in which the administration of this institution has decided to register students for a semester's study. Rather than dwell on its inanities, however, which I believe are obvious to all, I will express my disapproval by suggesting a few remedies to the situation as it now exists.

1. Pre-registration and registration days should be done away with entirely. They are complete waste of the student's valuable time and an unnecessary encroachment on the faculty's time.

2. Course registration should be accomplished by mail. The student would be required to procure his schedule card in advance of the next semester, write in the courses he wishes to take, and return it by mail to the registrar's office.

3. The secretarial staff, in conjunction with various computers, would arrange the students' schedules, including lecture hours, section and lab hours, etc.

4. The completed schedule would then be returned to the student, together with a bill for his fees. The student could pay his fees by mail or in person at the treasurer's office.

5. The advisory system, of course, should be continued; it is a valuable asset to the American university system. The student would plan his program in consultation with his adviser and in light of a clearly and carefully planned University catalog which would set forth the various courses of study.

It is a known fact that registration at a large university can never proceed as simply as these five steps indicate; there will always be such things as course deletions and additions, etc., once registration is completed. Under the proposed system, however, such clerical problems may be handled easily by machines, clerks and administrators. If a student wishes to drop or add a course to his schedule he simply goes to the registrar's office and drops it or adds it.

There is, however, one other major problem. The present system of registration is premised on the student's inability to accept responsibility. The present proposal, on the other hand, assumes that when a course of study has been decided upon (a function of student and faculty adviser together) the student has sense enough to carry it through. And I have not once encountered an undergraduate who in my opinion was incapable of accepting responsibility of this kind as well as other kinds, if afforded the opportunity.

INFERIORITY CAN BE FUN

The second gravest problem confronting college students today is inferiority feelings. (The first gravest problem is of course, the recent outbreak of moult among sorority house canaries.) Let us today look into the causes of inferiority feelings and their possible cures.

Psychologists divide inferiority feelings into three principal categories:

1. Physical inferiority.
2. Mental inferiority.
3. Financial inferiority.

(A few say there is also a fourth category: ichthyological inferiority—a feeling that other people have prettier fish—but I believe this is common only along the coasts and in the Great Lakes area.)

Let us start with the feeling of physical inferiority, perhaps the easiest to understand. Naturally we are inclined to feel inferior to the brawny football captain or the beautiful homecoming queen. But we should not. Look at all the people, neither brawny nor beautiful, who have made their marks in the world. Look at Napoleon. Look at Socrates. Look at Caesar. Look at Lassie.

We are inclined to feel inferior

What I mean is that you can't always tell what's inside a package by looking at the outside. (Sometimes, of course, you can. Take Marlboro Cigarettes, for example. Just one glance at that jolly red-and-white package—so bright and pert—so neat but not gaudy—so perfectly in place whether you are at a formal dinner or a beach picnic—so invariably correct for any time, clime, or condition—one look, I say, at this paragon of packs and you know it has to contain cigarettes of absolute perfection. And you are right! That pure white Marlboro filter, that fine, flavorful blend of Marlboro tobaccos, will give you a smoke to make the welkin ring, whatever that is. So those of you who have just been sitting and admiring your Marlboro packs since the beginning of the semester, why don't you open a pack and light one? Light a cigarette, I mean—not the package. Then you can settle back and smoke your Marlboro and, at the same time, continue to gaze rapturously at the pack. Thus you will be twice as happy as you are if that is possible.)

But I digress. Let us turn now to the second category—mental inferiority. A lot of people think they are dumber than other people. This is not so. It must be remembered that there are different kinds of intelligence. Take, for instance, the classic case of the Sigafoos brothers, Claude and Sturbridge, students at Wake Forest. It was always assumed that Claude was the more intelligent just because he knew more than Sturbridge about the arts, the sciences, the social sciences, the humanities, and like that. Sturbridge, on the other hand, was ten times smarter than Claude when it came to tying granny knots. But no matter; everybody looked down on "Stupid Sturbridge," as they called him and looked up at "Clever Claude," as they called him. But who do you think turned out to be the smart one when their granny almost got loose and ran away? You guessed it—good old Stupid Sturbridge.

We arrive now at the final category, financial inferiority. One way to deal with this condition is to increase your income. You can, for example, become a fence. Or you can pose for a life class, if your college is well heated.

But a better way to handle financial inferiority is to accept it philosophically. Look on the bright side of poverty. True, others may have more money than you have, but look at all the things you have that they don't—debts, for instance, and hunger cramps.

And what about friendship? You don't need money to have friends, and let me tell you something, good people: the older you get the more you will realize that nothing is so precious as friendship, and the richest man in the world is the one with the most money.

A FLASHBACK—SENATE 1962

To the Editor:

Several criticisms have been levied on our Student Government in the past. I feel that an analysis of this year's Senate brings to light the efficiency and quality that is present in your current Student Senate.

The leadership of such a body may be important, but it is the body itself that either "makes" or "breaks" an organization. In this case, I wish to praise the work that has been accomplished by the present senators. It is fantastic to witness how a body composed of over eighty per cent new senators has transformed itself into veterans overnight. These senators differ acutely from some of the past in that they are truly serious about their responsibilities to their constituents. During a period of less than four months and eleven meetings, this body has been extremely faithful in its attendance at meetings. Statistically, they have an average of ninety-nine per cent attendance per meeing, which is commendable in itself.

The quantity of work accomplished by this body should also be noted because in comparison to last year's Senate, it has acted on six times as many motions up to date. Of greater importance, is the quality of action undertaken. Among them have been numerous motions dealing with financial allotments and budgets, R.S.O. Constitutions, matters of elections, laws of procedure, and matters of student-faculty-administration relations. Several ad hoc committees have also been established such as the Campus Coordinating Committee for the Abbey Fund and the committee on absentee voting. Several delegations have also been sent, such as our representation to the Springfield Collegiate rally sponsored by the National Student Association and our delegation to the United Nation Model Assembly in Washington, D.C.

I can certainly say that each and every senator has a right to the pride of his position but that the student body should also have pride in having elected such fine representatives to serve them in the Senate.

A look to the future appears even brighter. In the past, large turnovers have been recorded after every election because many of the senators were graduating and many others lacked the interest to run for re-election. This year, the body is composed of a small number of seniors; therefore, many veteran senators will be available for another term. In relation to interest, a strong feeling of unity and concern appears to prevail, unwitnessed for some duration of time. Very few senators seem to lack the initiative and interest that has troubled Senates of the past.

All in all, a look to the past, the present, and the proximate future brings optimism to the mind.

Yankee Spirit

To the Editor:

The long battle is almost over; compulsory ROTC seems doomed, and now since I can speak for this year's anti-compulsory group and since I will take it upon myself to speak for groups of years past, I should like to thank the student body of the University of Massachusetts for their lack of support, without which ROTC would have been made voluntary long ago. Being from New York myself, I should like to compliment all you native sons of the old Bay State for that famous quality of New Englanders known as Yankee Spirit. To be sure, New York is not so far from Massachusetts that I never heard of Yankee Spirit, but I had no idea it entailed such noble ideas as giving up before the fight done, believing in one's principles enough not to fight for them, and apathy is the best policy. Perhaps I too will learn to take comfort in cynicism after I'm here a while. Also, heartfelt thanks go to those people who used the weapon of labels so valiantly in the name of Freedom.

Perhaps in the midst of all this thanks giving, I might find time to thank those who had true courage, the heroes of the Mili-Ball picket, the heroes of those laughed-at letters, the heroes of Baker and Plymouth Dorms, and the heroes of the Student and Faculty Senate Battle. Today Compulsory ROTC seems doomed, but more than one lesson can be learned from the battle against it.

MR's Thoreau Centenary Issue Features Buber, Nehru Essays

The impact of Henry David Thoreau's ideas on developments in the modern world is one of the main themes in a new and rich appraisal of the great American writer in a hard-hitting issue of "The Massachusetts Review," literary journal published at UMass.

The collection of 17 essays and commentaries includes one written by the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., who prepared the statement while being held in a southern jail. Entitled "Thoreau's Legacy of Creative Protest," the article is one of a number of essays commenting on Thoreau's famous statement "On Civil Disobedience."

Material Special For Review

The special feature, called "A Centenary Gathering for Henry David Thoreau," presents a cross-section of opinion from writers in many parts of the world. The entire collection comprises original material prepared expressly for the "Review."

Philosopher Martin Buber, writing in the section on Thoreau's international significance, has an essay entitled "Thoreau and Man's Duty as Man." The Rev. Trevor N.W. Bush of Capetown, South Africa, discusses the American writer's influence in the crises in South Africa. Richard Drinnon of the University of Leeds, England, has contributed an essay on "Thoreau's Politics of the Upright Man." There is also a brief letter from Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister of India, on Thoreau's relation to the movement led by Mohandas Ghandi.

The section on Thoreau's influence in America includes the following articles: "Thoreau and American Non-violent Resistance" by Prof. William Stuart Nelson of Howard University; "Civil Disobedience: Principle and Politics" by Prof. Leo Stoller, eminent Thoreau authority; "Conscience and Disobedience" by the Rev. Willard Uphaus, Director of World Fellowship at Conway, N.H.

Other essays consider biographical matters, Thoreau's competence as a woodsman, interpretations of individual writings by Thoreau, and an account of Thoreau scholarship and criticism since 1914. The eminent critic Stanley Edgar Hyman, author of "The Armed Vision" and other books, is contributor of the latter article. There is also a provocative essay by Prof. Theodore Baird of Amherst College.

Additional Review Features

The issue also includes commemorative poems by Gray Burr, Joseph Langland, and Thomas P. McDonnell. The art section has reproductions of works by sculptors Jo Davidson and Malvina Hoffman; a woodcut of Thoreau by Leonard Baskin; and photographs of Thoreau and his family.

The centenary tribute is particularly appropriate in that the collection in the "Review" is a contribution honoring the 100th anniversary of the founding of UMass, on whose campus the magazine was started. Support for the journal also comes from nearby Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges.

In addition to the Thoreau feature, the "Review" has short stories and poems, literary criticism and book reviews. A major essay-review is William G. O'Donnell's article on "Robert Frost at Eighty-Eight." Prof. O'Donnell, a member of the English department at the University, writes on Robert Frost's latest book "In the Clearing." The review is an appraisal of the American poet's contribution in the light of his previous work.

Copies of the current issue of the "Review," or yearly subscriptions, can be obtained by writing "The Massachusetts Review," Memorial Hall, UMass, Amherst, Mass.

$23,000 NSF Grant Given For Engineering Studies

The National Science Foundation has granted UMass $22,300 for research to be conducted by the department of chemical engineering.

Dr. E. E. Lindsey, associate dean of the School of Engineering, will direct the project entitled, "Light Scattering by Liquid-Liquid Dispersions."

Dean Lindsey will study the sizes of minute droplots in emulsion—approximately one twenty-five-thousandth of an inch in diameter — produced by agitation, and the engineering factors affecting them. Size of the droplets will be computed by measuring amounts of light scattered at varying angles by the droplets. This method was suggested by investigators at the University's Polymer Research Institute.

The research is expected to lead to advances in the manufacture of latex emulsion paints and in emulsion polymerization, where controlling particle size is of major practical importance.

An early problem to be tackled is the design and construction of a special optical apparatus, similar to a periscope, to measure light scattering directly in a tank.

Dr. Lindsey, associate dean of the School of Engineering since 1961, received the B.S. degree from the Georgia Institute of Technology and his Doctorate of Engineering from Yale University.

A member of Tau Beta Pi and Sigma Xi, he taught at Yale and the University of Tennessee before joining the UMass faculty in 1949. During World War II, he served as an electronics officer on destroyer-escort duty in the U.S. Navy.

Since 1954, Dr. Lindsey has been a member of the Equipment Testing Procedures Committee, a national body which determines standard tests for chemical equipment. He is chairman of the space research committee for the University.

Honors UMass Centennial

Cary's History Of UMass Chronicles UM's Growth

The growth of UMass as a major force in education, research and public service is chronicled in a new history issued recently in honor of the University's centennial celebration.

Written by Harold Whiting Cary, UM professor of history, the 247-page illustrated volume has been published under the title The University of Massachusetts: A History of One Hundred Years.

The history begins with the 56 students admitted to the first class and ends with the 7,600 undergraduate and graduate students currently enrolled. The book traces the development of the University's academic programs from the small number of offerings in its earliest days to the major courses now available in arts, sciences, agriculture, engineering, education, nursing, business administration, home economics, public health, and physical education.

Three main periods of the University's development are covered—1863 to 1931 when the institution was known as Massachusetts Agricultural College; 1931 to 1947 when it was Massachusetts Sate College; and 1947 to the present, as the University.

In announcing publication of the history, President John W. Lederle said the volume is offered as a "significant contribution to the annals of education in Massachusetts and in the country at large."

President Lederle noted that "the University has rendered and is rendering important services to increasing thousands of Massachusetts students. Professor Cary's book gives an objective account of the development of these services and of the overall contribution of the University to the culture and economy of the Commonwealth."

The author of the history has been a member of the University of Massachusetts faculty since 1933. A native of Colrain, Mass., he received his B.A. degree from Williams College, the M.A. from Harvard, and his Ph.D. from Yale.

Names of all members of the Centennial Class are listed in the book. All class members who pledged to purchase the book have been urged to pick up their copies this week. Class members should redeem the pledges by cash or check since the item was not included on second-semester bills.

Langland - Junkins Read Tomorrow At Jones Libe

Joseph Langland of the UMass English Department and Donald Junkins of Emerson College will read their poems at Jones Library in Amherst at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow evening. This will be the fifth poetry program at the Amherst Art Center this season.

Professor Junkins of Emerson and the Cambridge Adult Education Center is a UMass alumnus. He holds four academic degrees and will receive his Ph.D. in American Studies from Boston University this June.

He has studied poetry with Robert Lowell and has translated Tagore with the Bengali poet Amiya Chakravarty.

He has published in many magazines including The New Yorker, Sewanee Review, The Beloit Poetry Journal, and new work will soon appear in Poetry and The Massachusetts Review.

Professor Langland is co-editor of poetry for The Massachusetts Review. He has read his poetry on radio, at art festivals, at many colleges in the U.S.A. and Canada, and at both the New York and San Francisco Poetry Centers.

He was recently featured on ABC's "Meet The Professor" television series with several students from the University.

His work has appeared in various major anthologies and magazines and in book form. The Green Town appeared in 1956, and Dial Press, which recently published Professor Langland's Poet's Choice (with Paul Engle), will soon publish his The Wheel of Summer.

The reading is open to the public and all are invited.

Dr. Ricci To Study In Milan

A UMass professor will leave this month for the University of Milan in Italy to do research in the general field of respiratory physiology.

Dr. Benjamin Ricci, Jr., associate professor of Physical Education at UM, has been invited to the Institute of Physiology at the Italian university for the spring semester. He will be on leave of absence from his duties at UMass.

A major in the Air Force Reserve, Dr. Ricci has been on the University faculty since 1950. He holds bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees from Springfield College, and is president of that institution's alumni council.

Ricci is a member of the University's faculty senate, research council and graduate faculty. He teaches courses in human anatomy and the physiology of exercise.

Since coming to the University, Dr. Ricci has done considerable research on physical fitness and fatigue, working much of the time with Dr. Peter V. Karpovich of Springfield College.

A member of Sigma Xi, the American College of Sports Medicine, the American Association for Health, Physical Education Recreation, Dr. Ricci's articles have appeared in many of the technical journals and magazines in his field.

Dr. Ricci is a native of Cranston, R.I.

Poetry, Music Combined In N.Y. Showing

The works of two UMass faculty members, a poet and a musician, were presented in a performance at the McMillan Theatre in New York City on Saturday, Jan. 26.

"Haruspicating on Valley View Farm," a group of poems by English Professor Joseph Langland, has been set to music by Elliott Schwartz of the University's music department.

On Sunday, Jan. 27, Mr. Schwartz's "Romance," a composition for bassoon and piano, was performed by concert bassoonist Maurice Pachman at the Gardner Museum in Boston.

Mr. Schwartz, a composer and musician, has had his works performed recently at Austin, Texas; New York City, at the University of Kansas and at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Prof. Langland has written and edited text books, collections of his own poems, and anthologies.

UM Offers French Bloc This Summer

UMass will sponsor a six-week institute for secondary school teachers of French this summer under auspices of the National Defense Education Act and the U.S. Office of Education.

Open to 45 qualified teachers of French in both public and private secondary schools, the institute will open on June 30 and continue through Aug. 11.

The UMass language institute is the only one offered in the state this summer. It will present an intensive, coordinated program of courses and activities.

Formal classes scheduled for the summer institute include French courses in applied linguistics, teaching methods, conversation, phonetics, laboratory techniques, cultural contrasts, reading and writing. In addition, a varied program of social and cultural activities will be offered.

Students will receive a certificate of participation and a block of eight academic credits. Granting of graduate credit towards an advanced degree is contingent upon admission to the UMass graduate school.

The institute will be under the direction of Prof. Stowell C. Goding, Head of the Department of Romance languages at UMass. Three other University professors, Henry Z. Niedzielski, Harold L. Smith, Jr., and Madame Claudine Hersch will be on the teaching staff of the institute.

O'Brien, Ward Lead Redmen To Good Showing In BAA's

by GENE COLBURN '64

The University of Massachusetts' Indoor Track team was paced to a creditable showing in the recent B.A.A. games in Boston on January 26, by co-captains Ken O'Brien and Dick Ward.

"O'Bie" became the first runner in UMass history to win an event in the B.A.A. meet when he won the Bingham 880, a special half mile for New England Collegians.

O'Brien's time of 1:56:1 easily outdistanced the next two finishers. Jerry Nipp of B.U. was second with a time of 1:58:3, while the defending champion, Ian Cohen of Tufts, was third with a time of 1:59:1.

Dick Ward took fifth place in the 35 lb. hammer throw. His distance of 161' 35" had double significance. It not only established a new school record, but it also was the best throw so far this year in the nation for a collegian. This marks Dick a definite threat in the I.C.4A.'s, which is what he is aiming for. The record there is only 163' 3".

REDMEN CO-CAPTAIN KEN O'BRIEN

The UMass mile relay team, composed of Jim Wrynn, Bruce Thompson, Dave Balch and Bob Pendleton lost to Tufts, which turned in a time of 3:29:6.

Redmen Win Third Straight; Trim Leicester J.C., 79-75

by NEIL BAKER '66

The freshman basketball team ran their record to 9-4 with victories over Westover Air Force base and Chamberlayne and Leicester Junior Colleges.

The Cage scene against Leicester looked more like a five-man tag team match. At times there were more players parallel to the ceiling than were standing up. There was a record 62 fouls called against the two squads, forty-six of 'em against Leicester.

The barrage of flying elbows, feet, and other parts of the anatomy did not start until the second half with the scored tied at 37-37. The Redmen's Gullicksen more or less ignited the fuse at 18:21 when he viciously plowed into Leicester's Jimmy Burns, but he missed both shots. Timmy Edwards was called on an offensive foul ten seconds later, and the score was still tied. After only another 25 seconds, Leicester committed the first of their 23 fouls that quarter, an average of one every forty-five seconds. For the next ten minutes, most of the scoring was done from the foul line, as less than a dozen shots were put in from the floor.

The Redmen slowly built up a ten point led with less than four minutes left and coasted till the final buzzer.

Odds and ends: Tim Edwards was high scorer with 24 points, followed by Jeff Boyle with 19 and Craig Farnsworth with 17 . . . The Redmen had only nine players available for action last night. Four players were lost to the squad, including Ira Gamble. Gamble was second highest scorer on the squad before he had to leave school for academic reasons . . . The squad scored sweet revenge against Westover, 72-48, avenging a previous 82-79 loss earlier in the season . . . Next home game is against Rhode Island Saturday night.

Esquire's CLUB & CAMPUS FASHIONS

BY O. E. SCHOEFFLER, ESQUIRE's Fashion Director

Winter isn't really going to go on forever . . . it just seems that way. And by now, you've probably noticed some gaps in your cold-weather wardrobe. So, what better time to fill in those gaps . . . and to help you here is a review of this Winter's newest fashion ideas. What's new? Quite a bit.

SUITS ON THE SCENE . . . this Winter offer enough variety to suit any discerning young man with ideas about fashion. Dark blue unfinished worsted is your best bet for the basic, go-anywhere suit. It's equal to all but the most formal after-dark occasions, as is dark gray sharkskin bird's-eye worsted. (Bird's-eye is a tiny geometric pattern of small diamond shapes with dark center dots.) Pin stripes, especially in dark blues and browns, are playing a successful revival this year, and are due for a long run. The much more casual, soft muted glen plaids are most often seen on the fashion scene in light and dark tones of gray.

WINTER WEIGHTS — All wool materials, or blends of wool and polyester fibers make for lightweight warmth in today's suits. No matter what your great-aunt says, horse-blanket Winter weights just aren't necessary anymore, even for horse-blankets. The silhouette of your new lightweight Winter suit is natural shoulder, with straight-hanging, center-vented jackets remaining the rule. 3-button models are most popular with men on campus, and trim, tapered trousers, either belted or in the newer, self-belt variety, are all pleatless for a slimmer look.

SHORT SNAP STYLING — Short snap-tab collars on dress shirts are the front-runners in fashion today, followed closely by button-downs, both featuring barrel cuffs and button-back neckbands. While checking that wardrobe of yours, check out your shirts: make sure there are enough for a change every day—particularly in white broadcloths, the staple of your shirt supply. A few discreetly striped oxfords will lend fashionable and sophisticated variety to your stock. And both provide the right background for foulard and wool challis ties printed in soft, muted patterns.

New Policy Announced For Four College Buses

Assistant to the Provost William C. Venman has announced a new policy on the Four-College buses.

All faculty and students are now eligible to use the Four-College buses on the regular schedule of operation. Students enrolled in classes at other colleges have priority as riders. The empty seats are available on a first-come-first-served basis. Riders having no priority cards should be prepared to relinquish their seats, if necessary.

This service, he said, is being offered as a convenience to the Four-College faculties and students who have legitimate business at the other colleges.

He said he expected that there will be ample space on the buses, if the riding privilege is not abused.

UMass Gets More NDEA Fellowships

Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the Graduate School at UMass, announced today that the University has been awarded ten additional National Defense Educational Act graduate fellowships for the 1963-64 academic year.

There are currently 19 NDEA graduate fellows in residence at the University. Designed to increase the number of well-trained university teachers, the fellowships are awarded to able students who are working toward their doctorates.

Four of the fellowships are in the Ph.D. program in German and two in the French program. Two fellowships have been awarded to the department of food science and technology, and two additional fellowships have been given to the University's department of psychology.

Redmen Gunners Sink Coast Guard Academy 77-64

Charlie Kingston's 2 Straight Give UMass Second 8 Points

by STEVE HEWEY '63

If you think the little man has no place in basketball today, just ask the Coast Guard Academy; they'll tell you a different story. For it was 5'11" Redman guard, Charlie Kingston, who torpedoed the visitors Saturday night with a 28 point barrage, pacing UMass to a 77 to 64 win at Curry Hicks Cage.

Kingston, a sophomore, made good on his first four shots from the floor, all jumpers from around the top of the key. The whole Redman team, for that matter, was red hot for the first five minutes, hitting on seven for seven from the court along with two for two from the line to surge in front 17 to 5.

Then, when the Redmen seemed to lose some of their early fire, the Cadets found some of their own in forward Dick Walsh and center Laurie Somers. Walsh, finding the range on the long jumpers and Somers, adding a couple from close by, brought the guardsmen back to within three, 21 to 18.

Mike Johnson, rugged as ever under the boards all night, scored three on a layup and free throw and Rodger Twitchell banged one in to give UMass some more breathing room, 26 to 18. But the Cadets weren't about to be sent to the bottom that easily. With 5:20 left in the half they had crept to within three, 27 to 24.

Kingston, Hill, and Don Laakso ran off eight straight points to give UM a 35 to 24 edge with 1:25 showing on the clock. Bob Leggett, Cadet team captain then game high scorer, pushed in a couple of quickies before the half ended, to leave his mates seven points shy, 35 to 28.

Kingston started the Redmen scoring in the second half with a jumper from the foul line, and added another from the top of the key a minute later. But UMass was fouling hot and heavy in this stretch and the guardsmen cashed them in at the foul line to pull within four, 39 to 35.

Redmen co-captain Rodger Twitchell wrestles with Coast Guard's Walsh for possession of the ball as teammates Jack Reynolds and Mike Johnson look on.

CHARLIE KINGSTON

A Kingston set shot, a free throw by Laakso and a pair of Twitchell layups sent UM into a 46 to 37 command with 14:00 remaining. The Cadets did not seriously threaten after this point. At the midway mark the Redmen were coasting 55 to 45 and with 5 left were ahead 65 to 64.

Bob Leggett's shooting, 15 points in the second half and 21 for the game, kept the Cadet's heads above water, and prevented UMass from making the game a runaway. Had the Guardsmen some height up front, they might have fared better, but the Redmen forward wall of Mike Johnson, Rodger Twitchell, and Chuck O'Rourke, monopolized the play under both boards for those all important rebounds.

Twitchell, enjoying a hot second half, netted 18 points for the game in addition to 19 rebounds. Mike Johnson chipped in 13 points and grabbed 17 rebounds. From the floor UMass was an even 40 percent, making 33 for 81. The Guardsmen were 26 for 71 for a shooting percentage of 36.

The Redmen's victory was their second in a row and their third in the last four games, the only loss being a heartbreaker to the extra-powerful Canisius College five by a score of 54-52. In addition to the win over Coast Guard, UMass also sports a January 12 trouncing over Vermont, 92-67, and last Thursday night's hardfought win over the Black Bears of Maine, that contest ending in the misleading score of 80-68.

Tomorrow night the Redmen, now 9 and 6 for the season, will travel to Providence, R.I., to engage one of the East's stronger fives, the Providence College Friars. The Friars tuned up for their meeting with the Redmen by knocking Niagara from the unbeaten ranks, 102 to 78, Saturday night.

Last year P.C. compiled a 20-6 record with one win being a 79-45 dunking of U.M. in its backyard. This year's edition of the Friars, now 11 and 4, will be no easier to deal with. Coach Joe Mulianey's boys own victories over St. Louis, U.R.I., Brown, Delaware, St. Francis (N.Y.), Scranton, and Dayton.

The Friars have a lot of talent to throw at the Redmen tomorrow. Starting up front will be Bob Kovalski, a 6'8" Sophomore, who averaged 25 a game as a Frosh. Kovalski, incidentally, is a local boy, coming from South Hadley. He's now averaging 14 a game for the Friars.

Joining Kovalski in the forward slots will be 6' Jim Stone, a specialist at popping them in from the corner. Stone was a high school teammate of former Ohio State All American, Jerry Lucas. Providence has one of New England's tallest players in starting center John Thompson. Thompson is a Junior and stands a lofty 6'10½".

In the backcourt the Friars will be going with 6'1" team captain Ray Flynn and 5'8" Vin Ernst. Flynn owns one of the deadliest outside set shots around. Ernst, dubbed the "Mighty Mite" by P.C. rooters, is in his last year with Providence.

He is best remembered for his winning the M.V.P. award as a Soph in the 1961 National Invitational Tournament, which P.C. won. What coaches fear most about Ernst is he's right in there stealing the ball away, snaring passes and breaking up the fast break.

Next Saturday the Redmen will be at home hosting Rhode Island in a Conference game. Rhody, tied with UConn for the Yankee Conference lead with a 5-0 slate, defeated the Redmen earlier in the year at Rhode Island, 86 to 80. UMass has a 3 and 2 Conference record.

The University of Connecticut has named George Wigton, a '56 grad of Ohio State to take over as head coach of basketball at UConn. Wigton has a big pair of shoes to fill. He replaces Hugh Greer, who piloted the Huskies for 16 years before passing away several weeks ago.

Hugh Greer, known in sporting circles as the "Silver Fox", came to Storrs as head coach in 1946. Since then his teams won 289 and lost 114. Greer's Huskies were YanCon champs 12 times during his 16 year tenure. Against UMass, Greer was 18-5.

1. My theory on looking for a job is—Play it big! Shoot for the top! Go straight to the prez for your interview.

I don't know any presidents.

2. Use your head, man. Have your dad set up appointments with some of the big shots he knows.

He's a veterinarian.

3. Beautiful! All you have to do is find a president who likes dogs. You'll have him eating out of your hand in no time.

I don't know an Elkhound from an Elk.

4. Frankly, I don't know what else to tell you. You've got a problem.

It's not as bad as it seems. My idea is to find out the name of the employment manager at the company I'm interested in. Write him a letter telling him my qualifications. Spell out my interests, marks. Simple as that.

5. A letter to the employment manager! Ho ho ho! You've a lot to learn.

Then how come I landed a great job at Equitable—an executive training spot that's interesting, pays a good salary and has a lot of promise for the future.

Baseball, LaCrosse Meetings Scheduled

There will be a meeting of all varsity baseball candidates February 6 in room 10 of the Curry Hicks Physical Education Building at 5:00 p.m.

On the following day, Thursday, February 7, all varsity Lacrosse candidates are asked to attend a meeting in the same room at 4:15.

Trophies Awarded

Jonothan Kelly (junior) received recognition for his outstanding performance at the 4th New England Air Force Gallery Pistol Match at Hanscom Air Force Base, Bedford, Mass.

Although the UMass Varsity Pistol team finished second behind Coast Guard, Kelly was top scorer in all events except the Camp Perry Course. The Redmen managed to gain a top score in this event when Frank Fiuet placed second. Each of them received engraved trophies.

Stockbridge Riflers Win

With Jim Rocha, Hal Anderson and Chuck Miraglia firing in the 270's, the Stockbridge Rifle Team had little trouble in its postal match with the Farmingdale branch of New York State University.

Powell of the New Yorkers fired a 278 over the 3-position collegiate course for top gun of the match, but an improved team effort by Stockbridge brought them the victory.

First Group Of Peace Corps Trainees En Route To West Coast Of Africa

The first group of 55 Peace Corps workers to be trained by UMass left the campus by bus for New York City early Friday morning. The main contingent will board a plane for Africa by noontime.

The Peace Corps men and women are on their way to the French-speaking nations of Senegal, Niger and the Ivory Coast in West Africa. There they will work in agriculture, extension, irrigation projects, building construction, athletic coaching, health and nutrition problems, and teaching.

During their stay at the University, the trainees received intensive training in the French language, American foreign policy, history and politics of West Africa, world affairs, and communist philosophy and strategy. These background courses were in addition to training in their special fields, from agriculture and athletics to home economics.

Romance As Well

Despite their rugged schedule at the University, some of the trainees managed to find time for romance. Ronald Augsburger and Eliazbeth Hostetler marched down the aisle in December. William Dunn and Helen V. Nobles were married a week ago, and will work as a team in Senegal.

Washington Kingsby, Jr. took time out to win the Western Massachusetts Golden Gloves welterweight championship. A strong contender for the New England title, he lost his chance when time ran out and he had to leave for the Ivory oast. There he will compete with boxers and then coach boxing. Eventually he will teach in the schools.

Two Massachusetts men, Kenneth Esty of Holbrook and William St. Jean of Fitchburg, were among those leaving for Africa after successful completion of the special training.

Top Diplomats On Campus

Top ranking diplomats came to the U of M campus to meet and talk with the trainees. Among these dignitaries were Niger's ambassador to the U.S., Abdou Sidikou; first secretary of the Norwegian ministry of foreign affairs, Arne Arnesen; Hans G. Kirschstein of the West German Ministry of Economic Cooperation; Ambassador Diop of Senegal; and first secretary Daba Ahoussi of the Ivory Coast embassy.

To make sure that the trainees knew what they were getting into, the University's School of Home Economics helped the Peace Corps women prepare a banquet of African food for the trainees. The meal consisted of such delicacies as "one-pot" chicken stew, "one-pot" fish stew, fried plantains, and "fu-fu." The food turned out to be quite tasty.

During their stay at U of M, the trainees worked closely with Matthew Blaisdell, Peace Corps training project director; Prof. James Ferrigno, director of the language program; and Russy D. Sumariwalla, assistant Peace Corps project director.

Bernard Lurie To Play Violin, Piano Selections

A recital for violin and piano will be presented here tonight, at 8:15 p.m. in Bartlett Hall auditorium.

Featuring Bernard Lurie, violinist, and Herbert Chatzky, pianist, the recital is sponsored by the University's department of music. The music of Beethoven, Schubert and Bartok will be presented as well as a new work by University instructor Elliott Schwartz.

Instructor in music at the University and conductor of the University string orchestra, Mr. Lurie is also assistant chairman of the string and ensemble departments at Hartt College of Music in Hartford. He is assistant concertmaster of the Hartford Symphony Orchestra, concertmaster of the Connecticut Opera, and has appeared in recitals in New York, Philadelphia and various parts of New England. He has performed under such conductors as Arthur Fiedler, Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Fritz Mahler, Nathan Gottschalk and Moshe Paranov.

Mr. Chatzky, who has performed with Mr. Lurie previously in Hartford, is also a member of the Hartt College of Music faculty.

BERNARD LURIE

The recital is open to the public without charge.

Presentation Made Of New Special Scholarship Aid

The maintenance and support staff of UMass announced recently the granting of a special scholarship to the University in honor of the institution's centennial.

Presentation of the $100 scholarship was made by chairman of the party committee Edmund Goetzl at the annual awards night dinner held at Hadley American Legion Hall. The dinner was attended by more than 300 members of the University staff. Accepting the scholarship on behalf of the University was Dr. John W. Ryan, associate director of the Centennial and Secretary of the University.

Mr. Goetzl, in making the presentation, pointed out that it is a general scholarship, and there are no restrictions placed on how it is to be awarded.

Scrolls Elect New Officers This Week

Due to start this week is the selection of next year's Scrolls, officers of the sophomore girls' honorary society have announced. Scrolls will visit each freshman girl individually to obtain her vote for next year's members.

During the past five months the Scrolls have accomplished projects of their own and assisted other organizations. They started the year by aiding freshmen at orientation in September.

Scroll activities include cooperating with the other campus honor societies to plan football rallies, making and distributing posters, helping to make parades run smoothly and creating school spirit.

Scrolls are on hand at the lobby counter of the S.U. at High School Days in October to give directions and answers to high schoolers and their parents. The girls also officiated at the dorm elections for Senator earlier this year.

Scrolls sponsored a commuter's tea and a commuter's Christ-

WMUA To Resume Regular Broadcasts

WMUA, the radio voice of the University of Massachusetts, begins its regular programming schedule next Monday after a month's layoff.

Since the beginning of the second semester, the campus station has been on an abbreviated four-hour broadcasting schedule as a result of changes in programming for the new semester.

Presently WMUA is on the air from 8 p.m. to mid-night only, but early next week the 7 to 9 a.m. morning show and the 4:30 to 1 a.m. programs will return for the second semester, which the station promises to be its best since it began operating.

One of the highest quality programs to be aired will be the Impulse series hosted by Vern Pero on Thursday nights at 7:30. The first Impulse of the semester will have nationally known CBS radio and television commentator Leon Pearson giving a capsule history of John Milton's life and works which should be of special interest to English 26 students.

The same evening Vern Pero will interview Abdul Samma, president of the International Club, on the subject of his home country Tanganyika, one of the newly independent African nations.

WMUA announced that television newsmen Douglas Edwards and Robert Trout, actor Alexander Scourby, and discussions in the All America Wants To Know series are scheduled for some time later this semester on Impulse.

CBS News Correspondent Sevareid To Speak At DVP

The Distinguished Visitors' Program lecture by news commentator Eric Sevareid at 8 p.m. next Tuesday will be a memorial lecture for the late Sterling Surrey, Professor of General Business and Finance at UMass, program officials announced.

Professor Surrey was an active member of the program before his death late last summer.

A CBS news correspondent and syndicated columnist, Sevareid will speak on "The Shape of Things to Come." For ten years he was chief correspondent and head of the CBS Washington bureau and he served in London for two years.

ERIC SEVAREID

Sevareid has been honored with many awards and citations in broadcasting which include the Freedom Medal from Norway, the Peabody Award, the "One World" Award, the Brotherhood Award of the National Council of Christians and Jews, and the Minnesota University Outstanding Achievement Award.

For his distinguished achievement in journalism, he was awarded the George Polk Memorial Award and was the recipient of the Alfred I. DuPont Award for meritorious service to the American people.

During World War II, Sevareid was outstanding in his coverage of the battlefronts. The last correspondent to leave France before the Nazi invasion, he broadcast from London during the great Blitz.

While covering the Chinese campaign in Chunking, his plane crashed in the Burma jungle and it was a month before he was led to safety by headhunters. He also covered the Italian campaign and landed with the first American forces in France.

With the end of the war, he returned to the United States to report on the San Francisco Conference and the formation of the United Nations.

He is author of "Not So Wild a Dream", "In One Ear", and "Small Sounds in the Night".

Levine To Be Next Speaker At UM SZO

William Levine, the national director of the Student Zionist Organization, will be the invited guest of the UMass chapter and will speak on the question of Jewish leadership in the American-Jewish Community tonight at 8 p.m. in the S.U.

Mr Levine, just recently appointed to this position, has been a vigorous worker in the American Jewish community, being active in Zionist affairs and a major influence in formulating a more efficient Student Zionist Organization.

He has been Chapter President of Roosevelt University, Midwest Reginal President, Director of the Midwest and then Atlantic Regions.

This will be the initial meeting of SZO this semester. The topic chosen is a vital one, yet one often neglected, say SZO officials.

The lack of leadership in the American Jewish Community has raised a lot of eyebrows they said.

Sophomores To Assemble Tomorrow

There will be a meeting of the Sophomore Class tomorrow at 11 a.m. in the SU Ballroom, class officials announced today. All members of the Class of '65 are urged to attend.

Among topics to be brought up at the meeting will be the introduction of the Class's new president, introduction of the Class Advisor, announcement of members of the new Executive Council, a report on past functions and future plans of the class and any topics introduced from the floor.

Police Set To Handle Carni Cars

Expecting large numbers of visitors to the campus this weekend for the annual Winter Carnival, Amherst and University police plan to alleviate traffic congestion by a system of one-way roads.

On Saturday and Sunday, North Pleasant Street in Amherst will be one way north from the center of town to the East Experiment Station at the University.

Stockbridge Road on the University campus will remain two-way as far as Hills Dormitory, but Ellis Drive will be one way south from the East Experiment Station to Lincoln Avenue. Lincoln Avenue will be one way south all the way.

East Pleasant Street remains two-way as far as Triangle Street becoming one way eastward at that point. Clark Hill will remain open to traffic in both didections.

Officials advise that motorists wishing to leave the campus in the quickest way should pass through the north parking lot—located near the engineering building—and take the back road past Flint Laboratory and the maintenance building out to the Route 9 bypass.

CENTENNIAL PARADE

During the first two months of this academic year there was a great deal of backpatting by members of the University community regarding our Centennial year. There were numerous plans for Centennial events that would present the University to the public; a chance to show what we have done in our first one hundred years of growth and to indicate our goals for the future.

Since Dr. Goldberg (co-ordinator of Centennial events) left the University the cooperation between student groups and members of the administration has been less than ideal, to say the very least.

A particular case in point is the proposed Centennial float parade. Up until a short while ago plans for the parade were proceeding very well. Several groups indicated that they would be happy and proud to participate in a tribute to the University on its 100th birthday. High School bands and many other groups said that they would be willing to participate even though the float parade committee could not provide funds for transportation or food.

Until recently almost all of the work done for the parade was accomplished by students. At this time, however, the parade may never become a reality because details have been boggd down in red tape—red tape that has resulted because of poor co-operation between South College, Machmer Hall, and the Student Union.

Difficulties have arisen with the Calendar Board, and although the Parade Committee has adequate funds to finance the parade (including the fact that participating organizations are financing their own parade entries), there have been administrative doubts about the parade committee's ability to produce the parade.

The town of Amherst is behind the parade, and there is no doubt that such a parade would be beneficial to the University. When considering the advantages of the parade and the amount of work that has gone into preparations for it, we fail to understand why every effort is not being made to insure that the Centennial parade does become a reality.

Students are meeting with members of the administration within a week to try to salvage plans for the parade. We encourage a co-operative attitude at this meeting and sincerely hope that the Centennial parade will take place. —N.C.A.

ASTERISK —

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

PLAYING WITH AN ATOMIC YO-YO

Apparently, the mental equilibrium which has prevailed in the aftermath of the last Cuban crisis is about to be disturbed. The principle stimulators of this new situation are Senator Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) and Representative Donald C. Bruce (R-Ind.) Unhappy at the overall results of U.S. policy toward the island nation, these men are agitating for stronger action. At this time, of course, this action can but take the form of an armed invasion.

While the strong criticism of Keating and Bruce revolve around differing reports upon Soviet military capability in Cuba, it is reasonably clear that the current attack is the necessary by-product of what these men consider to be U.S. failure in Cuba. And, in fact, they are correct. After all, what did the United States gain in Cuba? Certainly they forced the Soviets to abandon an "offensive" military capability. But at what price? The really significant concession came on the part of the United States: a conditional no-invasion pledge.

It is not difficult to see that the criticisms of Keating and Bruce are, indeed, synthetic. Can these men really believe that either Cuba or the Soviet Union would desire, under present conditions, to invade other South American countries? For the Soviets this policy would be a political blunder with the most far-reaching consequences. And in light of Khrushchev's present pronouncements upon peaceful coexistence, this policy would be ideologically incorrect. One must always apply Khrushchev's attitude on "wars of liberation" to this situation. This is obviously not merely taking him at his word but rather acting upon the assumption that he must maintain a consistent ideological position if only to continue the laborious task of de-Stalinization.

Both Keating and Bruce are concerned over the fact that despite the lack of an offensive military capability in Cuba, the Castro regime is growing stronger, both economically and militarily. And they are among the first to realize that despite the isolation of this regime, the economic success of the revolution will undermine other South American governments more than any external military adventures on the part of Castro or the Soviets.

In a sense the existence of a communist Cuba can be interpreted quite favorably, for it may serve as a stimulus to reform in South America. For obvious reasons no allied statesman can state this publicly. Yet, the fact remains that the ruling families and corporations (many U.S. owned) may, when confronted with the lesson of Cuba, give way to gradual reform with the view of preventing violent upheaval.

Whether either Keating or Bruce or Senator Strom Thurmond (D-S. Car.) favor meaningful reform is yet to be proved. We must, of course, assume that they do. We must also assume, despite their parts in this synthetic crisis, that they are reasonably sane. As red-blooded Americans, we must assume all of this.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Looking Into Your Laughing Place

To the Editor:

As long as Mr. Andelman has seen fit to envolve my series on humor with whatever small controversies he may have created over Ya-Hoo, I will abandon my previous plans—which had nothing to do with the Magazine—and take this opportunity to conclude that series with one or two appropriate comments.

It is difficult to sit in the confines of one's room and write something that will make people laugh. We find this especially true when we attempt to put out a Ya-Hoo. We not only must be funny, but also must be consistently original (and campus jokes are quick to wear out); we must please as heterogeneous an audience as could ever be gathered; and we must please the ideals of a "double standard" world. The situation, on the whole, is hardly pleasing!

With all this to overcome, the vast majority of the opinions on this Ya-Hoo (that we have heard) are still strongly favorable. We have come close to a balance between "literary" humor and that ever-present bawdy humor on campus. Our magazine includes a wide range of humor from "Gilly and the Phantom" to that last page of jokes (traps for the evil mind, many of which came from other campus humor magazines). The Collagian, too, seemed a success. Indeed, the only legitimate complaint Ya-Hoo has received is a comment on the use of a personal reference, and that was never intended to cause personal embarrassment.

Of course, there is always room for improvement, and the Ya-Hoo editors will listen to anyone with a sincere argument. For now though, we are confident that the student body did enjoy and appreciate our efforts. Dave Axelrod

To the Editor:

I feel that your "Ya-Hoo Review" did not say enough; it was far too general. Let me first admit that I did laugh at the jokes and cartoons, even the "water closet ones." Even though I laughed at the material in Ya-Hoo I most certainly would not send a copy to any member of the opposite sex.

Tom Lehrer once pointed out that the obscene is often referred to today as the sophisticated. It does not take the publication of sex-jokes to prove that you are sophisticated; a brief reading of the Lampoon will convince the Ya-Hoo editors of this.

The cartoons (borrowed from other humor magazines) were very good, "Gilly and the Phantom" was moderately enjoyable, and most of the Collagian was quite funny. I feel that with a more careful pruning of the contents that appeared in this issue that Ya-Hoo could have been great. Instead the total impression was a rather unfavorable one.

I do not know if Ya-Hoo must fill a set number of pages. If this is so, then perhaps I could excuse some of the filler material. If this is not true, then Ya-Hoo has no excuse. A shorter issue of top-notch quality would have been better. S.B. '64

To the Editor:

I, as did everyone I know, read the Ya-Hoo and thought it was very good. So I was very surprised by your review in Monday's paper. Their Collagian was probably better than your Collegian (if you don't mind my saying so!) and the articles, cartoons, and most other material were entertaining and in perfectly good taste. I admit that there were some off-color jokes on one page, but they formed a very minor part of the magazine, just space-filler jokes, really.

The issue, by general admission, was excellent, and a particularly great improvement over the last one. I can't understand why you completely ignored everything else about such a good issue and devoted your entire review to insults and complaints based on one unimportant aspect of the magazine. It is simply traditional to give the Ya-Hoo a bad review, or does the person who wrote the review just have a dirty mind?

"Evil to him who evil thinks," you know.

Red Raiders Swamp UM Pucksters, 11-0

by AL RICE '66

Hockey hopes here at UMass sank to a season low shortly before the mid-semester break when Steve Kosakowski's charges were held scoreless while being bombed for 11 Colgate goals when the Red Raiders drubbed the Redmen 11-0 at Hamilton, New York. Since then, however, things have been looking up for the Mass pucksters and considerable improvement could be in evidence tonight when they take on the U.S. Military Academy in a game at West Point.

Three men have been added to the team and Kosakowski feels they should be a definite asset. Two of the new men move into positions on the first line. Charlie Glew is the only holdover from the original first unit, and Frank Gilliatt and Ed Quimby take over the other positions. Gilliatt skated two years ago on the number one unit, but has been inactive until this semester due to an assignment as a practice teacher.

The center and left wing of the former line, Gerry Wolfe and John Lasher respectively, have been shifted to the second line to join Bob Lee in a move that should provide far more strength up front. The second line of Dave Higgins, Jim Mahoney, and Dick Callahan did not produce in the past few games. Higgins, Mahoney, Allen Johnson, and Ken Palm will provide backup duty as a third line. The absence of Bob Chisholm still leaves the defense with a need for improvement, but Captain Gerry Clinton, John Clayton, Dick Phillips, and Matt Herman are all available now to lend a hand.

Coach Kosakowski stated he is in the process of converting Higgins to a defenseman's role, but the move will not be effected in a game for at least two weeks.

Another notable change that could come about would be giving Eric Swensen the starting goalie's job. Swensen has been looking better than Skip Bowen lately and might well take his job. Bowen has been subjected to unmerciful punishment especially in the Christmas Tournament because of the lack of defensemen, but lately the shots have been going by him a little easier. At Colgate, Bowen made 33 saves and allowed 11 goals, a percentage far higher than he had allowed in earlier contests.

The Massachusetts six had the unbelievably low total of only twelve shots saved by the Colgate goalies as proof of their weak attack, while allowing the Colgate first line five goals and five assists. The Raiders second trio knocked in three and picked up two assists. Brian Edgerly was the high man on the scoring totem with a pair of goals and two assists. Also with a pair of goals were Steve Riggs and Tom Gurney, both centers.

Riggs and Mike Foley third line center, scored in the first period. Colgate collected four more in the second stanza, and then lowered the boom with five in the final period.

Redmen Skiers Finish Fourth In Brown Invitational Slalom

The University Ski team finished fourth in a field of nine colleges in the Brown Invitational Slalom Race held at Cranmore Mountain, North Conway, New Hampshire on Sunday, January 27. UMass defeated Boston University, Tufts, Brown, Boston College, and A.I.C. while finishing behind New England College, Amherst, and Northeastern.

Individual results for the University skiers, out of a field of 51, were Dick Hurlburt—7th, Don Burgess—24th, Clark Bowlen—25th, Tom Clarke—26th, and Eric Schuhle—29th.

In conjunction with Winter Carnival weekend, the University of Massachusetts and Amherst College ski teams are co-sponsoring races at Thunder Mountain, Charlemont, Mass. A giant slalom will be run on Saturday, Feb. 9, and a downhill on Sunday, Feb. 10, both starting at 10 a.m. All nine colleges in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference will compete, as will Bowdoin and M.I.T.

All novice and intermediate, men and women, skiers are reminded to participate in the Winter Carnival Intramural Ski Race on Thatcher Hill on Friday, Feb. 8, at 3 p.m.

Dick Repeta Named To All-American Soccer Squad

Dick Repeta, termed the "best defensiveman on a University of Massachusetts soccer team in the past ten or twelve years" by his coach Larry Briggs, has been elected to the second squad of the All-American Soccer team.

Repeta, only a junior, was elected by his teammates co-captain of the Redmen soccer team for this past season. For the past two years Dick has been selected to the first team of the All-New England Intercollegiate Soccer League, a league composed of thirty New England colleges.

CO-CAPTAIN DICK REPETA

Dick will again take the field next year in the red and white uniform of UMass and will no doubt exhibit much of the playing skill of finesse that he showed this season and will take further advantage of what Coach Briggs considers to be "a great potential."

YANCON NEWS

UConn And URI Tied For YanCon Lead

The University of Connecticut basketball team, riding along with five victories in its last six games, takes on American International College of Springfield in its only home game of the week, Wednesday night.

The Huskies have been paced by the explosive scoring punch of Eddie "Big Dipper" Slomcenski, 6-10 junior center, and Dale "Little Dipper" Comey, 5-9 senior guard, during their recent surge. Slomcenski has been hitting the strings at a 21-point per game pace during this time; and Comey, playing the role of a substitute for about 20 minutes per game, has scored 88 points during the five victories in the skein, an average of 17.6.

The latest team statistics show Slomcenski as the team leader with an average of 14.7 points, followed by 6-7 sophomore forward Toby Kimball (12.9) and 6-6 senior forward Gerry Manning (12.5). Comey is next with 9.9 points while regular guards 6-1 Dom Perno (6.8) and 6-0 Capt. Andy Czuchry (4.5) follow.

American International, loser of all 15 games played with the UConns since the series started in 1934-35, has a 2-13 record. The Aces have defeated Amherst College and Southern Connecticut for their only victories. Losses were at the hands of Bridgeport, Holy Cross, Amherst, Bates, Northeastern, Assumption (2), Massachusetts, St. Anselm's, Williams, Fairfield, Clark and Central Connecticut.

The Aces will line up with 6-3 senior Terry McCormick at center; 6-4 sophomore Norm Lambert and 6-1 junior Bob Davis of Meriden at the forwards; and 5-8 junior Mike Shea and 5-5 senior George Sakellis at guard. Lambert leads his team in scoring with a 14.1 average while Shea is next with 12.2.

Connecticut has a 9-4 over-all record and is in a first-place tie with Rhode Island (5-0) for the Yankee Conference lead.

Zunic Wages War Against — THE INTANGIBLES

by JIM TRELEASE '63

If Matt Zunic wins a Yankee Conference title in 1963 he will rate as the top candidate to replace Eliot Ness on the "Untouchables."

In his own right, this volatile mentor has waged a war of nerves against what could be termed the "Intangibles." These are the things that give coaches ulcers, receding hairlines, jumbled nervous systems, and sleepless nights.

Intangibles never come in slow or small doses but in fast and large ones. John Reynolds started Zunic's bushelful. This big 6-5er came down with mononucleosis within days after practice started. Most people would have given up basketball at that stage and some might have even dropped out of school, but not Jack.

With practice under way, Charlie Kingston pulled up lame with a severe bruise on his instep. Even with a Boston specialist's care, Kingston did not return to action for another month. Then, Clarence Hill collided with his opponent in practice and suffered a concusion. A week later, Hill needed three stitches on his eyelid.

At this point, soph Jim Painten, a forward-guard whom Zunic had intended for extensive duty, produced a double-charley horse. Further examination of his thigh showed heavy calcium deposits from an old injury. Only an operation could rid Painten of the deposits and such an operation would also rid him of the ability to play basketball for a year. Exit a heralded but unused Jim Painten.

The departure of a much publicized transfer student came soon after the above injuries. Carrying the burden of a tag for "future greatness" even before he had played in a varsity game, Paul Fleming found Zunic's playpatterns "too complicated" to memorize, fractured a finger, pulled up lame with a mysterious, unseen foot injury, and eventually dropped out of school.

Right about here, ace rebounder Mike Johnson smashed three fingers on his shooting hand in a door jam. This incident put him out of action for two and one-half weeks—including the B.U. and Connecticut games.

It had been almost two full weeks without an injury, and two weeks is too long for the Intangibles. A cold in Charlie Kingston's shoulder sidelined him for a week and then a broken nose really put the damper on his condition. Soon after Rodger Twitchell injured his back.

Court life was too healthy for Dan Laakso, so he showed up next with what appeared to be a bone-chip in his shoulder. And John Reynolds' contributions to the club were too numerous to mention after his battle with "mono," so the Intangibles hit his strength—his legs. And ankle sprain put Reynolds out of the Rhode Island, Holy Cross, and Vermont contests.

It was about this time that Kingston was wondering whether he should pay his second semester room bill to University housing or to the Infirmary, that he suffered his most serious ailment—a fractured jaw bone. When oral surgery was performed, Kingston reacted adversely to shots and injured his back in a resultant fall. The affable sophomore has been wearing mouth braces for the last six weeks. Soon after his return to the hardcourt, he suffered a bone-chip in his index finger.

Those are the Intangibles . . . of one kind. Then there is the other kind. And a coach is just as helpless against this kind as well as the other. UMass hit a string of poor, and sometimes downright awful officiating. At Rhode Island is was awful, against Holy Cross it was disgusting, and at Canisius it was putrid.

In total, the ten man squad suffered more than 20 injuries and three of their six losses at mid-season were sustained under questionable officiating. But through the holocaust, Zunic and his charges kept fighting, never once giving in to the Intangibles, and playing above the .500 mark to mid-season.

Now, finally, it appears that the breath of fate has been shifted. For the first time in four years, Zunic came through midterm without losing a player to scholastic ineligibility. In fact, his was the only major sport in the University to come through final exams unscathed.

And after years of lethargy, the student body finally came alive, to boost their team to victory over Maine. So great was the cheering effort that Zunic credited the students with the win and the Springfield Daily News made the student spirit the subject of a three column headline.

Further evidence of a shift in the habitat of the Intangibles was found over the weekend when conference leader Rhode Island announced the loss of All-Yan Con Charlie Lee (21) and Dennis McGovern (19) to scholastic ineligibility. The numerals beside each name indicate the number of points they scored against UMass last month.

Matt Zunic hopes the Intangibles are gone, but he's not taking any chances; he's still wearing his lucky red tie and socks.

Providence Dumps Redmen Five 80-61

A predictably strong Providence College five dealt the Redmen basketball squad their first defeat in the past three games by a resounding score of 80-61.

The Redmen stayed close on the heels of Providence throughout the first half with the stanza ending with Matt Zunic's charges trailing the P.C. boys by only one point, 37-36.

It was primarily the hot jumpshot shooting of Rodger Twitchell and Mike Johnson from in and around the corners that kept the Redmen in contention.

Twitchell scored all of his fifteen points in the first half and was held scoreless by the Providence defense until he fouled out with approximately ten minutes to go in the second frame.

The old plague of poor foul shooting came back to haunt the Redmen once more as the men for UMass could only muster five points at the not-so-charitable charity stripe. On the other hand, Providence made ample use of its foul shot opportunities by sinking 26 out of a possible 31 shots which they took at the line. Little Vinnie Ernst, 5'8", led the Providence squad in scoring with a total of 21 points for the evening. Ernst was closely followed by his teammates Stone and Flynn with 20 and 19 points respectively.

Big John Thompson was held to thirteen points through the guarding efforts of Redmen Twitchell and Johnson. Of these thirteen points only two came from the court, a basket with about three minutes to go in the game. His other twelve points were sunk from the foul line.

Clarence Hill led the Redmen scorers with 16 points, followed by Twitchell with 15, and Charlie O'Rourke with 13. Mike Johnson managed to eke out nine points.

Providence broke the game open with eleven minutes to go in the second half when the combination of Flynn, Stone, and Ernst teamed up for nine straight points. After that the Redmen never seriously threatened and Providence spent the rest of the night frosting the cake.

UMass "Flying Redmen" Drill Team Prepare For Championship Competition

The UMass "Flying Redmen", New England Drill Team Champions for the past eight out of nine years, are stepping up practice for the Washington, D. C. National Competitions in April, and for the defense of their long-standing title in the Area A, New England, Championship Competition.

The team is composed of freshmen and sophomore members of the basic AFROTC program and is under the direction of Cadet Lt. Colonel Peter Cabana and Cadet Capt. Warren Vander Burgh, and the new NCO advisor, Sgt. Gilbertson.

In preparation for the national championships, at which they placed sixth of all Air Force teams last year, the "Flying Redmen" have been practicing since September, often as much as eight hours a week, and will start a schedule of several public appearances in the Spring.

The "Flying Redmen" are well known throughout the New England and Upper New York State areas, and throughout the nation as well via the television facilities which air Washington's Cherry Blossom Parade of which the "Redmen" are a part while they are in the nation's capital.

Colonel Carhart, Professor of Air Science, who last year was stationed in Washintgon, D. C., stated that "the national competition is a great event for both the people of Washington and the University. Everyone looks forward to seeing the 'Flying Redmen' and all recognize the team as being that of the University.

"The drill team has always done a great job," Col. Carhart further stated, "and my family and I were deeply impressed when we saw them perform last year. I knew the University, through the 'Redmen,' before I was even transferred here."

Resignations, Rules Top Senate Meeting

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

Two resignations from the Student Senate and two committee chairmen stepping down led the order of business at Wednesday's record-length Student Senate meeting. Senator Steve Hewey (At-Large '63) and Senator Lee Ann Mansell ('64 Crabtree) both cited academic reasons for leaving.

Senator Hewey, in a letter of resignation, congratulated the Senate on the fine work it has done. But, the letter said, there are several faults which need correcting. That of primary importance, it stated, was the constitution, which Hewey felt to be outdated.

"It places too great a burden on the Senate President", Hewey claimed. In the letter he offered as a solution a revised constitution which would establish the office of President of the Student Body. This office would handle all the "Ambassadorial" functions now performed by the Senate president.

Senator Hewey's term will be filled by a successor appointed by Senior class president Skip Oakes in consultation with the President of the Senate.

On a motion made by Senator Ross Jones ('64 Brett), the Senate gave a vote of thanks to Senator Hewey for his years of service to the Senate and to the student body.

Judging Budget Passed

After a brief floor fight, the University Judging Teams budget passed by an almost two to one margin. Senators Richard Potter ('63 Van Meter) and George Jones ('64 Married Dorms) both claimed that the teams were the only opportunity that students would have to perfect skills involved in judging.

Senator Jon Fife ('64 Van Meter) stated that the teams were merely an extension of the classroom and should be paid for by the administration.

An act which would hold up all appointments for one week was also soundly defeated. Senator Bob McDonnell ('65 Brett) who sponsored the bill, stated that he felt time was needed in which an appointment might be challenged.

Senator Steve Gray retorted that this would lead to a great deal of off-the-floor-dealing.

Jr. Honors Colloquia—Intellectual Experience

by NEAL ANDELMAN '63

The following is the first in a series of three articles about the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman Honors Colloquia, respectively. The purpose of this series is to acquaint the reader with specific knowledge about Colloquia participants, composition and particular areas of study.

The topics of the four Junior Honors Colloquia are as varied as the backgrounds of the participants. This fact sheds light on the nature of the Honor's program. The synthesis of minds and viewpoints of students of widely differing backgrounds results in a stimulating intellectual experience.

The opportunity is afforded in each Colloquia to read the best books on a host of disciplines. This interdisciplinary approach requires participants to formulate and defend their ideas in a give-and-take situation. Such discussion with interested persons in diverse fields permits honest appraisal and creative development of one's own ideas, values, personality and professional plans.

Unpredictability is a highlight of an Honors Colloquium since no one can predict the outcome of a discussion. There is no attempt by faculty participants to lead the discussion to a particular conclusion. The faculty participants are active members of a Colloquium, functioning as guides. Their participation is no more nor less important than that of any student member.

Many of the students participating in the Junior Honors Colloquia have been with the program since its inception three years ago. The fact that they have remained with the program and have been influenced by it, is testimony to its success and importance.

Man's Utopia is the title of the Junior Colloquium whose members are reading such books as Brave New World, Walden II, The Making of the President 1960 and The Republic. Faculty participants are Mr. Ralph Pippert, Associate Professor in the School of Education, and Mr. Himy Kirshen, Dean of the School of Business.

Dean Kirshen described the Colloquia as: "More than a discussion—it's an intellectual communication on a high level. Every university needs a means

Bellotti, Morrow Will Share Spotlight At Carnival Dance

Three people will share the spotlight tonight at the UMass' Winter Carnival Ball.

Lieutenant Governor Francis X. Bellotti will be on hand to crown the University's Winter Carnival Queen, and the lucky young lady herself will be present to receive the homage of UMass student revelers and their guests. Buddy Morrow will be on the bandstand with his versatile, well known "Night Train" orchestra.

Buddy Morrow To Play

Buddy Morrow, who with his orchestra will be supplying the music for the University's biggest social event of the year, has been connected for a long time with college dances and big band sounds.

THE CHAD MITCHELL TRIO

FRANCIS X. BELLOTTI

Born in New Haven, Morrow was a trombonist by the time he was twelve. Three years later, he became the youngest member of the Yale Collegians, a group that traveled up and down the East Coast playing at college dances and parties.

Before starting his own "Night Train" orchestra in 1951, Morrow played with such greats as Artie Shaw, Eddy Duchin, Paul Whiteman, and the Dorsey brothers.

Today the Morrow band is an established attraction at leading ballrooms and theatres from coast to coast. Through recordings of "Night Train," "One Mint Julep," "I Don't Know" and "Hey, Mrs. Jones" the Morrow men have brought their distinctive sounds to millions of people.

Main Carni attraction will be 50 snow sculptures presented by the dormitories, fraternities, and sororities. This year the sculptures will depict scenes from the University's past 100 years.

Many Events Saturday

Starting at 10 a.m. Saturday, fraternities will compete with one another in toboggan races in the area around College Pond.

Horse-drawn sleighs will give free rides around the pond beginning at 1 p.m.

A fashion show, "Through the Years," will be staged in Bowker Auditorium from 1-3 p.m. The Winter Carnival Queen and her court plus 20 other UMass students will model the favorite styles of past and present.

At 1:30 p.m., men from dormitories and fraternities will compete in a log-sawing event by the College Pond.

The Boston Skating Club will give an exhibition of their talents at 3 p.m., again on College Pond.

New Frosh Honors Group Attend Mix

by JACKIE BEAVAIS '66

About 60 newly chosen members of the Freshman Honors Colloquia attended an informal faculty-student mixer Tuesday evening in the S.U. Colonial Lounge.

Dr. Louis Greenbaum, Director of Honors, welcomed the group with a talk in which he emphasized the three purposes of the Colloquia—engagement, liberation and confrontation.

Listing the fringe benefits of the program, Dr. Greenbaum mentioned free access to library stacks and a special study room in Goodell, passes to many four-college functions, and one semester hour of credit.

He also mentioned the possibility of special housing privileges for members of the Colloquia, allowing them to live together in an appointed area of the dorm.

The assembly then broke up into the four groups assigned to discuss study plans for the coming term, a convenient date for future meetings and other matters of concern with their colleagues and directors.

Cheerleader Selections To Be Made

Selection of the varsity squad of UMass cheerleaders will be made within the next three weeks, officials announced.

All university women are eligible for tryouts, and will learn the basic cheers and movements before final selection is made.

Initial meetings will be held Monday, Feb. 11 and Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 6 p.m. both days, in the WPE.

The practice session schedule will be set up to accommodate all candidates at that time.

CAR REGISTRATION

Car registration will be held on Tuesday, February 12, and Wednesday, February 13, in South lot near the ticket booth, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. On the 12th: seniors and graduate students; the 13th: all others.

"We do not believe that the defense of Europe could be organized without the presence of the United States—on the ground, in the management of the forces, and in the execution of policy."—The Earl of Home, Britains' foreign secretary.

REASON vs. EMOTION

During the course of the debate on the Judging teams' budget at Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting, one of the Senators stated that the $1500 spent to send the bands to the Villanova game last year was "squandered." While we do not agree with these sentiments, they point out a very serious problem: that some members of the Senate rely on very little reason and a good deal of emotion in their decisions on fiscal matters.

The debate on the Judging Teams and likewise that on the proposed Focus on Women was not, in our opinion, based on this reason. It was, rather, an appeal to the loyalties and emotions of the Senators. There was little mention of the amounts to be spent, or the effect of the expenditure on the budget, but rather, there was much talk of how much each would benefit the campus.

While we cannot logically oppose anything which might benefit us, we should like to question whether we have the ability to pay for all these beneficial programs. They should, we feel, be weighed against other projects also of benefit, that one which has the greatest benefit receiving the money. With the next year's budget almost certain to hit $150,000 we must be constantly on guard for unnecessary expenditures.

Therefore, in this spirit, we would ask the Senate to review its policy on such quasi-curricular organizations as the Judging Teams, the Debating Society, and perhaps even the Bands. If a university cannot afford to give its students proper training in these skills without using student tax money, then that institution is being greatly presumptuous in calling itself a University. All of these quasi-curricular organizations should be supported, at least in part, by those departments having an interest in them. —E.M.

ACTION ON CUBER

When the President of our country was faced with a Cuban show down, he turned to the remedy that had stood him in such good stead—television. He took his message to the people and the sternness of his talk had the public carrying bibles. On few occasions has a state of sheer fear been so pronounced. The nation breathlessly awaited action—or the bomb.

Our forces surrounded Cuba, ringed the world; our ultimatum was given. We would hold our ground until Russian military aid was withdrawn. At that moment, if we had chosen, we could have invaded that little thorn in our side, most likely eliminating future worry. The O.A.S. seemed behind us. Our allies were there, our action was not.

We inspected an oil tanker, stood at a distance and watched canvas covered ship decks pass by. Now we are amid a newly developing crisis situation: The Russian force is still present—and there are still those who would editorialize about our positive action. —D.B.A.

Mortar Board Comments

"Mortar Board Comments" is a weekly column written by members of Mortar Board, the Senior Woman's Honor Society. The opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily those of the Collegian.

It would seem to most people that equal rights for men and women had become an undeniable part of modern life. However, this attitude has not yet spread to the University of Massachusetts. Here, women do not enjoy the privileges given to male students.

No, we are not talking about the curfew situation. Although the curfew is perhaps the most obvious manifestation of discrimination in the treatment of the sexes here, it is by no means the only one. Lesser known, but equally important, the inequality between the men and women of our campus is pointed out in the treatment of dormitory counselors.

As every female student knows, the burden placed upon the shoulders of counselors in women's dormitories is not light. A girl counselor is responsible for caring for such things as kitchenette duty, house council, organization of dormitory events like snow sculptures, house duty, making sure that all girls are accounted for under the present curfew system, and many other unscheduled chores. These are in addition to being responsible for the girls on her corridor. Many hours a week are spent on this never-ending job—but the reward is not equivalent to the value of the work done.

Contrast the position of the male counselor. Almost completely free of the pressures involved in organizing social events for his dormitory, under no necessity to sit in a lobby and oversee the conduct of his fellow dorm members, he is responsible only for certain general tasks such as mail distribution and maintenance of order. Yet, despite the lighter work load, the male counselor receives a much greater return for his services than does his feminine counterpart. The male counselor is allowed to subtract the full price of his room from his semester bill. The woman counselor, on the other hand receives only two-thirds of her room deducted for the same period. This is equal to a monetary value of $100, as opposed to $66. Why is this the case?

Not only do the male counselors come out ahead in the money value of counseling; they also receive many valuable fringe benefits. They are allowed "car privileges"—the permission to keep a car on campus.

There is no similar privilege for female counselors. Yet, it is the women counselors who have to make innumerable trips here and there on dormitory business—buying cookies and coffee for social hours, picking up decorating materials for parties and special occasions, and so on. How often do boys use their cars for dormitory work? Is it not true that this privilege is given boys to get them to agree to be counselors?

Faced with these blatant inequalities, what makes a girl decide to apply for a counselorship? According to one high source, it is considered an 'honor' for women to be accepted as a counselor. It is an 'honor' which an increasing number of girls have been passing up, after they investigate the hours of tiresome work behind that 'honor' and the 'benefits' they get from saddling themselves with that burden.

Very few people, including the majority of women counselors, realized that this type of unjustifiable discrimination existed on campus. Both male and female counselors contacted by us believed that they were receiving equal treatment. Mortar Board asks: Why is this?

Comments by readers on this situation are most welcome.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE SAME SONG

To the Editor:

Again we have returned to the University to begin another semester. Upon opening the second issue of the Collegian for this semester, a familiar heading attracts our attention, "A Footnote to Contemporary Propaganda, by Mike Palter." Without reading the article, we can deduce the contents of Mr. Palter's discussion. Again we find Mr. Palter bewailing the ills and injustices of the American people and their government.

In this article Mr. Palter uses a substantial excuse to bring up the Cuban situation. Naturally he cannot pass up the opportunity to blame the United States for the trouble concerning Cuba. After all, the terrible crimes that American big businesses and the American government committed in Cuba were heinous and thus prompted the Cuban people to desire the Soviet government to be their rulers. The fact that the Soviets used Castro in a tremendous plot to seize Cuba is irrelevant (much has been written by Cuban refugees concerning this; e.g. the January 1963, I believe the date is, issue of the Readers Digest contained a condensed book covering this topic). Mr. Palter then inconspicuously throws in his standby adage—trust the Soviets and be nice to them. Certainly the Soviets mean no harm to the Western Hemisphere; putting missiles in Cuba in order to practically eliminate our warning time meant nothing.

I imagine that Mr. Palter is quite frustrated with the fact that there are still many Americans who display a great nationalistic spirit and who do not believe that an aggressive government can be trusted. It seems to me, however, that if people could trust their enemies as much as Mr. Palter advocates, we would presently be living in a Utopia.

So again Mr. Palter has sung the same song (the words vary). This time I have been so bold as to submit my two cents worth. Consequently I risk being labeled stupid, ignorant, etc., by Mr. Palter and his "intellectual" associates, but I really do not care.

ROBERT LEE FROST

To the Editor:

I was frankly surprised at the excellent manner in which you paid tribute to Robert Frost. The few brief lines of "Nothing Gold Can Stay" said more than any of the innumerable eulogies and tributes that have been paid to "America's unofficial poet-laureate."

I congratulate you.

Amherst College Zumbyes, is scheduled at 4 p.m. on the patio of the Student Union building.

Sunday at 2 p.m. in the cage, the weekend will climax with a concert by the Chad Mitchell Trio.

Trio To Perform

The Chad Mitchell Trio was formed at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington during the 1959 fall semester. The trio sang at campus functions and in the city, under sponsorship of a local priest, for one year. When the priest went to New York City to attend an Army Chaplain's training course the trio went with him.

Within weeks the group made appearances on the Arthur Godfrey radio show, at the East Side Supper Club, and at the Blue Angel. Before the year was out the three had appeared on a number of television shows, and to top it all off, worked with Harry Belafonte in a Carnegie Hall concert.

The Trio members, while not claiming to be "folksingers," use a considerable amount of folk material. In addition they choose songs of a topical nature, many of them satirical.

by which you can avoid intellectual isolationism ... I learn a great deal from the students."

Mr. John Weston, Assistant Professor of English, and Mr. Seymor Epstein, Professor of Psychology, are the faculty participants in the Junior Colloquium on love. Participants are reading The Art of Loving, Romeo and Juliet, Men and Women, The Way of the World and other books including those suggested by students as pertinent to a discussion.

Student participants are Richard Beane, Patricia Beccia, Judith Clark, Peter Doran, Cheryl French, Jacob Karas, Margaret Pitoniak, William Shoemaker, Michael Spencer, Arthur LaPerriere, Donald Benoit and Mark Cheren.

Mr. Epstein commented on the literature and nature of this Colloquium. "Literature takes on meaning as a vicarious experience. So frequently we will start out with something in a book and then relate it to personal experience."

A third Junior Colloquium has not yet established its topic for this semester. This particular Colloquium, which includes Mr. John Fenton, Commonwealth Professor of Government, and Mr. David Clay of the Philosophy Department, is considering the topics of crime and how it is dealt with, politics and apportionment, and the problem of how to make legislative bodies more sensitive to the will of the people.

As in all Honors Colloquia, the decision of a topic is decided mutually between students and faculty participants.

Students in this Colloquium are Francis Allard, Donald Boyd, Carol Kline, James Stevenson, Barbara Walsh, Gerald Kagan, James Bulgar, Annelies Ruthel, Manuel Smith, Mark Rothstein, Beverly Rethelhe and Patricia Howard.

A fourth Colloquium is conducting a two semester discussion of man in revolt. First semester discussions in this group centered on metaphysical revolt from the time of ancient Greece; this semester's work springs from a discussion of Marx's historical revolt.

Miss Patricia Jaeger, Assistant Professor of French, and Mr. Cecil Cody, Assistant Professor of History, are the faculty participants.

Miss Jaeger stated, "Our purpose is quite practical. We want to acquaint ourselves and our students with literature and ideas that may not have been evident before our discussion."

Interpretations Of Prof's Remarks Offered By Brigham Young Univ.

Many college professors seem to have an unerring talent for not saying exactly what they intend to say. THE DAILY UNIVERSE, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, therefore offers the following translations:

What the Professor says

"The textbook for this course will be one you will want to keep for the rest of your life."

What the professor means

The book costs $15.95, and they won't be buying it back next semester.

"My philosophy of teaching embodies the principles of certain academic disciplines."

I'm a bear!

"I appreciate your remarks; unfortunately, we don't have the time to pursue that line of thought."

Quit interrupting my lecture!

"Of course, you all know that the honor system is in effect in this classroom."

You'll notice I've passed out alternate tests, and I'll monitor the classroom.

"I know you would enjoy delving more deeply into this interesting subject."

You'll be expected to hand in at least two research papers this term.

"The final grades will be determined on a bell-shaped curve."

I plan to give one 'A' in this course.

"It might be well for me to cite one or two concrete examples of this principle."

Prepare to hear the history of my life.

"The final exam will be nothing more than a brief review."

Memorize the text book.

Watch out, though. There are same cagey professors who actually say what they mean.

Psychology Club Plans Programs For Semester

The UMass Psychology Club, under the guidance of Dr. Mahlon Wagner, has undertaken to present a vigorous program for the current semester, Club officials announced.

The first activity will be a coffee hour February 18 from 4 to 5 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of Bartlett Hall. The hour will be open to all interested.

All members of the University Psychology staff have made plans to be present at the event, Club president Harvey Kantor said. A mimeographed sheet with the names and speciality within the field of psychology of each of the professors will be given to all who attend. A club spokesman said this was intended to give those present an opportunity to discuss, with an authority, their particular interests in the field of psychology.

Freshman psychology majors, the spokesman said, are especially urged to attend the event.

Later in the semester, probably around the beginning of March, the Club will sponsor a series of lectures on career opportunities in psychology. Lecturers will speak representing different areas of psychology, enabling the listener to attain some deeper insight into the field.

Dr. Wagner, whose specialty is vision and development of food preferences, will guide the Club in a series of experiments dealing with approach-avoidance conflicts in rats.

Such a series of experiments will allow those planning a career in psychology a first-hand opportunity to plan and conduct experiments.

Other programs during the semester will include movies, guest lecturers and an Open House in the Psychology Department in the Spring.

Prof. R. A. Damon Appointed To Experimental Stat.

Dr. Richard A. Damon, Jr., professor of biostatistics in the College of Agriculture at UMass, has been appointed associate director of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, Pres. John W. Lederle, announced recently.

A member of the faculty since October of 1961, Dr. Damon will direct the research program at Amherst as well as the Waltham and Wareham field stations, according to Dean Arless A. Spielman, dean of the College of Agriculture.

Dr. Damon will continue his present work in biostatistics—the vital statistics of research—in which he will help design experiments and assist in the analysis and interpretation of resulting data.

Before joining the university staff, Dr. Damon served as a biometrician with the Agricultural Research Service of the USDA, Beltsville, Md. from 1958 to 1961. From 1951 until 1958 he was an associate professor of animal industry at Louisiana University.

RENT A BEAU

A veritable gold mine of business venture for college campuses seems to have been uncovered by a student at a Western university. Luckless and loveless coeds who wish to appear popular can rent a fraternity pin from a designated agent. The prices range from $2 to $10 a week, depending upon the standing of the fraternity. One half the fee goes to the owner of the pin, whose identity is kept a secret. The other half is profit for the originator of the scheme.

At last report, business was excellent.

AROUND THE COLLEGE CAMPI

by J.D., EXCHANGE EDITOR

Did you ever wonder where a campus newspaper gets its exchange news? Well, there are many sources, ranging from the teletype news services and the publications of the other schools to simply letters or word-of-mouth from friends at other institutions.

The two items today are from the news services, AP and UPI, respectively.

UNIVERSITY OF IOWA—This year coeds at the University were offered a special education course.

The course, called "Relaxation," is "sort of a remedial course for girls who are overly tense," stated a university official. "They just sit around and --well, you know, relax."

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS—Barbara Foster, 20, a junior at the University of Illinois, braved exposure—both to the elements and to passers-by—in an effort to save a dog marooned on an ice floe in the middle of the Potomac River.

The coed said that she was sightseeing at the Jefferson Memorial when she noticed the dog on an ice floe about 50 feet offshore. Despite the near-freezing water temperature, Miss Foster stripped to her slip and swam out to the dog; as soon as she reached the floe, however, the dog bit her. Thinking quickly, Barbara yanked off her slip and threw it over the dog's head. According to an observing police officer, at this point she was "scarcely clad" in her underwear.

Miss Foster and the dog were struggling when the ice floe began to break up. The harbor police and fire department were called, and the girl was thrown an inflated inner tube. She then scrambled ashore amid a crowd of spectators and was taken to a hospital to be treated for exposure and dog bites on both arms.

The dog disappeared in the confusion.

"Ingrate mongrel," muttered a policeman.

Dr. Fagerson Will Direct Research

Continued investigation of the role of heated hydrolyzates in the development of food flavors will be conducted by the department of food science and technology in the College of Agriculture at UMass.

Dr. Irving S. Fagerson will direct the research under a $6000 grant from the Corn Industries Research Foundation, Inc. of Washington, D.C. This is the second year his work will receive Foundation support.

Hydrolyzates are products resulting from a chemical process of decomposition involving addition of the elements of water. Heated hydrolyzates of corn, such as corn sugar and corn syrup, will be Prof. Fagerson's area of study. Corn syrup is used in baking and syrup materials react with other substances resulting in chemicals responsible for food flavors.

The Foundation's grant to UMass is part of a quarter-million-dollar research program involving 34 projects at universities and other research centers.

As we plunge into the many activities of the new semester, the sisters are happy to welcome July Rosenberg, Rochelle Simons, and Jean Zimmerman, who are back from their field work in Recreational Leadership, Judy Addelson who was away for a semester, and Judy Rosenthal who is returning from a most enjoyable and enlightening semester as an exchange student to the University of New Mexico.

Other welcome additions to the ranks are our six new pledges, Pat Flanagan, Janet Goldman, Linda Peterson, Linda Slesinger, Bobbie Smith and Rita Swartz. The house at 409 is certainly bursting at the seams.

A much belated congratulations go once again to our President Linda Lederman on being elected to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

The sisters would like to thank the brothers of ATG and SAE for two very enjoyable exchange suppers.

SIGMA KAPPA

The sisters of Sigma Kappa would like to thank Kappa Sigma for the really great exchange supper. We had a wonderful time.

It's now sculpture time and with all the snow the sisters have started building and will be working on it for the rest of the week. Also on the agenda is sing practice.

February 15 is the date set for the annual Sigma Kappa coming out party for the pledges.

Plans are being made for Sigma Kappa's pledge formal, March 9.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

As Winter Carnival weekend fast approaches, the Tri Sigmas are putting the finishing touches on the snow sculpture which they have constructed next to the Women's Physical Education building. And in the midst of sculpting we have found time to begin practicing for the Sorority Sing which is to be held soon.

A Spring Auction is in the planning stages now as a project for the new pledges. The auction will be conducted by the "new" pledges for the "old" pledges and should prove to be lots of fun. Speaking of "new" pledges, we forgot to mention Libba Johnson when we made up our list of pledges a few weeks ago.

The most important event which the Tri Sigmas are looking forward to now is Installation, at which time the pledges will at last become sisters and Sigma Sigma Sigma will no longer be a colony but a national chapter!

The time for Installation has been tentatively set for March which means that the Tri Sigmas will be very busy from now until March making preparations.

Army Shuts Out Hockey Team 9-0 For Sixth Straight Loss

by AL RICE '66

A hat trick by John Barry accounted for one-third of the West Point scoring Wednesday afternoon when the Cadets handed the UMass pucksters their sixth straight loss and second consecutive shutout. The verdict was 9-0, but it wasn't quite as bad for the Redmen as the score indicates. Mass went up against one of the powers of the ECAC on a rink 32 feet longer than the average college ice. It worked out well for the West Pointers who were in tip-top condition. The Redmen trailed by five after two periods, and finally ran out of gas in the last third of play when Army poured in four more goals.

Jerry Stonehouse, the leading West Point scorer with 39 points, registered two first period scores after Mike Thompson had registered the first tally of the game at 2:35 on a goal assisted by Johnson and Higgins. Barry then picked up his first in less than a minute into the second frame. He picked up one more in the same period and from then on, the superior forces of West Point, coached by Jack Riley, the man who led the US Olympic team to its thrilling upset victory in 1960, were in complete charge.

UMass kept scrapping all the way despite the fact they were far behind, but with only four practices after a three week layoff due to finals, and intersession the results could not have been expected to be different. The Redmen's second line was continually hustling led by Bob Lee who had a very fine game.

West Point was exceptionally anxious for a win since they are trying for a place in the post-season Eastern Collegiate tournament. They got it and it upped their home ice record to 11 straight and one loss in the past 29 at the Point.

Next week Steve Kosakowski's skaters have a full slate of three games. Monday at seven PM the Redmen play host to Connecticut at the Orr Rink at Amherst College. They then travel to Cambridge Wednesday to face MIT. The Engineers lost 6-3 to UMass in the first game of the season. Next Friday afternoon New Hampshire sends a team that beat Williams and Norwich against the Redmen at Durham.

Redmen Swimmers Meet Holy Cross

This Friday night the University's varsity swimming team will meet Holy Cross College at the Women's Physical Education building. The Redmen who beat the Coast Guard Academy in their last meet in which they took ten firsts are favored to win. The meet starts at 7:00.

Gymnasts Face Top Ranked Temple Sat.

The University of Massachusetts varsity gymnastics team seeks its second win of the season against a powerful Temple University squad Saturday afternoon at 1:15 at Curry Hicks Cage.

The Redmen, under Coach Erik Kjeldsen, stand 1-2 with a win over Ithica and losses to Southern Connecticut and Army. Temple is 3-1. The Owls have defeated Southern Connecticut, Springfield and Navy and lost their last meet to the perennial Eastern League champion, Penn State by a score of 55-41.

Temple boasts of two of the East's top gymnasts in Mark Cohn and Tom Wright. Cohn, a sophomore, is ranked first nationally on the side horse, fourth on the horizontal bar and seventh on the parallel bars according to the latest statistics just released by the National Association of Gymnastic Coaches.

Wright is ranked ninth in free exercise and the parallel bars, fourteenth on the rings, and second on the long horse. Cohn and Wright led Temple to a one-sided 65-31 win over Southern Connecticut, while the Redmen dropped a 47-49 decision to the same team.

Dave Yates is the only nationally ranked gymnast on the UMass squad. He is ranked twelfth on the long horse vault. Dave will also compete on the horizontal bar, and floor exercise events. McCracken will compete on the horizontal bar, side horse and parallel bars; and Williams will lend his efforts to the side horse, parallel bars and rings.

Yates measured up to his national ranking in long horse by taking a first place against West Point prior to the semester break. This, and a second on the parallel bars by Dave Williams, was one of the few bright spots in an otherwise dismal afternoon for the Redmen as Army won the meet by a 66.5 to 29.5 score. The UMass gymnasts performed well, but were overwhelmed by the powerful Cadet squad.

Rifle Team Nips Strong BC Shooters

by LARRY THIBERT

Saturday, the Varsity Rifle Team defeated Boston College at the Dickinson Hall rifle range.

After the match was completed, the score temporarily stood at 1,394 to 1,393 in favor of B.C. The score on a disputed B.C. target was later changed in favor of UMass. As a result of this change the official score was tied.

First attempts to break a tie score are made by totaling the official team totals in the off-hand (standing) position. On this basis UMass won the match.

Mark Nataupsky was lead man in the match with a three position score of 288. Nataupsky fired his off-hand target first and posted 92 out of a possible 100 points. He then fired a 98 in the prone position, and followed with another 98 kneeling. His total is the highest individual aggregate to be posted this season by a UMass shooter and was one point shy of the range record established by co-captain Hal Butterworth last season.

Saturday's performance puts UMass in undisputed second place for the NECRL Southern Group. The team's only defeat came at the hands of first place Northeastern by a score of 1,405 to 1,403.

UM Hoopsters Meet URI In Winter Carnival Game

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Yankee Conference basketball returns to Curry Hicks Gymnasium tomorrow night when Massachusetts hosts the front-running University of Rhode Island. This will be a return match for both clubs, Coach Ernie Calverly's Rams having won the first of the pair, 86-80, down at Kingston.

Rhody does not find itself alone at the top of the Conference pile, however. UConn also has a five win and no loss record. Up until a few days ago experts figured that these two teams would be the ones to fight it out for the YanCon championship.

But now that academic misfortunes have shelved Ram starters Charlie Lee and Dennis McGovern for the rest of the season, UConn could waltz home and the Rams could be at the mercy of the rest of the Conference pack.

Lee, a senior, led the conference in scoring in last season's campaign with a total of 179 points and an average of 17.9 points in ten games. He was also a first team All-Conference selectee last year. Before his departure he ranked fifth in Conference scoring totals for this season, averaging an even 17 points per game.

McGovern, in his first varsity season at URI, averaged 16.6 in Conference play. He was also 17th in the country in field goal percentages, hitting on 97 of 175 for .554.

Both these boys figured big in Rhode Island's win over the Redmen last month. Lee hit for 21 and McGovern for 19. With their services no longer available the work of the remaining Rams starters Steve Chulun, Fran Nightingale and Bob Logan will be that much harder.

Chulun is having a banner year against Conference opponents thus far. In five games Steve has dumped in 117 points for an average of 23.4 per game.

Nightingale, a 6-7 Soph, was highly touted in pre-season reports but still lacks the poise and experience to pick up the bulk of the slack now that Lee and McGovern are gone. Against the Redmen last month Nightingale got 7.

Bob Logan, Calverly's other veteran starter, brings a 14.2 average to Amherst tomorrow night.

Redmen Coach Matt Zunic, looking back on his team's performance against another Rhode Island team, the Providence College Friars, was far from pleased at the UMass showing. He and the Redmen have been hard at work these past few days prepping for the Rams' visit.

UMass was trailing the P.C. quintet by only one point at intermission, 37-36, Tuesday night but fell prey to excessive fouling and costly ball handling miscues that enabled the Friars to open it up in the second half and go on to pick up their 12th win of the season.

Massachusetts, incidentally, outscored P.C. from the floor 28-27. But the Friars made 26 of 31 from the line while the Redmen got to the stripe only 12 times and even then could make just five.

With its current record of 12 and 4 Providence is awaiting its perennial bid to the National Invitational Tournament at Madison Square Garden in N.Y. next month. The Friars took the tourney title back in 1961.

The latest Yankee Conference team standings and scoring records were released yesterday by Tom Doherty, Conference Publicity Director. Rhode Islands and UConn are tied for the top spot with 5 and 0 slates. UMass is second with 3 and 2. Maine is next with 2 wins and setbacks. UNH stands 1 and 4 while Vermont is sweeping the cellar with a 1 and 7 mark.

Individually, URI's Steve Chulun leads the pack in points scored with 117. Close on his heels is Jim Rick of UNH with 115. Big Ed Slomcenski of UConn has 103 for the third spot.

Two Redmen are holding down the number four and five spots. Rodger Twitchell has 100 points for 5 games for 20.0 per contest. Mike Johnson replaces Charlie Lee for the fifth spot. Mike has scored 67 in 4 games against Conference foes.

Back To The Gridiron

Getting around to football for just a moment, Maurice Zarchen, director of athletics at Rhode Island announced that John L. "Jack" Zilly has been named head grid coach at the school. After four years as assistant coach at Brown University he replaces John Chironna who resigned last month.

Zilly, a 1947 grad of Notre Dame, was mentioned for All-America honors for his grid feats while with the Irish. He saw pro service with the Los Angeles Rams for three years and with the Philadelphia Eagles for two before leaving the pro ranks for coaching.

His first stint as coach was at Montana State University. In 1956 he returned to his alma mater as one of Terry Brennan's assistants. Zilly served there for three years until going to Brown.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: BOB FISK

Bob Fisk (B.A., 1954) joined New England Telephone in Boston during 1957 and in less than three years was promoted to the position of Accounting Manager.

Quite an accomplishment when you consider Bob is responsible for the work of five supervisors and 45 employees! He needs a staff this large to handle the immense job of preparing monthly bills for southeast Boston.

Bob earned his latest promotion after outstanding performance on earlier assignments as a Supervisory Assistant and Directory Staff Assistant.

Bob Fisk and other young men like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

Members Of Maroon Key To Begin Selecting Frosh Class Successors

Members of the Maroon Key, Sophomore men's honorary society, will be starting to choose their successors from this year's Freshman class, by next week Key officers have announced.

Key spokesmen strongly urge all interested Freshmen with a 2.0 or better cumulative average to take out application papers, which will soon be available. Further details will appear in future issues of the Collegian.

Members can be identified by the distinctive Key emblem worn on blue blazers, and by white Sophomore hats with the maroon stripes and key.

The Maroon Key Society was founded in 1927 by Adelphia, the senior men's honorary society, in order to fulfill the need for an underclass men's honorary society. In the original concept, the society contained but seven men. Through the years, however, it has grown with the University so that now it contains 25 members.

The original purposes and goals of the organization were broad and allowed room for future growth and development. In essence, these goals were first, to recognize potential qualities of leadership, scholarship and good character in Freshman men and secondly, to foster good fellowship among the entire student body.

During the years, with each increase in the number of members in the Society, its specific tasks have also widened. The Maroon Key now acts as the official host of the University to all visiting athletic teams. In addition, Keys are now appointed to the Centennial Committee, the Campus Chest Committee, The Rally Committee, and numerous other committees.

Working closely with the other Honor Societies, the Key aided in Freshman hazing this fall. They also worked with Adelphia in the "Freshman Talks". In addition, the Key stands ready at all times to assist in programs designed to strengthen all phases of student life.

He said he felt the place for challenging appointments was on the floor of the Senate.

The class structure would be changed under a bill filed by Senate Treasurer Jon Fife. The change, Fife claimed, would "establish a more equitable distribution of financial management and responsibility within the class structure."

The bill was tabled to a special constitutional convention to be held this Wednesday. This convention is to include the entire Senate and all class officers.

Election Rules Discussed

Election rules, too, came onto the floor. A series of changes in the election laws sponsored by Senators Phil Howard, David Mathieson, and Ross Jones would strengthen present laws and would somewhat revise the structure of the elections committee.

In accordance with the law, the bill was tabled for one week, to be brought to the floor and voted upon at the next meeting.

The final motion on the agenda was a category change which would enable the Women's Affairs committee to sponsor the Centennial Focus on Women convocation. The motion was opposed by Senator Fife who claimed that the bill was just a different way to pass a motion previously defeated. (The Convocation appropriation was defeated earlier in the year by the same Senate.)

Proponents of the bill pointed out the far reaching benefits to the women of the University and the bill was passed with a substantial plurality.

Centennial Winter Carnival Attracts Record Crowd

S.U. Director of University Program Office Harold W. Watts and Reveler Judy Clarke are getting "fun out of life" at the Winter Carni events Saturday.

"The largest Winter Carnival attendance ever," University officials termed this past weekend's crowds. A Collegian estimate of 43,000 at Carni events is the largest attendance ever reported.

3000 At 'Chute Jump

An estimated 3000 were present at Saturday afternoon's spectator events. Three members of the UMass Parachute Club staged a jumping exhibition at the campus pond. Following that, the Musigals, Statesmen and Amherst Zumbyes gave a concert on the South Patio of the S.U.

Carni ended yesterday afternoon with the Winter Carni Jazz Concert. About 3500 persons heard the Chad Mitchell Trio perform in the Cage.

The weekend wick-off was Friday night when a capacity crowd danced to the music of Buddy Morrow in the S.U. ballroom and saw Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti crown Miss Carol Ricci Winter Carni Queen of 1963. Runners-up in the contest were Lee Davis, Janice Kwaplen and Ellen Swartz.

Fraternity snow sculpture winner—Theta Chi's entry.

Snow sculptures entered in the Carni Sculpture Contest drew large crowds Saturday and Sunday. Winners for the sorority contest were: Tri Sigma, first; SDT, second; Pi Phi, third. Winners for the girls' dorms were: Thatcher, first; Hamlin, second; Crabtree, third. Winners in the fraternity battle were: Theta Chi, first; Alpha Sigma Phi, second; TKE, third. Boys' dorms winners were: Greenough, first; Brett, second; Chadbourne, third.

LCA Toboggan Winner

Fraternities and sororities competed for awards in toboggan races Saturday morning. Fraternity winners were Lambda Chi Alpha, first; TKE, second; and Beta Kappa Phi, third. Sorority winners were Kappa Alpha Theta, first; Sigma Kappa, second; and Kappa Kappa Gamma, third.

Men's dormitories and fraternities participated in a log-sawing contest Saturday afternoon. Dorm winners were Middlesex, first; Hills North, second; and Butterfield, third. Fraternity awards went to ATG, first; Alpha Sigma Phi, second; and SAE, third.

Grads Take Business, Politics Rough—Bellotti

by JOE BRADLEY '64

"A young college graduate looks at a political campaign, and then goes into engineering where he won't get his head knocked off." Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti said Friday night.

Bellotti made the statement in an interview in the Colonial Lounge before crowning Carole Ricci '66 Carni queen at the Carni Ball.

He said private business offered more security and less chance of "vilification", and for this reason many trained youth turn their backs on a political career.

"I intend to bring four or five students from colleges within commuting distance of the State House to discuss state government in the form of a seminar," he said.

Bellotti said he believed this would help bring young college graduates into government. "You need the old pros," he said, "but younger men have the fresh ideas we need in government."

Bellotti, who has ten children, expressed his desire for inexpensive education. "Small government can't handle the needs of education today. Both federal and state government will have to join forces to provide funds in the forms of scholarships and loan programs to insure consistently high standards of education," Bellotti maintained.

Bellotti, who is honorary co-chairman of the International Student Employment Committee, said there is a need now for a state agency to collate information on the number, availability, and types of scholarship for higher education.

"We must promote a desire for education and the acquisition of knowledge, if we expect to provide for the future," he said.

Don't forget the Distinguished Visitors Program tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the S.U. Balloom. Newscaster Eric Sevareid will talk on "The Shape of Things To Come". Admission will be by ID.

The lecture will be a memorial program for the late Sterling Surry, Professor of General Business and Finance at UMass. This is the third DVP event of the current academic year.

Newman Club Elects '63 Officers

Newman Club officers for the coming year were elected last Tuesday night at a general meeting in the Dining Commons. Six members were selected to hold office for one year starting this month.

Elected to office were Bernard Harland '64, president; James Mulcahy '64, first vice president; Janet Conlon '64, corresponding secretary; Edith Leahy '64, recording secretary; Kathleen Reagan '64, second vice president; Carol Johnson '65, treasurer.

While votes were being counted, all members were urged to attend the annual Newman Club retreats. The men's retreat will be held at the Passionist Monastery in West Springfield. The women will be accommodated at the Cenacle Cloister in Lancaster.

Both retreats start Friday, Feb. 22 and end Sunday, Feb. 24. Those interested should contact their dorm captains or the Newman Club office.

Roister Doisters Announce Merger With Univ. Theatre

by ANN MILLER '64

Roister Doisters, UMass student theatre group for 52 years, have announced their merger with the university's newly inaugurated University Theatre. Though still an RSO group with their own budget and constitution, RD's has reorganized to become a co-curricular organization.

An RD spokesman said the decision to merge was made by the group's executive board because they felt it would be "advantageous to work hand-in-glove with the academic theatre department". The interests and desires of both groups, the spokesman pointed out, are almost identical.

The University Theatre, formed at the beginning of this academic year under the Speech Department, is responsible for developing a department of the theatre on the UMass campus. To date they have presented two student productions, Oedipus Rex and Tartuffe, for the campus audience.

Under the new arrangement, RD members will assist in all University Theatre undertakings, though receiving no academic credit unless they are working on the production as part of a theatre course.

A newly created Production Board to work on University Theatre productions will be comprised of the RD executive board, heads of the various stage and production committees and the University Theatre's technical director, Terry Wells.

The RD spokesman said that RD's would continue to produce independent laboratory theatre and children's theatre productions.

Membership in the Roister Doister's is still open to any undergradaute or Stockbridge student interested in stage and technical or acting work in theatre production.

Membership is earned by working on a minimum of three shows and thus accumulating the required number of points necessary for RD membership.

Officers of the group are President George Bergen, Vice President Dave Manley, Secretary Elaine Armstrong, Student Technical Director Sheila Ferrini and Director of Public Relations Judy Noren.

Advisors to the RSO group are RSO Business Advisor Edward Buck and Albert Madeira of the University's English Department.

"Partnership is not furthered by the sudden and unilateral abrogation, without consultation, of an understanding to supply a weapon around which the strategic forces of our closest ally, Great Britain, were to be built. Unity is not enhanced by interfering publicly in the sensitive domestic issues of our northern neighbor, Canada."—New York's Governor, Nelson Rockefeller.

A DECISION

As the University of Massachusetts grows, it is assumed that student organizations such as the Collegian will also grow. There will not only be growth with respect to membership, but also with respect to scope.

What is the purpose of the Collegian? This question would undoubtedly draw a varied number of opinions. The present Executive Board has attempted to present as complete as possible a view of the University. This entails, in part, being a bulletin board. The Collegian is a publicity organ where students and faculty can find out what is going on.

But certainly the Collegian is more than just a bulletin board. We present news, features, and (to a varying extent) filler material. To imply that the entire paper is filled with outstanding news, feature, or publicity articles would not be the truth. We frankly admit that staff limitations force us to use a small amount of filler. It must be noted, however, that the amount of filler material used this year has sharply declined and many issues have contained no filler at all. This may be taken as a sign of growth. We are ironing out details and solving the problems which are inherited by each new executive staff.

It is not unreasonable to assume that if the Collegian maintains its present format that we may soon reach our maximum potential.

In other words, if the Collegian remains an entirely campus-oriented newspaper (with the exception of the editorial page), then the only task of future editors will be to "iron out the bugs."

The time has come to make a decision. For at least the last year the editorial page has taken on an interest in non-campus issues. The emphasis, however, has remained centered around campus pond. The recent addition of the Washington Press Service has also drawn some of the focus of the Collegian to issue outside of Amherst.

The Collegian is going to begin an experiment in a short time to help us make a decision on a most important matter. We are going to begin using a national press service. We intend to keep the emphasis of the paper on campus news, but the experiment will determine if we should also include other types of news and feature articles. The decision that must be reached is whether or not the Collegian should expand its scope—will we become more than just a campus newspaper?

Since the Collegian is really the students' newspaper, it is quite natural that the ultimate decision in this matter will rest with the students. We ask that Collegian readers examine the "new" format when it appears (the exact date will be announced shortly) and decide just what kind of newspaper you want.

ASTERISK —

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

"When a few of the freshman girls looked back at their notes, they saw that you could have taken them two ways." —A Co-ed

Except for Louis Lyons and Robert Barrom of WGBH, nobody seemed to care about the case of Prof. Edmund S. Izzo of Salem State College. The newspapers didn't care. The radio and television stations didn't care. And, it appears, most of the students at Salem State didn't really care.

Izzo, a teacher of history, had been suspended in January following a report that he had "a record of past Communist affiliations." At a previous "hearing," at which time he was not teaching, Izzo had admitted to being a Communist prior to 1956. Saturday, Professor Izzo was reinstated by the Massachusetts Board of Education.

Thus, the case which threatened to stimulate another miniature witch-hunt fades into obscurity. Yet the slag does not dissipate. The hands of the Massachusetts State Legislature and the Board of Education are once again cleansed upon good-conscience. This is not to say that the teacher should not have been reinstated. Yet the price which the academic community has paid for this gain is high.

Once again we have invaded the right of conscience. Once again we have reasserted the unpleasant fact that in some places the desirability of a teacher hinges upon his political leanings.

In the State of Massachusetts, not five voices of sanity could be heard over the quiet roar of the Izzo case. In light of this, one can not escape the sad conclusion that the academic community continues to live in a state of fear engendered by the honorable Mr. McCarthy and sustained by the unusual needs of a cold war.

ADVISOR SYSTEM

There have been many comments on the advisor system here at the University. While most students do receive a minimum of at least adequate advice, there are still others who do not. As has been pointed out before, the problem is not that the advisors are not willing to help out; the truth is that sometimes they are not able if for no other reason than the fact that it is almost impossible to keep track of the numerous curriculum changes that come about each year.

Our advisors are also burdened with a very large number of advisees. We wonder if the University administration is thinking about this problem. As student enrollment increases, faculty will also increase. But these new faculty members will be unfamiliar with UMass courses and problems. It would be unfair to assign new students to new advisors. It would also be unfair to assign the extra students to old advisors who are too heavily burdened now.

If the University plans to maintain the present system of faculty advisors, (which even with its defects is quite useful) then how does it plan to cope with this problem? A realistic solution must be proposed within a very few months or the expected 2,400 members of the class of 1967 may get off to a bad start.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

IMPROVED PROGRAMMING?

To the Editor:

According to the February 6th Collegian article, WMUA promises us the best programming yet for the new semester. My introduction to this new and better programming was the Saturday morning Coffee on Campus Show. The predominant theme of the program consisted of recurring peculiar sounds of something—perhaps a baby's squeaking toy—which occurred so frequently I began to wonder about the announcer who seemed to be responsible for these noises. Is this an example of their improved standards of programming?

L.K.

IS THE CREDIT SYSTEM JUST?

To the Editor:

In trying to prophesy on my semester average—I began to wonder if our credit system is just. Is the student given 4 credits for a bonus for some of the sciences because of the extra work involved? If so, isn't this a penalty for those who get a C or less? Seeing some of these courses are required for certain majors and are not directly related to the major or the student's ability in his chosen field—shouldn't the student at least be able to choose if he wants 3 or 4 credits?

N.M.

COMMENTS ON COMMENTS

To the Editor:

I was quite pleased to read "Mortar Board Comments" in the last issue of the Collegian. I was considering the "honor" of becoming a counselor myself, but when I found out just how much work was involved I decided that it just was not worth the bother.

In addition to the many extra responsibilities that Women counselors must shoulder, there is another aspect to the problem. Men counselors do not have to "father" the men, but women counselors must "mother" many of the women. I am quite sure that all of the counselors in the women's dorms will agree with me on this point.

The Mortar Board has done a great service to the women counselors at this University, and I certainly hope that University officials will do something about the situation.

P.L.

To the Editor:

Three cheers for Mortar Board: The inequality of treatment between men and women counselors is unfair and unjustified. Now that the situation has been exposed there is no reason why it should not be remedied in the immediate future.

Hill, Twitchell, Lead Redmen To 68-65 Win Over Rams

UMass Win Gives UConn Undisputed YanCon Lead

by STEVE HEWEY '63

A clutch performance by guard Clarence Hill in the closing minutes of the game enabled the University of Massachusetts to squeeze out a hard-fought win over the University of Rhode Island, 68-65, Saturday night. It was the first time this season that Rhody has bowed to a Yankee Conference opponent.

Hill, a stellar performer both ways throughout the contest ended up as high man for the UMass five with 24 points.

Even before the contest got under way there was tension in the air and one could almost sense that it was going to be a thriller. A near capacity crowd of Winter Carnival celebrants was hungry for a Redmen win and began a rhythmic clapping as the players lined up.

Clarence Hill got the scoring underway sending UMass out in front 3-0. He and Rodger Twitchell kept the match a nip and tuck affair with the Rams duo of Bob Logan and Fran Nightingale.

UMass regained its early three point lead at the 12:40 mark when a pair of Twitchell free throws made the score 12-9. Bob Logan, hot as a pistol throughout the first half, hit on one of his many long bombs at this point to leave Rhody one shy, 12-11.

A Twitchell layup and Charlie O'Rourke's two-point donation at the line sent UM out in front by five, 16-11. They were ahead 23-17 when a couple of Logan long jumpers cut the gap to two, 23-21, with 6:59 left.

Hill built the UMass command to five, 28-23, on a layup only to have URI's high scoring ace, Steve Chubin, cut the margin to three with his first points of the night, a pair of free throws.

Chubin added two more from the line a couple of minutes later to enable Rhode Island to go in front, 31-30. Rodger Twitchell's layup made it 32-21, UM, only to have Chubin hit on a jumper to send URI ahead 33-32. Twitchell made the score 34-33 but Chubin let go with a 30 footer just as the buzzer sounded and swished it to enable Rhody to head for the locker room with a 35-34 lead.

UMass went right to work at the start of the second half, regained their lead and never fell behind after that but there were still some hectic moments before the final buzzer.

Big factors in the Redmen surge in the second half were the work of Hill at the line and the board play of Twitchell. Rodger who grabbed 20 rebounds for the night, took a pounding by the Ram front court. But he was able to score important layups from underneath that aided in building a 54-43 lead with 11 minutes remaining.

Rodger Twitchell battles it out on the ground for possession of the ball with two Rams players. Twitchell's twenty points and twenty rebounds earned him special praise after the game from Redmen coach Matt Zunic.

Redmen Clarence Hill outjumps all opposition to bring down another rebound. Hill's high jumping antics, in addition to his excellent shooting, enabled the Redmen to eke out a three-point victory margin over the Rhody Rams.

Rhode Island was not about to go under without a fight. Steve Chubin put together a one-man rally including a pair of back-to-back three-point plays. Suddenly URI was only one point down, 56-55. From then on it was all heart-pounding.

Charlie Kingston and Clarence Hill relieved the pressure for UMass temporarily with a pair of baskets to give them a 64-59 edge with 2:31 left. But Logan connected with a 20-foot jumper and Chubin executed a steal and layup to bring Rhody back to within one, 64-63.

Clarence Hill made two from the line but Chubin scored on a layup and the count was 66-65, UMass, with 1:24 left. Chubin had a chance to tie it up at the line but missed, UM getting the ball.

The Redmen, in possession with a minute to go, started to freeze the ball. Pete Bernard decided to let go with a shot that missed everything and URI got the rebound.

Rhode Island was trying to set up Chubin for the last shot but Fran Nightingale let the ball slip out of bounds. Dennis Dillon stole the in-bounds pass, tossed to Ram guard Ron Rothstein, who had his shot batted away and out of bounds by Bernard with 17 seconds to go.

Clarence Hill stole the in-bounds pass from Logan and was going in for the layup when Logan fouled him. Hill stepped to the line and converted both to make the score 68-65.

Rhode Island, bringing the ball back up court, had it taken away by Pete Bernard who was fouled in the process. Bernard missed the first of a one and one attempt but Twitchell was there for the rebound and held on to it as the final seconds ticked off.

Redman Coach Matt Zunic, obviously happy after his team's final showing, conceded that the Rams are still a tough club even without Charlie Lee and Dennis McGovern around. He also had words of praise for Twitchell for his fine all around show.

One thing Zunic singled out about the game was the response of the crowd. "Their cheering helped us out a lot out there," he stated, "and when UConn comes in here Tuesday night I hope to hear a lot more of the same. It'll really help."

The Redmen win over Rhode Island and UConn's trouncing of Maine Saturday night gives UConn sole possession of first place in the Conference standings. The Huskies are now 6-0 in the Conference. Rhode Island is second, 5 and 1, and UMass third, 4 and 2.

One of the two UMass Conference losses was an 85-61 setback by UConn down at Storrs in December. Tuesday night the Huskies will be in town and the Redmen will have their chance for revenge.

UM Gymnasts Overpowered By Strong Temple Squad

A large Winter-Carnival crowd of over four hundred people witnessed the University of Massachusetts varsity gymnastic squad suffer its third defeat of the year, its second loss at home, on Saturday to a powerful Temple University team.

The men from Philadelphia swept all of the six first place positions, three of the second place berths and four of the third place spots.

Leading the Temple attack was dimunitive Mark Cohn. What Cohn lacked in size he made up in sheer power and grace, and was undoubtedly the best all-around gymnast on the floor.

Cohn started off the afternoon by executing some of the most difficult and beautiful moves on the side horse, thus earning himself a first place in that event. Second and third places were copped by Cohn's teammates Barry Weissman and Ed Cumiskey, with UMass' Dave Williams following in fouth place.

A springier than what they were used to high bar, did not deter Temple from its winning ways and once again a Temple man, Dick Phillips, took first place. The Redmen's Dave Yates proved to be strong competition and won his first second place berth of the afternoon with Bruce McCracken following two spots behind in fourth.

The long horse competition proved to be a big disappointment for the UMass fans when Dave Yates, entering the meet as the twelfth ranking collegiate in this event, after executing a brilliant first vault had some tough luck on his second and thus had to settle for a disappointing fifth place while teammates Felix Mosakewicz and Tom Astaldi took third and fourth places respectively.

Temple's Cohn reappeared on the scene and easily won first place in parallel bar competition. High point in this event for much of the UMass crowd was an excellent routine by Dave Williams which gave the UMass preformer a third place.

Williams was again a UMass standout in the next event, the rings. Dave, with another fine routine managed to take second place, but was even then far outshone by Temple's Barry Weissman who put on a great display of strength and skill in a routine which among other things featured the highly difficult Olympic Cross.

The last event of the afternoon, the floor exercise, the Redmen's Dave Yates was a standout as he took the second place berth, but once again it was Temple's Cohn who won the event, making it his third victory of the day and winding up the Temple sweep. Final score Temple 63—UMass 33.

by J.D., EXCHANGE EDITOR

The powerful Southern Association of Colleges and Schools has put all of Mississippi's state colleges and universities on strict probation with a warning that accredation may be lifted at any time.

The action was, in effect, a warning to state legislators, politicians, and pressure groups. It was also a demand that student discipline be maintained. It stemmed directly from the riots on the University of Mississippi campus this fall.

UNIVERSITY OF MAINE—The University's Board of Trustees has recommended that the local SAE house be closed and its charter revoked. The reason? The fraternity had repeatedly violated the University's "no drinking" rule and other regulations. Despite warnings, beer had been served to freshmen at an open rushing party at the SAE house.

MONMOUTH COLLEGE — The campus newspaper, The Outlook, recently sponsored a contest for the ugliest man on campus. Candidates were nominated by student organizations, and candidates were to appear as outlandishly costumed as possible. Votes were cast in the form of coins, to be donated to the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame at Springfield College.

UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI — A 20-man expedition, headed by Dr. R. M. Emerson, associate professor of sociology, will attempt to reach the peak of Mt. Everest this spring. Dr. Emerson will be engaged in sociological research, observing the reactions of the climbers when faced with uncertainty and great tension.

Traveling Profs – History's Quint, Potash

by LAURA GOLDMAN '63

The UMass History Department is a "traveling department."

Among those on leave from the University last year were Dr. Quint, chairman of the Department, who held a Fulbright Professorship at the Johns Hopkins Center of the School of Advanced International Studies located in Bologna, Italy, and Dr. Robert Potash, who was in Argentina on sabbatical leave last year and held Social Science Research Council and Organization of American States grants for preparation of a book on recent Argentine history.

In the course of their work last year the professors had opportunities to observe student life in the University of Bologna, the oldest university in the western world, and the National University of Buenos Aires, respectively.

Difference In Exam Methods

One fundamental difference between American universities and those in other countries is the examination system.

Dr. Quint commented that students in Italian universities procrastinate more than UMass'ers since they have one set of exams, only—at the end of the year.

Italian students consider childish, he said, the American system of daily assignments and papers. They cherish the freedom of the University, since their secondary schools are much more disciplined than ours.

All examinations are given orally in the universities, and exam day is complete confusion. Students can stand all day outside a professor's office waiting to be called for examination.

Dr. Potash said he found chance playing a greater role in aiding students in Argentina pass exams than at UMass. Exams cover only a fraction of the topics covered in the courses students follow through the year. The student selects these topics by a lottery immediately before he must undergo questioning by a jury of three faculty members.

Those unlucky enough to pick their weakest subjects contribute to the number of "perennial students," for there is no limit to the number of years that students may stay at a university.

Student-Teacher Contact Minimal

Student-teacher contact is minimal in Argentina and in Italy. Straight lecture in huge classes is the rule. The teacher is often unavailable outside the class because the salary often makes it necessary for him to hold more than one job.

Dr. Quint observed that although Italian professors are adequately paid each department generally allows only one person the classification of professor. All the others are "assistants" and are poorly paid. Because there are few universities in relation to the population, competition is fierce for professorial chairs, which carry great prestige for the holders.

In Argentina, Dr. Potash said he also found titles important. Although Argentina has the highest adult literacy rate in South America (85%), the number of graduates of secondary schools and of universities is so limited that degrees and titles contribute significantly to one's social status and are customarily displayed.

The title professor indicates a teacher in the secondary schools (which are attended somewhat longer than in the U.S. and which demand a command of encyclopedia details far greater than the American high school.

Students Active Politically

Many university students in Argentina and Italy are actively committed to politics, for they have a real power. South American students elect student representatives who, together with alumni and faculty, decide university policies and even elect the Rector or University President!

Campuses often become political battlefields. There is a close affiliation between national political parties and student organizations.

Students have a strong sense of being members of a Union, and have not hesitated to go on strike against stiffening of requirements because they felt it an anti-democratic change.

Although this arrangement of student power may appear idyllic to American students, it can be a real burden to South American students.

Senate To Discuss New Constitution

Members of the Student Senate and the campus' 16 class officers will assemble for a constitutional convention tonight to discuss revision of the Student Government Constitution, according to the provisions of S-48, a bill introduced on the Senate floor last week.

Four Plans Suggested

Four plans to meet the needs of proper financial procedure within the class governmental structure have been suggested to President Don Cournoyer by the R.S.O. committee and will be topics of discussion at tonight's convention.

Election or Appointment

Plans A and B both provide for the election of class officers, the management of all class activities by an executive committee acting through the executive functions of the class officers, and the adoption of appropriate rules and regulations parallel with organization of the Student Senate. Plan A provides for the election of an executive committee, while Plan B provides for its appointment.

Fiscal Regulation Considered

Plans C and D provide for the election of class officers and the naming of class members to serve on the committee with the class officers by election and appointment, respectively. In addition, they suggest that the management of all fiscal affairs of the class be effected by the committee acting through the executive functions of the class officers, and that in matters not affecting class fiscal affairs the committee will serve in advisory capacity only. Finally, they provide for rules and regulations relating to fiscal matters to be adopted parallel with organization of the Student Senate.

Members of the R.S.O. committee made no recommendations concerning which of these plans the Senate should choose.

A Senate spokesman said one of the plans would definitely be chosen at tonight's meeting.

WMUA Airs Documentary Jazz Series

WMUA's Sounds of Jazz will present a six-week series dealing with the evolution of jazz starting tonight and continuing on Wednesday nights.

Entitled "A Jazz Primer", the series will outline the art from its formative elements through its present proponents.

The purpose of the series is to acquaint the listener with one of America's important original contributions to the world of culture. It is intended for the jazz neophyte as well as for the jazz follower.

Six Students Will Participate In General Assembly Program

by Elwin McNamara '64

Six members of the Student Senate will journey to Washington D.C. next week to participate in a model General Assembly, Senate Public Relations Chairman Marilyn Singer has announced.

The four-day program, which is sponsored by Georgetown University, is designed to bring students from the many colleges and universities across the country together in a study of world problems, she said. The program will begin Feb. 21 with a Congressional reception.

The delegates will meet in committees, and from there will debate their decisions on the floor of the "General Assembly".

The delegation from the University will consist of three seniors: Senate President Don Cournoyer, Senate Vice President Betsy Robicheau, Senate Secretary Dolores Matthews; two juniors: Senate Treasurer Jon Fife and Bob Brauer; and one sophomore, Marilyn Singer.

In their role as representatives of Canada, the delegates are presently receiving briefings on Canadian policy from Prof. John Harris, head of the government department and expert in the field of Canadian affairs, Senator Singer said. In addition, the delegation will receive a further briefing from the Canadian embassy on their arrival in Washington.

Senate President Cournoyer has described the invitation to participate "a privilege" and said it is "the first of many opportunities which will enable the University to be recognized on a national scale."

According to Senator Singer, the program will be covered by Life magazine and by the Washington press corps.

During their stay in the nation's capital, the delegation hopes to meet with state congressional leaders and to tour the White House.

In an appraisal of the trip's values, Senator Singer said: "The main value of the trip is that we are given the opportunity to carry the prestige of the University with us. We hope to bring even more respect to our University, which it rightly deserves."

Famed String Quartet In Concert Tomorrow

The UMass Concert Association will present a concert by the Paganini Quartet tomorrow evening, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Hall auditorium.

The quartet's appearance will be the final program of the chamber series presented by the University's Concert Association during this academic year.

The quartet will perform Schubert's Quartet in A Minor, Op. 29; Bartok's Quaretet No. 6 and Debussy's Quartet in G Minor, Op. 10.

The public is cordially invited. Tickets may be purchased at the door. Students will be admitted by I.D.

Henri Temianka, Stefan Krayk, Albert Gillis and Lucien Laporte make up the Paganini Quartet. Their instruments are four famous Stradivarii once owned and cherished by the legendary Nicolo Paganini.

Since first appearing in 1946, the quartet has played more than 1,000 engagements in the U.S., Canada, Europe and South America. The four master musicians have played at the Edinburgh Festival, the Berlin Festival, and to a packed house at the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires.

In this country, the group has received accolades from such eminent critics as Harold C. Schonberg of the New York Times, Alexander Fried of the San Francisco Examiner, and Robert Parris of the Washington Post.

"Behind the Scenes" Discussion

Ex-Gov. Furcolo Critizes Bay State Critics

by Russell Murphy '66

"Unfortunately people who live in Massachusetts get sensational headlines outside the state solely by talking about the bad things of Massachusetts," former governor Foster Furcolo noted.

He went on in a talk here Monday to point out in rebuttal that Massachusetts has been singled out for its fair civil rights, its excellent program for the aged, its fine mental health facilities, and the high value of its labor force.

Furcolo, under the joint sponsorship of UMass' Department of Government and the Political Science Association, led a discussion on campus Monday afternoon. The discussion, "Behind the Scenes at the Governor's Office," was held in the Council Chambers of the SU.

After being introduced, the governor announced that rather than give a prepared lecture, as had been announced, he would entertain questions from the audience, particularly those concerning the state's executive department.

The first and several subsequent questions concerned the so-called "sale"of judgeships and how the practice may be remedied. The former governor noted that if by "sale" one means the exchange of money, it can't be legislatively remedied, but if one means handing out judgeships as political favors, a better means of making appointments can be sought.

Furcolo then elaborated on several of the methods he had used in trying to be fair about all executive appointments.

In reply to a question concerning his purported attempt to appoint himself to a U. S. Senate seat which was being vacated near the close of his term, the governor denied the attempt, stating that because of his being defeated in a primary bid for the Senate he felt he should not take the seat being vacated. "Don't take as gospel truth whatever you see printed," he quipped.

The governor was non-committal on abolishing the Governor's Council, noting that one should first consider what will replace it. He came out wholeheartedly in favor of instituting a four-year governor's term.

He also termed former Gov. Volpe's appointment of Bishop Weldon of Springfield to the UMass Board of Trustees as "excellent" when asked to comment on it.

In further questions the governor touched upon property tax relief, sales tax, a state lottery, and a constitutional convention.

When asked about a newspaper article stating he planned to re-enter politics, the governor stated he had "read the same article, too," and announced he had no political plans for the future.

Gov. Furcolo served as a U. S. representative and treasurer of Massachusetts before becoming governor in 1957. He retired from politics in 1960 after being defeated in a primary bid for Sen. Saltonstall's Senate seat.

Governor Furcolo talks with students at the informal discussion period which preceded his talk yesterday afternoon. With him are (l. to r.) Charles Hadley, Mrs. Furcolo, and Lawrence Popple.

"No countries (the major powers of Europe) have more to lose should America under any administration be almost forced into isolation by the slighting attitude of Europe and European statesmen."—Prime Minister MacMillan

Constitutional Convention

Tonight's constitutional convention is one of the most constructive moves that the Student Senate has made in a long time. The various plans of S48 (see page 1) all have one purpose: to provide a long overdue spring cleaning to student government with regard to class structure.

There are two main points brought out in the four alternate plans of S48: should the executive committees be appointed or elected, and should the class officers, the executive committee or both have responsibility for fiscal matters.

The four plans are not the only ones that will be considered tonight. Alternate plans are already in the offing, and with this fact in mind we would propose a plan of our own.

With regard to the executive committee: we feel that this important committee should not be comprised of all elected members simply because we feel that such an election would merely be a popularity contest to pick the ten or so best known names of the class. We also feel that to elect an executive committee that does not see "eye to eye" with the class officers would be a great hindrance to the class as a whole.

Nor do we feel that all of the members of the executive committee should be appointed since such an appointee would be responsible to the class officers and thus the class officers would retain control of the executive committee.

We propose that the executive committee be composed of two-thirds appointed members, and one third elected members plus all of the class senators who would be ex officio members. In this way the committee would be comprised of about half elected members and half appointed members and would combine the best features of each method of selection.

With regard to fiscal responsibility: we do not feel that the class officers should be solely responsible for appropriation of class funds. Since the class officers are responsible only to themselves (with regard to executive capacity as opposed to matters of conscience), then the members of a class have no safeguard that the best interests of that class will be maintained.

Nor do we feel that the executive committee should be responsible for all fiscal matters since the group would be hindered by the very fact of its size in making decisions. It would also be quite difficult to convene this group each time a fiscal decision had to be reached.

So once again we propose a compromise. Allow the class officers to retain fiscal responsibility, with the following two stipulations: one, that a fiscal decision by the class officers could be over-ridden by a two-thirds majority of the executive council; and two, that an arbitrary limit be placed by the executive committee on how much money the class officers can appropriate without consulting the executive committee. The reason for this later stipulation is rather obvious; the class officers could spend a few thousand dollars before the executive committee could convene to decide whether or not they approved of the appropriation. This system of checks and balances has worked very well in another well known governmental system, and we are sure that it would work well here.

Once again we compliment the Student Senate on initiating an outstanding action.

We feel this to be a sign of the growing maturity of the Senate, and we feel confident that President Cournoyer's promise to "make the Senate roll" will be kept.

by G. MASSELAM

Before the snow lay on the ground and the air was chilled I was returning to my dorm from the Student Union when I noticed down by the pond a person sitting alone. As I got closer to her I noticed that she was crying. I walked by as inconspicuously as I could, but I couldn't forget what I saw. Somewhere in this huge mechanical institution, where thousands come and thousands go, where the world hasn't got a chance of standing still, where lecture halls of two or three hundred loom over the individual, one girl, one individual cries. Maybe she had just had an argument with her boy friend, maybe she flunked an exam. Possibly she was lonely.

How does one describe loneliness? Why should anyone write about it? Perhaps because it has become more and more associated with growing up in our complex industrial society. There isn't anyone who has escaped the isolation of being alone and the trenchant hopelessness of living. But in the midst of this aloneness, society has developed certain institutions which has the purpose of increasing communication between individuals and groups of thought; of breaking down these barriers and enhancing relationships. In order to deal with the aloneness there has to be a self learning. Thus we have the University as a place where individuals may come together to learn about themselves in one way or another. Either in Psychology, Sociology, Political Science, History or the Arts students learn where they exist in relation to themselves or the rest of society. Even in the physical sciences or the biological science we begin to become aware of ourselves in relation to nature and all its intricacies.

As we leave our families and come to college, we begin to feel our own identity. We learn that whatever we do now is of our own choosing, whether it be our studies or the groups we tend to belong to. Now we have the choice of being religious or a-religious. Thus we have these many groups to choose from. Our social lives can be full due to an even balance of both sexes. But if campus participation is analyzed we find that there is only a small minority which take part in campus organization and in social activities.

Because of this lack of vitality and loneliness in our society there grows a fear of reaching out to meet one's needs; to organize and structure one's own life. Thus it becomes the part of the University to arrange campus life so that people coming to school are encouraged to get involved not only in the campus organizations but also in their personal social lives. This problem wouldn't be quite so bad if UMass was smaller. But the fact is that the University is growing larger and larger as the years go on. Yet as each freshman class enters the school they go on without anybody activating an interest just in them. Only a few do become involved. Thus there are two levels. A small minority joining groups and another huge group of people who never are encouraged to get involved in any sort of activity. Someone may argue "Well we're big boys and girls now, etc." This may be true, but the fact is that people aren't expanding their horizons. This is the problem.

Who knows about the sadness of those individuals, here only one or two semesters, who have to leave? Is there anybody who cares? Why is it our University depends on flunking out huge numbers of people, people who cry, who sometimes don't want to leave? Is this due to living conditions? Is it due to the severity of courses? Is it due to the quality of those accepted? It is due to a lack of interest and concern in the individual!

Where does the answer lie? Perhaps one place is the dormitories, where small groups and personal feelings can be activated. Where there can be shown an interest and concern, and even an encouragement. Since the counselers are the closest element of the administration to the students, may be they can undergo some orientation in guidance and various elements of the campus. Possibly better living conditions for males could be instituted. It's interesting to watch how Plymouth and Brooks were renovated and more sparsely occupied when the ladies moved in. These conditions should have existed for everyone living in the dorm.

With 2400 more students being accepted in the fall, let's look to see how they will be handled, roomed and encouraged.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Fifth Sane Voice

To the Editor:

Upon reading Monday's edition of the Collegian, I unfortunately, came upon an editorial entitled "A Footnote to Contemporary Propoganda" by someone named Palter. It seems he was very much bothered by the Izzo case and decided to speak out against it. "... not five voices of sanity could be heard over the quiet roar of the Izzo case." He obviously considers himself the fifth sane voice.

Well, he ranted on about the cruel injustice carried out by Massachusetts State Legislature in firing an admitted Communist from the Salem State College faculty, and related this horrible action to the McCarthy era.

Frankly, I would like to relate his editorial to the H. Stuart Hughes era. It is typical of the "pinkies" to pounce upon isolated cases such as this one and to scrape the bottoms of barrels in search of "propoganda" of their own.

It is strange that he did not fail to mention that Mr. Izzo was rehired by the Board of Education. His propoganda would have been far more effective had he omitted this point. Our "miserable merchant of unwanted wares" ought to take lessons from his friends.

Actually, I doubt the sincerity of his remarks. They seem too well directed at projecting his "controversial" image. But, in case there is a tinge of conviction in what he said, I would like to point out that there is an inherent impracticality in supporting an animal which bites the hand that feeds it. For a State supported institution to hire a teacher whose political objective is the overthrow of that very State, would be sheer foolishness. Fortunately, the Massachusetts Board of Education possesses a more mature intelligence than that of the author of Monday's "Asterisk."

In another editorial in the same issue, reference was made to Collegian staff limitations. I hope that explains Mr. Palter's membership on the editorial staff.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE

To the Editor:

Just a casual note to inform the students of one of the minor episodes on campus.

At a recent Student Senate meeting, Senate President Cournoyer chose himself and six other well-informed Senators to attend a meeting of a model United Nations. Four hundred dollars was appropriated for their use.

This select seven chose to represent the country of Switzerland. What these well-informed Senators failed to realize was that Switzerland is not a member of the United Nations. (At last report Switzerland was not even considering joining.) Fortunately for our little band, a less select member of the Senate discovered the mistake while the letter acknowledging our choice of nations was being written. Needless to say, the University was prevented from undergoing a singularly embarrassing incident.

Once more the Senate reigns supreme!

WMUA IS NEGLECTING SOMETHING

To the Editor:

WMUA should be complimented on its new and improved scheduling. It is reassuring to know that somewhere among all those radio waves, a good program is being beamed. This Rennaissance of our campus radio station will be of great benefit to everyone listening. However, WMUA is still neglecting one thing—getting people to listen. Let it be suggested that WMUA make a weekly program schedule available (perhaps in the Collegian) as well as notifying specific groups on campus when a show of importance to that group is going to be broadcast.

Pucksters End Drought With 9-3 Pasting Over Huskies

by AL RICE '66

A nine goal output ended UMass' days of famine Monday when the woebegone Redmen pucksters came to life after a complete change in the offensive department added some spark to the attack. The victims at the Orr Rink Monday night were the UConn Huskies who suffered a 9-3 pasting that gave Mass their first win in seven games and their first scoring in three contests.

The visitors scored first but the lead held up only until Captain Gerry Clinton smashed in an unassisted marker at 11.08. Less than two minutes later newcomer Ken Palm broke the tie and from then on it was no contest.

The second line accounted for the next two goals. Jerry Wolfe with assists going to John Lasher and Clinton closed out the opening period with a goal, and Lasher put the puck into the net at 4.30 of the second period. UConn scored one more in the second frame but John Clayton registered a score at 8.14 assisted by Charlie Glew and Frank Gilliatt of the first line and Lasher picked up his second tally on an unassisted shot at 16.10. In the last half-minute of the period Glew made the Redmen lead 7-2 when he slapped in Ed Quimby's pass.

The scoring continued in the final stanza when in the stretch of 1.11 Wolfe and Jim Mahoney each got goals. Lasher assisted on Wolfe's goal giving each man 11 points for the season, the team's high. Lasher and Charlie Glew are the leading goal scorers with six each and Mahoney's marker at 14.31 gave him five for second place. Wolfe holds the assist lead with seven followed by Lasher who has five.

The win was the first in seven starts and only the third of the season against nine setbacks, but the Redmen have been on the verge of breaking their slump for the past week. The new line combinations have needed a little time working together and now have had enough to work well. Tonight UMass faces MIT at Cambridge and the prospects are excellent for the first two game winning streak of the season. MIT lost a 6-3 contest to the Redmen in Deerfield in the first game of the season in December.

The 52-gate course, set by Daniel Denis, assistant director of the Thunder Mountain Ski School, was extremely icy.

New England College took top honors with a total score of 92.7, Amherst College finished second with a score of 88.7, UMass third with 83.1, Northeastern University fourth with 80.0, Tufts fifth with 72.4, A.I.C. sixth with 35.7, Boston College seventh with 31.1, Boston University eighth with 27.2, and Brown University ninth with 11.6.

The top individual winner was Steve Deane of N.E.C. Rexford Morey from Northeastern and Dick Davidson from Amherst finished second and third respectively. University skiers placed, out of a field of 54, as follows: Richard Hurlbut 7th, Eric Schuhle 13th, Tom Clark 16th, Norm Carpenter 22nd, Clark Bowlen 23rd, and Don Burgess 24th.

On Sunday, February 10th, the University of Massachusetts sponsored a Downhill at Thunder Mountain. New England College again took top honors by winning the extremely close downhill on the 4,500 foot Ninot Dole with only 2.5 seconds separating first from sixth place.

Northeastern University placed second, Amherst College third, Brown fourth, Boston University fifth, UMass sixth, Tufts seventh, A.I.C. eighth, Boston College ninth.

Frosh Win Second Straight Over UConn

by NEIL BAKER '66

A late surge in the first period enabled the Little Redmen to pull away from the UConn freshmen and give the frosh a two game sweep over the Huskies and a clean slate against all YanCon foes for the year.

Ed Driscoll spearheaded the drive late in the opening stanza with an eight point surge. The Redmen made their move with 7:37 left on the short end of an 11-8 score. Craig Farnsworth and Paul Gullicksen tied it up on free throws and Gully put UM on top with a basket off a tap-off.

With the score again tied 15-all, Driscoll dunked a 20-foot set shot with no one around. With a 3 on 2, the frosh pulled ahead by six on a beautiful piece of teamwork ended on a Timmy Edwards layup. Driscoll put in his second straight one and one situation to offset a Ken Libertoff dunk. Jeff Boyle contributed two more with a fall-away 10-footer, and Driscoll, seconds later, stole a pass and went in alone for two more. The Redmen led 27-19 and never lost the head, with an advantage as much as 22 points late in the second half. The final score was 69-49.

High scorer was Timmy Edwards with 18 points. Ken Whitney had fifteen for the losers, high for the Huskies.

Four different ways to make going more fun than getting there

You can see why one of America's favorite outdoor sports is driving Chevrolets, with four entirely different kinds of cars to choose from. There's the Jet-smooth Chevrolet, about as luxurious as you can go without going overboard in price; the low-cost Chevy II, a good-looking car that would send any family packing; another family favorite, the sporty Corvair, whose rear-engine traction will make you think that ice and snow are kid stuff; and for pure adventure, America's only sports car, Corvette—now in two all-new versions with looks that can stop traffic like a rush-hour blizzard. Picked your favorite already? The next thing is to take the wheel at your Chevrolet dealer's. If that doesn't have you thinking of places to go, maybe you'd rather just have a ball around town!

Twitchell's 28 Points Fail To Stop Big Husky Squad

by STEVE HEWEY '63

The University of Connecticut, despite the twenty-eight point performance of Redmen forward Rodger Twitchell, defeated UMass 79-66 in a Yankee Conference thriller at Curry Hicks Cage last night.

The win for UConn continues their unbeaten skein in Conference play and almost assures them of the YanCon title. They are now 7 and 0 in league play.

The Redmen were fighting all the way but UConn's height advantage killed UMass' hopes of pulling it out. The closest Matt Zunic's quintet, now four and three in the Conference, came was 65-55 with 6:57 remaining.

Big Ed Slomcenski paced the Huskies with nineteen points. From the floor UMass was twenty-six for seventy-six while UConn was twenty-nine for sixty-three.

Thursday night, the Redmen will be at Madison Square Garden to avenge an earlier season loss to Iona.

Matmen Mauled By MIT, Williams; Face Dartmouth

by DICK McLAUGHLIN '64

This afternoon the matmen of the University of Massachusetts travel to Hanover, New Hampshire to take on the Big Green of Dartmouth. For the Redmen grapplers, still seeking their first win, it will be the sixth match of the current season. Dartmouth, a strong squad, will be in their seventh match.

During the past week the charges of coach John Douglas met two very fine teams, with the same relative result. Williams College battered the Redmen 23-3 last Tuesday, and on Saturday, M.I.T., with three past New England champions on its squad, turned the same trick, 31-3. In these two matches only Co-Captain Tom Best, in the former, and little Mike Rivers in the latter, were able to produce points for the UMass team.

The Dartmouth match is expected to be a somewhat better one from a UMass point of view. The Green is always strong but is not in the class of the two squads mentioned above. It is hoped that, with a little luck, the Redmen will be able to bring their first victory home from Hanover.

O'Brien, Brouillet And Ward Lead Redmen Against UConn

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity and freshman indoor track teams will open their 1963 season against the University of Connecticut tonight at home. The meet starts at 8:00 p.m., with the freshmen follow-

The Redmen are usually in better condition at this stage of the season, and will probably prevail. UMass won last year 57½-46½.

In the dashes UMass will send Loren Flagg, Yankee Conference dash champion, against Mel Parsons, one of the best sprinters in the conference. Mike Deninen, Paul Casse, and Bill Ferand will provide Flagg with backing. Parsons will probably also compete in the high and low hurdles, and it is expected that he might have too much class for the Redmen timber boys—John Harrington, Art Resendes, and Burt Kline.

Once the meet moves into the middle-distance and distance events the UMass class will begin to show. The 600 and 1000 yd. runs will be headed by Ken "O'bie" O'Brien, who will be strongly backed by Bob Pendleton, Bruce Thompson, and Armand Gillett in the 600. Pendleton and Jim Wrynn will support "Obie" in the 1000. These two events will probably produce some of the most exciting competition of the night. UConn will be represented by Bob Oberg who is the second best middle distance man in the Yankee Conference. Both Oberg and O'Brien are seniors, and whenever they get together records seem to fall. Last year Oberg chased O'Brien to a new 600 record of 1:15.5. Outdoors he pushed O'Bie to a new YanCon half mile record of 1:52.6.

In the mile and two-mile events UMass will probably dominate. Heading the distance men is Bob "Digger" Brouillet. Bob holds both the mile (4:15) and two mile (9:28) records, and seems a cinch to break both before the season is over. Dave Balch, Jim Wrynn, and Bob Ramsey will go in the mile. Both Wrynn and Balch are capable of breaking the UMass record. "Digger" will head the 2-mile contingent, and will be ably backed up by Dick Blomstrom, Tom Panke, and Bob Avery.

The field events will be headed by Dick Ward, at present the top collegiate 35 lb. weight thrower in the country. Dick will compete in the high jump, 35 lb. weight, and the 16 lb. shot. "Gus" Anagostopolus and Al Richardson will back Ward in the 35 lb. weight. "Gus" set a freshman record last year of 49'9½", Richardson and George Giddings will join him in the high jump. The pole vaulters will be Dave Sodowsky, Paul Read, and Maynard Hodgden. The broad jump competitors will be Fred Lewis, Mike Salem, and Paul Caisse. Lewis stands a chance of breaking the UMass record of 22'4½".

Service Fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega, Explains Qualifications And Goals

The members of Alpha Phi Omega want you to learn about their program of leadership, friendship, and service.

APO is a national service fraternity composed of college men who are or have been affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America. Anyone willing to subscribe to scouting ideals is also eligible. Their program of activity embodies four fields. They are service to campus, community, chapter and nation.

Alpha Phi Omega is the largest fraternity in the world. There are now close to 350 chapters in the United States. No other fraternity comes close to this figure.

Being a member of a service fraternity does not prohibit you from joining a social fraternity. Many members belong to both. One question always arises, "Does APO indulge in hazing and informal initiation of pledges?" The answer is no. Pledging consists of learning more about the organization and working on service projects.

How much time does all this take? It all depends on the individual. Some will spend many hours a week on projects while others will invest much less.

What about social life? APO is constitutionally prohibited from maintaining a chapter house; however they do have a full program of mixers, parties and picnics. Alpha Phi Omega is, however, not a social fraternity and its primary purpose remains service.

Among APO's projects on campus are the Book Exchange, United Nations Week, Freshmen Election Forums, Homecoming Parade and the ride board in the Student Union.

Persons interested in learning more about APO are invited to an open meeting and smoker in the Commonwealth Room tonight. Refreshments will be served.

Campus Chest Drive To Benefit Students

"Tomorrow's Leaders Need Help Today" was the theme offered by Campus Chest Co-chairmen Manny Smith and Lee Wilcox at the organizational meeting of the Campus Chest Committee recently. The proposed dates for the annual drive are March 11-18.

The annual Campus "Chest" Contests will be held, as well as a new surprise contest. Details of this "surprise" contest will be revealed in the near future.

Smith emphasized the "meaning and seriousness of the Campus Chest drive", which is the only drive held yearly on campus. "Our goal," stated Lee Wilcox, "is $1.00 from each person—faculty and student alike." Naturally larger donations will be welcomed.

The proceeds of the drive are divided between University scholarships and the World University Service, whose goal is to help assure that students all over the world are given the same educational opportunities and standards that are available to us.

Volunteer Needed

The need for volunteers in publicity and solicitation was made known. "Personal contact is a vital way of making known our purpose and achieving our goal," said Smith. Publicity in the dormitories will be covered by the Scrolls, while off-campus and administrative publicity will be handled through the Public Relations Committee of the Senate. Alpha Phi Omega, Mens' Service Organization, will work with the University faculty and staff.

Last year, a considerable sum was donated and the committee members said it is hoped that this drive will be even more successful.

Dr. William Field, Dean of Students, has endorsed the program and urges "full cooperation of the student body" in making this year's drive a success.

The co-chairmen made evident their goal of matching last year's sum and preferably passing it. "This can be done," said Lee Wilcox, "if every one of us does his share by starting now to talk about the drive and working actively during the drive itself."

Organizations Represented

This committee has recruited members from major campus organizations to help in the sponsorship of this year's drive. Other members of the committee are: Gardner Howes, Treasurer; Paula Freed, Secretary; Chuck Thomas, APO; Phil Howard, Senate; Kathy Manning and Meredith Halstead, Scrolls; Steve Klyce and Jerry Tuttle, Mens' Interdorm Council; Ruth Feinberg, Womens' Interdorm Council; Ron Bolton and Ken Robbins, IFC; Marilyn Singer, Public Relations Comm. of Senate; two representatives to be appointed from the Maroon Keys; and one representative to be appointed by the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Senate Holds Constitutional Convention

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

By action of a special constitutional convention held Wednesday night, the Executive Committee of the several University classes now assumes a position of greater responsibility than in the past in the governing of class affairs.

The convention, consisting of both the Senate and all class officers, was convened to choose between 4 plans submitted by Senator Jon Fife ('64 Van Meter). They had the option of either choosing one of the plans offered or amending one to what was felt the most workable solution.

The change, according to Senator Fife, was suggested "in order to establish a more equitable dispersion of financial management . . . within the class structure." Fife further pointed out that presently "the sole fiscal power is now vested with the class officers, especially the President and Treasurer. The purpose behind the motion is to establish two basic concepts. The first is legality of the Executive Committee, the second is the

UMass Officials Discuss Campus Growth With Town

Continued building of the UMass campus as "an impressively attractive resource in one of the state's most beautiful towns" was declared to be the aim of major development plans now under way for the University's second century.

The statement, made by President Lederle, was the keynote of an extensive discussion held last night between University officials and citizens of the town of Amherst in a public hearing at the Amherst Regional High School.

Four members of the University's administration—President Lederle, Treasurer Kenneth W. Johnson, Business Manager Gerald J. Grady, and Leo Redfern, Director of the Office of Institutional Studies—gave a detailed report on the direction and extent of future University growth necessitated by great increases in enrollment on both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

President Lederle, in his opening remarks at the meeting chaired by Harold Elder, Chairman of the Amherst Selectmen, said that University planning as it affects the town will continue to be conducted in full consultation with town officials.

The president said that the University's objective in physical development will remain consistent with preserving Amherst as one of the country's most beautiful communities. He said that he hoped for a continued spirit of fruitful cooperation between town and University officials and assured townspeople that long-range development plans have been worked out in such a way as to avoid any major inconvenience to the town's citizenry.

Dr. Leo Redfern, using graphs and tables, indicated the extent of the "enrollment explosion" affecting the University and the need for expanded facilities. Dr. Redfern pointed out that, according to state and national projections, the University must plan for a minmum of 20,000 students by 1975. On the basis of these figures, Redfern noted the need for building of appropriate dormitories according to a reasonable schedule based on a steadily increasing rate of new enrollees at the University.

Treasurer Johnson, in the main presentation of the hearing, used slides, pictures and maps to indicate the direction and extent of the University's building program in the next several years.

The Treasurer said that some land-takings were necessary in the southwest corner of campus to make room for the new dormitory complex. He said that in other areas, the University already owned the land on which it will build or has made arrangements to buy land.

Johnson said that all possible accommodations would be made to make certain that the properties of townspeople are not disrupted or diminished in value because of University plans for development. Johnson reiterated that the University's course will be to do everything possible to enhance the attractiveness of the town by intelligent planning and cooperation with town officials.

Grady Describes Economic Impact

The last University speaker was Gerald J. Grady, University Business Manager, who described some of the economic impact of the University upon the Amherst area. He reported that the University's monthly payroll is approximately $960,000, or $11.5 million per year is paid to 2,114 employees. Grady said that the number of employees will increase not only because of the increase in number of students, but because of the increase in research, graduate, and service programs. He estimated an increase of 1½ to 2 employees, academic and non-academic, for every increase of fifteen students. His concluding remarks related to a listing of the ways in which the University cooperates with the town in adapting to the changes in economic conditions which are bound to occur when a present educational enterprise of $20 million per year is in a period of great expansion.

UM LOOKS SKYWARD—Preliminary drawing shows 22-story dormitories soon to be built at UMass. Part of a group of 15 dormitories in a new complex planned for the campus, the high-rise buildings will give a new "skyward look" to the expanding campus. The completed group which will house a total of 5200 students will have six high-rise dormitories and nine four-story buildings. Three dining halls will also be included in the new dormitory group, to be built on a self-liquidating basis by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority.

I.D.C. Plans Skating Party For Tonight

There will be a skating party on the college pond tonight from 6 to 9 p.m. entitled "The Blade Escapade." Sponsored by the Men's and Women's Interdorm Councils, the party will be for the entire campus.

In addition to free hot chocolate and cookies, music will be piped out from the Union and a bonfire will be made. Each and every student is welcome; just show your skates and all is free, courtesy of Men's and Women's I.D.C.

Committee members said that if weather does not permit skating, the program will be held anyway.

Committee members include Sandy Borg, Bob Coffin, Gus Olson, Joy Traquair and Steve Klyce.

WHY NOT APATHY?

From hearing of the Boston Licensing Board on a petition to grant license to a Playboy Club in Boston:

Board Member Elam: "What is the purpose of this type of dress? (the "bunny" uniform)
Lawyer Gesmer: I suppose its aesthetic qualities."

A few years ago, someone sent up a cry on American college campuses from coast to coast: "Apathy!" Why do campus organizations have fewer and fewer members? Why are athletic and cultural programs poorly attended, scarcely supported? Where has school spirit gone? Why?

Last year this question was battered around our own campus ad nauseum. This year the battle continued, but letters and articles on the topic no longer warranted newspaper space. Or perhaps someone began to realize the causes of the so-called "apathy."

Particularly after the battle of "2.0 or not 2.0," students realized that no normal student could both excel in his studies and be active in campus organizations. They asked themselves which was more important . . . and most elected in favor of grades, be it a matter of making the dean's list or of simply not flunking out. Who would have seriously advised them to do otherwise? The result was labeled "apathy."

We can't criticize these students; they are in no way obliged to take part in extracurricular activities, as the very name for these campus groups implies. The incoming student agrees to abide by the rules and regulations of the university and to uphold certain standards of academic honesty; he signs no agreement to lend personal or moral support to student organizations. (Of course, he would most likely benefit from participation, and be a better "campus citizen," but this is his decision; the least we can do is not try to make him feel guilty about it should he elect studies over activities.)

Let's stop and think: who complains most about these non-participants? Usually, it is the officer of some organization who is faced with an additional amount of work if he can't find someone else on whom to palm it off. If he is ambitious, with his own or the interests of the organization in mind, there is likely to be even more such work, and he wants someone to do it. The result? He rants and raves about student apathy.

Most of us would subscribe to the maxim "Live and let live," yet we are acting in a completely contradictory manner when we try to force the student body to participate. Support. Attend. Contribute. The student with a will of his own will not surrender to bullying of this sort. And who are we to try to force our will upon someone else, for our own purposes?

In addition to the above, there is one more important reason for not trying to impose "school spirit" and participation upon an unwilling victim, and it is merely that of practicality: it won't do any good. You may finally convince basically uninterested people to join clubs or hold offices, but since no real enthusiasm exists, they are likely to be inactive or ineffectual. Does your organization really want another two dozen "members" who will not participate?

Without enough officers and members, certain student organizations would cease to exist. But would that be such a tragedy? The organizations were first created because students wanted them, and it is reasonable that when they are no longer desired—as indicated by lack of support—they have become obsolete and ought to be discontinued.

It is a student's right to use his time as he sees fit and participate only when and where he chooses; if he chooses apathy, why not?

J.D.

DON'T TAKE NO FOR AN ANSVER

So there's a rule which says you can't have stack privileges. So what! Like many rules at this school, if a student wants to be excepted from it, all he or she has to do is exert the effort needed to make the request. If you have a good reason, if you are working on a term paper, for example, all you have to do is ask, and temporary permission will almost always be granted.

But let's say you ask the wrong person, someone who does not have the authority to grant you the privilege you desire, and that person says no. Just don't take "no" as a final answer until you've gone to the highest authority on the matter. In the case of stack privileges, go to the head librarian if you have to.

"That could mean a lot of work," you say. Exactly, for without most of the rules we live under there would be chaos at this University or in any compact society. The administration has had to make it just hard enough to get any sort of special privilege to discourage the majority of students to whom it really is not that important. If you want anything at this school badly enough, you can get it; all you have to have is a fairly good reason for your wish and all you have to do is exert a fair amount of effort by going to as many people as you have to until you get an answer of "yes."

M.C.

AFTER THE CONVENTION

With one exception we were very pleased with the results of Wednesday night's Constitutional Convention. The exception refers to the manner in which members of a class executive committee will be chosen. The Senate approved a method of selection whereby the members of the executive committee will be all appointed instead of elected. The Senators-at-Large, however, will be included on the Committee.

While we preferred a percentage of the committee to be elected, we feel that the appointment method will not be overly crucial. What is important is that class executive committees are now a body with considerable power, and this is good. Any executive committee can use or neglect this power as it sees fit, but the potential for action has now been provided.

The addition of a referendum clause (see news story, page 1) was a wise and democratic move on the part of the Senate. Any student can now feel that he has a voice in his own government.

S48 has been taken by some as an insult to the integrity of present and past class officers. This is not the case. Providing a democratic foundation for any government is a prudent action to take. We must remember that prior to S48 the foundations for student government (with regards to class structure) were vague and almost meaningless. There now exists a strong framework to work from; a framework that allows for a maximum freedom of action in fiscal and non-fiscal matters.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear President Cournoyer:

I was pleased to read in the Collegian your recent review of Student Senate accomplishments and activities during the first semester. It is indeed important for all students to realize that the effectiveness of their student government organization rests on the continuing week by week efforts of elected representatives. While the emotional and controversial issues may garner the weekly headlines, it is the solid and accumulative effort of the individual senators and the functioning committees which provides the basis of any successful governmental operation.

The influence which a responsible and independent student government can exert on behalf of students in an expanding university is an ever increasing one. I hope that you and members of the Senate can continue to communicate to your constituents your need for their continued support and participation in the semester ahead.

May I offer my best wishes for continued success in the second semester, and renew my offer to assist in any way that I can in accomplishing this success.

Sincerely yours,
William F. Field
Dean of Students

STUDENT UNION FLORA

To the Editor:

I realize fully that running the Student Union is a large job and that there are many important duties that one must perform to keep the SU organized. However, I wonder if Mr. Scott has noticed the condition of the plants that are on the large ledge just inside the front entrance to the Union. They are all dying—and those that are not dying—are dead. From the balcony on the second floor this sight is rather pitiful, and certainly does not improve the looks of the Union. Also, the ledge is FILTHY.

It would seem to me that if Mr. Scott doesn't wish to have someone appointed to take care of the plants—be he handyman or student—that they should be removed. Why bother to have them?

A NOTE OF APPRECIATION

To the Editor:

As general chairman of the 1963 Winter Carnival, I extend congratulations to the class of '64 for its support and organization of the annual event, to the classes of '63, '65, and '66 for their cooperation and assistance, as well as University officials and administrators who rank among the many who helped to make the Carnival Weekend such a tremendous success.

Sincerely,
Jim Medeiros
President, Class of '64

MONOPOLY ON CAMPUS NEWSPAPERS

To the Editor re: A Footnote to Contemporary Propaganda

First, I take issue with Mike Palter's opening sentence in his February 11 column. I cared about "the case of Prof. Edmund S. Izzo of Salem State College. I, and I'm sure others, care whether or not a former Communist is teaching in a state supported college. If Mr. Izzo is reformed and now responsible, then fine and good, but people should have the right to doubt whether he really is changed.

Second, I wonder why Mr. Palter must go into the outside world for his material? Why doesn't he do an article on the propaganda contained in college newspapers which enjoy a monopoly on the campus, like the Collegian? Perhaps, he could even start with his own column and show how the use of terms like: "witch-hunt," "slag," "right of conscience," "voices of sanity," and "the academic community continues to live in a state of fear," can irrationally influence (propagandize) people, though they bear no relation to the truth. The second paragraph was the only one which contained much news, the other paragraphs just reflected the author's own leftward-leaning ideas, distorted as they are.

Dick Wimberly

As reader Wimberly pointed out, the Collegian does have a monopoly on newspapers published on this campus. Because we recognize this fact we have always allowed any student to join the editorial staff (provided that he has the ability to write, and is willing to learn.)

The Editorial Board has often included editorials on page two which do not agree with their own views. We believe that this liberality is our responsibility since we are the only newspaper on campus.

If any student disagrees with editorials in the Collegian there are three alternatives open to him: one, he can organize his own newspaper; two, he can write a letter to the editor; or three, he is welcome to join the editorial staff and express his own views.—Ed.

MUSICALE AND CLASSICS

To the Editor:

The Sunday night Classics program, which is one of the most outstanding programs on WMUA, has initiated the new semester with another outstanding feature. I hope that the week-night Musicale programs follow the excellent example of the Classics program by including some lesser known works.

A note to the announcers (one in particular): many listeners take the liberty of considering that they are fairly well informed, and do not enjoy hearing an announcer's editorial comments on an excessive number of pieces.

A seven-night-a-week listener

power to deal with class fiscal matters."

He further reminded the delegates that they were amending the constitution, and that details should be left for insertion in the By-Laws.

An amended version of the bill was presented to the Senate by Senator Dave Mathieson (At-Large 1964). Sen. Mathieson stated that the bill presented was a compromise, drafted by the Executive Committee of the Senate. He further stated that the bill kept the better parts of the others, while attempting to give an extremely workable system.

The question was then divided; that is, the bill was voted on section by section.

Section one, which provided for election of class officers, was quickly passed. Section two which would have had a part elected—part appointed Executive committee was defeated. The Opponents of an elected Committee were led by 1964 class president Jim Medieros. Medieros stated in part: "The committee should be appointive. One cannot work with a group that is not compatible."

Senator Marilyn "Sam" Singer (At-Large 1965) stated that appointments should be one of the decisions an officer has to make.

However, Senator Charles Kessler (At-Large 1965) stated that "Members should be elected. They are responsible for finances, and should be responsible to the classes."

Sen. Donald Crasco ('64 Greenough) added that "A group may become too compatible under an appointment system. Their ideas may be limited."

Skip Oakes ended discussion stating that "the group should be appointed so as to eliminate any personality conflicts."

Third Section Passed

After some debate a third section was passed which restricted the power of the class officers in fiscal matters by making all their decisions in the field subject to Executive Committee approval.

It was pointed out by Senior class president Oakes that this system had been in effect for a number of years. He stated that he had always consulted the Committee, and had usually abided by its decision. However, all non-fiscal matters are still the responsibility of the class officers, and can only be overruled by a referendum vote of the class concerned.

In summary, the class structure has been changed by the addition of an Executive Committee which has ultimate responsibility for class fiscal matters; and the power of the class officers in non-fiscal matters has been affirmed.

Senate sources state that this will not be the last convention for the year. A major constitutional revision has been hinted at in many quarters, and action is expected in the near future.

CALPURNIA, HERE I COME

Now, as the college year approaches its mid-point, one fact emerges clearly: you are all going to flunk everything.

There are two things you can do about it. First, you can marry money. (I don't mean you marry the money itself; I mean you marry a person who has money. Weddings between people and currency have not been legal anywhere in the United States since the Smoot-Hawley Act. Marlboro Cigarettes, on the other hand, are legal everywhere and are, indeed, smoked with great pleasure and enthusiasm in all fifty states of the Union. I bring up Marlboro Cigarettes because this column is sponsored by the makers of Marlboro, and they are inclined to brood if I omit to mention their product.)

But I digress. I was saying you can marry money but, of course, you will not because you are a high-minded, clean-living, pure-hearted, freckle-faced American kid. Therefore, to keep from flunking, you must try the second method: you must learn how to take lecture notes.

According to a recent survey, 123.6% of American undergraduates do not know the proper way to take lecture notes. To illustrate this shocking statistic, let us suppose you are taking a course in history. Let us further suppose the lecturer is lecturing on the ruling houses of England. You listen intently. You write diligently in your notebook, making a topic outline as you have been taught. Like this:

I. House of Plantagenet.
II. House of Lancaster.
III. House of York.

Then you stop. You put aside your pen. You blink back a tear, for you cannot go on. Oh, yes, you know very well that the next ruling house is the House of Tudor. The trouble is you don't know the Roman numeral that comes after III.

(It may, incidentally, be of some historical interest to point out that Americans are not the only people who don't know Roman numerals. The Romans didn't know them themselves. I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like that, but when it came to real cuties like LXI or MMC, they just flang away their styluses and went downtown to have a bath and take in a circus and maybe stab Caesar a few times.

(You may wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well sir, the fact is that the Emperor Vespasian tried like crazy to buy the Arabic numerals from Suleiman the Magnificent, but Suleiman wouldn't do business—not even when Vespasian raised his bid to 100,000 gold piastres, plus he offered to throw in the Colosseum, the Appian Way, and Charlton Heston.

(So Rome stuck with Roman numerals—to its sorrow, as it turned out. One day in the Forum, Cicero and Pliny got to arguing about how much is CDL times MVIX. Well sir, pretty soon everyone in town came around to join the hassle. In all the excitement, nobody remembered to lock the north gate and —wham!—before you could say pecca fortiter, in rushed the Goths, the Visigoths, and the Green Bay Packers!)

Well sir, that's the way the empire crumbles, and I digress. Let's get back to lecture notes. Let's also say a word about Marlboro Cigarettes. The makers would be so pleased! And is it not fitting that we should please these honest tobacconists—these fine men, fond of square dancing, water sports, protein, and tattoos—these tireless perfectionists who spend all of their days trying to please us—searching everywhere for the best of all possible tobaccos, aging them with patience, blending them with tender, loving care? Marlboros are available in soft pack and flip top box. You will find XX cigarettes in each package.

Memorial Salute To Frost Will Be Held At Amherst

A public memorial service for poet Robert Frost will be conducted on the Amherst College campus on Sunday, Feb. 17, at 2 p.m.

The special arrangement at the Union has been made as a means by which UMass can pay tribute to the poet whose many readings and visits on this campus are warmly remembered by thousands of members of the campus community.

The Rt. Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Ohio, author Mark Van Doren and Amherst College President Calvin H. Plimpton will participate. The service will take place in Johnson Chapel where Mr. Frost regularly gave readings of his poetry beginning in 1916.

Many friends of Mr. Frost from Washington and New York, and leaders in the fields of government, arts and letters, will attend. The Robert Frost Room at the Jones Library, in the center of town, will be open. The Frost Room contains a large collection of material by and about the poet. There will also be a display of Frost manuscripts, pictures and books at Converse Library, Amherst College. Both will be open beginning at 11:30 a.m. Sunday. The Frost Room at Jones Library will close at 2 p.m. and reopen from 3 to 4 p.m.

Bishop Hobson will preside at the service. Prof. Van Doren, a Pulitzer Prize winner in poetry, will read some of Mr. Frost's poems. President Plimpton will discuss Mr. Frost as man and teacher, and the Amherst College Chapel Choir will participate.

Mike Holmes To Appear At Music Hour

UMass folk musician Mike Holmes will appear in a music hour sponsored by the Arts and Music Committee, Sunday, Feb. 17, from 3 to 5 in the Cape Cod Lounge. The program is open without charge to the public.

Mike's talent is evidenced by his winning of the student talent show this fall, his appearance at various coffee houses in Boston, his concerts at Northeastern and Simmons, and his engagement at the Downing Memorial Theatre in Boston.

As a student at the University he is giving guitar lessons in folk music. This Saturday he will appear in Holyoke with the Tiki's.

The purpose of the Music Hours is to give the many talented students on campus a chance to perform and at the same time to provide for an enjoyable Sunday afternoon's entertainment, a committee spokesman said.

Music Hours in the past have been somewhat irregular, but in the future they will be a regular bi-monthly affair. They are generally held either in the Colonial or the Cape Cod lounges with an informal atmosphere.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

A new semester has started and things are back to their usual drill roar here at Alpha Chi. Our thanks go to Eileen Reilly and Maureen Lyons for the wonderful job they did as chairmen of the snow sculpture, and to our tobogganers Sheila Keblin, Lisa Nordberg, Sylvia Oakes, Barbara Gregory, and Cary O'Connell who brought back—a lot of snow and a sling for Lisa's arm. Cary may not shine on a toboggan, but we would like to extend our congratulations on her recent selection to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

Socially too, second semester is starting off with a bang, for we all had a wonderful time at our exchange supper with Sig Ep this week. After the ignominious defeat we handed them at softball last spring, we were hoping to give the Sig Eps a return game, but the snow prevented that.

Seeing one of our freshman pledges, Carol Ricci reign as queen over the Carnival weekend added an extra bit of excitment to the festivities. In the sports events, Jane Morgan, Betsy Robichear, Pat Siebert, Ellie Stang, and Bev Christo won third place for Kappa in the Toboggan Race.

Alpha Sigma Phi Enjoys Fiftieth Year On Campus

This month Alpha Sigma Phi celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of its arrival on campus. It was on February 14, 1913, that Gamma chapter, located at Amherst College since 1850, gave its charter to the College Shakespearean Club at Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Since that time, Gamma chapter has undergone many changes. The most recent of these, structurally speaking, was the complete remodeling of the downstairs party room in knotty pine and tile, in 1962.

This year, as part of the fiftieth anniversary celebration, the brothers are planning to demolish the old structure and put up a new house on the site. Negotiations for our new house have been underway for several months now, and we may be able to move into the new chapter house by next September.

The membership of Alpha Sig now stands at an active brotherhood of 45, plus 15 pledges.

In recent achievements on campus, Alpha Sig picked up a 2nd Place in the Winter Carni Snow Sculpture Competition, as

1. I'll tell you what you have to look for in a job. You have to look for fringe benefits. That's the big thing today.

Yes—the big thing.

2. You have to consider your needs. You're going to get married some day, aren't you? Then you need life and accident insurance.

Go on—go on—

3. You're going to have kids—so you'll want maternity benefits.

I'd like lots of children.

4. And what about medical bills? That's something every big family has to think about. You need a good major medical plan that covers almost everything.

5. And you're not going to want to work all your life, are you? You're going to want to take it easy—you know, travel around, live it up. So you need a retirement plan that guarantees you plenty of dough.

I can see it now.

6. That's why I say you have to look at the fringe benefits when you look for a job.

But don't you also have to look for interesting work, good income, the chance for advancement?

Pucksters Do It Again; Shutout Techmen 11-0

by AL RICE '66

The University of Massachusetts Redmen hockey team came forth with their second high scoring effort in as many games when they bombed MIT 11-0 Wednesday night in Cambridge after polishing off Connecticut 9-3 Monday night here in Amherst. The recent additions to the club plus the line changes have improved the attack by a great deal, but the overall hustle and inspired play have made the big difference.

Steve Kosakowski's charges soared to a five goal lead after the first period and then picked up a trio of scores in the second and third frames. Leading the scoring parade was the second line duo of center Gerry Wolfe and left wing John Lasher. Lasher registered his first hat trick of the season and also scored an assist on Wolfe's second goal of the first period. In addition to his pair of goals, Wolfe also scored one assist.

The first puck went into the net at the 3:01 mark on a driving shot by Dave Higgins. Wolfe then poked his two shots past MIT goalie Joe Kirk. However, there were plenty that didn't get by Kirk. The junior netminder saved a total of 59 Mass shots. He was used to it though, because the West Point six forced him to make 60 saves three weeks ago. The third line put another in at 14:19 when Ken Palm scored from Higgins and Mahoney. Ed Quimby notched the final tally of the opening period two minutes later.

The break between periods slowed the Mass scoring a little, and they didn't hit the net again until Lasher tallied his first of three at 9:24 of the second period while his team was a man short, due to a penalty to Bob Lee. Less than two minutes later Jib Mahoney upped the ante to 7-0 while MIT captain Bob Vachon was sitting out an interference penalty. The third goal again came while the Redmen were at a man disadvantage. Charlie Glew was serving a two minute offensive checking violation, but Gerry Clinton steamed past the Engineers and slammed the pellet into the nets.

Lasher completed his hat trick in the final stanza with scores at 4:45 and 8:47. Charlie Glew finished the rout with his first point of the evening, a goal assisted by Clinton with 26 seconds left in the game.

Boston Celtics—Beantown Babies

by JIM TRELEASE '63

The Boston Celtics were the greatest basketball team ever assembled on the hardcourt. Their records will stand as stalwart tributes to the best collection of playmakers and shooters the game ever witnessed. The New York Yankees consistently brought together the greatest teams in diamond history. Their playing records pay tribute to the men themselves as well as to the name of the Yankees. The Celtic name has reaped no tribute or glory from its players because the Boston Celtics lack what made the Yanks standouts among champions . . . CLASS!

With the risk of offending that most loquacious and martyred segment of all fandom — Celtic fans—let me go on to say that 1) the Celtics have stifled the growth of the NBA over the last seven years, 2) the Celts own the biggest "cry-babies" in sports today or yesterday, and 3) Boston fans spend more time denying their Wilt Chamberlain inferiority complex than cheering their own team.

This 1962-63 year will be the most successful season the National Basketball Association has ever enjoyed; its success at the box office will surpass the highs of the last seven years by a larger margin than was ever expected. Why? The most important reason is that sport's most fertile fields have been plants under golden sunlight—the West Coast.

There is more money, respect, and enthusiasm for sports—be it track, football, baseball, or basketball—in California than any place in the U.S. Boston Celtic owner Walter Brown is no fool; years ago he saw the L.A. and Frisco gold mines gleaming under the Pacific skies and wished they were under the Brown palm. Brown knows what money and fan support can do for a lowly team. Therefore Walter Brown, team owner and member of the NBA Board of Directors, did everything in his power to block the exodus of the Minneapolis Lakers and Philadelphia Warriors for California and salvation.

If Brown was no fool, neither was the rest of the NBA Board; permission was granted for changes in franchise. The Lakers, in three short years, proved Brown to be of great foresight. Today, Los Angeles leads the Celtics by four full games and is considered by many to be the best team in basketball. This reporter will go along with that. Give the Warriors two more years to mend in Frisco and the Celtics will be the third best team in basketball.

Since we have proven millionaire Brown to be no fool, let us now prove him to be no sentimentalist and show why as a businessman he tried to block the above - mentioned franchise moves.

Walter Brown once owed a great deal of gratitude to Bill Sharman. The Celtics built three championship teams on Sharman, Cousy and Russell, but Brown defied sentiment to stand in his way when an aging, creaking Sharman dragged himself away from Boston and joined the dilapidated, now defunct American Basketball League. Despite the fact that Sharman was at an age where he could not help the Celtic Green and that the poor ABL offered the rich NBA paltry financial competition, Brown tried to sue Sharman for breach of contract.

Since sentiment is not one of Walter Brown's vices, there would have been nothing to stop him from moving his un-supported Celtics from empty Boston Garden to Los Angeles or San Francisco. And THAT is what I propose he would have done if his power moves in the NBA front offices had succeeded in stopping Bob Shore and Eddie Gottlieb. But alas, his selfish business motives succeeded in nothing but stunting the growth of the NBA for seven years. Perhaps it is best for the world and the Common Market that Brown was frustrated in his West Coast plan. Can you imagine both Walters existing in the same city—Walter Brown and Walter O'Malley?

Perhaps the biggest premise upon which this party bases his claim that the Celtics lack CLASS is our second accusation: the Boston Celtics are the biggest "cry-babies" in sports. It is one thing for the chronic loser to complain of injuries, poor scheduling, and bad officiating but it is quite another thing for the World Champions of half a decade to cry over the same thing.

Last year when the Los Angeles Lakers and Philadelphia Warriors surprisedly pressed the Celtics throughout the playoffs, Red Auerbach publicly lambasted the officials, the scheduling, and six-foot Guy Rodgers for picking on his little six-foot, seven inch, 230 pound Jim Loscutoff. As if this were not enough, Walter Brown put in an appearance on nation-wide TV during a half-time interview and spoke destructively and critically of the play-off officiating.

The Beantown Babies are even at it this year. When Sports Illustrated selected the Los Angeles Lakers as the best team in basketball in a pre-season story, Red Auerbach went screaming to his Boston writers. As recently as two weeks ago, the Celtics were still at their winning (but whining) ways when they beat the Lakers in Boston after two straight losses to the Baylor and West Co. on the Coast. Post-game comments ran from the Town-crier Cousy and Auerbach to Snarling Tom Heinsohn. "We'd just had four games in as many nights." "We had to ride in a bus all night from New York State." "I haven't been able to sleep or eat a decent meal in two days." "We beat them despite the lousy traveling and scheduling." Spoken like true champions? Does it in the least bit ring with CLASS?

Boston sports fans are a peculiar lot. They recognize their baseball and hockey teams for what they are: losers. They readily expound upon the players' frailties and the ignorance of coaches and managers. But, nevertheless, they support those two losers like few cities in sports.

But for some strange reason, this species of New England Puritan suffers a radical change when the Celtics start their season. Unlike the Red Sox and Bruins, the Celtics are infallible, in first place, and are never beaten by a better opponent but by lousy scheduling and crooked officials. Unlike the two losers, the Celts, on the average, are lucky to muster a handful of people for regular season contests at home. Why? Perhaps because Celtics fans are too concerned in public debate over Chamberlain and Russell. It is always, "Wilt can't do this," or "Wilt can't do that." Celtic fans spend their free hours negatively and Walter Brown wishes it were spent more positively—like pushing his turnstiles.

As a final proof of this proposition, I point to the night several weeks ago when the Celtics lost to the cellar-dwelling N.Y. Knicks. The usually reserved and staid Bostonians in attendance found the occasion auspicious enough to deliver a barrage of rotten eggs on the Celtics.

Rotten eggs for the World Champions five of the last six years? When was the last time the Yankees fell to rotten eggs? Or the Green Bay Packers? Or the Montreal Canadians? No, you just don't associate rotten eggs with CLASS.

Iona Tops Redmen 61-54 In Madison Square Clash

With the aid of some devastating long outside shooting Iona College dealt the UMass varsity basketball squad its second straight loss, 61-54, in Madison Square Garden last night.

The UMass squad led by as much as seven points briefly during the first half, but Iona made up the difference and tied the score 19-19 with about eight minutes to go in the first frame, and the half ended with Iona leading by ten, 36-26.

The Redmen staged a second-half comeback to catch, and finally go ahead of Iona 47-46 with 8:40 remaining in the game. However, Iona's Marty Conlin, the game's high score with eighteen points, put his team ahead to stay one minute later on a long jump shot.

With 1:45 remaining and Iona leading by a score of 57-52 the men from New York put the ball in a deep freeze to protect their lead. The Redmen in an attempt to get possession of the ball committed several fouls enabling Iona to pick up four more points from the line.

Once again, Rodger Twitchell led the Redmen in scoring, this time with seventeen points. Next in line for the Redmen was Mike Johnson with ten points. Mike also pulled down sixteen rebounds.

This is the second time this year that the Redmen have fallen to the Iona squad. The first time was by a score of 64-56 at the Trenton Invitational Tournament.

With a 10-9 record for the season, the Redmen take on Vermont in Burlington Saturday.

Trackmen Trounce UConn As Nine Records Tumble

by GENE COLBURN '64

The Univ. of Mass. varsity and freshmen indoor track team combined on Wednesday night to put on one of the most stunning displays of power ever witnessed at Curry Hick's Cage. UConn was the victim, and the scores tell only half the story. The Redmen varsity won by a score 80½-32½, while the frosh triumphed by a score of 92-21. On the way to victory, both the varsity and the freshmen set 4 new records. Connecticut, not to be completely outdone, also set a record. Every one of the varsity records was a Cage record.

Ward Stars

Usually when records are broken someone can be singled out as the best performer. Such was not the case Saturday night. Co-captain Dick Ward won the high jump, the 35-lb. weight, and the 16 lb. shot. He set a new Cage record in the 35 lb. weight of 60'1¼", as he easily outdistanced the former Cage record of 53'8½". This record is all the more impressive when it is realized that Ward threw outside on the athletic field. Dick's toss of 53'8½" in the shot put set a cage and varsity record. The old record was 48'½". The freshmen broke their shot put record too, as Al Morin tossed the shot 44'4¼", besting the old record of 43'7½". Sumoshi and Martin, both from Conn, also bettered the old record.

Lewis Jumps To Record

Fred Lewis, terror of the football field, became the terror of the runways. Taking only 2 jumps out of a possible 6, Fred irradicated the Cage and varsity broad jump record. His first leap of 22'6½" set a new varsity record, and his second jump of 22'11½" set a new Cage record. Lewis also won the dash, and in a trial heat he missed the record by only one tenth of a second. This performance is even more incredible when one realizes that Fred has had very little practice.

The majority of the records were broken in the running events. Mel Parsons carried the load of 3 men for Conn. He not only scored over ½ of the Huskie's total points, but also accounted for the only record set by UConn. Parsons competed in the broad jump, the high jump, the 45-yd dash, the low hurdles and the high hurdles. He accounted for 17 points and set a new record in the low hurdles of 5.1, breaking the old record of 5.3. The only person who beat Parsons in the number of points scored was freshmen John Mederios, who accounted for 18 points while competing in the dash, the low hurdles, the broad jump and the high jump. Mederios also set a record in the low hurdles, his time of 5.2 erasing the old standard of 5.3.

O'Brien Wins "600"

Ken O'Brien and Bob Molvar both scored 10 points, and in so doing they showed why the track team is so strong in the middle distance events. O'Brien put on a great final lap burst to nip UConn's Bob Oberg in the 600, in what was one of the closest races all night. (Ken trailed Oberg 'till the gun lap, where he jumped into the lead. He took about a 5 yard lead, but he had to fight Oberg off coming down to the wire.) Both boys beat the cage record of 1:15. Oberg ran a great 1:14.9, only to be beaten by a still greater effort on the part of O'Brien who turned in a time of 1:14.6. Both boys competed in the 1,000 also, and once again O'Brien came through as he called in a reserve of strength to beat out teammate Jim Wrynn, as Oberg, visibly tired, fell back to third.

Molvar Double Winner for Frosh

Bob Molvar won the freshmen 1,000 and mile with great efforts. (Molvar's time of 4:29.6 in the mile broke the record every step of the way.)

In the 1,000 Molvar had to put on a great burst of speed in the last lap as he just nipped teammate Bob Larson at the finish.

Larson opened up a 5-yard lead and seemed to have the race won, but Molvar kicked with ½ a lap to go and caught Larson coming off the last corner. Molvar's lunge at the tape got him across first. His winning time of 2:23 bested the former record of 2:24.8. Larson's time was 2:23.1.

Even in events where records weren't broken good performances were turned in. UMass swept the mile as only 1.1 seconds separated the first 3 finishers. Dave Balch won with a time of 4:27.1. Jim Wrynn got second with a great closing kick that almost caught Balch and Bob Ramsey was third with a surprising performance of 4:28.2, and in so doing.

In the 2 mile Bob "Digger" Brouillet was the class of the field as he won going away with a time of 9:31, only three seconds off of the cage record. Dick Blomstrom, Bob Avery, and Tom Panke all ran good races as they finished behind Digger in that order. Only 3 seconds separated them as Blomstrom ran 9:51, Avery ran 9:52, and Panke ran 9:54. The next meet for both varsity and frosh will be next Wednesday, Feb. 20, at Tufts against Tufts and Brown.

Centennial Committee Institutes New Award

by AUDREY RAYNER '63

An award "to show the appreciation of the student body for those teachers and administrators who take time out to concern themselves with the students" will be presented to a member of the faculty, administration, or other University personnel at Student Leaders' Night, Student Centennial Committee Chairman John Gounaris has announced.

The award is a sterling silver figure of Metawampe, the Indian symbol of the University.

In recognition of dedication and service to the students of the Class of 1963, the award will be given on the basis of his advisory or educational assistance to students.

"In view of the recent controversies over 'publish or perish' ", Gounaris said, "we as the student body are showing our appreciation to those persons who make an effort to take time out for the students above and beyond the call to duty."

To Initiate Tradition

This year, the Metawampe award is sponsored by the Student Centennial Committee, to initiate the tradition which, starting in 1964, will be sponsored annually by the Senior Class. It will be registered in the University Handbook as a Senior tradition and will be presented annually at Student Leader's Night.

The symbol of the University is a ten-inch figure cast in sterling silver, encased in clear plastic Lucite, and mounted on an ebony base. A plaque with an engraved dedication to the recipient is mounted on the base.

Nomination blanks, which will be distributed at the Lobby Counter of the SU during this week, are available for the entire student body.

The nominations will then be reviewed by an ex-officio committee of persons filling major campus posts. This group will make the final selection from the suggested names.

Committee Members

These positions, and the corresponding names for this year's committee, are as follows: President of the Student Senate, Donald Cournoyer; President of the Senior Class, Gordon 'Skip' Oakes; President of the PanHellenic Council, Barbara LaVallette; President of the Inter-Fraternity Council, Stephen Israel; President of Revelers, George Gaughan; President of Mortar Board, Jean Bruen; President of Adelphia, Mike Rosenthal; Editor of the Index, Alan Savat; and Editor of the Collegian, Audrey Rayner.

This year's Metawampe Committee is chaired by Gounaris. In future years, however, the Senior Class President will preside and the extra position will be filled by a member of the Senior Executive Council.

The entire student body is urged to fill out the nomination blanks, which require reasons for selection, and must have the student's name and class written on them.

Don Moore To Discuss Philippines

Miss Anna Tayco (see below) of the Philippines reminds us that Donald Moore will give a lecture with slides on the "Philippines '63" in the Council Chambers of the S.U. tonight at 8 p.m.

"Philippines '63" is a travel, work, study program for the Summer of 1963 in the Philippines. UMass students may apply to be among the U.S. students chosen to be a part of the program this summer.

Miss Tayco and several others connected with the Program will be on hand to talk about their experiences and answer questions.

ANNA TAYCO

Dr. Kissinger To Give Talk Tommorow

Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, Harvard University professor and advisor to the U.S. State Department on foreign policy, will give a public lecture tomorrow at UMass.

Dr. Kissinger's speech, a critical review of American relations with Western Europe, is scheduled for 4 p.m., in the Commonwealth Room of the SU.

A nationally-known scholar, Kissinger is professor of government at Harvard and the senior staff member of Harvard's Center for International Affairs.

The author of several books and numerous articles, Kissinger received the Overseas Press Club citation and the Woodrow Wilson prize in 1958 for the best book on government, politics, or international affairs.

Special Centennial Program Features Aid To Education

by JEAN ST. LAURENT '66

U.S. Senators William Proxmire and Clifford Case, Professor of Politics Russell Kirk and News Commentator Louis Lyons will be featured here in a special Centennial Program on Federal Aid to Education sponsored by the UMass Distinguished Visitors' Program.

The program will include a keynote talk by Senator Proxmire on Federal Aid to Higher Education on February 28 at 8 p.m. and a panel discussion March 1 with moderator Louis Lyons and panel members Senator Case and Dr. Kirk and two others not yet chosen.

Proxmire Impressive Record

Senator Proxmire scored victoriously in a special election following the death of Senator McCarthy. The 44-year-old junior Senator from Wisconsin, often compared to the state's famed "Fighting Bob LaFollette," was born in Lake Forest, Illinois.

In 1941 he entered the Military Intelligence Service and retired with the rank of First Lieutenant five years later. In 1952, 1954, and 1956 he was the Democrats' nominee for Governor of Wisconsin. After his special election to the U.S. Senate in 1957, he was re-elected in 1958 to the full six-year term.

RUSSELL KIRK

He has served as Chairman of the Subcommittee on Small Business, Banking and Currency Committee, the Subcommittee on Economic Statistics and the Joint Economical Committee.

Case "Dedicated to Public Service"

The senior U.S. Senator from New Jersey Clifford Case has addressed some 40 colleges and universities. Graduated from Rutgers University where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, he received his law degree from Columbia University.

He served nine years in the House of Representatives and is now serving his second term as U.S. Senator to which he was elected by the largest plurality given any Republican across the country and also the largest majority ever won in New Jersey by a candidate for statewide office.

An outstanding legislator, he well merited the appointment to three of the Senate's most important committees - Appropriations, Armed Services, and Aeronautical and Space Sciences. He has been active in matters concerning urban areas such as mass transportation for which he sponsored legislation to create better coordination of highway and mass transit planning.

"A very splendid American

and dedicated to public service," were the words former President Eisenhower used to describe Senator Case. In 1960 he was selected by 50 Washington newsmen as one of the Senate's ten "ablest men" in a pool by Newsweek. While in the House, he was named by Liberty Magazine as one of the ten outstanding Senators and Representatives of the 82nd Congress.

Kirk Leading Intellectual

Writer, editor, lecturer, professor of Politics, Dr. Kirk has been featured in Time and Newsweek as one of America's leading intellectuals.

He writes and speaks on conservative thought, educational theory, and literary criticism. He has lectured on nearly 150 American campuses and his daily column "To the Point" appears in newspapers throughout America. His best known book The Conservative Mind dealing with political theory has also been published in London, Madrid, Zurich and Rome.

Dr. Kirk was founder of the quarterly journal Modern Age and is now editor of the quarterly University Bookman.

He holds six university degrees, among them a B.A. from Michigan State University, an M.A. from Duke University and a doctor of letters from St. Andrews University in Scotland, making him the only American to hold the highest arts degree of the senior Scottish University.

UMass Will Participate In '65 Bridge Tournament

UMass will be one of the more than 175 colleges, universities and junior colleges throughout the country which will participate in the 1963 National Intercollegiate Bridge March 3.

Prof. Harold W. Smart will serve as tournament director at the University for the competition, which is sponsored by the Association of College Unions.

Traveling trophies and plaques will be given the college participants winning the national titles—one cup for the college of the team scoring highest on the East-West hands and one cup for the college of the North-South hand winners.

Each of the four individual national winners will receive a smaller cup for his permanent possession.

All play will be by mail and will be conducted on the individual campuses in a single session. The hands have been analyzed by William Root, contract bridge authority, who will determine campus, regional and national winners.

In all, some 2,700 students representing 175 colleges located in 48 states, the District of Columbia and Canada participated in the tournament last year.

"The National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament Committee, a part of the recreation committee of the Association of College Unions, is interested in developing contract bridge as an interesting supplement to the collegiate social program," Harold Smart, local tournament director, said. The current competition is the 14th annual renewal of the tournament.

International Weekend Theme Set

The Common Market, because of its current interest and importance, has been chosen by the University's International Weekend Committee as the theme for this year's weekend to be held here March 15, 16 and 17.

Format of this, the tenth annual Weekend, will comprise a keynote address by someone intimately connected with the Market, two panel discussions, an informal coffee hour and various exhibits. In addition, the University's International Club will sponsor a dance on Saturday night, March 16.

The New York Newspaper Strike:

"I cannot foresee any end of the strike. I'm confident it will be settled some time, but there's not the slightest indication now that it will—may—come to an end in a matter of weeks. More likely it will be a matter of months."

—F. M. Flynn, Publisher of the New York News

GOODELL LIBRARY

Last October the student body was polled concerning the extension of library hours. Of the three suggestions offered in the Collegian, two were unanimously approved: that the reserve desk remain open until midnight Sunday through Thursday and that the Library be open after 4:30 until 10:00 p.m. for study hall purposes on Saturdays. Library and administrative officials cooperated and the new hours were put into effect on trial pending student use. As part of this experiment Mr. Hugh Montgomery, Head Librarian, and his staff compiled statistics to judge the worth of staffing the Library adequately to provide the necessary services. The first semester experiment was not as successful as we would like to have seen, as the following statistics attempt to explain.

The statistics compiled show that the Library use is, for the most part, lower than last year at this time. This is surprising considering the increase in the University population this year.

The following are figures reached by a three week averaging of attendance on Dec. 1, 8, and 15. On Saturdays the new hours from 4:30 to 10:00 show the following attendance: at 5:30 an average of 42.6 students; at 6:30, 30.6 in attendance (but the lower number can be atributed to supper hour); at 8:00 attendance was at a peak with 53.5 and at 9:00 it was 46. On Sunday afternoons, Dec. 2, 9, and 16, the averages are as follows: at 4:00 p.m., 326.3 attendance in comparison with the corresponding 1961 Sunday average of 385; at 8:45, 386 and 363 in 1961; at 10:30, 95 and 79 in 1961; and at 11:30, 38 in comparison with 23 in 1961. These last three hours show a favorable increase although the all day Sunday attendance for the three Sundays, Dec. 1962, was 845.3 in comparison with 850.6 in Dec. 1961. The new reserve desk hours have not been utilized as much as library officials would have wished. The average per hour of reserve books being read in the library between 10:00 and 12:00 giving the highest possible estimate is, at 10:00, 9 books and at 11:00, 2 books.

Our library, despite many feelings to the contrary, is an excellent and fast growing one. On a recent Phi Beta Kappa inspection the delegates were duly impressed with the collection of books being compiled. In ten years the book collection has risen from 260,000 volumes to 2,000,000, and the next 10 years should see even greater growth. The University of Illinois with a population of 28,000 will not remain open later than 10:00. This is understandable since, with the later hours any library faces problems in adequate staffing. The noise problem present may deter many from the library, but as Mr. Montgomery has put it, "We try to provide a quiet place to study and the best possible book collection, but we can't be policemen."

Additional late library hours are a privilege which, if not utilized more often and more efficiently, will not be available in the future. We feel that with crowded dormitory conditions and course demands, library services at these hours are necessary, but it will take more participation on the part of the student body to convince library officials that they are not wasting their time.

Paganini Quartet

VALENTINE CONCERT

by LANGDON LOMBARD

On Thursday night, February 14, Valentine's Day, the campus of the University of Massachusetts was pleased to have the Paganini String Quartet of the University of California perform a program of quartets from three representative periods of musical history: The Romantic Era (Schubert), The Contemporary Era (Bartok), and The Impressionistic Era (Debussy). There was a full house at Bartlett Auditorium.

For those of us who liked the composers of the eras above mentioned played in a romantic vein, there was to be no disappointment found in the performances of these three quartets. There was a great sweep of romantic grandure to each piece that was presented exemplified by their playing. This was true of each quartet that the Paganini Quartet performed.

For the others who liked some sort of separation between the eras represented in the program, there was to be only disillusionment and despair.

There are those critics who feel that Romantic music has a great amount of feeling and amount of self expression. They realize that when the music is not played with the right attitude or without the proper combination of group solidarity the piece being performed becomes quite limp.

Perhaps the greatest example of this last comment is to be fund in the rendition offered in the sixth Bartok Quartet, the second work offered by the quartet. It was mentioned to the audience by the first violinist, Henri Temianka, that Bartok had certain amounts of wild Hungarian music. This was especially true of the third section of the piece described by the program notes as "a grotesque dance." I am sorry to say that this member of the audience did not find this especially grotesque.

What then might be pointed out as an underlying fault overall? Perhaps the violinist again could be cited for a reasonable answer. He did mention that the mesto beginning of each movement served as a unity to the work. This mesto is a rather solemn bit of musicality designed by Bartok to present his feelings about his not being a famous and feted composer any longer. It is my suggestion then that this sort of solemnity over-rode the general intent of the other settings intended by the composer.

There is also the rest of the program that set a mood for the entire concert. Upon glancing at the other two works we can see that neither had the outlandish romantic fervor say of a Brahms Symphony nor a Beethoven Piano Concerto. Therefore the program was interested in presenting pieces that were languid in nature.

If then, this is what the Paganini String Quartet was interested in presenting to an audience of college-age men and women who do not have the training to accept the aesthetic beauty of messages inherent in the several pieces presented to be of the highest of caliber, then might it not be suggested that they give pieces of a more palatable nature, designed to create in the audience a desire for three encores forced upon the Beaux Arts Trio rather than the one encore requested by an apathetic audience present to hear chamber music at its best on of all nights, Valentine's Day night?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

". . . Groundwork of Discipline . . ."

To the Editor:

I had the unfortunate experience of disturbing the self-appointed hierarchy centered in the heart of the student services department of Machmer Hall. On an innocent mission, I was met with discourtesy befitting a common criminal. In the future, I wish that the curt and snide secretary of that groundwork of discipline would treat the students with whom she comes in contact with some so-called human respect regardless of what that giant of human understanding may expect of her. CLASSICS ON WMUA

To the Editor:

Re: "A seven-night-a-week listener,":

Since you too seem to listen to the most popular radio station on campus, the educational station, might I point out to you some facts that seem to have escaped your most careful notice.

Classics is on Saturday night and Musicale is on weekday nights, Sunday through Thursday. Further, it is the Sunday Musicale which has initiated the new semester "with another outstanding feature," as you so aptly put it, a three week special historical discography of Richard Wagner (the last program of which will be Sunday night, February 24, for your information).

More important, though, I'd like to add that I feel the editorial comments to which you object so much are a vital part of that "particular announcer's" delivery, separating the Great Performances from the others, which serve as striking contrasts.

As I have said previously, WMUA is making a conspicuous effort to render their programming educational this semester.

THE FLYING REDMEN

Tomorrow night the Finance Committee of the Student Senate will consider a request for funds for the "Flying Redmen" Air Force Drill Team. The purpose of this request is to support the "Flying Redmen" so that they can travel to Washington, D.C. to participate in the annual Cherry Blossom Festival.

It will come as no surprise to anyone that the "Flying Redmen" have done an outstanding job of representing the University. They have appeared in many parades, on local T.V. and in several regional and national competitions. The "Flying Redmen" have not only represented the University by appearing many times before the public, but also they have enhanced the name of the University by winning so often. They have won the regional championships of Area A (NewEngland and upper New York) eight out of nine years.

The "Flying Redmen" must be considered as much a part of the University as are the Band, the Chorale, or the Collegian. The Military Department is a regular part of this academic institution. The drill team is a voluntary organization that is conducted by student cadets with the aid of Faculty Advisors—the exact system used by other organizations supported by the Student Senate.

The question might arise, why doesn't the government provide all of the necessary funds? One must remember that the drill team is a University of Massachusetts organization. One must also realize that the government does contribute most of the funds and all of the supplies necessary for the continuation of the drill team. It does not seem logical that we should accept the major portion of the team's support from the government and then turn around and ask for more.

We would like to add a word of caution here. The request for funds for the "Flying Redmen" is not to be associated in any way with the question of voluntary or compulsory ROTC.

The drill team puts in many extra hours a week on any activity which they enjoy and which helps the University. The question of aid to this organization should be considered in the light of benefit to the University and benefit to members of the student body who enjoy participating.

On Campus with Max Shulman

THE CURSE OF THE CAMPUS: NO. 1

Hate me if you will, but I must speak. We college types are far too complacent. Sure, we've got plenty to be proud of. We've got atom smashers, we've got graduate schools, we've got new peaks in scholarship, new highs in academic honors. And yet, in the midst of these triumphs, we have failed dismally to make any progress in solving the oldest and most horrendous of all campus problems: we've still got roommates.

To be sure, all roommates are not bad. There is the well-documented case of Hilquit Glebe, a student at the Manhattan College of Agriculture, majoring in curds and whey, who admitted publicly that he actually liked his roommate—an odd admission when you consider that this roommate, Mervis Trunz by name, was frankly not too winsome a fellow. He practiced his tympani in his room, he kept an alligator, and he collected airplane tires.

But, on the other hand, Mervis bought two packs of Marlboro Cigarettes every day and gave one of them to Hilquit and—I ask you—who can stay mad at a man who gives you Marlboro Cigarettes? Who, upon tasting that flavorful blend of Marlboro tobaccos, upon drawing through that pure white Marlboro filter, upon exulting in this best of all possible cigarettes, Marlboro—who, I say, can harden his heart against his neighbor? Certainly not Hilquit. Certainly not I. Certainly not you, as you will find when you scurry to your nearest tobacconist and buy a supply. Marlboros come in soft pack or Flip-Top Box. Tobacconists come in small, medium, and large.

But I digress. Roommates, I say, are still with us and I fear they always will be, so we better learn how to get along with them. It can be done, you know. Take, for instance, the classic case of Dolly Pitcher and Molly Madison.

Dolly and Molly, roommates at a prominent Midwestern girls' school (Vassar) had a problem that seemed insoluble. Dolly could only study late at night, and Molly could not stay awake past nine o'clock. If Dolly kept the lights on, the room was too bright for Molly to sleep. If Molly turned the lights off, the room was too dark for Dolly to study. What to do?

Well sir, those two intelligent American kids found an answer. They got a miner's cap for Dolly! Thus, she had enough light to study by, and still the room was dark enough for Molly to sleep.

It must be admitted, however, that this solution, ingenious as it was, had some unexpected sequelae. Dolly got so enchanted with her miner's cap that she switched her major from 18th Century poetry to mining and metallurgy. Shortly after graduation she had what appeared to be a great stroke of luck: while out prospecting, she discovered what is without question the world's largest feldspar mine. This might have made Dolly very rich except that nobody, alas, has yet discovered a use for feldspar. Today Dolly, a broken woman, squeezes out a meagre living making echoes for tourists in Mammoth Cave.

Nor has Molly fared conspicuously better. Once Dolly got the miner's hat, Molly was able to catch up on her long-lost sleep. She woke after eight days, refreshed and vigorous—more vigorous, alas, than she realized. It was the afternoon of the annual Dean's tea. Molly stood in line with her classmates, waiting to shake the Dean's hand. At last her turn came, and Molly, full of strength and health, gave the Dean a firm handshake—so firm, indeed, that all five of the Dean's knuckles were permanently fused.

The Dean sued for a million dollars, and, of course, won. Today Molly, a broken woman, is paying off her debt by walking the Dean's cat every afternoon for ten cents an hour.

UMass Riflers Take Top Honors At YanCon Meet

Demonstrating stability and depth that has been characteristic of the Varsity Riffle Team throughout the season, the UMass shooters outclassed all teams in the Yankee Conference with their victory in the annual championship match for the 1962-63 season at Durham, New Hampshire. UMass took the lead after the first targets were scored and kept substantially ahead for the remainder of the meet.

Co-captain Hal Butterworth spearheaded the Redmen attack as he fired in the first relay and took top honors. Hal fired well in all positions and posted scores of 99, 94, and 91 in the prone, kneeling, and standing positions, respectively, for a total of 284.

Co-captain Frank Fluet also fired well with a three position score of 279. Frank posted a perfect 100 in the prone position. He followed it with a 94 kneeling and an 85 standing.

Sophomore Jim Carswell continued to prove his worth with an overall score of 277. Mark Nataupsky also totalled 277 out of a possible 300 in the three positions. Nataupsky led off with an 83 in the standing position but improved his scores in the prone and kneeling.

Jim Vermeiren was fifth for the Redmen but his 276 score was only three points behind second place Fluet which demonstrates the team effort. Vermeiren also posted perfect 100 score in the prone shooting as did Fluet and Nataupsky.

The UMass team total of 1393 was fourteen points higher than second place Maine with 1379. Vermont took third with a 1376 mark.

1. I'll tell you what you have to look for in a job. You have to look for fringe benefits. That's the big thing today.

Yes—the big thing.

2. You have to consider your needs. You're going to get married some day, aren't you? Then you need life and accident insurance.

Go on—go on—

3. You're going to have kids—so you'll want maternity benefits.

I'd like lots of children.

4. And what about medical bills? That's something every big family has to think about. You need a good major medical plan that covers almost everything.

5. And you're not going to want to work all your life, are you? You're going to want to take it easy—you know, travel around, live it up. So you need a retirement plan that guarantees you plenty of dough.

I can see it now.

6. That's why I say you have to look at the fringe benefits when you look for a job.

But don't you also have to look for interesting work, good income, the chance for advancement?

7. You sure do. That's why I'm going to work for Equitable. You get all those job advantages—and all the fringe benefits, too.

I admire your thinking.

Twitchell Scores 29 In 81-73 Redmen Loss To Catamounts

by STEVE HEWEY '63

A week ago this time Massachusetts was still in the running for the Yankee Conference crown. After dropping a Conference game to UConn early last week and another to Vermont Saturday night, 81-73, UMass could have trouble ending up the season in the Conference with a winning record. They are now 4 and 4.

The Catamounts, blown out of Curry Hicks Cage, 92-57, by the Redmen in the first meeting of the two teams early last month, got their revenge in more friendly surroundings, and they did so by hurting the Redmen in their weak point, the foul line.

Coach Fuzzy Evans' quintet, leading UMass 41-40 at intermission salted away 25 of 36 from the free throw line, many in the second half to protect their win. The Redmen managed to put in 9 of 17 attempts from the foul stripe.

Although Vermont never trailed in the sesond half, UMass caught them 58-58 with 9 minutes to go. Vermont capitalized on the hatched tactics of the Redmen to help themselves pull away again. UMass ended the contest with a couple of its key personnel benched for excessive fouls; Mike Johnson, Charlie Kingston and John Reynolds all left via the foul route.

Coach Matt Zunic's fourth Conference defeat was not entirely without bright spots. Rodger Twitchell, living up to his potential in games of late, led all scorers with a 29 point performance. Rodger was 12 from the floor and 5 from the line. At halftime he had 17. Under the boards Twitchell had a big night also grabbing 21 rebounds.

Incidentally, Twitchell needs but 41 points to establish himself as the school's fifth all time high scorer. George Burke '56 currently holds the number five spot with a career total of 805 points. "Twitch" now has a total 755 and has four games left this season to help him overtake Burke.

The all time career scoring total for a Redmen hoopster is owned by Doug Grutchfield, a 1961 graduate. Grutchfield closed out an illustrious varsity career at UMass with a total of 1257 points.

Four games remain on the Redmen schedule and all but one are on the road. Wednesday night finds UMass at Northeastern and on the following Saturday, they'll be home against UNH.

On Feb. 26 St. John's of N.Y. will be supplying the competition, and on March 2 the Redmen will be at Orono for the season's finale with the University of Maine.

With four games left, the Redmen are 10-10 overall and 4-4 in Conference standings and have lost the chance to better the 15-9 record posted by UMass last season.

WRING OUT THE CRYING TOWEL

To The Editor:

Upon reading Mr. Trelease's article about the Boston Celtics, it seemed to us that he contradicted his article (Feb. 6, 1963) on "The Intangibles" of the UMass basketball team. In that article he stated that our basketball team has been plagued this season with a multitude of injuries and by "questionable" officiating. His article sounded like those that we read in the Boston papers whose writers, for lack of material, seem to continuosly harp on the injuries and bad officiating that befall the Boston Celtics.

We are wondering where he dug up the information concerning Walter Brown's motives in keeping the West Coast to himself. We have never seen nor heard about any such plans; and certainly if there were any, they would have appeared in the Boston papers.

Just what is your definition of class? How can you call a team with such all time greats as Bob Cousy, considered by many the best back court man of all times, and Bill Russell, voted MVP of the year twice, a team without class? If you consider a cry-baby team one of lacking class, then by your own statements the UMass basketball team must have no class at all. And this we feel is far from the truth.

Eugene Burgin '65, Robert Maguire '65, Stephen Day '65

The Collegian welcomes written criticism from its readers, and is always eager to clear up any problems of misunderstanding. Thus, in answer to the above letter the Collegian presents the following facts.

1) No member of the UMass basketball team or its coach, Matt Zunic, has ever complained to the press about "a multitude of injuries", or "questionable officiating", but have remained remarkably silent concerning the subjects. In other words, the University of Massachusetts Redmen are not crybabies, and any information Mr. Trelease used in his article was not obtained from any member of the team but rather from his own observations.

2) Mr. Trelease's thoughts on Walter Brown's motives are admittedly conjecture, but the Collegian, as any other newspaper, reserves the right to print opinion as well as facts in its sports features.

3) We feel that Mr. Trelease made himself quite clear in his definition of "class", however for those readers who were unable to grasp it we offer this explanation: the fact that a man can throw a ball better, or run faster than another man does not make him a better human being, but rather it is how he goes about doing so that gives him the "class" to which Mr. Trelease was referring. This applies to teams as well as individuals. Ed.

Wrestlers Meet UConn Here Tomorrow At 4:00

On Saturday the University matmen finally ended their long victory drought. Showing that the promise they had demonstrated in the loss at Dartmouth was not just a flash in the pan, the Redmen grapplers dominated the Tufts Jumboes, in winning 21-13 to record their first win of the season.

Adding to the final UMass total were Boris Chevone, Charlie Sisson, and Craig De Wallace with pins and Mike Rivers and Mike Kelly with decision wins. Following the varsity match, the strong UMass freshmen pinned a loss on their Tufts counterparts.

Tomorow the grapplers face the BIG match of their season and that means none other than UConn. The Huskies lost 21-8 to Tufts in a meet a short time ago, and it is expected that this should be win number two for the Redmen. The match starts at 4:00 p.m. in the cage.

Rothschild, Bjornholm Star As Huskies Down Mermen

The University of Connecticut's swimming team defeated the U. of M. squad in Storrs last Wednesday night 57 to 37. In their last two meets the Redmen had easily beaten Holy Cross and the Coast Guard Academy, but they now stand on a record of 2 wins and 4 losses with three meets remaining.

Starring for Massachusetts were Mike Rothschild, who set two new records, and Mike Bjornholm, who won the 100 yd. free style in 53.0. Rothschild established 2:01.5 as the new goal in the 200 yd. free style and finished the marathon 500 yd. free style in 5:38.8 for a new record.

Bjornholm missed a turn in the 50 yd. free style sprint which disqualified him although he had won the race. John Grybko succeeded in beating teammate Charles Monnier by a touch in the 200 yd. breast stroke, but both were bested by a UConn swimmer.

The Redmen won the free style relay with the foursome of Ron Chiras, Bruce Morton, Bjornholm and Rothschild.

Redmen Outhustle Wildcats For Third Straight Victory

by ALAN RICE '66

It usually takes a losing team a long time to get and stay on the winning track, but for the Redmen hockey squad the transition from cellar dweller to world beater has taken only one week. The Massachusetts icemen capped wins over Connecticut and MIT with a rousing 3-2 victory over a New Hampshire six that was highly rated among New England teams. It took a top flight effort on the part of the Redmen to beat the Wildcats, but Mass was fired up for the win and put out with their most outstanding game of the year. John Lasher scored two of the three goals, but throughout it was the team and not any individual Redmen, that beat the Cats.

Hardly had the referee dropped the puck for the opening face-off than UNH scored their first goal which gave forebodings of a long night ahead for UMass. Peter Thompson slammed home a goal after ten seconds of play with the assist going to Dick Batchelder. Mass made sure no more such things happened again and they put the pressure on New Hampshire and kept play in their zone throughout most of the first frame.

The payoff came at the 15.37 mark. The Redmen had been firing on Wildcat goalkeeper Doug Dunning all period without success, but Lasher drove one past him on a play set up by Wolfe that evened the score. From then on the men from Amherst were never behind. With 50 seconds showing on the clock another Mass score hit the boards, again from the combination of Lasher and Wolfe. On a face-off near the UNH net Wolfe dug out the pack, kept it away from the Cats till Lasher had a scoring chance, and then sent it over to his wing who put it in.

Except for some great play in the New Hampshire net by Dunning, Massachusetts would have had one more score. Dick Haggerty of UNH was sitting out a two minute penalty at the 17.56 mark and the man advantage nearly accounted for a score. The Redmen converged on the Wildcats' goalie en masse and only three great saves by Dunning kept his team out of hot water.

The second period belonged entirely to the defenses of both clubs. No goals were scored though Skip Bowen of the Redmen and Doug Dunning of the Wildcats were forced to make a match of saves. Hard skating by Steve Kosakowski's charges prevented New Hampshire from closing the gap.

At 4.36 of the final stanza it became a new game when Dick Haggerty scored from Buzz Litteil to even the contest. For 13 minutes it remainded that way and seemed to be a carbon copy of the scoreless second frame. And it was only a superhuman effort by the first line that kept it that way. For a minute and thirty-four seconds Mass played with two men in the penalty box. It looked hopeless, but the trio of Frank Gilliatt, Charlie Glew, and Ed Quimby continually outfought the UNHers in the battle for the puck and succeeded in icing it so often that the Redmen were at full strength again before New Hampshire could put a serious charge on the Mass net.

When the score was decided at 17.31 it again was the number one unit up front. Frank Gilliatt powered a 25 footer past Dunning assisted by Quimby and Glew and the Redmen held on from there. In the closing two and one half minutes they fought like tigers in keeping their lead.

INTRAMURALS

The intramural league competition ended last week with only the campus championship to be decided. In the independent league the P.E. Majors, the Baker B's, and the BKP Pledges won five straight games apiece to win their respective divisions: A, B, and C. In dormitory leagues A and B, there is a tie for first place, with Hills South and Gorman both holding a 5 wins and 1 loss record in division A and Chadbourne and Greenough with the identical won-lost slate in division B. IFC opposition posed no threat to SPE in league A and LCA in league B as both teams swept their respective leagues with seven straight wins without a loss.

Tonight the fraternities will decide their basketball championship when SPE and LCA meet at 8:00 p.m. in the Cage. At the same time on the adjacent court the winners of independent leagues B and C, Baker B and the BKP Pledges, will be battling for a win.

At 8:45 the dormitories will settle their league ties with Hills South vs Gorman and Chadbourne vs Greenough in their respective leagues. This Saturday, our campus champion will play the university of New Hampshire's campus champion at 6:30 in a preliminary game and the varsity contest at 8:15.

Army Dep't May Promote Two Alumni

Two UMass alumni now serving with the U.S. Army have been nominated by President John F. Kennedy for promotion to the rank of brigadier general, according to the Department of the Army.

The two officers are Colonel Ralph L. Foster, a native of Greenfield who was graduated from the University in 1939, and Colonel Albin F. Irzyk of Salem, a 1940 graduate.

Both men trained with the old cavalry ROTC detachmen at the University, and both have served with armored organizations during their careers.

Colonel Irzyk is presently training and operations officer for the 250,000-man Seventh Army, with headquarters in Stuttgart, Germany.

Irzyk, previously commanded the 14th Armored Cavalry Regiment, which is responsible for patrolling a large part of West Germany's eastern border.

Colonel Irzyk's decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star with oak leaf cluster, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star Medal with three oak leaf clusters and the Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster.

Colonel Foster is presently assigned to the office of the deputy chief of staff for military operations at the Department of Army headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Effective this July, Colonel Foster will be transferred to the headquarters of the Eighth Army in Korea.

The colonel holds, among other decorations, the Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster and the Bronze Star Medal with oak leaf cluster.

GREAT DECISIONS

Campus Grant Discusses US - China Relationship

by RAISSA LANDOR '65

U.S. Policy toward China and the causes and significance of the Soviet-Chinese split were discussed Wednesday night by ten faculty and three students as a part of the nationwide Great Decisions talks centering this year on foreign policy.

This was the second of eight weekly Great Decisions discussions held on campus at 8 p.m. Wednesday evenings in Bartlett Lounge. New participants are invited to participate.

Reasons For Split Suggestion

Led by Prof. Ronald McHaffey of the UMass Math Department, the group's suggestions as reasons for the split included:

1) China, beginning to resolve its internal problems, is anxious to take a lead in world affairs, which Russia can not accept;

(2) As Russia is more active on the diplomatic stage than China, she is apt to be more liberal than China would wish. A good example of this is Cuba;

3) Albania;

4) A personality clash. It was suggested that Mao, as one of the founding fathers of the present Chinese regime, is contemptuous of Krushchev as a "young upstart";

5) A different approach between the two in handling the problems of underdeveloped countries. China is closer to Asiatic problems than Russia and so wants to be the dominant ruler in Asia. This was also suggested as the reason for the Chinese attack on India.

Supported Trade And Cultural Exchange With China

The group was almost unanimous in dissatisfaction with U.S. policy toward China and many said they felt China should be admitted to the U.N., the U.S. should end its non-recognition policy, and questioned support of Chiang Kai-shek.

Many of the group said they deplored the lack of available information on China and suggested approaching her through cultural and trade exchanges.

Next week's topic will be Algeria. At each session, an expert on the country being discussed will be present as a source reference to direct the inquiry.

Preparation for these sessions is offered on radio station WFCR Wednesday at 7 p.m. and Thursday at 8 p.m., on television station WBGH Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. and Wednesday at 8 p.m.

At the series' conclusion a representative of the group will be sent to talk with a Massachusetts congressman, stating the opinions of the group on foreign policy.

Senate Takes Vote On Three Budgets

In a fiery all night session, the Student Senate found its members at odds over a variety of bills. Among these were the WMUA budget and the loan act for the same organization. Also, a committee report started a verbal battle over the retention of one Senator.

Senator Philip Howard ('64 Mills) rose in objection to a decision of the elections committee retaining William Nichols as Senator, despite the fact that he no longer had a constituency. Senator Nichols represented Plymouth House, now a women's residence. Senator Howard stated "that we are a government based on law and equal representation for all."

Howard was answered by Senator Steve Gray ('64 Fraternities). Gray cited a 1951 General Court case which stated, in part, "There is no precedent for removing a person from office during his elected term, because of a change in representation or electoral district when such a thing is beyond his control."

The WMUA budget, along with a $9,700 loan fund was presented by Senator Ross Jones ('64 Brett). He pointed out that the repair costs on the capital equipment at the station have been steadily increasing. As an example he cited the fact that since 1958, the station has been forced to expand almost $3,000 on repairs to its equipment. He stated that to retain the old equipment would necessitate an outlay of approximately two-thirds of the total cost of new equipment.

Jones further stated "It might be well to point out that this budget will place the total operating equipment of WMUA in the hands of the students." The present equipment is owned by the University Audio-Visual Aids Center.

Senator George Jones (Married Dorm) ended discussion stating "that the transmitter broke down once during finals, and there is no guarantee that this will not happen again. We must get the new transmitter." The motion was passed on a voice vote.

Nobel Prizewinner Seaborg Major Centennial Speaker

Nobel prizewinner Glenn T. Seaborg will be the main speaker at Charter Day exercises commemorating the 100th anniversary of the founding of UMass, UM President John W. Lederle recently announced.

Dr. Seaborg, Chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, will head a distinguished roster of national leaders participating in the public event on April 29.

Charter Day, highpoint of the year-long centennial celebration at the university, will feature major discussions of problems in American education. Thousands of persons, including students, parents, faculty members, alumni, and friends of the University, are expected to attend the day-long ceremonies.

In announcing Dr. Seaborg as the main speaker, President Lederle said: "The University is proud to have such a distinguished citizen for its chief participant in the most important special event in the institution's hundred-year history. We expect that the Charter Day proceedings will in themselves be a significant contribution to the development of education in Massachusetts and indeed in the nation at large. On behalf of the entire campus community, I invite all of our citizens to visit us on Charter Day and to join with us in beginning our second century of progress."

R. GLENN SEABORG

The title of Dr. Seaborg's Charter Day address and the names of other major participants in the exercises will be announced later.

One of the world's most productive research chemists, Dr. Seaborg won the Nobel Prize in chemistry with Dr. E.M. McMillan in 1951. As reported in a Time Magazine cover story in November, 1961, A.E.C. Chairman Seaborg holds one of the highest federal administrative posts a U.S. scientist has ever attained. He has been a key figure in the development of whole new bodies of knowledge that have become cornerstones of modern nuclear science.

The co-discoverer of plutonium, Dr. Seaborg has been directly involved in the discovery of a long list of "transuranium" elements. During World War II, he led the plutonium section of the famed Manhattan Project at the University of Chicago Metallurgical Laboratory.

In post-war research Dr. Seaborg conducted pioneer studies in nuclear chemistry at the University of California's Lawrence Radiation Laboratory, where he was named Associate Director in 1954.

Dr. Seaborg was appointed to the General Advisory Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission by President Truman in 1946. A member of the Joint Commission on Radioactivity of the International Council of Scientific Unions from 1946 to 1956, he has also served on the Committee of Standards and Units of Radioactivity of the National Research Council. From 1959 to 1961, he was a member of the President's Science Advisory Committee.

Operetta Guild Slates Brecht-Weill Work

Three Penny Opera Coming To UM Campus

The UMass Operetta Guild and the Opera Workshop, in association with the Music Department, announce that The Threepenny Opera will be presented April 15, 17, and 18 in Bowker Auditorium.

According to officials of the Guild, The Threepenny Opera is one of the most exciting and challenging productions undertaken in the history of the Guild.

With the book by Bertolt Brecht and the music by Kurt Weill, this opera for beggars has been translated by Marc Blitzstein.

Just released to amateur musical theatre groups, The Threepenny Opera success story started in Berlin in 1928, then went on to Paris, Munich, Vienna, all German and all Central Europe. It took some 26 years before New York had any success with the piece—when it opened there in March, 1954, to fine reviews and great prospects.

Then a ridiculous situation presented itself: the theatre-owner had leased the house to another show. After 12 weeks The Threepenny Opera closed, though business was terrific. The last audiences were vocal and mutinous at the coming departure.

"Bring Back The Threepenny Opera"

Brooks Atkinson, New York Times drama critic, began waging a campaign by inserting neatly and regularly at the end of his other reviews: "Bring back The Threepenny Opera."

Then the theatre changed hands (after several flops), and on September 20, 1955, it started again. The show ran six years and three months, a record in anybody's language.

The chief song of the work, "Mack the Knife" (also called "Moritat" and "Theme from The Threepenny Opera") bounced onto the hit-parade four distinct times, becoming radio-television's "Song Hit of the Year 1959" in Bobby Darin's sensational rendition.

College students, sophisticates, and music-lovers continue to enjoy and acclaim Brecht's script and Weill's music. The UMass Guild, Workshop and Music Dept. now give these three sects the opportunity to participate in the musical here on campus.

In the words of the Guild's advisor-director, Dr. Doric Alviani, "The Operetta Guild exists to give students an opportunity to express themselves in the various artistic functions of performance and the several promotional occupations of musical theatre.

"All students in the Guild gain a degree of appreciation for creative activity in the musical and theatrical arts by realizing a script and score and giving them both life."

Casting for The Threepenny Opera involved exceptional consideration, for especially important in this musical is that characters interrelate in a striking manner and complement one another according to size, age, and dynamics.

Only after ferreting out talent from all possible sources, including area colleges, was the cast chosen.

Rehearsals will begin soon. Names of the cast will be announced in the Collegian within the next week.

"No man is justified in doing evil on the ground of expediency." —Theodore Roosevelt

Perspective—

by G. MASSELAM

American thought has had a long tradition of separation of church and state. Is this founded on irrational fear of a religious body infiltrating into the power of our civil government, or is there a certain rationale involved?

Society as it develops in a community puts obvious limitations on itself; these evolve on various levels. The most forceful of these, of course, is the monopoly of violence, our government, which protects one man from another and tends to develop an overall cohesion in the community. But man is not satisfied with merely a civil limitation. There is another limiting body incorporating the emotional. This enters into the realm of religious values which are of an exclusive nature. We are forced in many ways to assume the limitations of our civil government, but we are not impelled to assume the values of any particular religious body. Therefore, this religious body becomes a group which is exclusive of a great deal of society.

A religious body works for its own ends, and not the ends of the whole society. Public funds, allotted for public use, is one area, but public funds given for the use of an exclusive body is a subtle form of discrimination. Thus, by its very nature a religious body restricts an arbitrary group from being involved in its program, thus violating the freedom of the individuals outside of the group.

Certainly the civil government and the church (any religious organization) represent two imposing forces. Each in its own way controls the destiny of men's lives. Their ends may be similar, but their means are totally contradictory.

The government, through the laws and courts, exerts its authority. However, a religious organization with an authoritarian hierarchy, partly by offering the truth and salvation, grips its members. Now everyone is involved in the governmental structure, but to be involved in a particular religious group involves personal choice, and this group becomes a private enterprise. To give money to this private group would be an infringement on the rights of others who have paid taxes and yet are not involved with this religious group.

Education is a slow development of the awareness of a person. Certainly public education must be done in an objective, universal method with no tinges of religious atmosphere included. (This is particularly true in a society made up of many religious sects.) This has obviously been stated by the Supreme Court decision prohibiting prayers in public schools. To give money as an aid to a school system which has its emphasis in a religious dogma would be directly violating the constitutionality of the spirit of our laws. Anyone should have the freedom to choose his own truth. This is the realm of the personal. To allot public funds for the use of this personal choice, this personal organization, detracts from the whole public welfare.

Hungry For Knowledge

Among the many improvements in this our Centennial year is the policy of instant traditions. The one we mention here is the sterling silver, lucite encased, ebony based, placqued and inscribed award to the teacher or administrator most appreciated by the students. However, even the best teachers can't eat sterling silver Metawampees. A true show of student appreciation would be a financial aid to the professor so devoted to his profession. D.B.A.

ANTHROPOCENTRISM

Man is the center of all things. This is not a revelation. This was thought by Ptolemy, who supposed the earth to be a fixed center of the Universe, about which the sun and the stars revolve. As we go into space exploration, the idea that the planets in our cosmos are moving away from us was a prevalent idea, but with the coming of Einstein's relativity, comes the theory that motion is only relative to the earth. Anyone on another planet looking towards the earth would expound the same theory; that the earth was moving further distant.

Just as these physical observations were found to be relative, so was the observation that man is the center of his universe a relative imputation. In his daily life man encounters many fleeting relationships with his contemporaries. This fleeting attribute is a source of consternation to him. But does man react to the source of his dismay, his anthropocentrism? Does he realize the implications of his day to day associations? The only way in which man can lead a full life is to give of himself and to forget that he is the God in his world. Universality, love, catholicity are terms which are in common usage in our phraseology. But these words can only come to fruition in actual exercise and practice. Anything which is worthwhile entails a giving of one's self. This is not easy for man to accomplish, for it evokes a suppression of one's own ego. But the greatest happiness comes of giving, and to quote the profound simplicity of Robert Frost, "Happiness makes up in height what it lacks in length."

At the University, the student undergoes a metamorphosis. The plane of his thoughts is raised with the increasing awareness that comes of education. In every course of study the student is made to feel the significance of his environment and his relation to it, whether the study be scientific, historical, or social scientific. But, what remains for men to see is that only on a man to man basis, on an equality of give and take, can man rise to that level which is meaningful. Man as an individual is unimportant. It is men that are important. It is man functioning with man, passion reacting with passion, that fulfills individual goals. Man must diversify the realm of his feelings that they might reach out to others.

Nations too are anthropocentric. Aside from the obvious fact that they have not yet been able to deal with their own individuality, their own problems, they can not successfully communicate with other nations of the world. We find an individuality and nationality in every nation. This pride in nationality is suggestive of people. The nations of the world have historically cried out "Look at us, we are strongest." Today, this is exemplified in estranged East-West relations. The answer lies through understanding.

Man must live, man must do, man must react to the needs of man. P.F.L.

CHAMBER CONCERT

Few people seem to know that Student Senate meetings are open for student scrutiny. It would be useful and enlightening for students and senators alike to have the rear of the Senate filled with interested students. Senate meetings are generally held on Wdnesday nights, at 7:00 (or when they have a quorum). A polite and attentive audience can find it an education in itself to sit for just an hour in the Chamber.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor's note: The Collegian does not often print letters the length of the one that appears below, but owing to the exceptional nature of this letter we are printing it in its entirety.

To the Editor:

We have read many editorials written by the students complaining of bad conditions of University property which affect them. We the students and student-wives of County Circle would like to tell you about our living conditions.

Twenty adults and an average of ten children live on each of the three floors of Hampshire and Suffolk Houses. Eight of these thin walled apartments consist of two rooms and the other two are three room apartments. In three of these three room apartments at the present time families of five live. In some cases families of four live in the two room apartments.

The apartments are not the most ideal places for married students to live in view of the income which the University of Massachusetts receives from them. Several promises were made five years ago when the decision was made to increase the rent, none of which have been carried out. Instead of carrying out its responsibilities to its married students in an improved manner, as promised by the higher rent, the University has become increasingly preoccupied to the complete exclusion of the problem of its married population, which now comprises about 10% of the enrollment.

A few of the complaints cited by the residents of County Circle are: limited space, inadequate kitchen units for which parts are no longer made, over sized closet rods, amazing scarcity of storage and closet space, uneven heating which is not regulated with changes in the weather, poor screening and extremely drafty windows resulting in constant colds for many children. Many parents are contemplating calling the Board of Health on this particular problem. Other sore spots are the community bathrooms and one telephone to service thirty families, not including the lack of the University telephone line which the other campus dorms have received.

Many professors and students look upon this area as a prime candidate for an urban renewal project. We wholeheartedly agree and think it is about time the promises accepted in good faith were kept and needed improvements were made. $2,765 is received each month by the University Treasurer from these two buildings. Even if the essential improvements are carried out many feel the University should also lower the rent until it is more in keeping with supposed low cost of a state university education. At schools like Princeton and Syracuse married student housing is of a higher quality and lower cost than at our state university. Since maintenance at County Circle has been kept at the barest minimum (some believe the condition is inexcusable) the rent is ridiculous.

The exteriors of the buildings of County Circle, including Berkshire and Middlesex (Stockbridge dorms) and Plymouth (now a girls' dorm), have been in a dilapidated condition for years. We have been promised brick facing and believe this should be done as soon as possible since the white cinder blocks are an eye sore to the community and when the sun shines creates many sore eyes.

We were also promised a play area with play equipment for our children. Up to date nothing has been done. In fact the present small fence is in such poor condition that it should be torn down. As it is now children have streets on all sides of them and the prospect of another large one—the main entrance to the University. Thousands of cars will be traveling on this road each day and threaten the lives of our small children. We propose that immediate action be taken to remedy this already dangerous situation by building a fence around the entire area. Shrubs also would protect the children and enhance the University. To further enhance this area the simple job of harvesting the hay around the cinder parking lot would be a marked improvement.

Improvements are needed in the inside as well. The hallways and bathrooms are badly in need of paint. Some acoustical material to limit the excessive hall noise is lacking. An enclosed porch built onto the north end of Suffolk House and the south end of Hampshire would alleviate the problem of where to put our baby carriages and children's tricycles.

A few other accomodations we of County Circle would enjoy are a full cellar that would contain a study area, a recreation room, a place for drying clothes in the winter, and a storage area.

The married students are as much a part of the University as any single student; we pay the same tuition, taxes, health fee, athletic fee, etc. and take an active part in campus life. Students' wives are a part of the University picture; many attend classes and many work on campus in varied capacities. Why must we be relegated to the bottom of the pile?

Sincerely yours,

Gloria V. Buck

UMass Skiers Beat Lord Jeffs For First Time In 22 Years

The University of Massachusetts Ski Team placed second in the Northeastern University Giant Slalom at Intervale, New Hampshire, Saturday, February 16th.

New England College took top honors with UMass placing a close second. Amherst College placed 3rd, Northeastern 4th, and Tufts 5th.

This race marks the first time in 22 years that the Redmen Skiers have defeated Amherst College.

Steve Deane from N.E.C. was the top individual with Wayne Smith from Northeastern, and Dick Davidson of Amherst placing 2nd and 3rd respectively.

University skiers placed as follows: Richard Hurlbut 5th, Eric Schuhle 7th, Tom Clark 11th, Don Burgess 19th, Norm Carpenter 26th, and Clark Bowlen 37th, out of a field of 55 racers.

Tufts sponsored a two run slalom Sunday at Wildcat in which UMass placed fourth.

Redmen Tracksters Take To Road For Two Meets

The varsity and freshmen indoor track teams take to the road this week. Tonight, both teams will compete in a tri-meet with Tufts and Brown. Brown and UMass will be battling for team honors with the Jumboes acting the role of spoilers. Aside from the battle for team laurels there will be some excellent and close competition.

Bob Farley of Brown has run a 4:11.8 mile, and Larry Smith of Tufts is a top flight dashman, and Ian Cohen, also of Tufts, is a strong middle distance man.

Saturday both teams will travel to Northeastern, the meet starting at one o'clock. Northeastern finished second in the recently held Greater Boston Collegiate Championships. They are always a strong team, and the meet is usually a very close affair. Last year Coach Footrick's Redmen prevailed by one point. The results of the two meets will appear in Monday's Collegian.

Pistol Team To Compete In West Point Tournament

The varsity pistol team finished up its road trips with the NRA Sectional Tournament at West Point on Saturday the 16th. After losing to a second place nationally ranked Coast Guard 1368 to 1325, at New London on February 2nd, the Redmen competed in the sectional tournament against the nation's top two teams, West Point and Coast Guard. Although outgunned by the powerhouses, the team fired a four man score of 1049, only 10 points less than the high UMass score fired in 1961 when, led by All-American Roy Fritz, the team placed 11th in the nation.

Is this the only reason for using Mennen Skin Bracer?

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.

LIEUTENANT BOB AKAM, B.S. IN AVIATION ADMINISTRATION

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?

Look at it this way. I like the idea of doing challenging work. That's why I volunteered for Special Forces. So you can see why I felt pretty good when the Army assigned me to Europe! Here I really feel I'm doing something for the cause of my country in these important times. How many jobs can you think of that start you off with this kind of responsibility? My wife's here, too, and she loves it. We get a chance to travel. We meet the people, learn new languages, customs. And there's a pretty active social life on post, too. But above all, I'm an officer with a job to do and with responsibilities to shoulder. I like it that way, and I have a hunch that my leadership training and experience will help me out whatever I do. Take it from me, if you're already half-way towards your commission, see it through. It's a good deal. I know."

Jack Molinas — Bounced From One Court To Another

by JIM TRELEASE '63

"The same old charitable lie
Repeated as the years scoot by
This time will certainly fit—
You really haven't changed a bit!"

There were those who insisted that Jack Molinas was the incarnation of Joey Evans from the pen of John O'Hara; a bum and a heel.

To others, Jack Molinas was the sinner repented.

It was a humid summer night in 1959 and a noisy crowd had crowded into a Queens, N.Y. playground to be treated to the rarity of top-notch basketball in July. It was a double header affair featuring then-current college stars in the opener, followed by professional players in the second game. The affair was sponsored by a group called the Courtsmen. This New York City organization was formed in 1959 to raise money toward college scholarships for basketball players whose potential in high school was not recognized by college scouts and whose grades were of college quality. What made the Courtsmen noteworthy was the presence of Sherman White and Floyd Layne on the charter membership list.

White and Layne were just two of the 32 college players involved in the 1951 basketball scandals. Now, almost ten years later, they were set on aiding youngsters in profiting by their 1951 mistakes. "We're trying to offer guidance to young players," they said. "We want to make them aware that college is not a springboard to sports stardom. That, first of all, it is for an education." It took courage for White and Layne to show their faces on a basketball court again and before a crowd they had once "sold out"; but the time for running was over. It was time now to show that one mistake early in life was no basis for mistakes forever afterward.

White and Layne were not the only memory-stirring faces on the asphalt that summer night. Sharing team births with professionals Ray Felix, Walt Dukes, Wilt Chamberlain, and Woody Sauldsberry in the second half of the twin-bill, was Jack Molinas. To most players in the NBA and hardcourt circles, Jack Molinas was the sad victim of circumstance.

As a college star at Columbia, Molinas brought All-America honors to the Gotham city. His coach Lou Rossini, now at NYU, rated his 6-7 center as a "great." In his senior year, Molinas led the Lions to an undefeated regular season before suffering an opening loss in the NCAA tourney. No wonder New Yorkers loved this lad who brought national honors back to the city so many good schoolboy players ignore after high school. Despite pressure from various people to pass up the NBA in favor of law school, Molinas signed with the then Fort Wayne Pistols of the NBA.

Several years later in the mid-1950s, the National Basketball Association announced they were suspending Jack Molinas for life. The season-long squad of investigators employed by league President Maurice Podoloff had turned up evidence to prove that Molinas had bet on his professional basketball games. These were not the small kind that Alex Karras supposedly placed in the NFL, but big, green bets. This his gambling was on his own team, rather than against it, was not sufficient motive to rescind the lifetime ban. Thus ended the playing career of Columbia All-America Jack Molinas.

If I had made one mistake, I was not about to make another, Molinas said. He applied to law school, was accepted, and disappeared into the relative obscurity of the classroom again. Thus, it came as a surprise to many when Molinas appeared on the basketball court that summer night in 1959. Since it was a benefit exhibition tilt with the $500 profit going toward college scholarships, there were no restrictions placed upon his playing. Molinas, like White and Layne, wanted to show that he too had learned by his mistake. When questions began to fly soon after the game, it was learned that Molinas' rehabilitation had moved him to pass the bar examinations and he was now a qualified lawyer.

In 1960, Molinas brought suit against the NBA in regard to their lifetime ban on his eligibility. His remarkable efforts at rehabilitation were presented and discussed, but Jack Molinas lost again. The ban stayed. People across the country read of his troubles and offered sympathy. A poor victim of circumstance? Read on!

A week ago last Monday, Jack Molinas was back in New York City, the city that had once honored him with their hearts and applause as few athletes have been honored. And on that same Monday, Jack Molinas was back in court again; court—that hallowed institution he had aspired to from childhood but which seemed to wrong him throughout life. This time there were no misgivings, no circumstantial evidence, no short-changings. This time it was 10-15 years in prison for Jack Molinas who was proven to be the "master fixer" in the basketball bribe scandal of 1961 involving 47 players and 27 colleges.

Proceedings showed Molinas' roots to be deep in the Chicago underworld and St. Louis mob scenes. The mask of rehabilitation was ripped from Molinas' unrepentant face. Judge Joseph A. Sarafite of New York State Supreme Court lamented that "unfortunate" fact that Molinas ever had been admitted to the bar and sentenced him as "a completely amoral person."

The morning after Molinas' trial, somewhere in these United States a college senior picked up the newspaper and read the trial results. There must have been a strong sense of revulsion when he crossed Molinas' name, knowing that Molinas played basketball one summer evening four years ago in order to raise $500 toward this college education the reader was about to complete . . . and all the while Molinas was merely posing behind a mask in order to dig the ground work for bribe contacts with college players like St. Johns' Tony Jackson who played in the first game of the double header that night.

Alpha Phi Omega To Hold Open Smoker On Monday

Greedy gray flannel suits . . . brown leather briefcases . . . the gigantiplex of bureaucratic bureaucracy towering over the masses, and resembling a giant mound built by refugee ants from a science fiction flic . . . all this and more bring to mind, for some people anyway, the image of organization.

It is an image which does have a basis of truth. But there are organizations which do not resemble anthills or even worm holes . . . Alpha Phi Omega, the national service fraternity, which has a chapter, Kappa Omicron, on the UMass campus, does not fit the above image.

Now of course A.P.O. hasn't been investigated by the House Un-American Activities Committee, the Federal Bureau of investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency, or the Good Housekeeping Institute, but it still holds a fairly revolutionary position . . . this being a sense of dedication to service.

A.P.O. is an organization of men who are interested in service to the campus, the community, and the country. Amazingly enough in a day and age when computers figure out that one-tenth of a certain cereal flake equals one-fifth a champion or that there is increased Strontium 90 in all those atomic cows and radiated Rhode Island Reds, this interest in service can turn out to be fun.

Persons interested in seeing what A.P.O. is really like are invited to a smoker to be held next Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U.

Adelphia To Sponsor Leadership Program

Mortar Board, Maroon Key, Scrolls, Sophomore and Freshman class officers and other student leaders from a wide range of campus activities are working with Adelphia, the Senior men's honorary society, to sponsor the first student-run UMass Student Leadership Program.

The program's two principal objectives will be: 1) to evaluate the role of extra-curricular activities as part of a student's total education; 2) to aid in developing leadership abilities in the freshmen and sophomore students. Most of the program will be devoted toward the development of leadership capabilities in the underclassmen.

The idea for the program originated with the Freshmen Workshop sessions that were conducted last year by University student services personnel, but the Program will differ from the Freshmen Workshop in several respects. Program instructors will be present student leaders rather than University personnel and the Program's scope will be broader.

The program will be held on two Saturday afternoons from 1 to 4:30 p.m., March 9 and March 16. Primarily intended for freshman and sophomore students, it is an excellent opportunity for any undergraduate to learn from the practical experience of present student leaders.

Participation in the program implies no obligation to those attending other than their attendance at both Saturday afternoon sessions.

Interested sophomores and freshmen should fill out application blanks that will be available in the RSO office of the SU beginning tomorrow. Forms should be returned to the RSO office by 5 p.m. on March 4.

Freshmen and sophomores who are selected to attend the Program will be notified through the Collegian on March 6.

The Program is under the direction of Adelphian Andy D'Avanzo, who is chairman of the planning committee. Other student leaders involved in the planning and instructing phases of the program are: Marilyn Singer; Bill Wilkinson, President of the Keys; Ann Williams, Sophomore Treasurer; Bernie Dallas, President of the Freshman Class; Alan Savat, Editor of the Index; Penny Kone, Sophomore Secretary; Don Cournoyer, President of the Student Senate; Bob O'Leary, President of the Sophomore Class; Jean Bruen, President of Mortarboard; Mike Rosenthal, President of Adelphia.

Two Students Dismissed For Stealing

by JOE BRADLEY '64

Two University students were recently dismissed following a recommendation from Men's Judiciary, Chief Justice Gerald W. Anderson '64 stated yesterday.

The students were dismissed after admitting that they had stolen and sold books, Anderson said. He pointed out that stealing belongings from fellow students, the University Bookstore, or any other place would result in disciplinary measures.

"We will not condone theft of goods by the Student Body for any reason or purpose," he said. "This is a matter to be well informed in, since there can be no excuse for not knowing," he said.

Although this problem is not unique to the University community, Anderson stated, action in these cases was extraordinary.

He added that the student disciplinary organization is interested in the prevention of acts which could result in disciplinary action against the offender.

"This information is intended for student assimilation to prevent any misunderstanding of the penalties for misconduct," Anderson declared.

Forms for acceptance to the new staff of Caesura for '63-'64 may be obtained in the Barnstable Room of the SU on Thursday, Feb. 28, between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m.

Lichterman, Horn Will Appear In DVP Centennial Program

Dr. Martin Lichterman, Executive Secretary of the New England Board of Higher Education, and Francis H. Horn, President of the University of Rhode Island, will join Senator Clifford Case, and Dr. Russell Kirk for the Distinguished Visitors Program Centennial panel discussion on Federal Aid to Higher Education Friday at 8 p.m. in the Women's Physical Education Building.

The DVP's special Centennial Program starts Thursday with a keynote talk by Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin at 8 p.m. in the WPE. The entire program is open to the campus without charge.

The impressive slate of panelists will be moderated by Dr. Louis Lyons, Curator of the Neiman Chair since 1946 and a UMass graduate, class of 1916.

Lichterman Noted Scholar

1939 cum laude graduate of Harvard College, Lichterman received his M.A. in American History from Harvard in 1947 and his Ph.D. in American History from Columbia University in 1952.

DR. MARTIN LICHTERMAN

His present position is that of Executive Secretary of an interstate agency of the six New England states, established by Compact among the six states for the purpose of enlarging and improving opportunities in higher education for the youth of the region.

Starting as a teacher of history at Seward Park High School in New York in 1946, he became an instructor for the department of History at Rutgers University from 1946 to 1951. He was a research assistant at the Center for Research on World Political Institutions of the Woodrow Wilson School of Princeton University.

Univ. Theatre Plans For Show Production

"Hello, Amherst Fire Stations? Could you bring some grappling hooks over to the University right away? Yes, sir, it is an emergency. No, not that kind. Well, oh, we're putting on Androcles and the Lion and we need hooks to pull the martyrs bodies out of the arena after the lions have eaten them, and . . . Hello? Hello?"

Being on a properties committee for a show is not necessarily the dull, mundane job many people think. Ask the crew for the University Theatre's third production, Androcles and the Lion, about the props needed and you'll receive a withering look plus a list of props guaranteed to make cowards of the strongest men.

Grappling hooks are only the beginning. Also included are baskets specifically for carrying pieces of human anatomy, swords and cudgels of various types, and a gladiator's trident and net (used against another gladiator with a sword).

One of the most important props is a cat—not any ordinary cat, mind you—but an exceedingly tranquil animal that will sit quietly on ol' animal-lovin' Androcles' lap for an entire scene. This cat must not, under any circumstance, be tempted to climb up scenery, run among audiences, or in any way disgrace himself before an august group of Christians and Roman nobility.

These and other wonders will be seen in the University Theatre's forthcoming production of G.B. Shaw's Androcles and the Lion which will take place under direction of Cosmo Catalano in Bowker Auditorium March 8 and 9. Tickets will be on sale in the S.U. box office March 4-8.

Oh, yes, also needed is a thorn of a sufficient size to cause a lion great anxiety when thrust into his paw. Anyone have one?

UNBROKEN BARRIER

Early this academic year an editorial appeared in the Collegian (Monday, Sept. 17) entitled "The 2.5 Barrier," asking for reconsideration of the requirements for summer reading courses. No apparent results came from this article, and the condition still cries for repair.

Summer reading courses offer students with a 2.5 cumulative average or better an opportunity to buy the books for a course, read them at home, and take a registration day test to obtain full classroom credit for the course. This opportunity to gain credits is a privilege that should be used by all capable students. The problem now arises as to who is, or is not, capable.

The abstractly set requirement of 2.5 does not appear to be a suitable basis for judging student ability. The lower-cum student who obtains an A or B in English (or can obtain a teacher's recommendation in that field), seems as capable of succeeding in reading courses as a person with an overall standing of 2.5 who may only have a C average in that subject. Then, the cum is often no indication whatsoever of a student's work. Consider the student who has a rocky start, but soon (perhaps with a change of major) is doing excellent work. His cum would probably not measure 2.5, though his ability might well be greater than his average indicates.

Thus the idea of a cumulative average requirement for work in specific areas seems illogical. If these were "advanced" or "honors" courses, they could be justly limited to the higher cum students on campus. However, these are standard curriculum courses, and should be offered as such even when arranged for summer reading. The special discussion groups on campus are fine, but the encouragement of scholarly endeavor is only stymied by this 2.5 requirement.

With the limited number of summer school courses being offered, revision of this entrance requirement could offer many more qualified students opportunity to gain academic advancement this summer. Student response to this situation might also help.

SPEAKING FREELY

What sort of a speaker should be invited to a college campus? Among other things, this depends upon the occasion, the sponsoring group or program, and the campus itself. For localized "departmental" lectures, obviously someone who is an expert in the particular field and will be speaking within it would be the best choice.

But what about general addresses, such as those under the auspices of our Distinguished Visitors Program? The first requirement is that the topic be one of general interest, and that those attending will in some way benefit from contact with the lecturer. So far, the DVP has invited speakers principally in two fields: politics, and writing/publishing. The latter seems to have been selected because of its more universal appeal, and the former because even though many students are actually indifferent to world politics, they ought not to be; it was a good compromise. (The only glaringly erroneous choice by the DVP was a pianist-comedian who was not even well-known, much less distinguished.)

An outstanding characteristic of most campus speakers is that they are on "our side." They feed back to us our own views and national or Western or "free world" concepts; the guests are chosen to be non-controversial, and although their lectures are, at best, quite informative and inspiring, they are not too likely to be provocative.

But what happens when a school decides to invite a controversial figure to speak? Generally, so many indignant protests appear that they don't decide to do so in the first place. (This is known as being discreet, discriminating, and conservative.) The Dean of Students at the University of Washington refused to allow the Young Socialist group there to invite a Communist to campus for a debate, citing that the school's policy specifically forbids the appearance of representatives or spokesmen of the Communist Party. Yet Wayne State University and the University of California have policies which allow controversial speakers on campus, one specifically stating that it shall not be the governor who will decide on prospective visitors.

An address by Benjamin Davis or George Lincoln Rockwell would not "poison our minds;" such speakers would not instantaneously convert us to Communism or Nazism. In fact, if the views of such groups are as subversive or absurd as they are reputed to be, we, as intelligent individuals, would realize this all the more poignantly from hearing their spokesmen. But if their views really are rational—ah, there's the rub! Then we might learn that views other than our great American ones are also sensible, and we might become tolerant and peaceable toward other politically-oriented nations. And that would never do!

So for these reasons, no one would think of inviting a controversial figure to campus, certainly not here, at a state university, in Massachusetts. But to do so would probably be quite beneficial, and-at any rate could do no possible harm, other than that mentioned in the previous paragraph.

And would that really be so terrible?

In Appreciation

To the Editor:

As a lover of chamber music, I feel it a distinct privilege to have been one of a warm and responsive audience gathered in Bartlett auditorium last Thursday evening to hear the Paganini Quartet. I would like to thank the Concert Series committee of the University for making this possible.

In forty years of concert going, I have been privileged to hear many world-famous string quartets and I say, without qualification, that the Paganini Quartet gave one of the finest performances I have ever heard.

It was an evening of fine music which will always be a treasured memory.

The Fine Art of Spending

To the Editor:

Recently a most interesting matter has come to our attention.

At the beginning of the school year, the Student Senate gave the Fine Arts Council $1200 to be used specifically for a Fine Arts Festival. A stipulation was made requiring Student Senate approval for any use of this money other than for the intended Fine Arts Festival.

Somehow or other the Fine Arts Council seems to have forgotten the minor matter of Student Senate approval. This respectable group (fifty percent of whom are faculty members) has already spent $250 for a guest speaker for the University Theater. The remaining $950 has been promised to such groups as the Chorale ($150), and the Art Club ($500). — All this activity has taen place without the approval (or disapproval) of the Student Senate. As a matter of fact, the Student Senate has just been informed of the incident.

Congratulations to the Fine Arts Council for an amazing display of unauthorized use of the Student Tax Dollar.

Inter-Dorm Conflict

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in protest of certain procedures which are being followed in the formation of a new organization on campus which is to be called the Inter-Dorm Council.

I wish it to be known that while I am in agreement with what this organization stands for, I feel that the manner in which it is being put into effect is despicable. This campus, we are told, is run on a democratic basis. The best example of this is our Student Senate, whose members run the fiscal aspect of campus organizations. The members of this organization are elected by a referendum vote of the students they are going to represent. Every student has the right to vote either for or against any candidate for this body.

I'm sure that if we, as students, were not given the right to vote for our representatives, we would not feel so inclined to support this body by paying the various taxes which enable it to function in its primary capacity as budget creator.

However, this is what we are being asked to do in the case of the Inter-Dorm Council. In fact, we, as male students, are, for the most part, completely ignorant of even what this organization's official duty is. All we have been told is that we are going to be assessed so much per student to support it. Moreover, even our elected representatives in our Dorm Council were not given the right to approve or oppose, as the case may be. The decision was left to one person per dorm—the President of the Dorm Council. As a resident of Brett House, I know for a fact that the majority of its inhabitants were 100% opposed to this organization. This was discussed by us at a meeting held in the early part of last semester. The only person outspokenly in favor of it was the president, who, in this case, certainly did NOT represent the opinions and views of those who elected him, either directly, or indirectly. We were told then that it was out of our hands, and that what we wanted didn't matter. It had been decided that this was a good thing, and that all we had to do was pay for it.

I would like to reiterate that I am in accord with the general principles of this organization. We have been told that it has worked well for the girls' dorms, and that it will work well for us. Nonetheless, the mere fact that so many people in my dorm were opposed to it would suggest that at least some of those in other dorms would be opposed to it. I feel that these people should have been given a chance to voice their opinions, either directly, through referendum vote, or indirectly, through pressure on their elected representatives in the individual dorm councils. Possibly the inventors of this "beneficial brainchild" were afraid that cranks or general apathy would defeat it. Nevertheless, this is a right guaranteed by democratic principles.

I would hope that this does not become a precedent, for it would be just as easy to push aid for dependent Mau-Maus by this method, as it evidently was to ensure the formation of this unwanted organization. A few more dictatorial edicts of this sort would most certainly destroy the remnants of any democratic entity on the campus.

Let Fly Our Redmen

To the Editor:

Speaking for Drill Team commanders Cabana and Vander Burgh, I wish to thank the Student Senate for the appropriation which makes it possible for the "Flying Redmen" to make their trip to the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C., this year. I know that the Drill Team will do their utmost in this competition so that we may all be proud to have them represent the University and the President's home state.

Re: that same old problem!

Many thousands of dollars, I'm sure; 14 feet wide; best man-made river bed I've ever seen—right in front of Bartlett and the Libe. Do we have a grounds department to attempt draining the "new walk," or do they hibernate for the winter?

Art Department Announces Plans For Acquisition Fund

by MARCIA ELASOWICH '65

Following the present motif of University expansion, the Art Department recently announced their plans for the UMass Art Acquisition Fund.

Walter Kamys, the highly enthusiastic director of the Art Acquisition Fund, considers this project a great step forward in the expansion of University prestige.

Formerly, the University, due to lack of facilities, was forced to visit neighboring institutions, he said, in order to provide art studies for the students. Now, UMass students have the opportunity to examine the art works from the University's collection rather than being dependent on visiting exhibitions and classroom slides.

Between January 1962 and January 1963 the Art Acquisition Fund has secured 68 original works of art. Obtaining this collection has been, and will be, carried out by means of a $10,000 purchase fund and donations of originals by artists and interested benefactors.

The Art Acquisition Fund has concentrated its activities on contemporary drawings. By such a specialized program, the Art Department hopes to create an area of interest, Mr. Kamys said. Also, drawings are highly feasible due to their relative inexpensiveness.

Mr. Kamys said he feels this representative art form is highly valid for drawings are the basis of all art forms. The reflections of the artists are often apparent in his drawings and these clues, Kamys said, might lead students to a fuller understanding of art.

Other types of art will be included, although the primary augmentation of the collection will be by drawings.

Along with its permanent collection, the Art Acquisition Fund plans to institute a study collection. Worthy students and relatively unknown artists will have their works placed in this study collection. If the board of directors feels that these pieces will strengthen the permanent collection, they will be purchased.

Upperclassmen Are Eligible To Apply For Peace Corps Work In New York

by ELAINE CORSI '66

UMass students who will have completed their sophomore year by June are qualified to apply for the United States' domestic Peace Corps, Women's Placement Officer Carolyn Hawes has announced.

Improvement and expansion of vocational, educational, recreational, social welfare and health services for the youth in central Harlem are the primary aims of the domestic Peace Corps.

As a result of the success of the international peace corps, a pilot domestic project was initiated on January 28, 1963 to help the underprivileged people of New York's Harlem district.

Domestic peace corps volunteers will concentrate their work in seven action areas which include employment; housing; urban renewal; health, education, and public welfare; voter registration and the new Negro.

A program in the interest of youth for a better community, the peace corps has received applications from twenty-one states across the nation.

Sociology of urban community life, minority groups in America, human growth and behavior, educational methods, delinquency and addiction are some of the problems studied.

Training Includes

The two months of formal training includes both classroom and on the job training in social agencies and schools.

In evaluating the effectiveness of volunteer training, the three things considered are values and attitudes of students before and after training, skills, and conduct, and the impact on the youth served.

Housing, classroom, seminars, cafeteria, gymnasium, a swimming pool, and first aid rooms are some of the facilities arranged for the workers. Complete insurance coverage for health and liability is also provided.

Upon completion of their training, the volunteers will be assigned to work in the areas of housing, labor, education, voter registration, health, aged, unwed mothers, and community and vocation centers.

Emphasis is placed on increasing volunteer skills in working with young people on individual, group, and community basis.

Contact Placement Office

Any UMass students, who will have completed their sophomore year by June and who are interested in helping underprivileged people, are asked to contact Miss Hawes in the placement office. The second pilot project is scheduled to begin on June 3, 1963.

In describing the domestic peace corps, Miss Hawes declared, "It is a national opportunity which is going to help us internationally." We will achieve "better international relations only when we have worthwhile national relationships," she said.

Trackmen Lose Two Meets As Pole Breaks And Fists Fly

by GENE COLBURN '64

At the beginning of last week the Redmen track team had visions of a great season. Now they are hoping that they will be able to finish above the .500 mark after a series of meets in which UMass didn't seem to get a single break. Last Wednesday night the Redmen lost a heartbreaker to Brown in a tri-meet with Brown and Tufts. The final score was 55—53.5—32.5.

In the middle distance and distance events UMass ran into one of the few teams that can match the Redmen in these events, and lost. The men from Providence took first and second places in the two-mile run and first and third in the mile. In the 1,000 Ken O'Brien beat both of the Brown boys only to lose to Ian Cohen of Tufts who set a Jumbo record of 2:19.4.

The pole vault event was indicative of the Redmen's frustration. This was the last event of the evening and the result of the meet hung in the outcome. On his first try at 10' Dave Sadowsky's fiberglass pole snapped and he blacked out. After recovering, Sadowsky went on to win the event with a leap of 12'. Despite this great show of courage Brown still managed to get enough points in the event to clinch the meet. The frosh lost by a score 45-34, with John Medeiros scoring eighteen of the Redmen points.

Saturday, against Northeastern, the Redmen luck was just as bad. UMass lost by a score of 60-53, as four meet records and one cage record fell. Dick Ward continued his fine season as he set a cage and meet record in the 35 pound weight event, with a toss of 60'7". Dick also won the high jump and was second in the shot put.

Bob Brouillet won both the mile and the two-mile events. Ken O'Brien officially picked up only five points by winning the 1,000, but unofficially picked up five extra points as he came out on top of an argument with Northeastern's Ben Flowers that threatened to turn the meet into a brawl. Flowers has become infamous for his racing "tactics", and Saturday he pushed "Obie" too far. Following an exchange of elbows during the race, the two boys started to square off but cooler heads prevailed.

The freshmen were more fortunate as they squeaked by with a 57-56 win.

Pucksters Win, 4-1 Over Brawling UNH

by AL RICE '66

The University of Mass. hockey team proved beyond doubt Saturday that last week's 3-2 win over the New Hampshire Wildcats was no fluke. The Redmen traveled to Durham Saturday for a return match with UNH and got more than they bargained for, but emerged with a 4-1 win over the Wildcats who started one brawl and committed numerous deliberate violations of the rules.

New Hampshire played before a Winter Carnival crowd of a few hundred and wanted desperately to avenge the loss they suffered here in Amherst. Their roughhouse tactics caused the loss of UMass' Frank Gilliatt in the second period, but it only served to fire the Redmen up more for the game. It was hardly necessary as they started out like a ball of fire and scored two goals on the Wildcats' Canadian goalie. They were already near the boiling point over a UNH publicity release that said UMass was going to get murdered and that their 3-2 was only an accident.

Gilliatt scored the first Mass goal a little after the midway mark of the first period. LaMontagne of the Wildcats evened the game a few minutes later, but the second line that has been a tower of strength for Mass for the past three weeks accounted for the lead taking goal at the five minute mark of the middle period. Gerry Wolfe scored with linemates John Lasher and Bob Lee picking up the assists.

This goal set up events for the rest of the game. UNH discovered they were not going to win the contest the way they were going so they started out to decapitate a few Redmen, in an attempt to improve their chances. The man they picked on first was Frank Gilliatt who won the last game with a goal with only two minutes left to play. UNH remembered Gilliatt well and when he scored the first goal at Durham it added fuel to the fire. While he was near the UNH net Gilliatt was jumped by the goalie and two others and thrown to the ice amid a rain of punches.

For some unexplained reason Gilliatt was thrown out of the game. The New Hampshire goalie was also tossed out, but that did not prove to be much of an advantage since the Redmen weren't having much trouble putting the puck by him.

The loss of Gilliatt forced Coach Kosakowski to make a quick line change and it turned out to be a stroke of genius. He moved Ken Palm up from the third line since the combination of Lasher, Wolfe, and Lee had been playing such spectacular hockey it was impossible to break it up. Just a few minutes after the fight Palm responded by firing the puck past the reserve Wildcat netminder. Charlie Glew picked up the assist. The process was reversed early in the final frame when Glew scored with the assist going to Palm.

That was the last of the UMass goal scoring but they needed no more. All three lines shared equal time in the third period and all were equally successful in keeping the Cats under strict control. The third unit traveled without Dave Higgins and when Palm was moved up it left them with only three men. Jim Mahoney, Allan Johnson, and Charlie Ruma played a good part of the final third of the game and excelled against the UNHers who were rolling up the penalties.

Their defensive job was equally good, though. Captain Gerry Clinton, Dick Phillips, and John Clayton played almost the whole game on defense and Skip Bowen starred in the nets.

Be sure to drop by the Amherst College Rink for the game with the Amherst team this afternoon. Game time is 4 p.m. UMass has won four straight and today's game shouldn't be missed.

Tuesday night, instead of Wednesday as originally planned, both the varsity and the frosh will meet the teams from Holy Cross at the Cage at 8 p.m.

The long-established Underwood Corporation has recently joined forces with youthfully aggressive Olivetti, Europe's largest manufacturer of office machines. With a complete range of electric and standard typewriters, and as distributors of adding and multiplying machines, calculators, accounting machines, electronic and data-processing systems within the United States, Underwood now offers the most complete line of office machines ever available from a single source.

Because of this recent expansion of domestic marketing facilities, and an increase in overseas operations, Underwood has established a management program for qualified holders of graduate degrees. The objective is to place qualified men in managerial positions as soon as they have indicated their readiness for this level.

Successful applicants will attend a three-weeks session at the Underwood training center. From here they will be assigned to Underwood marketing areas for on-the-job training. Duration of this training and future appointments are contingent solely on the progress and aspirations of each individual.

Redmen Clobber Wildcats 93-67, Face St. John's Tues.

Jack Reynolds Spearheads UM Attack With 26 Points

by STEVE HEWEY '63

The University of Massachusetts, hungry for victory after four straight setbacks, dined in style Saturday night at the expense of visiting New Hampshire, 93-67. Sophomore front court man John Reynolds spearheaded the rout of the Wildcats with 26 points, 16 of them coming in the second half.

The rather sparse crowd that turned out for the last Redmen home contest was treated to one of the best all-around team performances of the season. Coach Matt Zunic's squad placed four players in double figures and completely harrassed the visitors with its running game and ball-handling antics.

Both squads stumbled along through the first five minutes, plagued with erratic ball-control and poor passing. The lead see-sawed back and forth for the opening ten minutes until a Jack Reynolds layup put the Redmen out in front to stay 19-18 with nine minutes left in the first half.

Reynolds, Clarence Hill, and Pete Bernard kept the scoreboard lights busy in the closing minutes of the first frame breaking the game open and racing to a 47-30 intermission edge.

New Hampshire picked up where they left off in the first half. Time and time again their passes were picked off or sapped away leading to numerous Redmen fast breaks. UMass defensive pressures caused the Wildcats to get off hurried shots that missed the mark.

Meanwhile UMass had built up a 20-plus lead and maintained it for the remainder of the contest. New Hampshire's presence on the court was made known by some occasional fine shooting and rebounding by Jim Rich and Skip Gale in the second half. Rich ended the game with 16 points and Gale with 11.

The big scoring edge gave Matt Zunic a chance to give added experience to Dan Laakso, Elliot Gventer and Eldon Goodhue, all of whom hit the scoring columns. Gventer got the final basket of the game, a shot that hung on the rim for three seconds before dropping in.

John Reynolds, taking over after Mike Johnson collected four quick personals in the opening minutes, enjoyed the finest night of his young varsity career. Known better for defensive talents than as a scoring threat, Reynolds treated the crowd with a sparkling performance in both categories. John was 9 for 14 from the floor and 8 for 11 at the line. He also pulled in 14 rebounds.

For backcourtman Pete Bernard, Saturday's contest provided the opportunity to pull out of a bad slump that has had him stymied for quite a while. Pete was a hot 8 for 11 from the floor and added a free throw for a game total of 17 points. Bernard was the sparkplug on a good share of the fast breaks including a behind the back, a la Cousy, feed to Reynolds who layed it in for the prettiest play of the night.

Clarence Hill, 13 points, Rodger Twitchell (16) and Chuck O'Rourke (8) gave the Redmen attack a balanced touch. O'Rourke nabbed 15 rebounds and the "Twitch" 13.

Saturday night was one of the better of the season as far as UMass field goal shooting went. Hitting on 39 of 83 from the floor, UM clicked for 47 percent. UNH was a so-so 23 for 63. In the free throw department, the Redmen were off as usual making but 15 of 30.

Record-wise, UMass is now 11 and 11 and must grab a victory in each of the remaining contests to end the season with a better than .500 mark. Both games are on the road which does not make the task any easier.

Tuesday night the Redmen will be at New York for an engagement with St. John's. Last year St. John's compiled one of the East's best records, 21 and 5. Graduation hit St. John's hard but they are still strong and one of their latest wins was over nationally ranked Notre Dame last week. Incidentally St. John's University also goes by the nickname of the Redmen. The season's closer is at UMaine Saturday.

Hills South Captures Intramural Crown

Hills South won the intramural campus basketball championship last Thursday evening when it defeated the Physical Education majors by a score of 33 to 24.

On the road to the final play-offs, Hills South encountered and defeated Gorman Dormitory, 40-24, for the league A crown and then went further to win the overall dormitory division in a very close win over Greenough 41 to 40. These wins put Hills South in the final play-off game with the P.E. Majors.

Earlier in the week the Physical Education Majors came up against rough competition. They slipped by the Beta Kappa Phi Pledges 29 to 26 on Tuesday night and in the last ten seconds on Wednesday evening they broke a tie ballgame with Sigma Phi Epsilon to win 32-30.

In the championship game, Bob Taylor was high point man for Hills South with Moore and Smith, his teammates, throwing in 9 and 6 points respectively. For the P.E. Majors, Harrington and Trembley both contributed 8 points apiece.

The intramural championship basketball game scheduled for last Saturday between New Hampshire and UMass was cancelled by New Hampshire because of prior winter carnival activities planned for that weekend.

Ex-OAS Delegate To Lecture Friday

Jose Luis Cruz-Salazar, former Guatemalan ambassador to the United States and representative to the Organization of American States, will lecture at UMass Friday, at 4 p.m.

Cruz-Salazar, a candidate for the presidency of Guatemala in November's elections, will speak on "Latin America—Opportunity Through New Leadership."

His talk, to be given in the S.U., is open to the public without charge. The program is sponsored by the departments of history, romance languages and government and the Economics and International Clubs.

The diplomat and political figure will discuss Guatemalan and Latin American social, economic, and political problems, the question of communism in Latin America, and the role of the Alliance for Progress.

Cruz-Salazar, 42 years old, is a retired Guatemalan Army colonel.

Member of 1954 Junta

He was a member of the three-man military junta which ousted the Arbenz regime from power in 1954. Resigning from the junta when order was restored, Cruz-Salazar was named ambassador to the U.S. in August, 1954.

While in Washington as ambassador and representative to the O.A.S., he was elected vice president of the O.A.S. council.

After running unsuccessfully for the presidency of Guatemala in 1958, Cruz-Salazar headed the opposition party until he was named minister of communications and public works.

He resigned that post last September to lead the opposition party once more and to begin his campaign for the presidency in the November, 1963 elections.

Maroon Key To Select New Men

The process of selection for next year's Maroon Key Society began yesterday with the distribution of notices of eligibility to all eligible freshman men.

Any freshman male with an average of 2.0 or better is eligible.

The selection process is officially begun with the submission of applications. A list of eligible candidates is then published in the Collegian and elections are held soon after.

Every freshman man, regardless of eligibility, votes for the candidate of his choice. Following this election a list of the remaining candidates is published.

These elected candidates are interviewed by one of this year's Keys, and his UMass activities are reviewed through his housemother, counselor, and academic advisor.

The final selection is made after each candidate has appeared individually before the entire body of Maroon Keys. Members of next year's Maroon Key Society are tapped at Student Leader's Night on April 30.

Applications will be available in the RSO office Thursday and Friday of this week from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. and on Saturday 9:00 a.m. until noon in the lobby.

Further notices concerning Maroon Key selection will be published.

Gaughan also announced that Campus Varieties will be produced by Revelers this year on May 3 and 4, 1963. More information concerning this will be made public in the near future.

Student Tax Rate Going Down After Three Years Of Boosts

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

The 1963-64 Student Activities Tax will reverse a three-year trend of rising taxes, according to Senator Ross Jones, Student Senate Budgets Committee chairman.

He cited two reasons for the change: An increase in students, Jones stated, would bring in greater funds; however, this would be partially offset by the increase in needed services (more issues of periodicals, etc.) He stated that a careful scrutiny of each and every budget by the committee before it reaches the Senate floor will be instrumental in the drop.

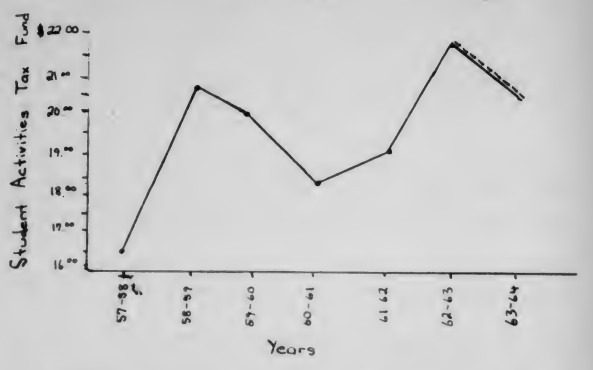
This care pays off in both time and dollars in that all Senate members have full information at hand on each and every budget, thus facilitating the task of passing on the budgets.

The projected budget for the year 1963-64 will be a record $144,600 (approx.) Of this, approximately $136,000 will come from the tax fund, the remainder coming from returns on loan funds, the sale of the "Mugbooks", and other sources.

The per capita tax will amount to $10.25 per semester, a drop of 5% or 50c a semester over last year.

The tax is based on an estimate of 6800 students in the first semester, and 6500 the second.

Senator Jones stated that the Budgets Committee is trying to keep a high rate of services on campus without needless spending.



Meetings for Frosh, Soph Men

There will be an important meeting for all freshman and sophomore men tomorrow, Feb. 28.

Frosh and soph dormitory residents should check the residence hall bulletin boards for details about exact times and places.

The meeting will be held in the dormitories.

Plans Are Underway For '63 SWAP Conference

"Plan ahead" seems to be the motto of the 1963 SWAP executive board and planning committee.

Meetings have already been held and various suggestions have been studied and evaluated. Tentative procedures have been established.

What is SWAP? Literally, it is the Student Workshop on Activities Problems. This means that all campus organizations will send a capable representative to an off-campus "convention" in October of 1963.

This representative will hear talks by various noteworthy leaders and educators and will participate in discussions pertinent to the activity difficulties of his type of organization.

This spring a letter will be sent to all University organizations asking for suggested topics to be considered during the weekend.

The following are the SWAP executive board members: Bob Austin '64, Chairman; Priscilla Bradway '64, Secretary; Bruce Albro '64, Treasurer. The planning board includes the following: Ann Williams '65; Jan Reimer '64; Carol Sullivan '65; Gerry Anderson '64; and Jane Lunney '64. Advisors for the committee are Harold Watts and William Starkweather.

Androcles Is Coming

Rehearsing for "Androcles and the Lion" are (l. to r.) Thomas Kerrigan in the part of Julius Caesar, George Bergen (president of the RRD's—Roarin' Roister Doisters) in the role of the lion and Frank Powers, who will play the part of Androcles.

Internat'l Club Elects Exels, Vice President

The International Club elected four new officers Wednesday to replace the former vice president and three members of the executive committee.

The new officers are: Denys Voaden, England, vice president; Claudette Cacciabeve, U.S.A., Amr Ismail, U.A.R., and Arun Jhaveri, India, executive committee members.

The elections, conducted by Dr. John W. Ryan, one of the club advisors, were held during the weekly coffee hour.

The International Club holds coffee hours at the Farley Clubhouse each Wednesday at 5 p.m., and all interested are welcome to attend.

Club activities include dances, parties, discussions, and lectures held throughout the year. Membership is open to anyone who is affiliated with the University.

EXTRA - CURRICULARS

The question "how many extra-curricular activities are too many" has been with this campus for several years. One answer is that one activity is too much for some people, and others may be capable of participating in five or six extra-curriculars without impeding their scholastic progress. This answer, although quite general, is correct. Each student has a unique capacity for participation in extra-curriculars, and a unique desire to participate.

With this point of view in mind, Adelphia has conceived a new type of leadership program for freshmen and sophomores. The basic aim of the program is not to "sell" extra-curriculars, but rather to present a complete picture of extra-curriculars so that participants can draw their own conclusions.

Part of the program deals with advantages and disadvantages of the entire extra-curricular program. It makes good sense to us that the people who are involved in extra-curriculars know first hand the merits and liabilities of this type of activity.

Participants in the program will have ample opportunity to examine the various types of activities in which they may participate, and decide for themselves whether or not extra-curriculars are advantageous.

There is little doubt that some students on campus who are not now in any activities might benefit from extra-curriculars, just as there are others in extra-curriculars who would serve their own ends to lighten this outside participation to concentrate more on the academic side of student life.

A program such as the one Adelphia has organized will help freshmen and sophomore participants to orient themselves around a total education at the University, and to decide what part extra-curriculars should play in that education.

A QUIET DEATH

"This is the way the world ends
Not with a bang but a whimper."

It is very fitting that the so-called "graduating average ("1.8") bill" which would have required all officers of an RSO organization to maintain their graduating average to hold office died in a similar manner. At last Tuesday's Student Senate meeting, it was very quietly announced that the RSO committee had voted that no compromise was possible with the bill. This vote, in effect, has killed the bill for this year.

The bill stirred the passions of many during the debate in the Senate. We were no exception. We felt then, as we do now, that the bill was a violation of student's rights, and therefore has no place in a democratically-centered university. Its rejection by the committee is, we feel, a reaffirmation of the right of a student not only to join those organizations which he supports through his tax, but also his right to hold office in them.

In the light of the bill's rejection, it might be asked whe'her this or another bill of the same nature will be seen on the floor of the Senate. While we hope that such a day will never dawn, we must be realists, and remember the fact that there are those who feel that a college student must be led, who feel that students have neither the intelligence, nor the maturity to make their own decisions. Yes, the "graduating average bill" will be back, and we can only hope that the Student Senates of tomorrow will show the same foresight that the Senate of today showed in its defeat of this intolerable measure.

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

STRIKE: AN OPPORTUNITY

The New York newspaper strike may turn out to be a blessing in disguise. Our liberal professors now find themselves without their ready-made thought machine, the New York Times. Do not be disturbed by their pitiable lamentations. These are merely symptoms of mental indigestion.

Of course those who are used to the Springfield Union, the Boston Daily Record, the Globe, the Herald, and the like do not detect the present crisis. By this time, they have become quite adapted to the process of ingesting pre-digested capsules. A few of them, admittedly, exercise what energy they possess in thumbing through the glossy pages of Time or its more substantial counterpart, Newsweek. But how else is one to know who has died or what books not to read?

The most beneficial aspect of the strike, however, is that for the first time many now realize how remarkably bad our local newspapers are. With the notable exception of the Monitor, the editorial pages look like they have been thrown together by an editor whose favorite game is pin the tail on the donkey. Amidst editorials on hiking, we notice a Herblock cartoon and a photograph of Vaughan Meader with the caption: "Could anyone write 'A First Family' satire in the Soviet Union?"

For those who wish to delve more deeply (if this is possible) I suggest that they follow the accounts of the Clift murder case. Study the headlines:

"Doctors Reveal Suzanne's Agony."

and:

"Vows She Still Loves Brentani."

"Suzanne Free."

But do not study the text. You may become annoyed, especially at the point where her lawyer is reported as saying (of the murder):

"My best guess would be that somehow it was an accident."

In addition, you may wish to study the photographs: Smile. High necked black dress. Conservative hair style accentuated. This is not to say that the coverage was not fair. Yet, it certainly is not consistent with the policy towards accused murderers. In this context, it is simply a whitewash.

The lack of the New York Times is no cause for mental suicide. Now, other sources of news must be sought. It is not a time to lament but rather to learn. It is indeed a foolish man who forever abdicates to a single source the decision upon what is "fit to print."

This is an opportunity for many to investigate dissenting publications: The National Review, the National Guardian, the Minority of One, American Opinion . . .

Oftentimes we do not realize that we are in a rut until the rut disappears and we find ourselves upon a level plain. At this point, we either lie upon our backs or stand.

NO FEDERAL AID

In considering pending legislation, we must consider the constitutionality of the proposed law or money bill, the desirability of possible controls, the necessity of the law, and special problems relative to the proposed law.

In deciding the constitutionality of federal aid to education we must consider two things: one, no provision for federal aid to education is made in the constitution and, two, the constitution prohibits federal government intervention or aid in activities not mentioned in the constitution. Yet the proponents of federal aid say that there is a precedent for federal aid to education in the Morrill Land Grant Act of 1861. But the federal government gave land, not funds. It is questionable whether the government had a right to do so in the first place, for Art. I, sec. 8 of the constitution limits the right of the federal government to own land. Also, the land was given with controls (1) that agriculture be taught, and (2) that military instruction be provided.

In discussing control of education it should be noted that some form of control of education is exercised. There are differences though when this control is exercised by individual teachers or local school boards, and the whole country. Unpopular administrative control by the school board can be attacked by the community quickly, there are usually local elections to school boards every one or two years; they don't have to go to Washington to protest. If a segment of a population can not create reform in a town, it can move to a neighboring town or state, but if a segment of the population of the United States cannot gain its wishes, it would be difficult to move outside of the U.S. table, for congressmen are responsible to the electorate and

That some control, sooner or later, will come is inevitable for congressmen are responsible to the electorate and must make sure that the money is being spent as it is supposed to be spent. The fiscal autonomy of a public supported (aided) institution will never be complete.

Probably the most important of the aspects of the law to be considered is the necessity of that law. The necessity of this bill has not been well proved. The proponents of the bill claim that with the growing population and inability of local government to cope with the problem, the federal government must step in. First, if the present rate of building since 1952 is continued, by the middle 1960's we should have enough schools to educate our children in up to the late 1970's. Second, the present high rate of enrollment in elementary and secondary schools is due to the post-war baby boom, which will in a few years subside.

Also, the area cited as most in need of federal aid is the South. Yet the problem in the South is due to the burden of supporting two simultaneous and separate school systems in each village and town. By not giving aid to the southern states we can kill three birds with one stone. We can save ourselves money. We can force the southerners to adopt a more economic school system, i.e. do away with the redundant dual structure of segregated schools. And this will improve the educational system by letting the community concentrate on developing one education system.

There are special problems we run into on the question of federal aid to education. The more important of these are: should parochial schools be included or excluded from federal aid and should segregated school systems be included or excluded? People who send their children to parochial schools pay the same taxes as those who send their children to public school. If parochial schools were economically discriminated against, many parents might be forced to take their children out of the parochial school and put them in public schools, thereby increasing the enrollment and the demand for teachers in the public schools, which would aggravate the problems almost out of the control of the local authorities, for teaching nuns and monks would not be incorporated in the public school system. But on the other hand, it does not seem right that a Protestant or Jew should have to pay for religious instruction which teaches that he is a pagan or an atheist.

Southern segregated schools are in the greatest need of outside (federal) aid, yet to give federal aid to segregated schools would help to maintain the detestable condition of segregation, and in denying aid to segregated school systems we would leave out of the aid program the areas which seem to need outside aid the most. The only solution to this dilemma is not to give federal aid at all.

In summary, it seems that the constitutionality of federal aid to education is doubtable, that there is little necessity for federal aid, that it would slow down the desegregation process in the South, that it would allow Congress to put controls on education, and that whichever way the aid is given, to parochial schools or not, some large section of the nation would suffer, even though the necessity of federal aid to education has not been proven by its proponents.

A CRITIQUE OF PROFESSORS AND COURSES

The time has come for the faculty and administration to learn that the students on this campus really do care about the quality of education at the University of Massachusetts. One way for us to let them know that we want more good professors and not just more professors is to join the staff of, and/or give support to, a new publication shortly to appear on campus. Namely, a critique of professors and courses.

The purpose of this publication will not be to lampoon some professors whom a small group of students dislike, but is intended instead to provide: (1) a stimulus for more thoughtful preparation both by faculty and students—resulting from the presentation of a set of rigorously high standards of evaluation; (2) Recognition for superior teaching; (3) A device to help students pick courses and professors of the type and quality which will best satisfy their individual needs.

Many campuses have similar publications; but we hope that ours will be the best by virtue of the high degree of objectivity with which we will try to imbue it. We can only meet with success if each of us does his very best to fill out the critique's questionnaires carefully. The critique is being sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, the men's service fraternity, but membership on the staff is open to everyone on campus. —M.C.

To the Editor:
Re: "Speaking Freely"

Many of us read Miss Dickstein's plea for a more liberal attitude toward anti-American propagandists. According to Miss Dickstein, allowing "controversial" figures to speak as freely as they please, could do us no harm. All that it would accomplish would be to enlighten us, and thus, "We might become tolerant and peaceable toward other politically-oriented nations." Surely, the freedom of speech clause in the Constitution must be interpreted literally even if it might mean the potential destruction of this nation.

We as a nation are not condemning the political or ideological philosophy of any other nation. We are, however, fighting against supressive regimes which threaten our very national existence. Clever subversive propaganda can poison the minds of those who are weak in their nationalistic convictions. Promises of something better on the other side of the Curtain (though no one can look in) can sway gullible individuals. Our nation does not function in secrecy; the Soviet Union and Red China do, and must, function in secrecy. Thus, our national attitude is inherently more liberal than that of these other nations. Consequently, our nation is much more open to subversive infiltration. Miss Dickstein seems to advocate making this situation completely one sided, not partially so, as it is.

There are limits to how much advantage one can take of a good thing such as the freedom of speech. It is unfortunate that many individuals see no limits but see only the opportunity to promote their own warped ideas.

GREAT DECISIONS

New Algerian Independence, Fate Discussed By Faculty, Students

by RAISSA LANDOR '65

"Algeria's fate was actually changed by two decisions: (1) to go into rebellion with violence" and (2) General deGaulle's decision to grant Algerian independence" said Prof. Luther Allan, UMass government department expert on Algeria last Wednesday night in the third Great Decisions seminar.

Four students and ten faculty members in talking about Algerian independence said they felt that this revolution had more potential than any other Arabic revolution. It radically changed the lives of thousands of people in comparison with the palace revolution, of for example, Nasser, they said.

Central Problem Coexistence

However, independence for Algeria does present a host of problems. The central problem is that of coexistence of the remaining Europeans with the ⅞ mass population of the Muslims. Most of the Muslims are economically and socially inferior to Europeans and the Europeans find it very difficult to accept the Arabic independence.

Also, Algerians are faced with the devastation of post-war conditions and must figure out how social and economic reconstruction can be achieved. Their whole economy must be revolutionized and modernized.

How is this to be done? Probably through collective farms, but there seems little chance of Algeria becoming a Soviet-type Communist, says Allan.

France will be helping Algeria, partly to recoup their prestige in Europe. "European savagery in Algeria was equalled only by the Nazis in modern times" said Prof. David Leonard of History.

U.S. should also help Algeria economically. But most of the group agreed with Prof. Leonard that "The problem in the world today is not economics but human dignity". France should have adjusted to the Algerians need for freedom so eight senseless years of bloodshed could have been avoided.

Prof. Fenner of the College of Agriculture said he felt that when a majority of Europeans have power in a colony, then only a revolution can change this balance of power.

The group also felt that, as Allan said, "The U.S. has neglected its greatest capital outlet: LIBERTY. With more emphasis on this in countries like Algeria, there need be little fear of their going Communist.

Tonight at 7:30 in the Faculty Lounge in Bartlett the fourth sessions in the series will meet to discuss Spain. New participants are welcome.

Coeds Scheduled To Visit Westover Air Force Base

A fleet of military staff cars carrying 25 coeds left the Mass. campus at 8 a.m. this morning.

The young women are majors in Foods, Nutrition, and Institution Administration in the University's School of Home Economics and will spend the day at Westover Air Force Base. Folk Festival At UMass March 9-16

The tenth annual Inter-Collegiate Folk Festival will be held at UMass the weekend of March 9 and 10 in the SU Ballroom. Square and folk dance clubs from many colleges will gather here for the event, which will be open to the public with a charge.

The weekend will kick off Friday night with Dick Sawyer of the University calling for a square dance. Saturday afternoon, many of the attending groups will exhibit and teach dances. The UMass Heymakers will exhibit at this time.

Dick Ledger and his orchestra will call Saturday evening for a square dance; there will be a folk sing Sunday afternoon.

Both Friday and Saturday will present opportunities for learning folk and square dancing as well as watching them.

Treasurer Will Attend Conference

Kenneth W. Johnson, UMass treasurer, will join with 81 college and university officials to discuss problems of educational institutions at the seventh biennial workshop clinic of the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers.

The workshop clinic is being held Feb. 24-26 in New York City. Some 500 representatives of eastern colleges and universities are attending.

Mr. Johnson will moderate two discussions during the three-day conference, one on "Physical Plant Organization and Management" and the other on "Budget Administration with a Punched Card Accounting System." Speakers will address the association's representatives on a wide range of subjects—from financing education in Britain to a discussion of college union and bookstore management.

Seminar groups will discuss problems of insurance, finances, auditing, data processing, financial aid for students, research, investments, and legal problems. Chairman of this year's clinic is Bruce J. Partridge, vice president for business management at the University of Delaware.

Speakers who will deliver major addresses at the conference include Dr. James M. Hester, president of New York University, and Dr. Kenneth R. Erfft, vice president and treasurer of Jefferson Medical College.

Bay State Special Forces Make Second Devens Trip

The Bay State Special Forces made their second trip to Fort Devens, Massachusetts for a weekend of training, in the tools of their trade last weekend.

The tools that were emphasized for this weekend were those that are most thought of in connection with the type of troops that the Special Forces represent, that is patrolling and marksmanship.

The unit left UMass Friday evening after drawing weapons and equipment. Upon arrival at Devens they received a briefing on what they were to do for the weekend and turned in for the night.

Very early Saturday the unit was moved to its assigned training area and the day's training was begun. The morning's training consisted of practice in the combat formations and maneuvers that would be used in the application stages of the afternoon and evening.

After dinner in the main post mess the training shifted its emphasis to application.

The latter was not long in coming, as the cadets found out after their supper. Saturday night the teams again went out, this time on combat patrols, to destroy what they had seen that afternoon.

As had been the case throughout the day, the patrols were conducted in deep snow and sub zero temperatures. In spite of all obstacles the returning patrols were able to report success and the destruction of their targets.

After an early Sunday morning breakfast and chapel call, the unit moved to the train fire range for the continuation of a program that was initiated on the last trip.

The Special Forces returned with a knowledge, born of practice and short experience, that they could operate successfully in the worst of winter conditions, and accomplish their assigned missions, group commander Cadet Lt. Colonel Tom Leavitt said.

Unit advisors and instructors pronounced this weekend another success and said that it had added to the growing reputation of the Bay State Special Forces, in the area of their specialty.

Lawmakers, Educators And Journalist Will Convene For DVP Centennial Program On Aid To Education

Administration Stand On Ed Aid Reviewed

The administration has yet to present its complete educational platform to Congress for this year, but it is already apparent that this will be the first major administration legislative program dealing specifically with the problems of youth and education in the country's history.

Last year a $2.4 billion college aid bill including construction grants and student loans, was defeated in the House. In fact, out of 22 educational bills introduced into the last Congress, only two received favorable action. The administration, however, claims to have much better hopes for the current session.

Among the educational proposals introduced in the House on opening day was a two year, $235 million bill presented by Rep. Edith Green (D-Oregon), chairman of a special sub-committee on higher education. Mrs. Green hopes to get legislation providing for Federal matching funds for the construction of special cultural centers run cooperatively by two or more colleges. Her bill would call for the construction of at least 15 of these centers in dispersed geographic areas, serving as joint laboratories, research centers, TV stations, and providing courses and programs that the individual schools could not provide their own students.

UMass Grad On Panel

Louis M. Lyons '18, Curator of the Nieman Chair of journalism at Harvard, and recipient of the television newscasters' Peabody Award, gained early experience in the agricultural extension service.

The University's most outstanding contributor to journalism and public affairs will be a member of Distinguished Visitors Program panel on Aid to Education.

History of DVP

DVP Recognized As Collegiate First In Educational, Cultural Experiences

At its inception in the school year 1959-60, the UMass Distinguished Visitors' Program was hailed by Time and New Republic for its originality and purposefulness, as the first organization of its kind in any American institution of higher education.

Following its avowed purpose "to attract to our campus . . . distinguished and eminent personages or provide enriching educational and cultural experiences," the Program early brought to UMass such speakers as Eleanor Roosevelt, Bennett Cerf, poet Ogden Nash and Composer Aaron Copland.

Student Supported

The DVP is supported by a $3 tax from each student, appropriated through the Student Senate. Besides its programming duties, the Program also offers to needy students, short-term loans of up to $300 with low interest rates. The Program also contributes to the National Defense Loan Program.

The Program committee is comprised of of 22 members, including four student Senate representatives, four Class representatives, nine students representing the University's three major divisions—humanities, social sciences, and physio-natural sciences—and administrative representative Gilbert Woodside, Board of Trustees representative John W. Haigis, Jr., and three faculty members serving in an advisory capacity.

According to Program Chairman David, the DVP hopes to surpass its past achievements during the coming years.

And this may prove a task. Last year alone, the Program brought to campus such personalities as noted scientist Dr. Wehrner Von Braun and publisher-humorist Bennett Cerf. Von Braun's address was broadcast on the Educational Radio Network all down the Eastern Seaboard.

In future years, as the campus expands, said Chairman David, DVP also hopes to expand the breadth and scope of its programs. Presently, many "Distinguished Visitors" to the campus have paramount interest only to a relatively small segment of the student body. With this in mind, the DVP will attempt to plan more comprehensive programs that will interest all students.

Program Aimed At Student

The Distinguished Visitors Program is an example of what cooperation between the student body, faculty and administration can do, but its main concern is with the student. As Chairman David said, "The Distinguished Visitors Program is supported by a student tax and programmed to student interest. It is up to them to take advantage of it."

Committee officers are Chairman Lloyd David, Treasurer Lee Ann Mansell, Secretary Mrs. Eleanor Freisem, and Programming Chairman Karen Canfield.

Other members include Betsy Robicheau, Charles Kessler, Catherine O'Connell, Delores Matthews, Anne Griffin, Jim Watson, and Bill Nichols.

Carolyn Howarth, Linda Vanderwerf, Kathy Galloway, Glenda Stockwell, Rosie Seward, John Burue, and Ken Beck also number among the Committee's participants.

Occupying other committee positions are Dean William F. Field, Mr. David Lawrence, Dr. Warren I. Johannsen, Dr. Vincent Ilardi, and Dr. Harry Schumer.

The DVP's first offering of the school year was in October with the presentation of Dylan Thomas' "Under Milkwood," which was performed by the original cast from New York's Circle-in-the-Square Theater.

Appearances by CBS news commentator Eric Sevareid and comedian-pianist Henry Scott were also arranged by the DVP. On the agenda for May is an appearance by Carlos Romulo, former president of the UN General Assembly.

Pucksters Blank Jeffs 3-0 For Fifth Straight Victory

by AL RICE '66

What looked like it was going to be a tragedy ended up on a happy note Monday when the Redmen hockey team defeated Amherst College with a 3-0 shutout to wind up the season with a five game winning streak and a respectable 7-9 record. The UMass play in their finale did not reach the heights it achieved at New Hampshire last weekend, but the pucksters put out with a fine game and give promise to be bombers when next season rolls around.

The contest started off on a dull note, and not until 9.20 did the first score go into the net. Once more the high scoring second line figured in. Gerry Wolfe picked up the point with assists going to John Lasher and defenseman Gerry Clinton. Five minutes later Clinton slapped a long 25 foot shot in from a slight angle that zipped past the Jeffs' Dave Stringer. It wasn't until 27 minutes later that another goal was scored.

The second period belonged entirely to the goalies. Skip Bowen of Mass did not have a tough job since his mates kept Amherst in check all the way. He made four saves in the second stanza after stopping ten in the first period. Stringer had plenty to do, however, as the Redmen forced the junior netminder to stop 17 shots in that period and 44 in all, a large total but considerably below the 62 he averaged per game last year. A good many of the 17 came within inches of being goals. Mass had numerous chances that just missed by a whisker.

The final third looked like it was going to be far different from the shutout middle period when Bob Lee scored his first goal of the season at only the 1.33 mark, but the rest of the way went with nothing more added to the board. Stringer again was supplied with plenty of work by the Massachusetts shooters, but he once more stopped everything that came near him. The rest of the Amherst team couldn't do much against the Redmen and it was only the Purple and White's goalie that kept them in the game.

The game was a far cry from the last New Hampshire contest when the penalties came fast and furious. Only three men spent any time in the box until near the end of the game, though in a 31 second stretch from 15.04 to 15.35 each side was only skating three men plus a goalie. A brief period of agressiveness caused four minor violations but neither team threatened to score as a result of them.

Matmen Overpower URI; Meet Wesleyan Saturday

On Washington's Birthday the UMass grapplers journeyed to Kingston, R.I. to face the Rams in an effort to increase their record to three straight and to bring to the University a mythical Yankee Conference wrestling crown. Both efforts met with success.

The Redmen showed power where they have all season, winning the first five matches before being forced to concede the final three to the Rams. The men who contributed those important five victories were Boris Chevone, Mike Rivers, Charlie Sisson, Captain Tom Best, and Craig De Wallace. The final match score came out to UMass 21—URI 13.

This win coupled with the previous Tuesday's conquest of UConn made it possible for the Douglas men to claim the conference crown. In these two matches the Redmen managed to keep alive their proud boast that they have never lost to another YanCon team.

Next Saturday the team travels to Wesleyan University for their final match of the season. The Connecticut team is always strong, but the matmen, riding on three straight, have begun to show class and are hoping for an upset.

Fencing

The once defunct fencing club has begun to reorganize under the direction of President Gene Morano. The club will hold a meeting tonight at 7:30 in the WPE Building.

Membership in the fencing club is open to any member of the University, regardless of experience at fencing. Members need not own their own equipment as the club has adequate supplies on hand.

The meetings will be informal, and members will have the entire meeting time to fence.

Mr. Morano has fenced for three years under Coach Joseph Bonzanini, Western Mass Champion. He is also fenced at Santelli Hall in New York City.

CAMPUS VOLLEYBALL

All Fraternities, Dormitories, and any RSO groups on campus wishing to enter a team in the annual intramural volleyball tournament should pick up roster forms in room 8, at the men's cage. All rosters must be turned in by Wednesday, March 6. The double elimination volleyball tournament will start on Monday, March 11.

Last year 38 teams participated, with Lambda Chi Alpha winning the campus volleyball crown with an undefeated tournament record.

VARSITY GOLF

There will be a meeting of all varsity golf candidates Thursday, Feb. 28, at 7 p.m. in Room 10 of the Cage. Report to Coach Chet Gladchuk.

'Clothe Naked Animals' Chapter To Organize

G. Clifford Prout, president of the Society for Indecency to Naked Animals, has notified the Collegian that he will be on the UMass campus during March to organize a student SINA chapter.

According to Prout, the primary aim of the SINA is "to protect our children from the sight of naked horses, cows, dogs, and cats."

Prout, who started to wage his war against unclothed animals in 1956 claims "it's a matter of decency." "Naked animals are ruining the moral standards of America."

With the SINA slogan "Decency today means morality tomorrow" as his inspiration, Prout has designed pants for dogs, half slips for horses, trousers for elephants, and even bikinis for cows.

The campaign against animal nudity has met with some success. The organization now boasts 40,000 members from coast to coast and has a Washington lobby to influence animal legislation.

Summarizing the Society's chief goal, Article IV from SINA's Constitution reads: "Be it resolved that the members of SINA shall devote their time and energy to clothe all naked animals that appear in public, namely horses, cows, dogs and cats, including any animal that stands higher than 4 inches or is longer than 6 inches."

FALCON IS "NEW KING OF THE MOUNTAINS"* IN TOUGHEST 2,500-MILE MONTE CARLO RALLYE

Special edition Falcon V-8 "Sprint" defeats the world's best in final 490-mile test section on icy Alpine cliff roads . . . then outperforms every sedan on famous Monaco circuit!

Falcon picked the world's roughest winter ordeal to reveal an astonishing new brand of total performance. Four days and three nights through an inferno of ice, snow, freezing fog, endless curves —2,500 miles against an implacable time schedule, designed to try a car's reliability, road-holding and performance to the ultimate. Experts said a first-time car couldn't hope to finish—and two thirds of the 296 competitors did drop out. But Falcon not only placed first and second in its class, it defeated every car, regardless of class, on the brutal Chambery-Monte Carlo final leg, set best time among all finishers in all of the six special test sections—and showed its heels to every sedan in the dramatic three-lap elimination on Monaco's famous round-the-houses course. You couldn't get better proof of total performance anywhere!

You can read the dramatic report of the world's most rugged winter Rallye in Sports Illustrated's February 4 issue. And you can get the full story of this and Ford's other total performance accomplishments from your Ford Dealer.

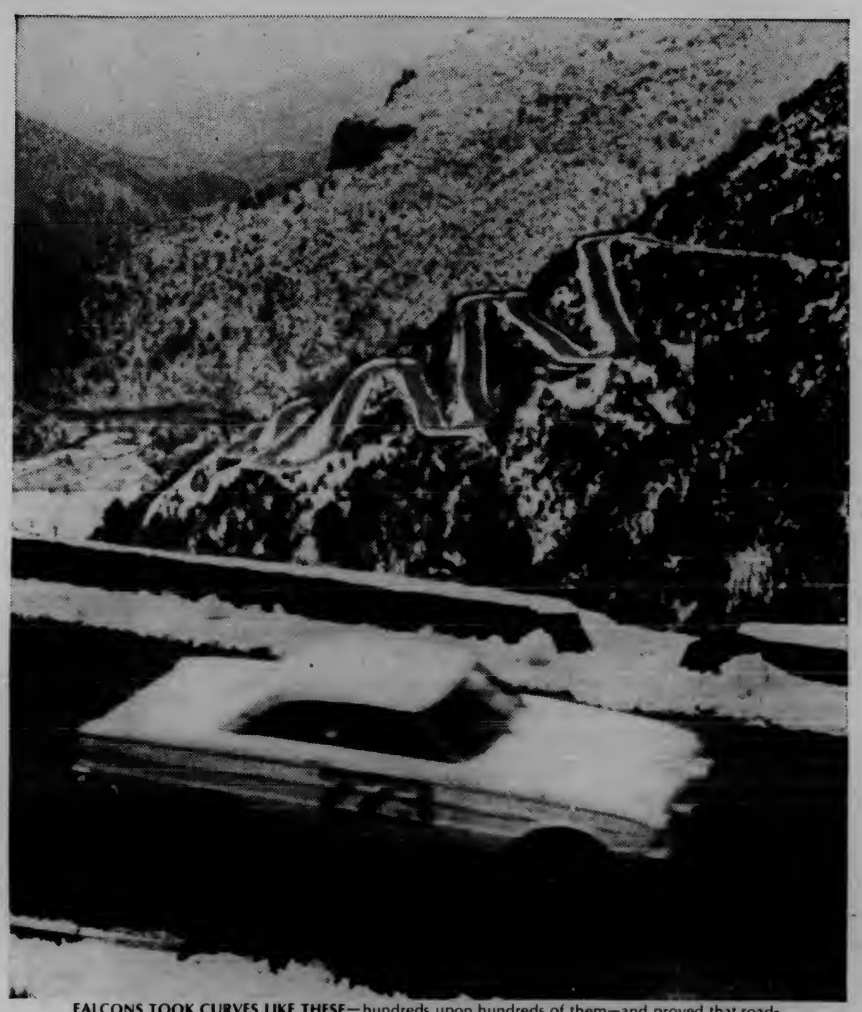
DEEP SNOW on the Col de Turini special section didn't even slow the "Sprint." And sure-footed Falcon also amazed the Rallye experts by its traction on glare ice.

STORMING ALONG IN THE FRENCH DUSK, a Falcon plunges into the third night behind the special lights that let a Rallye driver see around curves, spot patches of ice, penetrate fog.



FALCONS TOOK CURVES LIKE THESE—hundreds upon hundreds of them—and proved that road-holding is not a European monopoly. In fact, Sports Illustrated magazine called them "the new kings of the mountains" and quoted a London newspaper as declaring, "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country of the world."

"LACETS" is French for zigzags like these. It means "bootlaces", but to Rallye drivers it means an ultimate test of steering, stability, brakes and, above all, durability.

BEST OF ALL "TOURING" CATEGORY CARS in the three-lap Monaco circuit was the Falcon piloted by Swedish ice expert Bo Ljungfeldt. It was surpassed by only three cars, all of them two-seater sports cars in the Grand Touring category.

Education Aid Essential Sen. Proxmire States

by ANN MILLER '64

"Are we doing enough to educate our students?—this is the question," said Senator William Promire last night in the keynote address of the Distinguished Visitors Centennial symposium on Federal Aid to Higher Education.

"Brainpower is the quintessence of survival... We have to have education if we are going to be able to survive, if we are going to have some peace in the world," said Proxmire.

"We're wasting money," he said regarding federal appropriations to research and development. "We have a limited number of trained people who we keep in research programs. The result is a real drag on the educational program. These people could be used for teaching in institutions of higher education," Promire said.

Among Congressional methods of wasting money, he said, was over-appropriation of funds for medical research and development. Since 1958, he said, federal appropriations to the National Institute of Health have been 25 percent more than has been requested. In 1957 the Federal government paid for one third of the nation's medical research; today it pays for one half, Proxmire asserted.

Proposed government spending for education construction jobs, he said, is a popular program.

Kennedy's comprehensive education bill, which is primarily to assist existing programs, he said, has a fair chance of passage. He pointed out that it avoided integration and church-state issues.

Greatest proposed increase, he said, is in graduate fellowships: the proposed 10,000 fellowships may be reduced by Congress. He said, since there is a great need for scholarships.

"The prime effort required," he said, "is a matter of individual assumption of responsibility ...We can do far more on a community, state and federal level."

"Above all, we have to instill into our young people that education is not just a matter of responsibility to self and parents, but is a patriotic duty," Proxmire declared.

Topics Announced For Panel On Federal Aid

The Distinguished Visitors Program has announced topics to be presented during the panel discussion on Federal Aid to Education at the Women's Physical Education Building at 8 p.m. tonight.

Each panel member will present for discussion a topic concerning an aspect of federal aid to education.

Senator Clifford Case of New Jersey will talk on "The Role of the Community College and Federal Aid."

Francis Horn, president of the University of Rhode Island, will present "Federal Aid to Higher Education."

Dr. Russel Kirk, a contributor to the "National Review" magazine, will speak on "Local Control versus Federal Control of Local Education."

Dr. Martin J. Lichterman, executive secretary of the New England Board of Higher Education, will speak on "State and Municipal Aid to Education."

Mr. Louis Lyons, curator of the Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard University and noted news commentator and analyst, will serve as moderator.

The discussion will be open to the public.

Application blanks for all interested Sophomore and Freshmen for the Student Leadership Program will be available in the RSO office of the SU until Monday, March 4.

Senate Discusses Conditions Of Married Students Dorms

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

University policy toward the married students dorms and a wire service for the Collegian were the main items of contention at Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting.

Senator George Jones (Married Dorms) launched the meeting with a biting denunciation of what he termed a blatant neglect of the living conditions of almost ten percent of the student body.

Jones read in part from a petition drawn up by the residents of the County Circle dorms. It stated that the University after raising rents never started improvements promised. Jones cited this and often unsanitary conditions, i.e. uneven heating, irregular collection of waste, as the main bones of contention. He further stated that in many cases, the inhabitants of the dormitory have had to clean bathrooms and other parts of the dorm due to neglect by the janitorial staff.

As an example Jones stated "The University felt the girls in Plymouth deserved a decent home. When they started to renovate the dorm, who did they use to aid in the work?—The janitor from Suffolk!"

After other reports, the Senate formed into a committee of the whole in order to pass on the Collegian's request for a category change that would enable the staff to have a UPI teletypewriter installed. Speaking on behalf of the Collegian, executive board, Editorial Editor Neal Andelman stated that the service was to be installed on an experimental basis.

The service will be purchased until the end of this semester, at which time an opinion poll will be taken to determine student feelings. If an affirmative answer is received from the poll, the wire service will be continued.

In answer to a question posed, Andleman stated that the service used by WMUA is not acceptable, for a newspaper's need because it is especially set up for a radio station.

The Budgets committee reported the bill favorably, and the bill was passed without opposition. The teleprinter will be located in the lobby of the SU, so that the student body will be able to take advantage of the opportunity to receive "instant news".

The Senate then recessed for a coffee hour with exchange students from Florida State, Sarah Lawrence, and the University of New Mexico. The event, praised by many senators was sponsored by the Public Realtions committee.

Rounding out the evening, the Senate passed the International Weekend Budget with small dissent, and gave permission to Caesura to hold a coffee hour.

Nancy Beaton was sworn in as Senator from Crabtree, replacing Lee Ann Mansell who recently resigned. She received 25 votes to the combined total of 15 for her two opponents.

Tri Sigma's Welcomed Into National Sorority

In ceremonies which began last night and will continue through tomorrow, Gamma Iota chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority will be installed at UMass.

Until this time Sigma Sigma Sigma on this campus has been a "colony" of the national sorority and all of its members have been pledges. Now the colony has at last become a chapter, and forty two of the pledges have attained their goal—they have become sisters and taken their place in the national sisterhood.

Gamma Iota chapter is exceptional in that it is the first New England chapter of a sorority which has, until now, reached across the miles from New York to Florida, from West Virginia to California. Because it is the first New England chapter to be installed, the Tri Sigmas are privileged to welcome to the UMass campus several of the national officers of the sorority, including the National President, Mrs. Curtis C. Dixon.

In addition to the national officers the Tri Sigmas will welcome to the campus collegiate chapter representatives from New York, Pennsylvania, Florida and Michigan.

The agenda for the three-day period will include a banquet, meetings with the national officers, election of chapter officers and the initiation ceremonies for the following girls: Michele Abiadian, Dorothy Adams, Elaina Menin, Claire Michael, Virginia Neulieb, Carol Roche, Sue Barden, Mary Jane Briggs, Dorothy Garneau, Elinor Ogilvie, Dana Paul, Christine Ranta, Diane Solomon, Donna Wilbur, Rose Arnone, Susan Berenson, Eileen Boisjolie, Elizabeth Bourque, Judith Cohen, Mildred Depelteau, Susan Elder, Judith Hripak, Caroiyn Hulton, Joan Janik, Marcia Kane, Elaine Klinker, Joyce Kostek, Elizabeth Lanyon, Rosemary Lawson, Miriam Netinho, Christine Olsen,

Counselor Applications Are Available

Dean of Women Helen Curtis has announced that application blanks for House Counselors in Women's Dormitories may be obtained by any women student of the classes of 1964 and 1965 from Heads of Residence or the office of the Dean of Women. These applications must be returned on or before noon Monday, March 18.

Although there is financial renumeration, the motivation for applying should be wanting to serve and for the whole experience of counseling, Dean Curtis said.

Finai selections, which will be announced in April, will be made from recommendations by the present House Councils, Dormitory Heads of Residence, Facuity, and the Senate Committee on Women's Affairs.

Selections will be made on the basis of personal qualifications of maturity, leadership, dependability, and scholarship.

Qualitative Or Quantitative

When the University of Massachusetts began the tremendous expansion program which we are now witnessing, this question was certainly given a great deal of thought. It must be pointed out, however, that public institutions do not have to match educational systems with private colleges—the public system provides a rather unique type of education which can stand on its own merits and need not be rated as being above or below that of private institutions.

When one tries to analyze the University of Massachusetts, one begins to realize that the eventual goal of our educational system is the embodiment of the best features of both public and private educational systems. Our first responsibility remains with the citizens of this Commonwealth, but educating the citizens of Massachusetts who desire a college education does not mean that we have to sacrifice quality.

It is most important to remember, however, that in a state institution which operates under a democratic process it is true that major improvements and changes do not often come about overnight.

In the last few days there have been many rumors on this campus concerning Dr. Glenn Tinder of the Government Department. Dr. Tinder will be leaving the University at the end of the current semester and he will begin teaching next year at Lake Forest.

First of all, there is no truth to the rumor that Dr. Tinder is leaving the University because he wants a salary increase or because of the "Publish or Perish" issue. Dr. Tinder is leaving the University for what might be termed a "philosophical impasse."

We have already mentioned that the University of Massachusetts (as well as other public institutions) faces problems which private institutions do not necessarily face. Smaller classes on basic levels, and more freedom within a particular department are attractive features of private schools. While the University is certainly making efforts to secure these attractive features, they are not going to come overnight.

The Honors Program, for example, embodies the advantages that smaller institutions possess; in fact, our Honors program goes a good deal further towards approaching the ideal educational system. Programs such as this are the universities' answer to quality education while still providing education for the many.

Dr. Tinder's proposal of a system freeing some faculty members from normal departmental requirements certainly has its merits, but Dr. Tinder himself realizes that such a proposal would be impossible to realize in a short period of time.

There can be no doubt that many of the problems faced by public institutions such as the University of Massachusetts are quite different from the problems faced by private colleges. A question which has been asked many times before is, "can a publicly supported institution which enrolls many students match the quality of the education received by students at a smaller, private college?"

If this University ever adopts such a program; allowing a small group of the faculty to conduct special classes that do not fall within the scope of normal departmental work, to carry on research in a very independent manner, and to enjoy an unusual amount of academic freedom, then UMass might be taking a giant step forward in combining the best of public and private education.

The point that Dr. Tinder has reached is one that can only be solved by leaving the public system for the private one. We simply can not react swiftly enough to meet Dr. Tinder's desires. Dr. Tinder questions the philosophy of public education and he has made a proposal which he feels would better this University. Our problem is that we simply can not react fast enough for Dr. Tinder's needs.

This is not to say that we endorse Dr. Tinder's proposal, but we certainly feel that it is worth further investigation, and this is exactly what the administration is doing.

For one rare moment the faculty, students and administration are united; we are all sorry to see Dr. Tinder leave. He was admired by most students, and his colleagues spoke highly of him. But his leaving the campus has resulted in a proposal which may better the University.

We only regret that Dr. Tinder did not make such a proposal at an earlier date so that his suggestion might have had more time to bear fruit and we could have retained an outstanding gentleman and scholar on this campus. —N.C.A.

Educational Harrassment

To say that there is a scarcity of good teachers at all levels would be superfluous, and is by now practically a cliche. It is equally unnecessary to list the many frequently-cited reasons why talented men and women abandon (or, indeed, never even consider) teaching in favor of other fields. But now we find ourselves aware of another factor, one which—despite better pay, more prestige, and other advantages—would still prejudice an individual very strongly against entering the profession of teaching.

This is the matter of harrassment. In many public schools at the primary and secondary levels, teachers are risking their jobs if they dare to express unusual ideas; a teacher who expects to keep his job must live a conservative, even dull, life. Every aspect of his private life, even during his summer vacations, must be well above reproach if he expects to hold his job.

At the college level, other factors enter the picture. The worst of these is the matter of asking a supposedly-rational, highly intelligent and educated man to accept principles and regulations which he finds sheer nonsense. The college instructor is expected to concede that the author of a dozen books who is virtually unable to communicate orally is a better educator than a talented teacher who may be too busy or who may not care to write for the market. He is expected to cheerfully carry out the orders of "superiors" for whom he, perhaps with very good reason, may have no respect. He is allowed little initiative and even less academic freedom. And again, his personal views and activities, which generally have no relevance whatsoever to his competence as a teacher, may be used as grounds for his dismissal.

To a great many individuals, their self-pride is of prime importance, and it is no wonder that so many shun the profession of teaching rather than become stagnant, targets for unjust or hyporcritical criticism.

The matter of university teaching is a particularly difficult one; the undergraduate who keeps abreast of campus politics is fully aware of the badgering and humbling to which the university instructor is continually subjected, and finds himself poignantly forewarned. It must be a quixotic individual indeed who in his idealistic dedication to the noble profession of teaching can close his eyes to the indignities he would have to suffer to hold a position in many of our nation's institutions of higher education.

Only when we have ceased to harras the members of this most vital profession shall we be able to attract more and more talented young people to enter the field. —J.D.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

General Douglas MacArthur once said, "On the fields of friendly strife are born the seeds, that on other days on other fields will bear the fruits of victory."

This author feels that these words specifically refer to the development of a determination to win, which by necessity must be foremost in the minds of college teams—recognizing the coincident requirement of good sportsmanship.

I have had the privilege this year to be associated with a group that has consistently demonstrated this attitude in spite of a long past history of frustrating efforts to be recognized in their sports field. I refer to the Varsity Rifle Team. Not a spectator sport—in fact cheering galleries would be quite out of place—but one requiring long hours of concentration and determination on the part of each participant to produce a worthy contribution towards the end result—team victory.

It has been greatly rewarding to see the team walk off with the championship at the recent Yankee Conference Rifle Match—rewarding in the knowledge that each team member must feel that his efforts have finally borne fruit.

QUIZES, EXAMS AND FINALS

To the Editor:

Although this semester has just started, students' thoughts are already on that first quiz, first hour exam, term papers, and finals. It is the last item with which I am concerned here.

The present University policy of allowing students two days between the end of classes and the beginning of finals is ridiculous, particularly so when it is coupled with another policy of compelling students to take three exams in a twenty-four hour period and two in any calendar day. Final exams often count from one-half to one-third of a mark, and almost invariably determine the final grade.

As it stands now some students can go home early, having completed their exams. Pity the poor student who completes his five exams in the first three days and goes home early, perhaps never to return . . .

Is this what the administration wants? No, of course not! But why, then, do they continue this policy? It is time it was changed. The administration owes it to students to arrange the semester schedule so that they have more time to prepare for finals. Five days, counting a week-end, should be the absolute minimum. Other colleges have time: Mt. Holyoke had eighteen days last semester, and this semester Smith College has six days to prepare for finals. Why is this "impossible" for the University?

RING

To the Editor:

Yes, that's an alarm clock, Mr. Housing and Mr. Administration, telling you to wake up and pay heed to the cry of despondency coming from the direction of County Circle. It seems, and I refer you to the Wednesday, February 20, issue of the Collegian, that the residents (married students) of County Circle made a legitimate and justified appeal to you concerning the despicable living conditions that they are subjected to.

As of yet their appeal goes unanswered, disregarded, and probably forgotten. And if the latter is the case, I would hardly blame them if they did send their letter to the State Board of Health as well as the State Legislature; perhaps then this might shake you out of your stoic and apathetic stupor and, I might add parenthetically, it looks like this thing called apathy has become quite cancerous and has spread even to the top eschelons.

Consequently, their appeal in the Collegian seemed only to fulfill the function of a filler for the editorial page and in no way aroused anyone. Perhaps in a short time we will all be able to witness a mass picketing by an entourage of students pushing baby carriages and holding on high banners of baby diapers with protests scrawled on them to proclaim their despondency.

It seems in conclusion that a UMass Urban Renewal Program will have to be put into effect to clean up this dissipated slum area so that these students, who are also enrolled in this University, can live and not merely exist in a Harlem due to your negligence.

Let's face it, you can only use a paper bag so many times before you have to throw it away.

Although these married students are not of my constituency, I'm afraid if these slum conditions exist, they soon will be.

Annual Turf Conference

The 1963 Turf Conference—Mecca for nearly 500 golf course superintendents, lawn and grass experts, students and county agents in recent years—will be held March 7-8 at UMass.

Cooperative Extension, the Massachusetts Turf and Lawn Grass Council and the Golf Course Superintendents Association of New England, sponsors the annual event offering information on all aspects of fine turf.

A combined session for golf course superintendents and persons interested in general turf management will open the conference on Thursday morning, March 7, according to Prof. Joseph Troll of the agronomy department and conference chairman. Separate sessions will be held for each of these two groups that afternoon with a second combined session on Friday.

On Campus with Max Shulman

THE CURSE OF THE CAMPUS: NO. 2

As was pointed out last week, one would think that with all the progress we have made in the education game, something might have been done by now about roommates. But no. The roommate picture has not brightened one bit since Ethan Goodpimple founded the first American college.

(Contrary to popular belief, Harvard was not the first. Mr. Goodpimple started his institution some 75 years earlier. And quite an institution it was, let me tell you! Mr. Goodpimple built schools of liberal arts, fine arts, dentistry, and tanning. He built a lacrosse stadium that seated 102,000. Everywhere on campus was emblasoned the stirring Latin motto CAVE MUSSI—"Watch out for moose." The student union contained a bowling alley, a clock, and a 16-chair barber shop.

...and as for shaving, they didn't

(It was this last feature—the barber shop—that, alas, brought Mr. Goodpimple's college to an early end. The student body, being drawn from the nearby countryside, was composed chiefly of Pequots and Iroquois who, alas, had no need of a barber shop. They braid their hair instead of cutting it, and as for shaving, they don't. The barber, Tremblatt Follicle by name, grew so depressed staring all the time at 16 empty chairs that one day his mind finally gave way. Seizing his vibrator, he ran outside and shook the entire campus till it crumbled to dust. This later became known as Pickett's Charge.)

But I digress. We were discussing ways for you and your roommate to stop hating each other. This is admittedly difficult but not impossible if you will both bend a bit, give a little.

I remember, for example, my own college days (Berlitz, '08). My roommate was, I think you will allow, even less agreeable than most. He was a Tibetan named Ringading whose native customs, while indisputably colorful, were not entirely endearing. Mark you, I didn't mind so much the gong he struck on the hour or the string of firecrackers he set off on the half-hour. I didn't even mind his singeing chicken feathers every dusk and daybreak. What I did mind was that he singed them in my hat.

To be fair, he was not totally taken with some of my habits either—especially my hobby of collecting water. I had no jars at the time and just had to stack the water any-old-where.

Well sir, things grew steadily cooler between Ringading and me, and they might have gotten actually ugly had we not each happened to receive a package from home one day. Ringading opened his package, paused, smiled shyly at me, and offered me a gift.

"Thank you," I said. "What is it?"

"Yak butter," he said. "You put it in your hair. In Tibetan we call it gree see kidstuff."

"Well now, that's mighty friendly," I said and offered him a gift from my package. "Now you must have one of mine."

"Thank you," he said. "What is this called?"

"Marlboro Cigarettes," I said and held a match for him.

He puffed. "Wow!" he said. "This sure beats chicken feathers!"

"Or anything else you could name," I said, lighting my own Marlboro.

And as we sat together and enjoyed that fine flavorful Marlboro tobacco, that pure white Marlboro filter, a glow of good fellowship came over us—a serene conviction that no quarrels exist between men that will not yield to the warmth of honest good will. I am proud to say that Ringading and I remain friends to this day, and we exchange cards each Christmas and each Fourth of July, firecrackers.

The Air Cadet Squadron recently held a formal initiation of new freshmen members. The initiation took place at Westover AFB.

Guest speaker for the evening was Lt. William Deming who is attached to the search and rescue squadron at Westover. Lt. Deming briefly outlined the role of the special helicopter that is used by the squadron. In addition to the talk a brief film was show.

After dinner James Flemming the Air Cadet Squadron Executive Officer read to the new cadets the purpose of the squadron. Following this, cadet Robert Norton, Air Cadet Squadron Commander administered the oath to the 48 freshmen that joined the Squadron.

Capt. Robert Gailly the Squadron's adviser then presented each new cadet with a foragere. At the same time he wished the new cadets the best of luck in the up coming years.

AROUND THE COLLEGE CAMPUSI

Have you ever wondered just what is the job of an exchange editor?

Seen in his lowest form, the exchange editor is a newspaper baby-sitter; it is his job to arrange all papers received in orderly fashion, discarding dated issues.

Next, he is to read the exchange papers, clipping important articles and bringing them to the attention of the approfice. The appliactions must be priate members of the staff.

And finally, he is likely to be asked to rewrite exchange news himself, as feature material, or as a column, such as this one.

Many papers come in to the Collegian office, and not all are from American colleges and universities; many exchange papers arrive from other countries, notably Korea, Japan, and China. Unfortunately, many of these are written in languages which yours truly cannot read.

A unique newspaper which is received regularly is The Mentor, published monthly by inmates of the prison at South Walpole. They too have an exchange column, entitled—ironically, it seems—"Around the Pens in Thirty Days." Just as the Collegian prints news from other colleges and universities, The Mentor's column lists the latest developments in other prisons and penitentiaries in this country and occasionally abroad.

The position of exchange editor is an education in itself, and next year someone else will be needed to fill that position. Anyone interested might apply to the editor of the Collegian.

Pres. Kennedy Proposes Varied Youth Program

President Kennedy has presented to Congress this year the most varied and comprehensive youth program in the history of the United States.

The President's proposals range from programs providing youth with an opportunity to serve abroad in the Peace Corps, increased federal scholarship aid, the creation of a domestic "National Service Corps" to promotion of a committee for the physical development of American youth.

The President singled out the problems of young people for priority treatment in the White House legislative program this year. In his State of the Union address before the new Congress, the President mentioned his youth program before all others, saying "First we need to strengthen our Nation by investing in our youth: The future of any country which is dependent on the will and wisdom of its citizens is damaged, and irreparably damaged, whenever any of its children are not educated to the fullest extent of his capacity from grade school through graduate school.

"Finally, the overseas success of our Peace Corps volunteers, most of them young men and women carrying skills and ideas to needy people, suggests the merit of a similar corps serving our own community needs: in mental hospitals, on Indian reservations, in centers of the aged or for young delinquents, in schools for the illiterate or the handicapped. As the idealism of our youth has served world peace, so can it serve the domestic tranquility..."

Youth Employment Act

Another very significant youth bill that this year's Congress is expected to act on is the Youth Employment Act of 1963. This bill, proposed by Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) is a two-point program to assist in the resolution of youth unemployment and to give young people an opportunity to contribute to the development of their communities through useful programs of work and construction.

The proposed legislation would set up a Youth Conservation Corps and programs for local youth unemployment problems. The measure was passed in part by the House last year, but has not yet been acted on by the Senate.

Senator Humphrey cites rather substantial figures in backing up his proposal, Unemployment statistics of the Department of Labor show that in November, 1962, for example, total national unemployment increased from 5.5 to 5.9 per cent of the working force, and that the addition of some 150,000 young adults to the employment roles in that month brought about the increase.

In fact, there were more than 800,000 young people out of work during the month of November, a total comprising almost one-fifth of all those unemployed in the United States. And it has been estimated that by 1970, three million new young workers will be seeking work in the country.

The Youth Conservation Corps idea (YCC) would primarily provide constructive, educational employment for out-of-work youth between the ages of 16 and 21, in the national forest and park systems. Humphrey says that this would be no mere make-work plan either: besides the good done the participants, he says, it is estimated that there is currently an eight billion dollar backlog of need work in conservation, increasingly important to the well-being of the nation.

The second part of the senator's proposal, the Youth Area Employment Program, would be set up in cooperation with state and local governments, developing programs whereby qualified trainees could be placed in a wide variety of public service positions. Incentive and control of these programs would remain decentralized, the enrollees would be men and women between 16 and 22. Work would be done by the enrollees in libraries, schools, hospitals, welfare agencies, child care and recreation programs, and similar public services.

The Domestic Corps

The spectacular success of the Peace Corps has inspired the administration to try essentially the same type of program in the needy areas of the nation. A number of student and educational groups have urged the creation of such a "domestic peace corps" for several years.

Reaction to the proposal in Congress has been "very favorable," an administration spokesmen said last week. It is expected in Washington that an experimental unit of the domestic corps, perhaps two or three hundred volunteers, will be created by executive order within the near future. The corps' operating budget for its first year is expected to be around $6 million.

The most commonly heard suggested title for the domestic corps is the "National Service Corps"—but Congress could easily change that. Corpsmen will work in Indian reservations in the West, in depressed areas, in centers for juvenile delinquents, homes for the aged, and a wide variety of public service occupations. Applicants will have to be over 21 and possess some skill.

Requests for National Service Corps assistance projects will be by local or state initiative, with the local or state government expected to put up at least part of the cost of the particular project. Although the National Service Corps has not yet been relegated to any governmental agency, it is expected that it will be administered by the Department of Labor or the mammoth Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Aid For Education

The administration has yet to present its complete educational platform to Congress, but it is already apparent that this will be the first major administration legislative program dealing specifically with the problems of youth and education in the country's history.

Last year a $2.4 billion college aid bill including construction grants and student loans, was defeated in the House. In fact, out of 22 educational bills introduced into the last Congress, only two received favorable action. The administration, however, claims to have much better hopes for the current session.

Among the educational proposals introduced in the House on opening day was a two year, $235 million bill presented by Rep. Edith Green (D-Oregon), chairman of a special sub-committee on higher education. Mrs. Green hopes to get legislation providing for Federal matching funds for the construction of special cultural centers run cooperatively by two or more colleges. Her bill would call for the construction of at least 15 of these centers in dispersed geographic areas, serving as joint laboratories, research centers, TV stations, and providing courses and programs that the individual

Amherst Art Center Plans Poetry Program

Gerda Norvig, Charles Knight and Anthony LaBranche will read their poems at Jones Library Tuesday, March 5, at 7 p.m. in the sixth poetry program of the Amherst Art Center this season.

Gerda Norvig, wife of Professor Torsten Norvig, UMass, is a native of New York City. She attended Fieldstone School in New York, Sarah Lawrence College, and received her B.A. in English from Bennington College in 1956. Nue Inglish Teeching Eksperiment

A nue eksperiment in teeching inglish is beeing tried on three amerrican children studdeeing in britn.

The new method is called the Augmented Roman Alphabet and it has 43 symbols instead of the normal 26. Words are spelled just as they are sounded. There are 19 new sound combinations but no capital letters.

The three American youngsters are at the U. S. Air Force school in Bushy Park, some 15 miles from London.

"They have had trouble learning to read the normal way so we have decided to try this new experiment," said Principal Robert Stephen of Cleveland, O. "We're doubtful about the result but we are hopeful."

Because the children are retarded, he declined to identify them.

"corses for the amerrican teechers hav allreddy been held in lundon," reported augmented roeman nues, organ of the new teaching system.

The same news sheet said Augmented Roman has "eeven reecht sibeeria," where a Russian has been using it to teach a class of 6-year-olds.

But the system has its detractors.

KAPPA SIGMA

Now that the Spring Semester is in full swing, many social functions are being planned at the Gamma Delta Chapter of Kappa Sigma. One of the first was the exchange supper with Sigma Kappa on February 6. It was one of the most successful exchanges we have had and we are looking forward to more in the future.

The Brothers would like to thank the Sisters of Pi Phi for the use of their pledges as waitresses on February 5. Their presence added a little extra to the supper and it was appreciated by the Brothers.

Kappa Sig would like to congratulate Brother Ken O'Brien for his outstanding job in the recent B.A.A. in Boston. Brother O'Brien placed first in the Bingham 880, a special half mile for New England Collegians. His time was 1:56.1.

The Kappa Sigma Fraternity is proud to announce its four new pledges: Jack Anderson '65, Cambridge, Mass.; Ken Barone, '66, Natick, Mass.; Rod Brooks, '66, Ayer, Mass.; Frank Foley, '66, Charlestown, Mass. SORORITY NEWS

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

Iota Kamma Upsilon, the youngest sorority on campus, is busily engaged in a plan aptly nicknamed "Operation Recruit." We hope to be able to assist the University officials, who are seeking to enroll the best our high schools have to offer, by providing week-end accommodations and a suitable program so that these students may become acquainted with our facilities.

This will require the cooperation of many others. Professors, who will allow observers to "sit in" on lectures, students, who will allow their rooms to be used on week-ends and others, who will act as campus guides are all necessary for the success of this plan. As the caliber of our student body rises, so will our standing as a University in this country.

Our house hunting committee has been trudging high and low, placing irons in the fire so that we may let Memorial Hall rest in peace from our social gatherings. We appreciate the fact that these doors have always been open to us and are grateful to the University for making such space available.

We are proud of our first pledge class who all are busy collecting pledge points. They are Susan Bonelli, president of the class; Priscilla Hull, secretary; Helen Tefs, vice president; Gerry DeRiso, treasurer; Brenda Youngsten, Sandy Commons, Helen Radowicz, Evie Hanson, Prudy Coco, Barbie Close, Joan Holland, Judy Carr, Bette Angell, Frankie Castine, Connie Kari, Gaby Bay and Al Stawicki. We wish them a warm welcome.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

One Wednesday morning not too long ago the Lambda Phi pledges were awakened at 6:30 and marched through deep, fresh snow to 389 N. Pleasant. A hearty breakfast was waiting, as were their sisters, and everyone made their morning classes even if the professors didn't.

The sisters of Lambda Phi are proud to announce that Phyllis Viall, '64, will be our candidate for best-dressed-woman on campus.

On February 28th the following pledges were welcomed into sisterhood: Lorretta Jennings, '66; Linda Leen, '66; Patti Lieberman, '65; Phyllis Viall, '64, and Janet White, '65. Congratulations, sisters!

SIGMA DELTA TAU

The Sisters of SDT are proud to announce the names of our new officers for the year 1963-64. They are: President, Merry Arnold; 1st Vice President, Leslie Schair; 2nd Vice President, Judy Addelson; Recording Secretary, Ronnie-Sue Fireman; Treasur Carol Chesler; Assistant Treasurer, Carol Levine; Stewardess, Judy Wilcox; Assistant Stewardess, Sandy Lepowe; House Manager, Bev Enstrom; Assistant House Manager, Paula Hughes; Rush Chairman, Sue Glickman; Social Chairman, Ritchie Weinberg; Activities Chairman, Pam Chace; Senior Panhel. THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: TONY DiGIOIA

Tony DiGioia (B.S., 1960), in less than two years, became supervisor in one of the Test Centers in the Plant Department of Pennsylvania Bell. He manages fifteen people who are responsible for the installation and repair of 53,000 telephones in the area.

Tony should handle his present assignment with his customary thoroughness, when you consider his first two assignments. Shortly after starting work, he proved his capabilities by organizing a completely new microfilm filing system in the Engineering Department. And, later, he set up engineering practices covering many phases of the engineering operation.

Tony DiGioia and other young engineers like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS SPECIAL

Pawnbrokers, Gold Pieces, ...And Spring

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Just when baseball and birds move north to the East, that peculiar species in sport known as the Naismith migratorius heads south . . . south as far as the New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania area.

With increasing numbers each spring, basketball coaches migrate to this metropolitan area filled with its factories, chemical plants, housing projects, and cigar-box basketball gymnasiums. And if it is satisfaction that brings the swallows back to Capistrano each year, it also draws coaches back to the likes of Englewood, Brooklyn, Westfield, South Orange, the Bronx, Trenton, Jersey City, and Philadelphia.

Dr. James Naismith planted basketball's roots at Springfield College one winter more than 60 years ago and as anyone can tell you, and he should have told the doctor, New England soil makes for poor planting from December to March. Maybe that's why the hardcourt game never really flourished in its own backyard. Or perhaps because "they play the best schoolboy hockey in the world up here in New England," as Jack Leamon speculates. Oh, they play basketball up here but not the way it CAN be played. But Niasmith would have dropped his peachbaskets if he ever saw what they do with the leather-covered bladder down N.Y.-N.J. way. And there the schoolboys do those marvelous things every day of every month of the year.

On hot summer noons down there, one smells two odors: hot, pastey asphalt under the sun and hot, sweaty sneakers under basketball rims. At night, it is almost as bad. At midnight one evening last summer, a prowl car passing by a neighborhood school in New Jersey heard strange noises coming from the playground. When the officers put the spotlight on the yard, 21-year-old Nick Werkman and his brother could be seen shooting baskets in the moonlight after leaving off their dates. This week, Werkman leads the nation's major college scoring race with 30 points per game.

During the winter . . . Well, most kids down there think God made snow shovels solely in order to clean basketball courts from under the snow. Hockey? A hockey stick in Newark is like a garden hose in the Sahara.

In the spring . . . that's when you put an extra chair to the table for the migrating college basketball coaches.

And so it is, in March, that coaches forget their wives, their children, the victory-laden or defeat-riden season just completed, and start on a kind of vaudeville circuit: one night stands in dumpy, crowded high school gyms; through New York, down New Jersey, and into Pennsylvania. Like railbirds and touters around the stables, they buttonhole high school coaches in hopes of a tip: "What d'ya got?" "What's around?" "Who you seen I might be able to use?" "Who's been around before me?" On Tuesday afternoon he talks to the player's coach; Tuesday night he scouts the player in a game; Wednesday morning he checks the kid's transcript and college boards; Wednesday noon he speaks with the player himself; Wedneseday night he is back on the road again . . . but if the kid had the right moves, he'll be back. In the meantime, there are more towns to hit, more players to scout, more hope . . . hopes of another Heinsohn, Cousy, Gola, Green, Chamberlain or Ernst, Chubin and Werkman. They'll sit together—the Zunics, Calverlys, Rossinis, Burkes—they sit in the bleachers on late winter nights, looking like hungry pawnbrokers searching for the gold pieces that makes tomorrow worth living, studying and awkward, scrawny schoolboys.

The itinerant coaches weave a dragnet across the metropolitan area and then south. They drag their nets across the slums of Harlem, the docks of Hoboken, the dark streets of Newark, the cobblestones of Philadelphia, and rich elm-studed streets of Westfield. They poke and pry, and dig and hope. Most of the time, they barely come up even for the effort. Once in a while they find a gold piece.

Like the time the New England coach pulled into a tiny but wealthy Central Jersey hamlet in search of even castaways. The high school mentor had nothing to offer; "these were hard times; a building year. But there was one boy." Perhaps the New Englander wouldn't be interested? "The kid never played varsity ball; a little bit of JV work last year. Now he's concentrating on tennis." That New Englander had his hat in his hand. "But the kid is playing YMCA ball just for kicks at the local gym. Might wanna take a look." The man from the North assented. Maybe his eyes poped, or his hair stood on end, or his palms started to sweat. Anyway, he reacted the way all coaches react when they find a gold piece. The town was Westfield, N.J.; the New Englander was Matt Zunic; the square-shouldered tennis player he found was Rodger Twitchell.

So if you are going south in New York for a Broadway play, or a movie on Times Square or even to see the Mona Lisa, my advice is go NOW. In February. Because by March 10, the roads into New York will be pretty crowded with these nervous Naismith migratorii chasing rainbows.

"Triumphal arch, that fill'st the sky
When storms prepare to part,
I ask not proud Philosophy"
But a Heyman just like Art.

Mermen Sink Tufts, W.P.I.; Records Fall

by BUD PRATT '65

Tufts

Joe Rogers' Mermen felled eight records at Tufts Tues. night in a 61-33 victory.

Tufts fans were horrified when Mike Bjornholm (64) practically walked away from Champlin, their local hero, in the 50-yd. freestyle 23.1), thereby erasing a UM record that has stood for 20 years. Mike humbled the Tufts captain again in the 100-yard freestyle, with a pool-record 52.3.

Mike Rothschild, another top New England contender, was pushed by two outstanding efforts by UM Co-capt. Jim Coffey to set records in the 200 freestyle (2:02.2-pool) and 500 freestyle (5:32.4—UM and pool).

After winning the 200-yd. medley (2:25.7—pool record), Co-capt. Bruce Morton injured a finger in the first turn of the 200-yd. backstroke and had to settle for a second place.

Despite a 2-week absence due to bronchitis, Danny O'Mara won a second in the medley, and along with Ron Chiras, Mike Jamison, and Jim O'Sullivan, 2 pts. in the free-style relay.

Charlie Monnier, breaststroke specialist, established a pool record with a 200-yd. time of 2:34.7, John Grybko taking second.

John Francisco was virtually robbed of a first place in the diving; scoring consistent 5's and 6's, his efforts fell short by a mere 1½ pts.

Winners in four of the last five meets, the Mermen are a strong bet to rewrite the record books again next Tuesday vs. R.P.I (Women's PE Bldg, 4:00). A victory Tues. will mean a winning season.

W.P.I.

The University's Varsity Swimming Team won its third meet of the season last Wednesday night by dunking Worcester Poly. Tech. 56 to 38 in a tight meet in Worcester. Tech took the first event, but Mike Rothschild and Co-Capt. Jim Coffey were one, two respectively in the 200 yd. freestyle to tie the meet at 8 all. Then Rounds from Tech beat Mike Bjornholm (2) and Ron Chiras (3) in the 60 yd. freestyle by hitting a record 28.6 seconds.

Co-Capt. Bruce Morton then did 1:49.2 for the 160 yd. Ind. Medley Relay for a first place making it 17-16, our point. John Francisco was second in the diving and Mike Jamison took a second in the 200 yd. butterfly with Jim O'Sullivan swimming third.

Vsich of Tech beat Ron Chiras in 55. for the century freestyle. Morton and Bjornholm were the first in the 200 yd. backstroke—winning time 2:25.1. Mass. was ahead 35-34.

The most exciting race of the evening was the tortuous 500 yd. freestyle. Rounds of Tech was expected to win, but Mike Rothschild, undefeated in this event all year, overpowered him. Jim Coffey was third and all 3 went under the old record, while Mike set 5:42.3 as the new mark.

The fourth record of the night was broken by Charles Monnier in the 200 yd. breaststroke. He did a remarkable 2:33.5 with teammate John Grybko touching just behind.

Chiras, Morton, Rothschild and Bjornholm teamed to win the 400 yd. freestyle relay although the 200 breast win had settled the win on the Redmen.

Riflers Topple WPI; UConn; Butterworth Tops Scorers

Once again putting on a display of top qualty individual marksmanshp and team depth, the UMass Varsity Rifle Team outgunned Worcester Polytech and UConn at Storrs, Connecticut on Saturday.

Co-captain Hal Butterworth continued to lead the Redmen advance as he has done in most of the matches. Hal's Saturday score of 284 is slightly higher than his regular season average. The UMass shooter has scored high all season and ends the year as the number one individual shooter in the Southern Group of the New England Collegiate Rifle League.

Jim Carswell and co-captain Frank Fluet followed close behind Butterworth by posting excellent totals of 281. Carswell had scores of 95, 94, 92 in the prone, kneeling and standing positions while Fluet totalled 100, 93, and 88 points for the same positions. Mark Nataupsky and Gerry Kwist completed the Redmen marksmanship exhibition with totals of 280. Both shooters fired above their average and helped the squad to total above the coveted 1400 mark.

The Redmen five man total of 1406 was just slightly better than W.P.I.'s 1401. UConn finished third with a total of 1394. Saturday's double victory places UMass in the NECRL finals which will be held on March 16 in Boston. Four members of the team will also compete in the NRA sectionals to be held at West Point on March 9.

Gymnasts Beat Cortland; Overpowered By Maroon

After a resounding victory over Cortland on February 22nd in which the UMass gymnastic team under the leadership of Dave Williams, Dave Yates and Tom Astaldi captured all of the first six places, the Redmen left their own home court for not so green pactures and traveled to Springfield College last Tuesday evening where they fell victim to th perennial powerful Springfield College squad.

Despite two first place berths copped by Dave Williams on the parallel bars and the Side Horse and another top spot performance by Dave Yates on the Horizontal Bar, the Maroons still managed to overpower the Redmen 58-38.

An encouraging sign, however, was the fact that the scores would have been sufficient to have beaten last year's Springfield squad; a clear indication of the great improvement made by this year's team and sure signs that there are better things to come for UMass gym enthusiasts.

Redmen (UMass) Lose To Redmen (St. John's)

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Any chance that the University of Massachusetts basketball team had of finishing their 1962-63 season with above a .500 average went by the boards Tuesday night when the UMass Redmen dropped an 82-73 decision to the St. John's University Redmen at Jamaica, N.Y.

Before the New York venture the UMass five stood 11 and 11 for the season and needed back to back victories over St. John's and Maine Saturday night to compile a winning season record. The best they can do now is end the season with a .500 mark if they knock off Maine.

Tuesday's contest saw UMass engage in a nip and tuck battle with St. John's throughout the entire first half, the lead changing hands eight times before St. John's pulled up too a 34-34 stalemate at intermission.

Redmen Jump Into Lead

UMass edged out in front for about the first six minutes of play in the second half, but St. John's Don Burke tied the score and put his team ahead to stay on a three point play, making the score 44-42.

From this point St. John's began to widen the edge and with 10 minutes to go led 59-48. Several times UMass sliced the lead down to seven but St. John's was getting frequent opportunities at the foul line to hold off any UMass threat.

In fact, fouls told the story of the game as it has in many UM games this season. St. John's made a total of 34 from the line while making only 24 from the floor. UMass had 27 baskets but only 19 from the free throw line. Percentagewise, St. John's hit on 53% of their floor shots, UMass on 41.

Rodger Twitchell led the Mass scorers with 16 points. Clarence Hill, held scoreless from the floor until 5 minutes to go in the game, suddenly got hot and made six in a row to end the game with 15 points. St. John's Ken MacIntyre led all scorers with 23 points.

Last Game Vs. Maine

Tomorrow night will see the cutain close on the Redmen court season. Coach Matt Zunic and co. will be at Orono, Maine looking for win number two over the Black Bears. Late in January Maine dropped a 80-68 decision to UMass at the Cage.

While the Mass-Maine contest tomorrow is a Yankee Conference game, neither team will figure in the championship. That is up to Rhode Island and UConn to

by GENE COLBURN '64

Curry Hicks Cage seems to be destined this year to be the sight of great displays of track power. Tuesday night the Redmen were hosts to Holy Cross, who showed for all to see why its relay teams are always nationally ranked.

The varsity lost by a score of 68-45, and the very first event seemed to be warning of what was in store for UMass, as Fred Lewis suffered one of his few defeats in the broad jump. Malberger won with a leap of 22'4½".

Dave Sadowksky and Dick Ward were the spark plugs for UMass in the field events Sadowsky won the pole vault with a leap of 12'6", and just missed on his attempts at 13'1", which would have established a new varsity and Cage record.

Ward Stars

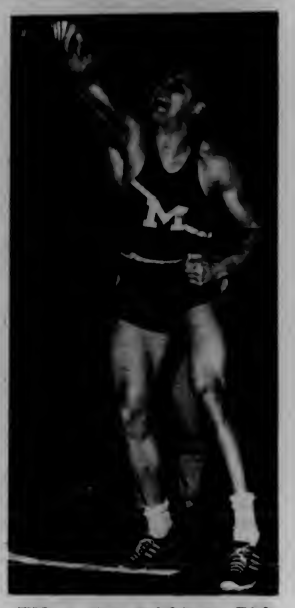
For 3 years Dick Ward has been considered a "good" weight man, but never achieved any wide spread acclaim. This year Dick is making up for lost time. Against Holy Cross he set a new shot-put record of 52'5¼", Ward also tied with Kevin O'Brien in the high jump with a record leap of 6'2¼". Because of less misses over all, O'Brien was given first place.

In the running events UMass had the dubious honor of discovering why Holy Cross is so good. The Crusaders swept both hurdles and the dashes. Once the middle distances arrived, so did Holy Cross. Ed Koering wiped Ken O'Brien's 600 record off the books with a blistering 1:13.6. "O'Bie" was second with a time of 1:15. In the 1000 O'Brien lost a heart breaker. Bob Maloney took the lead at the start, with "O'Bie" about 2 yards back. With 2 laps to go, Obie tried to get by, but Maloney hung on.

At the gun lap Obie again tried to get by. Both boys sped around the last lap dead even, but the last corner Obie lost a fraction of an inch to Maloney and this was the deciding margin at the finish, as both were given the same time of 2:17.1.

The mile saw "Digger" Brouillet's seemingly unbeatable lead of 15 yards dissolve to nothing in the last 2 laps, as O'Connor from Holy Cross put in a great kick, and won with a time of 4:20.5. UMass salvaged some pride in the 2 mile as the Redmen swept the first four places.

Holy Cross saved its greatest display of power for last. UMass figured that the Crusaders had an edge on them, but the Redmen relay team of Erikson, Forand, Carpenter and Thompson put up a great effort, as they turned in their best time of the year—3:39. This was not their nights, though. The Holy Cross lead off man, Miller, unofficially shattered the cage quarter mile record with an amazing :51 seconds flat, and the other 3 Crusaders never let up, and their final time of 3:27.3 easily wiped out the old record of 3:32.



UMass star weightman Dick Ward lets go with the shot-put for a Cage record throw of 52'5¼" in Tuesday night's Redmen defeat at the hands of Holy Cross.

Frosh Win 65-48

The freshmen were more fortunate, as they won by a score of 65-48. Bob Molvar and John Medeiros paced the frosh. Medeiros scored 11 points and Molvar had 8.

The 1000 just wasn't UMass's race, as Molvar lost by the same amount as O'Brien had. Bob took the lead from Bartelline, who had already won the 600, with one lap to go. Coming off the last turn, Bartelline made his move and just nosed Molvar out at the wire. His time of 2:20.6 also set a record.

Saturday, both varsity and frosh will be competing against New Hampshire at the cage. The meet starts at 2:00 p.m., and will be the last time this year the Redmen will be competing at home.

Youth Fitness

The recent national controversy over the physical condition of America's youth grew out of an alarmingly high rate of rejections for the armed services for reasons of physical inadequacy. Combined with the Kennedy administration's fetish for the youthful look, trim muscles and 50-mile hikes, this took form in the establishment of a Presidential Council on Youth Fitness, which began in 1962 by issuing its "Blue Book" entitled "Youth Physical Fitness" and outlining various exercises and good health practices recommended for the healthy American youth.

The exercises recommended by the Council turned out not to be much fun, and although the Government Printing Office has sold some 100,000 of the booklets, not much enthusiasm seems to have been whipped up on American campuses. Perhaps fearing that fearful students and youth will use the booklet as a compendium of exercise to avoid if one intends to beat the draft, the Council is now preparing a new booklet, which will concentrate on diet, good health, hygiene, group play and all-around outdoor recreation as a more reasonable means to national physical fitness.

Corporation Needed. Emphasizes Salazar

by RUSSELL MURPHY '66

"There are no more geographical frontiers . . . we must stand together," Jose Luis Cruz-Salazar, head of Guatemala's National Democratic Movement and candidate for the presidency of that Latin American nation said here Friday. He said that the situation in Latin America seems to be growing worse, not better, as are the problems also.

He spoke here Friday at 4 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the SU.

His talk, "Latin America—Opportunity through New Leadership," under the joint sponsorship of the departments of government, history, and romance languages, and the Economics and International Clubs, was opened to the public and was followed by a coffee and discussion period in the Colonial Lounge of the SU.

CRUZ-SALAZAR

Pointing out that when he first visited the United States in 1947 few Americans were aware of the true situation in Latin America, Cruz-Salazar began his address by noting that the common threat of Communism has caused Americans to view their southern neighbors more realistically and to act together with them.

Cruz-Salazar outlined the problems of his own Guatemala and the methods by which he would remedy them. In so doing, Senor Cruz-Salazar also offered a program of rehabilitation for all of Latin America.

Keynoting his address with the statement, "Latin America is not a land of trouble, but of opportunity where those who toil will be rewarded," he stated that although Guatemala and all of Latin America have many chronic problems, hard work and the will to succeed will correct the situation.

Economically Guatemala is plagued by low productivity of the soil that primarily results from small-scale, piecemeal farming, he said. This can be cured by an agrarian reform, but not merely a political agrarian reform that operates on ex-

DVP Holds Discussion On Federal Aid To Education

by JOAN ST. LAURENT '66

Those who braved the snows of Friday night were treated to an entertaining and informative panel discussion on Federal Aid to Education with panel moderator Louis Lyons and panelists including Dr. Russell Kirk, Dr. Martin Lichterman, Senator Clifford Case and Francis H. Horn, President of the University of Rhode Island.

Lyons, Curator of the Nieman Foundation of journalism at Harvard, briefly introduced the topic. He stated that the Morrill act or Land Grant Act of 1862 was a success from which 70 colleges and universities evolved. He went on to note that education is unevenly provided. New York spends three times as much on each pupil than Mississippi, but Mississippi spends more in total resources.

The first speaker, Dr. Kirk, discussed Local vs. Federal Control of Education. He favored local control with no federal support.

Most people he stated, want a central system, that is, a federal source of money but no federal control. This is an optimistic outlook, for why should the federal government appropriate any funds if they will have no say in how they will be used?

Dr. Martin Lichterman, executive secretary of the New England Boad of Higher Education, spoke next on State and Municipal Aid to Education in relation to federal control.

The opinion of the majority of Americans, he said, is that there is a crisis at all educational levels and there is a need for federal aid.

The Federal government, he asserted, was the last large, untapped source of federal aid to education. He said he is of the opinion that this aid will not lead to Federal control, citing as examples the Morrill Act, the fact that already the Federal government spends two billion dollars on education, and that 55,000 schools have received private federal aid without any federal control.

The danger of Federal control he explained comes from categorical aid rather than general aid. To quote Dr. Lichterman, "Education is an investment in human resources . . . nothing contributes more to economic growth than aid to education."

He said in conclusion that the state social system became stronger with the passage of the Social Security Act and the state highway system became more efficient with federal support.

The third speaker, Senator Clifford Case from New Jersey, confined his talk to the Role of the Community College in Federal Aid.

"Money is the instrument of freedom," says Case, "and the crippling effects of the lack of funds are the most dangerous problems in America today."

The growth of the community colleges is due to the growth of high schools, the need for skilled, technical workers and the need for alert, well-informed adults.

The community college is a community institution, he ex-

Met Star London Slated For Wednesday Concert

George London, versatile bass-baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will give a concert at UMass Wednesday.

Sponsored by the University Concert Association, London's performance will be held in the Women's Physical Education Building at 8 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

London has sung for the San Francisco Opera, at La Scala in Milan, at the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires, and at the Bayreuth and Salzburg Festivals.

In a guest performance at the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow, London was given the title role in "Boris Godounov."

In addition to his stage appearances, London has recorded for Columbia, Epic and London Records. His recordings range from Russian operas to Broadway show tunes.

In 1938, after studying opera at Los Angeles City College, the 18-year-old London made his first recording. Three years later he made his operatic debut as the Doctor in "La Traviata" at the Hollywood Shaw's Collegiate Chorale. The same year he toured with the Bel Canto Trio. The other two members of the trio were Frances Yeend and Mario Lanza.

London's first performance at the Vienna State Opera in 1949 made him an overnight sensation in the world of music. Time Magazine reported at the time that London was "the operatic find of the year . . . the Vienna public is raving."

London's career has been one of steady ascent since his Vienna debut. His performance in "Aida" on opening night of the Metropolitan Opera Company's 1951-52 season, coupled with his European successes, assured him of a lasting reputation on both sides of the Atlantic.

Men's Affairs Releases Result Of Counselor Poll

by DAVE CLANCY '64

Follodwing is the first in a series of three articles dealing with Men's Affairs Committee survey concerning house counselors. The articles are written by the Chairman of the Men's Affairs Committee.

The Men's Affairs committee of the Student Senate recently conducted a survey among male students to determine their knowledge and opinions about the selection and performance of male counselors. The questionnaires were distributed on a ratio of one to every four students and 300 replies were received by the committee; the results have been compiled and will appear in this week's Collegian.

It is hoped that these articles will both inform the student and stimulate comment and suggestions, especially from those students who were not reached by the questionnaire.

The results are favorable in that it is indicated that counselors are functioning effectively and are still retaining the respect of the student. However, there are two areas in which improvement should be encouraged.

One such area deals with the fact that students are, for one reason or another, not interested in applying for a counselor's position. The other, more serious problem, is the lack of knowledge and misinformation on the

An Important Experiment

Thanks to the co-operation of the Student Senate, the Collegian will begin shortly to utilize the services of United Press International.

We wish to make it quite plain to readers of the Collegian that the primary emphasis of the paper will remain focused on the campus. However, feature columns and news stories pertinent to the world of education will be included in the new Collegian.

We feel that the addition of UPI to our regular news sources will result in a major improvement of the Collegian. However, the final decision in this matter rests with those who pay for the Collegian, the student body.

Towards the end of this publishing year the Collegian will hold an opinion poll to determine whether or not UPI should remain as a part of the Collegian. Since the students will decide in this matter, we ask that each reader evaluate the UPI material that appears. We would also ask for suggestions from readers regarding the use of UPI material in the paper.

The Executive and Publishing Boards of the Collegian have decided to install the teletype in the lobby of the Student Union so that "instant news" will be available to the campus in a central location. Your co-operation is asked in the handling of this expensive and delicate machine. The teletype is there for the benefit of the student body; misuse of the teletype will mean that the machine will be removed from this public area.

THE NEW UNIVERSITY STRING ORCHESTRA

by L. F. LOMBARD

Last Thursday evening before a very appreciative but unfortunately small audience at Bartlett Auditorium, the new University String Orchestra made its initial presentation. The organization immediately stands as the newest student group on campus being composed in the main by student players.

The program for the evening was chosen with the greatest of care by the conductor, Professor Burnard Lurie of the Music Department here at the University and included works by Barber, Hovhaness, and Mozart with the emphasis being on compositions that did not call for great technical dexterity; because of this, there were almost no pyrotechnics offered.

The playing of the Mozart Piano Sonata (K. 377) by Messrs. Lurie and Schwartz was the known quantity on the program, but the most important part of the evening was that the right step had been taken.

There were fairly loose parts offered by the new string orchestra but then, there are many groups with far more concert experience and with greater polish too who have been known to have their loose moments.

The thing to point out, then, we believe, is not the group of passages in all the pieces that were given during the concert, but rather to point out the good. The most notable in this respect was the second offering on the program: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings. In some of the finest playing of the night, most noticeably in the first and second violins to say nothing of the support given by the rest of the ensemble, we were treated to the promise of things to come: some of the potential beauties which for the most part are still buried within the players, beauties which are sure to blossom with more concert experience.

It was truly unfortunate that the Distinguished Visitors Program scheduled a speaker for the same night.

"I would not be in the least surprised if all of a sudden, apropos of nothing in the midst of general prosperity, a gentleman with an ignoble, or rather with a reactionary countenance, were to arise and putting his arms akimbo say to us all: 'I say, gentlemen, hadn't we better kick over the whole show and scatter rationalism to the winds, simply to send these logarithms to the devil, and to live once more at our own sweet foolish will.'"

—Fyodor Dostoievsky

NOT IN MASSACHUSETTS

The biggest thing to hit our country since "The First Family" album is the 50-mile walk fad. Across the highways of America, people are striding toward a New Frontier—not just less flab, but greater appetites that will help reduce our farm surpluses, and more shoe wear to help spur industry. Yes, the fad has really caught on; everywhere except Massachusetts, that is. Here, in the home grounds of the Kennedys, we seem destined to remain a flabby economy, for by Chapter 417 of Acts and Resolves of 1936, any person participating in or aiding a walk-a-thon or marathon exceeding 27 miles in length is subject to a $100 fine, or imprisonment, or both!

We feel it a disgrace that this archaic law should hinder our progress. The Senators who initiated the original legislation showed no insight and now we must make amends for their error. Reinstate our right to walk! Let our slogan read, "Our Roads Are Back So Hit The Road Jack."

FACULTY APATHY

To the Editor:

While it is possible to overdo a good thing, we would venture to add a few remarks on the subject of apathy in the University community. While student apathy is perhaps a serious problem, we believe that faculty exhibition of the same attitude is an even more important one, and instances of the latter are evident in abundance on this campus. Consider the following examples:

Last Thursday evening Senator William Proxmire gave the keynote address in the D.V.P. symposium on federal aid to education. We need hardly mention that the issue of whether or not to distribute federal aid to education is critically important in America today; the future of our entire society may in some measure be contingent upon the way in which it is resolved. As such, it is a problem of concern to every American citizen, but it might be expected to elicit an especial amount of concern on a state university campus. Nevertheless, a mere handful of faculty members saw fit to attend Senator Proxmire's address.

If the University faculty is apathetic with respect to important social problems however, it might be expected that those more directly related to their immediate interests—a hard bread-and-butter issue such as salary and promotion, for example—might rouse them from their lethargy. Yet, such is not the case. Last Tuesday a meeting of the University chapter of the AAUP was held to consider and discuss the preliminary report of the committee on establishing criteria for determination of scholarly "merit." It is well known that, with the advent of autonomy, meritorious performance has become a decisive factor in the distribution of increases and promotions on the campus. Yet, at the Tuesday meeting of the AAUP, where the matter of defining "merit" was being discussed at length, approximately twenty faculty members deemed it of sufficient importance to attend and contribute their views.

The above examples are not isolated instances of faculty apathy. In a university community where the faculty number in excess of six hundred, for example, the scattered membership in such important organs of professional opinions as the AAUP and the AF of T is further testimony of our case. In view of the professorial example being set on this campus, surely the student body cannot wholly be blamed for manifesting apathy.

WMUA—WHO GOOFED?

To the Editor:

WMUA calls itself an educational station and makes it known it will carry certain important programs such as the panel discussion on Federal Aid to Education and then they flub it all up!

It is a very sophmoric absurd judgment to put on a high schoolish disc jockey show to replace the questioning of an impressive slate of panelists.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor's note: In the following letter, Dr. Glenn Tinder of the University Government Department answers two questions posed to him by the COLLEGIAN.

Question: Do you feel that the present educational process at the University of Massachusetts is conducive to vitality of thought?

Answer: My own experience and observations indicate that at least in some areas of its activity the University has forgotten, or has come to despair of fulfilling, what is surely its first responsibility: the provision of truly high quality undergraduate education. Correspondingly, it seems to me that the University has allowed itself in these areas to fall under the domination of various false or secondary intellectual and educational standards. It follows—so far as there is validity in these very summary statements—that the University has in some measure failed to be an intellectual community. This must necessarily tend to deprive thought of vitality. Paradoxically, despite the recent emphasis on publication, it is doubtful that the University provides an altogether favorable environment for reflection, research, and writing.

Question: What should be done to remedy the situation?

Answer: There is of course no simple answer to this question. One cannot infer from the above criticisms that emphasis on faculty research and publication, and the building of a graduate program, are altogether erroneous policies. My personal view is that, rightly applied, both have some validity. Nor should one assume that commitment to excellence in undergraduate teaching would preclude all large classes. Obviously there is no simple formula for building a fine University. It would certainly help immensely if there were to develop a prevailing skepticism of all aims and achievements which lend themselves readily to publicity blurbs and to numerical statement and, underlying this skepticism, a concern for that intangible reality, the growth and creativity of the minds of the students and scholars who make up the University. One expression of this concern might be an effort to develop a program of honors colloquia which would be central elements in undergraduate education and not, as these colloquia are at present, dependent largely on the voluntary contributions of time which students and faculty can save from their regular curricular activities. It would surely not be extravagant to treat the training of the best undergraduates as equal in importance to the training of graduate students.

WHERE THE FIRECRACKERS GO

To the Editor:

Did you ever wonder where the firecrackers go that are confiscated by the C.P.? That was a question that bothered me for a long time, but on February 27 at 11:03 p.m. I found the answer. Little boys have been know to set off firecrackers behind unsuspecting people, but it seems that fashions have changed (perhaps). It's now a policeman's trick, as was demonstrated by a guard Wednesday night when he threw a firecracker behind another unsuspecting guard. You laugh; I did. Did you ever hear a trooper swear?

part of the students in so far as the method of selecting counselors is concerned. It is more than likely that part of the lack of desire to try out for a counselor's position is due to misinformation about the selection procedures.

The Dean of Men's office recently published the selection system in the Collegian and it follows below:

1. Applications are made available in the residence halls and/or the office of the Dean of Men.

2. After the applications are collected they are reviewed by two differently-oriented groups of people:

a) The house mother and her counselors get together and discuss the candidates with the added insight of having lived in the dorm with them.

b) A member of the Dean of Men's staff personally interviews the applicants and questions them having the added knowledge of the student's academic and disciplinary record if any.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

GLAD RAGS

The bounds of spring are on winter's traces. Soon buds the crocus, soon trills the giant condor, soon come the new spring fashions to adorn our lissome limbs.

And what will the American college student wear this spring? Gather round, you rascals, and light a Marlboro Cigarette and enjoy that fine mellow tobacco, that pure white filter, and possess your souls in sweet content, and listen.

As everyone knows, campus fashions have always been casual. This spring, however, they have gone beyond being merely casual: they have become makeshift.

The object is to look madly improvised, gaily spur-of-the-moment! For example, why don't you girls try wearing a peasant skirt with a dinner jacket? Or matador pants with a bridal veil? Or Bermuda shorts with bronze breastplates? Be rakish! Be impromptu! Be devil-take-the-hindmost!

And, men, you be the same. Try an opera cape with sweat pants. Or a letter-sweater with kilts. Or a strait jacket with hip boots. Be bold! Be daring! Be a tourist attraction!

Be rakish! Be impromptu!

But all is not innovation in college fashions this spring. In fact, one of the highlights of the season turns time backward in its flight. I refer, of course, to the comeback of the powdered wig.

This charming accoutrement, too long neglected, has already caught on with in undergrads everywhere. On hundreds of campuses the bossa nova is giving way to the minuet, and patriotic undergraduates are dumping British tea into the nearest harbor. This, as you may imagine, does not sit well with King George III who, according to reliable reports, has been stamping his foot and uttering curses not fit to reproduce in this family newspaper. For that matter, a lot of our own people are steamed up too, and there has even been some talk about the American colonies declaring their independence of England. But I hardly think it will come to that. I mean, how can we break with the mother country when we are dependent on her for so many things—linsey-woolsey, Minié balls, taper snuffers, and like that? She, on the other hand, relies on us for turkeys, Marlboro Cigarettes, and Route 66. So I say, if Molly Pitcher and those other Radcliffe hotheads will calm down, and if gentlemen will cry "Peace! Peace!" we may yet find an amicable solution to our differences. But let not our British cousins mistake this willingness to negotiate for weakness. If fight we must, then fight we will! Paul Revere is saddled up, the rude bridge arches the flood, and the ROTC is armed!

But I digress. We were smoking Marlboro Cigarettes—O, splendid cigarette! O, good golden tobaccos! O, pristine pure white filter! O, fresh! O, tasty! O, soft pack! O, flip top box! O, get some!—we were, I say, smoking Marlboros and talking about spring fashions.

Let us turn now to the season's most striking new feature—pneumatic underdrawers. These inflatable garments make every chair an easy chair. Think how welcome they will be when you sit through a long lecture! They are not, however, without certain dangers. Last week, for example, Rimbaud Sigafoos, a sophomore at the University of Pittsburgh, fell out of a 96th story window in the Tower of Learning. Thanks to his pneumatic underdrawers, he suffered no injury when he struck the sidewalk, but the poor fellow is still bouncing—his seventh consecutive day—and it is feared that he will starve to death.

Fashions come, fashions go, but year after year Marlboro Cigarettes, sponsors of this column, bring you the tastiest tobaccos and a pure white filter too. Try Marlboro soon.

Parachutist Nate Pond To Lecture

The UMass Sport Parachute Club will sponsor a lecture and a movie by the internationally known parachutist Nate Pond tomorrow evening. The movie will include parachutists in action, closeups of free falling, and methods of safe landing.

Mr. Pond has made over four hundred jumps during his long career. He was the pilot and team coordinator of the American jumping squad at the sixth World Championship Parachute Meet held at Orange, Massachusetts last August and September. Mr. Pond's wife Nora was a competitor in the women's division at Orange, also.

The club will present Mr. Pond's talk tomorrow, at 8 p.m. in the Council Chamber of the SU. Following the movie, there will be a coffee break and a discussion of parachuting. Paul Jones, the club president, will show those present the mechanics of the parachute and its deployment.

The Sport Parachute Club is a new organization on campus and officials said they expect to be in full swing when the warm weather returns. Everyone interested is very cordially invited to attend.

Catholics Are Given Dispensation

UMass Catholic students over the age of 21 have been allowed special dispensation from the Lenten Fast, Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of the Springfield diocese has announced. Those who desire to follow the Lenten rules are urged to do so, he added.

He also announced Lenten rules for Fasting and Abstinence.

"ABSTINENCE — Everyone over seven years of age is bound to observe the law of abstinence.

"Complete abstinence is to be observed on Fridays, Ash Wednesday, the Vigils of the Assumption and Christmas, and on Holy Saturday until midnight. On days of complete abstinence meat, and soup or gravy made from meat, may not be used at all.

"Partial abstinence is to be observed on Ember Wednesdays and Saturday and on the Vigils of Pentecost and All Saints. On days of partial abstinence meat and soup or gravy made from meat, may be taken only once a day at the principal meal.

"FAST—Everyone over 21 and under 59 years of age is also bound to observe the law of fast on the week-days of Lent, Holy Saturday, Ember Days, Vigils of Pentecost, Assumption, All Saints and Christmas.

"On days of fast only one full meal is allowed. Two other meatless meals, sufficient to maintain strength, may be taken according to each one's needs; but together they should not equal another full meal.

"Meat may be taken at the principal meal on a day of fast except on Fridays, Ash Wednesday, Holy Saturday and the Vigils of the Assumption and Christmas.

"Eating between meals is not permitted; but liquids, including milk and fruit juices, -are allowed.

"When health or ability to work would be seriously affected, the law does not oblige. In doubt concerning fast or abstinencé, a parish priest or confessor should be consulted."

pediencies. In essence, he advocated collective farming.

"Co-operation with the United States has a ring of dignity that has been lacking," Cruz-Salazar went on, commenting both on Guatemala's need for industrialization and the Alliance for Progress. However, he stressed a realistic approach by the Alliance, stating, "Act on facts, not on illusions . . . leave the do-gooders at home."

The state must be a protector, but not a provider, he continued, expressing his belief in free enterprise and in the government's merely maintaining fairness among the investor, the producer, the worker, and the consumer.

Cruz-Salazar also stressed the need for education. Although he did state the "education must be made available to the masses . . . a right of all," he made it clear that the "privileged class" must also be educated to make them aware of their duties, both economic and civic.

He briefly touched on the Communist threat, naturally noting that it is a force to be contended with and that all Americans, north and south, stand "a good chance of losing the battle unless we wake up." The one way to battle it is to meet it at every turn and resort to force when necessary.

Cruz-Salazar closed his address with a "plea . . . to all Latin Americans . . . to come forth . . . and offer themselves to the service of their nation" in "this crusade for a better life."

Redmen Smother UMaine In Season Finale, 94-76

Twitchell (33) And Hill (27) Pace UMass Scoring Attack

by STEVE HEWEY '65

The University of Massachusetts closed out its 1962-63 basketball schedule Saturday night by shelling host University of Maine, 94-76, at Orono, Maine. In doing so the Redmen had one of their better shooting nights, cashing in on 41 of 79 tries from the floor.

Twitchell Scores 33

Redmen forward Rodger Twitchell, also enjoying one of the best nights of his varsity career, tied a field goal record of 14 en route to collecting 33 points. That total was good enough to earn the junior forward high point honors for the evening.

Backcourt man Clarence Hill kept the Maine defense busy but not busy enough as he hit for 27 points.

Both Twitchell and Hill were big factors in the UMass 52% shooting pace. Rodger was 14 for 22 and Clarence 12 for 21.

Once again UMass was not too productive at the free throw line, making only 12. But their hot shooting from the floor more than made up for that. After toying with the Bears for the first few minutes, UMass began to roll and left the floor at the half leading 40-27.

The second half was no easier on Maine. At one stretch UMass was ahead by 24, 80-56, and was not letting up. Matt Zunic substituted freely in the closing minutes and the subs kept the Redmen rolling along to win number 12. The UMass squad have also lost 12.

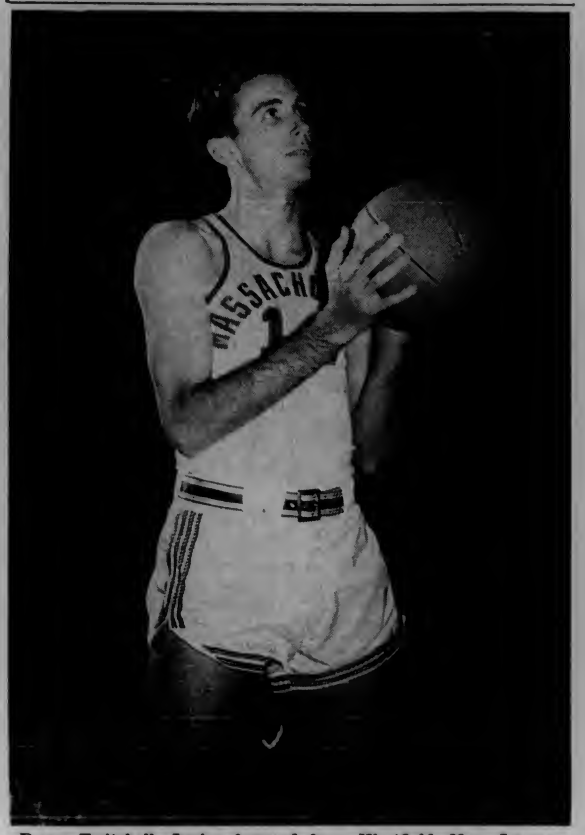
The victory over Maine enabled Massachusetts to finish the Yankee Conference schedule with a six and four record. For Maine, the loss, the second this year to the Redmen, closed out its Conference play with a record of three wins and seven defeats.

UConn, YanCon Champ, To Face West Virginia

UConn, by virtue of its 88-73 win over URI Saturday night emerged as the Yankee Conference titlist. The Huskies averaged an earlier season loss to Rhode Island and compiled a 9-1 Yankee record. For the season they are 17-5 with two games remaining.

The UConns, as do the YanCon champs each season, will represent the Conference in the NCAA Regional playoffs in Philadelphia alter on this month.

UMass, Conference winner last season, lost in the opening round of the NCAA's to NYU. UConn could find the opening round this year also rough. They'll be up against the West Virginia Mountaineers, Southeast Conference champs.



Roger Twitchell, Junior forward from Westfield, New Jersey, scored 33 points last night to take high honors in the game.

VARSITY SWIMMING

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

GREAT DECISIONS

U.S.-Spain; The Dangerous Parallels

by STEVEN H. CURTIS '64

The Great Decisions discussion group examined the situation in Spain last Wednesday night. Guest speaker was Dr. A. G. Azpeitia, who gave those present a brief resume of Spain's history as background to understanding its present situation.

The doomed republic began with the fall of monarch King Alfonso XIII in 1931. In 1936 the clericists, land-owners and army officers, all politically threatened under the Republic, revolted under leadership of Franco.

Thus resulted the Spanish Civil War, with Franco's party gaining authority and setting up a totalitarian, yet Spanish, regime.

After World War II, Franco foresaw eventual U.S.-U.S.S.R. hostility and was receptive to U.S. inquiries for bases. This country thus found itself supporting, with military and economic assistance, a totalitarian state.

To intellectuals throughout the world, the Spanish Civil War posed an example of cruelty, injustice and ignorance; they were frustrated by democratic countries' refusal to aid the Republic, while Stalinist Russia did support the Republic.

Several members of the Great Decisions group pointed out the irony of the United States' position in supporting a fascist dictatorship.

Can it be, Dr. David Leonard of the UMass History Department asked, that the forces of the Western ideologies are dying?

Dr. Leonard gave as an example the picture of dying intellectualism in America today. Even on our campus, he said, the faculty, caught in the vortex of this "transitional stage" towards mechanization, is losing its ability for original and daring thought.

Perhaps Franco was right all the time, Dr. Leonard added. Perhaps syndicalism and the "organic" state are, he said, the forces of the future. In America even now, we can see the forces of labor strikes dying, he said.

The public response to the newspaper strike shows, he said, that the limit of strike power has been reached and that eventually both labor and management will be forced to cooperate with the government's demands.

This Wednesday, Great Decisions will discuss the question—Can Democracy survive in India? Students and faculty ahe invited to attend the discussion at 7:30 p.m. in the Bartlett Faculty Lounge.

Varsity, Frosh Trackmen Overpower UNH Wildcats

O'Brien And Brouillet Shatter Old Records

by GENE COLBURN '64

The Redmen indoor track teams closed out their dual meet competition for the year on a happy note Saturday afternoon at Curry Hicks Cage. Both the varsity and the frosh defeated New Hampshire easily. The varsity prevailed over the Wildcats by a score of 74-39, while the frosh smothered the Kittens 83-30.

As in every other meet this year, several records went by the boards as the varsity set two and the frosh established one new standard. Co-captain Ken O'Brien returned to his winning ways as he won the 1000 in a record time of 2:15.5 "O'Bie" led all the way, and was never seriously pushed.

Both the freshman and the varsity two-mile records were shattered. In the frosh contest, Clayton Berry took the lead after the second lap and was never threatened afterwards. Clay broke the 10-minute barrier (old record 10:02), with a sizzling 9:55.8, the old record held by Tom Panke.

The varsity two-mile race was by far the best race of the day, in terms of time. Bob Brouillet has been tagged for greatness ever since he arrived on campus as a freshman. For the past two years, "Digger" has won the Yankee Conference Cross Country Championship. Last year, Bob won the YanCon two mile and finished third in the mile distance.

All this year, Digger has been aiming for the I.C.4A.'s indoor track championship. He was sixth last year, and only missed fifth by a matter of seconds. Prior to Saturday, though, Brouillet had been hampered by a cold. Realing the UNH meet would be his last chance to run the two miles before the I.C.4A.'s, Bob rested during the week, and his strategy payed off. The race was all Bob's. When he passed the mile marker with a blistering 4:30, it became clear that Digger was going all out. With nothing to run against but the clock, Bob kept pushing himself and crossed the finish line in the great time of 9:14.1. This easily eclipsed the Cage record of 9:28 and Bob's own individual record of 9:15, which he set in the I.C.4A.'s last year.

Although no other records were broken, several outstanding performances were turned in. Behind Brouillet, Dick Blomstrom and Jim Wrynn turned in their best races of the year. Dave Balch won the mile with a 4:24, his best time for the search. The mile relay team continued to show great improvement as Craig Erikson, Bill Forand, Paul Caisse, and Bruce Thompson ran 3:34.6. This time was only two seconds off the varsity record, and was an improvement of five seconds over the time they ran against Holy Cross.

Co-captain Dick Ward closed out his last indoor season by winning the 35 pound weight throw and the shot put. He was undefeated in the weight throw and lost only once this season in the shot put.

John Medeiros and Bob Molvar again paced the frosh to victory. Medeiros scored 16 points as he won both the broad jump and the dash, and took second in the low hurdles and the high jump. Molvar won the mile and tied in the 1000 yard run which was the most thrilling race of the meet. Molvar's teammate Bob Larson took the lead at the start and led all the way to the last corner. Here Molvar who had been right behind Larson made his move. Both boys came down to the tape in a dead heat and finished with a time of 2:21.4.

Yates, McCracken, Brallier Represent UM At Syracuse

The University of Massachusetts was represented by three members of the varsity gymnastic team at the individual championships of the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastic League this past weekend in Syracuse. Co-captains David Yates and Bruce McCracken along with sophomore Stanley Brallier made the trip to the beautiful home cage of the Orangemen. David Williams was selected to go, but was unable to make the trip because of scholastic obligations.

McCracken competed in the side horse, parallel bars and high bar events; while Brallier took part in the still rings. Both performed well but placed well down the list of outstanding competitors from the league champion, Syracuse, as well as from other strong teams Penn State, Army, Navy, Temple and Pittsburgh.

Yates competed in the floor exercise, high bar, long horse and tumbling events. Good scores of 80.5 and 86 in floor exercise and long horse respectively left Yates way down the list of competitors, but comparable scores of 81.5 and 80.5 in high bar and tumbling placed Dave relatively higher in these events. Dave finished with an eleventh place berth in the high bar and qualified for the finals in tumbling with a third in the preliminaries. In the finals Dave scored a respectable 70 to finish with a total of 154.5. Final placings for the Redman tumbler in fifth place, missing a medal by only one place.

This terminates the collegiate season for the 1963 UMass gymnasts. Selected members of the team are now training for competition in the New England open championships on April 7th.

Church-State Dispute Hurts Chances Of Kennedy's Aid To Education Bill

Washington (CPS)—The friends of President Kennedy's new aid-to-education program are once again killing its chances of becoming law.

It may seem ironical—but it's nothing new. Internecine strife between groups backing increased federal aid to education have killed similar programs before.

Kennedy's sweeping new omnibus education proposal would assist American education from the first grade to the post-graduate level, through construction loans, matching funds and student loan plans.

Church-State Dispute Cause Of Trouble

Opponents of federal aid to education are this year relaxing while the measure's proponents kill its chances. Once again, the apparent cause of death will be the church-state dispute: the administration program would give $1.5 billion to assist public elementary and secondary schools, with no aid to go to private schools at the same level.

The main antagonists in the dispute are the National Education Association (NEA), which considers the administration plan near-perfect, and the National Catholic Welfare Conference, which asserts the program is unfair to parents who pay public school taxes as well as extra tuition to send their children to parochial and private schools.

Backers of the administration plan assert that federal aid to private and church-supported schools violates the Constitution and the traditional doctrine of separation of church and state—while the opponents hold that the administration's way of doing things would discriminate against Catholic and other taxpayers who also pay to support private schools. Those opposing views are held by a sufficient number of Congressmen to block passage of the legislation entirely, as indeed happened in the last Congress.

There are some indications that the two factions may compromise to get some of the legislation through Congress, but the groups have yet to settle on a suitable agreement. Kennedy's program would give indirect benefits to private schools—but these are called inadequate by Catholic spokesmen. One feature of the plan would make construction loans for specialized classrooms and laboratories available to private schools, and another portion of the program would extend the "forgiveness" of National Defense Education Act loans to teachers in private schools.

Since the two opposing factions have yet to settle on a compromise, Washington educational circles and lobbyists are giving increasing support to a "salvage job" on the program, to get through what can be gotten through this session. In other words, colleges and universities are hopeful that legislation benefitting both sides will be divorced from the omnibus bills and passed.

Bill Concentrates On Higher Education

Political observers concluded that this year's education proposal from the White House is an attempt to practice the "art of the possible" in light of the spectacular demise of the President's education proposals in the last Congress.

This year's proposal concentrates on higher education. If the President's new education bill becomes law, three important things would immediately result:

—More students would be able to attend college, and more would be able to take graduate work, as the government would partially finance their educations.

—More college classrooms would be available. Both public and private universities and colleges would be able to apply for federal loans covering up to 75 per cent of the cost of construction of classrooms. Kennedy proposes that a billion dollars in federal funds be loaned for this purpose during the next three years.

—The federal government would give the states $1.5 billion during the next four years to raise the salaries of teachers in public schools.

Administration spokesmen described this as the "most comprehensive aid to education program any president has ever submitted to Congress."

The program would require about $1.2 billion in new financial obligation in the coming fiscal year, with about $143,600,000 in actual expenditure.

Student Loans, Part-Time Jobs

Under the proposed program, undergraduates would benefit from two types of student loan programs, and from a federal subsidy program to provide additional part-time jobs for students. Graduate students would benefit from the expansion of the current National Defense Education Act program from 1500 fellowships annually to 10,000. The two student loan programs would operate in this fashion:

1. A new loan-insurance program would meet the problems of students not quite in sufficient need to qualify for the old NDEA program. Many students with parents in the $10,000-$15,000 income bracket find it difficult to finance their schooling, especially when the family must put two or three children through college at the same time. In such situations the new program would make it simple for the student to get a long-term commercial loan from a bank, insured by the federal government.

A father, or the father and the student together, could borrow up to $10,000 for an education, at either public or private colleges, and take 10 years to repay the loan. The government would insure $150 million of these loans during the next three years. An extra one-fourth of one per cent interest would be charged to make the insurance program self-sustaining.

2. The old student loan program, in effect since 1958, would be expanded and extended for two more years, and the amount available for loans would be increased to $135 million from the present $90 million. Undergrads would be able to borrow up to $5000 under the program, and graduates up to $10,000, according to the judgment of the institution they attend. They would pay only three per cent interest, with 10 years to repay. Up to half of the figure borrowed would be written off the debt if the student goes into teaching.

Also proposed is a federal subsidy to schools to provide more part-time jobs for college students. The government would pay half the wages for the job, the college the other half. The job would have to be directly connected with education, such as work as a grader, or in the school library, and no student would be permitted to work more than 15 hours per week under the program. Total earnings for the college year for undergraduates would be $500 and for graduates $1000.

plained. It is for two years but includes a transfer program. It has a program for adults already employed who want to further their education. Most students commute so there is no need for dorms and the equipment is much less.

As a supporter of the bill for Federal aid to education in Congress, Case regretted its defeat. He declared that he will press for passage of the bill in this session of Congress.

Federal Aid to Higher Education was the topic President Horn chose. He pointed out that the Federal government has been in Federal aid since the Northwest Ordinance Act.

He gave two reasons for the necessity of federal aid: higher education is essential to the national interest and colleges can't subsist on their present resources.

He raised the query, should the Federal government grant scholarships? He replied no, that there are too many greater needs in other areas of education such as equipment and construction which only the Federal government can support. He is opposed to federal aid to faculty salaries for the same reason.

Also, he said, it is time we recognize that the humanities and fine arts are a necessary part of an education and all appropriations shouldn't go to the sciences and math.

Semester Enrollment Announced

University officials have announced an undergraduate enrollment of 6084 for the spring semester. The figures show that the College of Arts and Sciences has 3303, or 54% of the total. The School of Engineering is next with 760, 13%. The remainder are distributed among the six other schools.

The 6084 sum is broken down into 3683 men and 2401 women. Special students comprise 129. Class of '66 has 1933; '65, 1585; '64, 1285; and '63, 1111. The class of '67 already has 41 members. Discounting 129 special students, the regular enrollment, including the School of Agriculture, is 5955 students. This compares with 6075 this past fall.

The class of 1963 has no male nurses or female engineering majors.

These figures also show that enrollment has increased by nine students this semester. No wonder the University needs five new dormitories.

Curriculum Committee Conducts Poll

The Senate Curriculum Committee is conducting a poll for UMass students today through Friday in the S.U. lobby. The following questions are included.

1. Do you feel that a student with an "A" average in a course should be exempted from a final exam in said course? Why?

2. Do you feel that students should be allowed a reading period after classes have ended for the purpose of studying for final exams? If so, how many days should this period last?

3. The curriculum of the School of Liberal Arts at the University contains required semester courses including: 4 semesters of science, 2 semesters of math or science, and 4 semesters of English. Do you feel that the required courses listed above are necessary? Do you have any suggestions for change? Please specify.

Students Urged To Apply For Aid

by OLEH PAWLUK '65

David P. Lawrence, Assistant Director of Placement and Financial Aid at UMass, urges qualified students to apply for scholarship aid before the March 15 deadline.

"The only way the financial needs of the student body can be adequately assessed," Mr. Lawrence points out, "is to have needy students register for scholarships and loans. A greater demand for financial aid will help to justify and increase the appropriations granted to the scholarship program by the University and the Commonwealth."

Currently, over 450 scholarships or grants-in-aid valued at an estimated $137,000 are available to undergraduate students.

A limited number of scholarships are allotted through outstanding academic work in high school.

Entering students may apply for scholarships at the same time they seek admission to the University. Such applications must have been filed with the Placement and Financial Aid Services by March 1. Upperclass scholarship applications became available after January 1, and must be submitted by March 15. Undergraduates who file scholarship applications will be given equal consideration for loans if they so apply.

This year a 2.5 cumulative quality point average is a requirement for scholarship application. In addition, applicants must present written proof of financial need.

The University Committee on Financial Aid and Scholarships meets late in March to review all applications. Amount of scholarship aid granted to a particular individual is determined by comparing the educational costs with what the student and his family are able to pay. Successful candidates can expect to be notified some time after April 15. It is necessary for most award winners to apply annually for renewal of scholarship aid.

In filing an application form with the Placement and Financial Aid Service, the student is

UMass Business Grad School One Of 53 To Be Accredited

UMass has been named one of 53 educational institutions in the United States to offer accredited master's degree programs in the field of business administration, Dean Edward C. Moore of the University's graduate school announced today.

The University's School of Business Administration, under Dean H. B. Kirshen, was one of four in the New England area—and the only public institution—to receive accreditation by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business.

The other New England institutions on the association's latest listing are Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dartmouth College.

Criteria for accreditation by the A.A.C.S.B. include admissions standards, faculty competence and level of instruction, length of time the school has been in operation, level of undergraduate instruction, breadth of curriculum, and number of graduate courses offered.

Recognition of the graduate school is the latest in a list of successes for the business school since its inception in 1948.

The undergraduate school became fully accredited in 1958, and was also accepted for membership in Beta Gamma Sigma, national scholastic honor society for schools and colleges of business administration.

The first master's degrees in business administration — three of them—were awarded in 1954.

Massachusetts business organizations have taken note of the expanding business program at the University. The National Food Brokers Association supplies an undergraduate scholarship for a student interested in the food industry who is majoring in marketing. The student doing the best work in the real estate course receives a grant from the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Administration.

The real estate association has also provided funds for the purchase of books and periodicals.

Each year the School of Business Administration acts as host to young European executives from Switzerland, West Germany, Italy and Sweden in a six-week program on American business practices and operations. The program is sponsored by the Experiment in International Living.

The School's graduate program extends off campus to the Pittsfield and North Adams area, where University professors offer full-credit courses toward the M.B.A. degree.

Matt Zunic Removed As Basketball Coach

Warren P. McGuirk, Dean of Physical Education and Director of Athletics at UMass, announced this morning that effective immediately, Matt Zunic has been relieved of his assignment as head basketball coach of the university.

McGuirk indicated that Zunic, who has tenure at UMass, will remain in a teaching capacity in the School of Physical Education.

In commenting on the surprising move, McGuirk said that "Matt Zunic has contributed a lot of effort to improving the basketball program at UMass. However, I have concluded that a change in our head coaching position is in the best interests of the University at this time."

Zunic, a graduate of George Washington University, was head basketball coach for seven years at Boston University before moving to UMass in 1959, following the resignation of Robert Curran. His Redmen teams have compiled a record of 57 wins, 41 losses, during his four years as head coach. Last year his team won the Yankee Conference championship and competed in the NCAA regional playoffs in Philadelphia.

R-D's Host Bay AtCoffeeHour Sunday P.M.

The Roister Doisters will sponsor a coffee hour for Howard Bay Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in the faculty lounge in Bartlett Hall.

Mr. Bay, one of Broadway's busiest designers, will be on campus to discuss the various shows he has designed—two of the most recent being "The Music Man" and 'Milk and Honey"—as well as the principles of stage designing.

"The Theatrical Art of Howard Bay", an exhibition of his designs, is presently being shown in the Bartlett lobby and will be on display until March 17.

Professor Rudin To Speak Tomorrow On Theatre Character Of Androcles

In connection with the coming performance of Androcles and the Lion, Dr. Seymour Rudin of the University's English department will lecture on "Androcles: Saint or Simpleton?" at 4 p.m. tomorrow in Bartlett Auditorium.

The University Theatre will present its third production of the current season, G.B. Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion," on Friday and Saturday, March 8 and 9, in Bowker Auditorium.

Tickets are on sale now at the SU box office. They will also be available at the door. The two evening performances are scheduled for 8:15 p.m. A special matinee at reduced rates for high school students will be presented at 2:15 p.m. on Saturday.

The University production of "Androcles" is under the direction of Cosmo A. Catalano of the speech department. Frank Powers, who played the lead in University Theatre presentations of "Oedipus Rex" and Moliere's "Tartuffe," has been cast as Androcles. George Bergen will play the role of the lion.

One of Shaw's most popular comedies, the play is a vehicle for Shaw's comments on martyrs, Christians, and Christianity.

Quantitative Or Qualitative

We, the students at the University of Massachusetts, are beset with a problem. We have come to school to learn, to educate ourselves. Thousands of others have come here for the same purpose. More will be coming. The question arises, "Are we being educated?" Our parents, our legislators, and most of all, we are making an investment in ourselves: an investment in becoming knowledgeable, rational human beings. And for some of us the pursuit of knowledge will become a very important and intense thing. Isn't it important for all of us to be concerned about the quality of education that we are getting? It involves all of us more drastically than we imagine. As we leave here for jobs, for medical or law school, for graduate schools, we will be judged with those from top private schools. How will we be rated? We will be partially rated on the impressions of graduates who went before us. This is ultimately one of the most important criteria for any college or university. Therefore the undergraduates are essentially one of the most potent facets of our University. We are undergraduates.

Have you ever looked behind you in Bartlett Auditorium, and wondered where you fit in? Have you ever sensed in the "Ed" auditorium whether your mind is really being activated? Are you really learning to evaluate, to criticize?

As we look around us, seeing our University grow, we can almost feel the excitement of something big and vital happening. Buildings are shooting up all around us. As we look at graduate schools, they are growing swiftly. WE are in the middle. The University has to try to accommodate as many people as it can. But certainly, if it takes in so many students, it has to accept the total responsibility for the education of these students.

To teach is to have personal contact. Aristotle learned from Plato on a one to one educational experience. As we peruse history, we ascertain that some of the greatest philosophers, scientists and innovators had personal learning experiences from other great men. Certainly we couldn't possibly think of this same setting. But we have to learn from our professors. Part of this is personal participation. Can we participate when the lecture is being addressed to 200 rather than a smaller group?

It is serious. We all are involved. We all are important. Our education is important. Our minds are important. G.M.

LITTLE FISH IN A BIG POND

Small but complicated problems are often best and most easily understood when dramatized. Without further explanation or introduction, witness the below approximate replica of an actual conversation:

"Say, I hear they cancelled course X this semester."

"Yes; we tried to fight it, but they called it off anyhow, even though the professor was willing to give it."

"I heard that there were only two of you; course Y is being given this semester, and it only has three in it."

"I know; I don't know when I'll take course X. It's required for majors, and I'm a junior this year."

"Why can't you take it next spring?"

"I'll be taking the education block."

"Well, why not take the block in the fall?"

"I can't; I have to take a seminar required of senior majors then . . . ."

(The remainder of this conversation, consisting mostly of gestures of futility and expressions of disgust, will go unrecorded here.)

What is this university's growth and automation DOING to our students?

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

MR. CRUZ-SALAZAR

Mr. Cruz-Salazar has apparently spoken to American audiences before. He knows exactly what they want to hear and uses this knowledge effectively. He knows that they will not stand for the idealistic approach:

"If we want to be friends, we must talk about realities." He is a master of the catchword and the cliché. Thus, he must say that "increased productivity" is needed. He must mention agrarian reform. He must also humor the audience: "Partnership with the United States" now "has a ring of dignity."

He must spice his presentation with "free enterprise" and "our own capitalists." He must also quote significant remarks of the President of the New York Stock Exchange (who else?):

"Government must govern."

"Justice must be done."

To play his role correctly, he knows that he must gesture violently and smile broadly. And he must remind us to ask ourselves:

"What can I do for my country?"

When he is asked a question dealing with economics or technical development, he must say that this is too complicated to discuss at the moment but:

"We have plans."

He must play down involvement of the C.I.A. in the 1954 overthrow of the Arbenz regime, then (when pressed) admit it to have been substantial, and, after grudgingly admitting that Arbenz was elected in a democratic election, assert that it was not truly democratic.

When asked if the process by which Arbenz was overthrown constitutes an unfortunate precedent in Guatemala, he must in turn ask the questioner what he would do if Kennedy began to murder and torture innocent people. When the questioner answered that he would attempt to overthrow Kennedy, Mr. Salazar beams thinking that he has affected a succesful analogy. Unfortunately the questioner does not agree with this and points out the difference between an indigenous revolt and a revolt executed in large part by a foreign power.

Confronted with this difference, Mr. Cruz-Salazar must nevertheless sustain his smile (almost as if he were amidst his constituents) and attempt to take other questions of a more nebulous nature. And for this, the students are more than ready. (Apparently the professors are not interested.) From all this, one carries home an unforgettable lesson: Allan Dulles is a most remarkable sculptor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WMUA

To the Editor:

The University is presently supporting a very large share of a so called "Four-College Radio" Station, WFCR. The correct name for this station should be Amherst Annex of WGBH of Boston. The University is getting very much short changed. WFCR consists of a transmitter only and is in fact operated remote control from WGBH (Boston); however, without difficulty WFCR can rebroadcast programs of importance from stations WAMF, Amherst College, and WMUA. The campus station has offered on many occasions to allow WFCR to rebroadcast from WMUA programs originating here on the University Campus. Why should the University pay the way for WFCR? It has given very little attention to such events as the Distinguished Visitors Program and other significant lectures. The programs heard on WFCR may also be heard anywhere in the Amherst area on two other stations serving this general area, WSCH in Hartford and WAMC in Albany. The University should either withdraw from the Four-College station or perhaps hire a full time program director for WFCR and in doing so insure that WFCR represents the University's investments.

L.K.

To the Editor:

The opening talks of the members of the panel on Federal Aid to Education were very interesting. It is a shame that those of us listening to the program over WMUA were denied the opportunity to hear the discussion which followed. The rock and roll program to which they gave priority was a blow to the image of the University.

TOO MUCH FREEDOM

To the Editor:

Re: "Too Much Freedom"

I had just happened to read Mr. Gielda's letter Wednesday, and I know nothing of the letter to which he was referring. However, his attitude shown disturbs me not a little.

To the best of my knowledge, "clever subversive propaganda" has failed to "poison the minds of those who are weak in their nationalistic convictions." Representative Walter, Robert O. Welch, and the D.A.R. dissenting, I fail to see any Red fifth column of any strength in this country. There are no riots, barricades, or attempts to overthrow the government by force. If there were, we might have reason to suppress the individuals with the "warped ideas"; now we have no excuse whatsoever. It appears to me that Mr. Gielda has entertained a nation of thought control. It is he who is determining for us what is "warped." It is he who is saying who can speak and who cannot. When Mr. Gielda, or any other self-styled censor can prove that they are capable of dictating to our consciences, then they may proceed. But, until then, they had better let us, individually, think for ourselves and make up our own minds.

The First Amendment to the Constitution must be interpreted literally, for the benefit of Mr. Gielda as well as the "controversial" figures. For, some day Mr. Gielda may well be a "controversial" figure himself. What shall he do then?

If my entreatings have failed to convince you, at least take heed of the words of a sager head than any of ours. John Stuart Mill, in his famous essay, On Liberty, had this to say about the subject: "No society in which these (thought, speech, assembly) liberties are not respected is free, whatever may be its form of government; and none is completely free in which they do not exist absolute and unqualified . . . We can never be sure that the opinion we are endeavoring to stifle is a false opinion; and if we were sure, stifling it would be an evil still."

Members Of SINA To Picket Kennedys

G. Clifford Prout, President of the Society for Indecency to Naked Animals, has announced that 250 members of SINA from the greater Baltimore area will march on Washington and picket the White House next week.

According to Mr. Prout, this demonstration will serve a two-fold purpose: adherence to the President's physical fitness program; and a protest against Mrs. Kennedy and daughter Caroline for riding nude horses.

All 50,789 members of SINA are behind this protest to end a practice which could be detrimental to general public morality.

The SINA has also announced a contest which is open to all citizens of the United States, Canada, Australia, and the United Kingdom.

To enter, one must submit an essay of not less than 100 words or more than 10,000 words on the theme: "Why I Choose To Be A Decent Person."

Prout will personally select the winning entry which will be published in a forthcoming issue of SINA's official house organ.

The winner will be invited to visit SINA National Headquarters in New York where he can observe the typewriters and telephones of SINA in action, warning the world to clothe all animals that stand higher than 4 inches or are longer than 6 inches, for the sake of decency.

Entries must be mailed in a plain envelope no later than midnight, May 15, 1963 to: SINA, 507 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, New York.

In case of ties, neatness and ingenuity will be considered.

SINA is a four-year-old organization founded by Prout's father and dedicated to the philosophy that since we as humans are biologically animals, and accept the social custom of wearing clothes, then animals too should be permitted to share our propriety.

"Individual Fulfillment" -- Basic Purpose Of Honors Colloquia

by NEAL ANDELMAN

The following article is the second in a series of articles on the University's Honors Colloquia program. This particular article deals with the Sophomore Colloquia.

"Individual fulfillment—this is, and always should be, the primary goal of any process of education. In a free society such as ours, the opportunities for achieving individual fulfillment should abound . . . I am greatly reassured, therefore, when I find that, here on our own campus, we are developing with vigor and dedication a comprehensive program by which students can work towards intellectual strength and maturity. The entire University community can indeed be proud of our Honors Colloquia . . ."

These were the words of Dr. John W. Lederle last May during the Honors Convocation week. While the scope of the program has increased, the basic purpose of the Honors Colloquia has remained the same.

The four Sophomore Colloquia deal with man in his historical perspective and his relationship to his culture and the developing forces which are working on him. These areas not only deal with man's political and economic development, but also deal with trends—both scientific, philosophical and spiritual, which have been changing man since the Historical Enlightenment.

The interplay involves various milieus stemming from social structures and the intellectual involvement of the recent past and its effect on modern man.

Thus an emphasis is placed on American society and the political and social conflicts affecting everyday life.

Man: His Individual and Collective Welfare is the title of a Sophomore Colloquium in which Mr. Reuben Miller of the Economics Department and Mr. Richard Harper, Asst. Professor of Speech, are the faculty participants. Some of the books read by members of this colloquium are: The Affluent Society, The Economic Theory of Socialism, On Liberty, and Defense in the Nuclear Age.

"We are discussing the political and economic aspects of Democracy and the ethical responsibilities of an individual in society," said Mr. Miller. "There are more mental gymnastics than in the usual class . . . You have a chance to throw things up and see where they come down."

Student participants in this Colloquium are: Elaine Aldrich, Charles Bonneau, Sandra Burlingame, Jane Dabkowski, Linda Freeman, Richard Hatfield, Robert Hillberg, Mary Kottmyer, Patricia Long, Sheila Whitemarsh, Mariano DeLeeuw, Terrance Farber and Susan Nash.

Another Sophomore Colloquium is entitled Famous Utopias. Faculty participants are Miss Leonta Horrigan, Asst. Professor of English, and Mr. Albert Anthony, Professor of Education.

Miss Horrigan explained the purpose of this particular Colloquium. "To examine what great thinkers, Plato, Campanella, Sir Thomas More, Edward Bellamy, among them—have regarded as the ideal society, and to compare their concepts with the realities of our own day (sometimes of our own campus)."

Brave New World, Walden Two, New Atlantic, and Utopia, are some of the books that this Colloquium is reading.

Student participants are: Marsha Bently, Robert Cabral, Lawrence Dowling, Carolyn Howarth, Sandra Night, Judith Oltsch, Dennis Spinner, Nancy Stack, Arva Swartz, Mary Ferreira, Joan Schoppe, Ralph Moore, Walter Wasnik and Richard Zletz.

A third Sophomore Colloquium is entitled Individuality of the International Man. This group is reading such books as: Homoloidans, New Labs for Old, The Religions of Man, Something of Value, The Balance of Power, and Travels with Charlie.

Faculty participants are Mr. Sumner Greenfield, Assoc. Professor of the Spanish Department, and Mr. Dana Harlow, Asst. Professor of Recreation.

Dr. Harlow interpreted the Colloquium from the faculty's point of view: "I find it delightful . . . this is like a ping pong game; it's give and take."

Students in this group are: Christine Camandona, Robert Hallock, Carol Hermsdorf, Charles Kellog, Walter Tordoff, Susan Tracy, Kenneth Jocobson, Virginia Myers, Carolyn Pearson, Robert Wade, Joanna Basilea, Jonathan Kuniholm, and Thomas Shea.

The fourth Colloquium is en-

Icemen End Year With Bang; Look Forward To Next Year

by AL RICE '66

The hockey season has been over for a week now and already the talk is about what the Redmen are going to do to their opposition next year. A quick look at their 7-9 mark will set a few minds to wondering what will make next season so great, but with a good strong stare at the overall picture of the past year the image comes into view.

For Coach Steve Kosakowski and his pucksters it was a very uneven year that started off well, hit a slump where the bottom dropped out, and then rebounded with five wins at the end. The big story is the conditions which caused the slump and also the conditions that caused the big jump back for they will tell the story of the Redmen's fortunes in the 1963-64 season. Mass dumped MIT 6-3 in the lidlifter and then lost a 2-1 decision to Pennsylvania in a tight battle that went down to the wire. After the second game there was a decline, and then everything went black. Injuries and laziness set in toward the end of last semester and the results were losses 9-0 to Brown, 9-2 to Bowdoin, 8-2 to Norwich, 7-1 to AIC, and 11-0 to Colgate.

After the Colgate debacle the new era set in. The next game was a 9-0 loss at West Point, but that game was a far cry from most of the previous performances. Resulting from the finals, the vacation, and then poor weather, the Redmen had a 26 day layoff in which they had only four practices. The nine goal whitewashing did not seem to usher in a change in the team, but three new men joined the squad at that point which both directly and indirectly made a big difference in the play of the Redmen.

Senior Frank Gilliatt and sophomores Ed Quimby and Ken Palm were added to the roster at the beginning of the semester to cause the change. The three new men didn't go out and score hat tricks in every game, but they provided Kosakowski with the manpower he needed to make shifts in his personnel. The first half of the year was not very satisfying but there were no other alternatives but to go with the men on hand. With competition for jobs by the new men, play by the rest of the team improved, and it was possible to make shifts in the line assignments.

Two of the newcomers, Gilliatt and Quimby, were put on a line with Charlie Glew, (next year's captain-elect) who was hurt for three games during the worst of the losing streak. Glew's former linemates, John Lasher and Gerry Wolfe, both sophomores, made up the second unit along with junior Bob Lee who earned the promotion for his hustling play during the first part of the season. Palm, Dave Higgins, and Jim Mahoney made up the third line, a luxury the Redmen could not afford earlier, along with Allan Johnson and Charlie Ruma.

The goaltending and defense in general perked up, and from then on it was off to the races. UConn and MIT bit the dust first by a combined score of 20-3. Two hard fought wins over New Hampshire preceded the 3-0 wrapup victory from Amherst.

Next season nine of the top 11 point producers will be back, of which seven will be only juniors. Both goalies, Archer "Skip" Bowen and Eric Swenson, also can be counted on so the outlook is bright. Just what the record will be is hard to determine because there is a conflict in the midwinter tournament.

The season's scoring rundown went like this:

	G	A	TP
John Lasher	10	9	19
Gerry Wolfe	8	10	18
Charlie Glew	8	5	13
Jim Mahoney	6	4	10
Gerry Clinton	5	5	10
Dave Higgins	4	4	8
Bob Lee	1	6	7
Ken Palm	3	3	6
John Clayton	2	3	5

UMass Skiers Fifth In N.E. Conference

The University of Mass. ski team, plagued by falls and disqualifications, lost its chance to capture third place from Northeastern University in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference for the 1963 season.

New England College took top honors at Mt. Whittier in New Hampshire on Saturday, with Amherst College a close second. Boston University placed third, Northeastern fourth, UMass fifth, Tufts sixth, Brown seventh, A.I.C. eighth, and Boston College ninth.

Steve Deane of N.E.C. and Dick Davidson from Amherst College finished first and second respectively. Dick Hurlbut finished tenth, Don Burgess twentieth, Tom Clark twenty-second, and Eric Schuhle thirty-third.

Boston University sponsored a Giant Slalom at Pleasant Mt. in Bridgeton, Maine, Sunday. Amherst College, taking first place, narrowed the gap between league leading N.E.C., and has a good chance of taking first place for the season. Northeastern finished second, Boston University third, Tufts fourth, N.E.C. fifth, UMass sixth, Brown seventh, Boston College eighth, and A.I.C. ninth.

Dick Davidson from Amherst took top individual honors, with Rick Leslie from Boston University and Steve Deane from N.E.C. placing second and third respectively.

Dick Hurlbut from UMass finished fourth. Other UMass skiers placed as follows: Eric Schuhle 10, Tom Clark 27, and Norm Carpenter 37.

The last meet of the season will be held next Saturday at Ohemo in Ludlow, Vermont, followed by the annual spring banquet at Dartmouth College.

1. I'll tell you what you have to look for in a job. You have to look for fringe benefits. That's the big thing today.

Yes—the big thing.

2. You have to consider your needs. You're going to get married some day, aren't you? Then you need life and accident insurance.

Go on—go on—

3. You're going to have kids—so you'll want maternity benefits.

I'd like lots of children.

4. And what about medical bills? That's something every big family has to think about. You need a good major medical plan that covers almost everything.

You're right—you're right!

5. And you're not going to want to work all your life, are you? You're going to want to take it easy—you know, travel around, live it up. So you need a retirement plan that guarantees you plenty of dough.

I can see it now.

6. That's why I say you have to look at the fringe benefits when you look for a job.

But don't you also have to look for interesting work, good income, the chance for advancement?

7. You sure do. That's why I'm going to work for Equitable. You get all those job advantages—and all the fringe benefits, too.

I admire your thinking.

considered for restrictive as well as general scholarships. Funds for general scholarships come from Commonwealth and University grants, educational trusts' and personal endowments.

Restrictive scholarships are numerous and varied in nature. There is a $100 scholarship awarded yearly by the I.F.C. to a member of one of the social fraternities. Scholarships are offered by the different colleges and schools at UMass, with the College of Agriculture offering the greatest number. Similarly, there exist departmental scholarships for students majoring in specific fields, and military scholarships for cadets enrolled in the Advanced R.O.T.C. Program.

Students not possessing a high cumulative average need not be discouraged in their search for financial aid. Numerous outside scholarships, independent of the University, do not require a 2.5 cumulative quality point average. Within this category falls the Wilbur H. H. Ward Trust which awards scholarships of approximately $60 each semester to Hampshire County men of sound character who have attained a 2.0 semester average.

Further information on scholarships, loans, and part-time employment is available in the form of a brochure issued by the Placement and Financial Aid Office at Machmer Hall. Moreover, Mr. Lawrence is always willing to discuss financial problems with the students.

Swimmers Beat R.P.I.; Rothschild Sets Record

by BUD PRATT '65

Limbering up for Saturday's New England Competition, Joe Rogers' Mermen closed out a winning season in top form with a 55-40 victory over stubborn R.P.I. Mike Bjornholm, Mike Rothschild and Co-Capt. Bruce Norton led a UMass effort that took all but two first places, in spite of Rensselaer's depth.

Morton, finishing a fine college swimming career, won first places in the 700-yd. individual medley and 200-yd. backstroke. Co-Capt. Jim Coffey, also swimming his last meet for UMass, scored points in both the 200 freestyle and 500 freestyle, but he could not beat Mike Rothschild, Springfield's "boy wonder," who set UMass and pool records in both these events, 2:00.5 records and 5:27.3 seconds respectively. Mike's time in the 500 was the second best done in New England this season.

Bjornholm's 23.1 in the 50-yd. freestyle set a pool record and matched the UM record he set at Tufts last week. Aftr taking a rapid first in the 100-yd. freestyle Mike set a pool record when he covered the first 100 yards of the 400 yard freestyle relay in 51.2 seconds. This time is only two-tenths of a second off Hall's UMass and (at the time) national record, set in 1943.

Breaststrokers Charlie Monnier and John Brykob placed first and third in the close 200-yd. breaststroke. Sprinter Ron Cheras set a record in the 100-yd. freestyle along with Bjornhalm, Cowern, and Rothschild.

John Francisca closed out the season with a strong victory in the diving competition. A sophomore now, John has been working all season without a diving coach but has dived consistently well, winning roughly half of his meets. He should be a strong point-setter in Redmen meets for several years.

The season's final record was 5-4, and Coach Joe Rogers was well pleased with the best team performance in a number of years.

BEFORE . . .

. . . DURING . . .

Mike Rothschild sports a broad smile after breaking the UMass Record in the 500 yd. swim. His time was the second best recorded in New England this season.

County Circle Students Protest Living Conditions

by ANN MILLER '64

Complaints of outrageous liv ing conditions in the four County Circle (Married and Stockbridge housing Dorms) were aired Wednesday night by dorm represtatives meeting in the basemen of Middlesex Dormitory.

Present at the meeting was Dean of Students William Field.

Students and student-wives living in Hampshire and Suffolk Dorms, the married student housing, have compiled a "Petition of Grievances" to be presented to administration officials for consideration.

Approximately 280 men students of Middlesex and Berkshire dorms are also planning to give University administration and maintenance officials requisitions for what they termed "basic improvements".

There are 118 and 62 children living in six three-room and 24 two-room apartments in the two married students' dorms. Rooms in the small apartments, rented at $45 per month, measure about 11' by 11'. The larger

Complaints concerning living conditions in the married students' dorms largely centered around concern for the welfare of the young children in the dorm. Colds are common, there is no adequate play area for the youngsters and many parents are worried about their children's health.

Results For Counselor Evaluation Analyzed

by DON TRACY '64

This is the second in a series of articles on the University student counseling program survey conducted by the Men's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate. This article, written by a competent member of Men's Affairs, is concerned with the student reaction to the manner in which the counselor performs his duties.

Surprisingly enough, the student response was overwhelmingly in favor of the performance of the present counselors. The results, however, should be examined closely.

In tabular form the answers to questions 2 and 3 were:

		YES	NO
(2)	Is your counselor efficient?
	A. Is he easily accessible?	61%	39%
	B. Does he enforce quiet hours?	57%	43%
	C. Is he impartial?	80%	20%
	D. Does he command respect?	66%	34%
	E. Is he too lenient?	31%	69%
	F. Is he too strict?	20%	80%
	G. Is he well-liked?	86%	14%
	H. Does he enforce dorm regulations?	80%	20%

(3) In view of question 2, is your counselor doing a good job? Yes—77% No—23%

Question 2A should be reviewed in this respect—how accessible is easily accessible? A counselor should be a student first, last and foremost, and with that in mind he should take part in a varied program. Counselors can be found taking part in the social, academic, and athletic programs throughout the University. A diversification of interests can aid him in his job.

The enforcing of quiet hours is a touchy subject. Men living in residence halls have a shared responsibility in keeping a section quiet. However, it is evident that the counselors need to tighten up on quiet hours.

Impartiality is important in congratulate the counselors for what appears to be a good job with respect to question 2C.

The results to question 2D were slightly disappointing as respect is essential in the role played by a counselor. Though approximately two-thirds of the men felt that the counselor commanded respect, we hope the new procedure for selecting counselors will raise the percentage to a more respectable figure.

Again in questions 2E and 2F the responses seem to indicate that the counselors are performing their responsiblilities well. To walk the line between being too strict and too lenient requires a great deal of skill and self-con- any human situation and we

Annual Campus Chest Drive Sets Goal Of $1 Per Student

The annual Campus Chest Drive begins Monday and will continue through March 18. This year's theme will be "Tomorrow's leaders need help help today," and emphasizes the idea that students throughout the world will benefit by our efforts, both now and in the future.

As in the past, proceeds this year will go to the World University Service and to the UMass Scholarship Fund. The World University Service aids students all over the world in seeking educational opportunities, and also works to improve University standards and social conditions in underdeveloped areas.

Manny Smith and Lee Wilcox, co-chairmen for this year's drive, have set the goal of $1.00 from each student. 100% co-operation is urgently needed for the success of this worthy drive they said. Many faculty donations have already been received, and it is hoped that the students will follow suit and also support the drive.

The Ugly Man On Campus contest, UMOC, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega for the benefit of Campus Chest, will be held throughout the week. Pictures of the "ugly men" will be posted in the Union lobby and all are urged to vote for the candidate of their choice.

Each fraternity and sorority is expected to enter a contestant, and each cent contributed will count as one vote. Trophies will be awarded to the winners.

On Student Leader's Night in April, a special pamphlet will be distributed listing all donations of $5.00 or more. This will include faculty, Greek societies, such contributions have already and all RSO groups on campus. To date more than a dozen been reecived.

Also, as a special event, rare on this campus, Friday March 15, Women's dorm closing hours will be extended till 12:30. Any

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

The Collegian budget and a "Centennial Concert" were top items on the agenda at Wednesday's Student Senate meeting.

The Collegian's budget, totaling some $38,000 saw little debate except over a Budgets Committee cut of $64 in magazine subscriptions. Senator Jon Fife (64 Van Meter) moved to replace the money, stating that "the Collegian serves two functions—printing a student newspaper and learning the fundamentals of journalism. They need guides—other newspapers whose style has been proven by time." After a motion to call the question, the motion to add the $64 was defeated. Then the entire budget passed on a voice vote.

A motion to "allocate $2000 . . . for the purpose of backing a Centennial Concert" was then brought to the floor. Senate Treasurer Fife opposed the motion on the grounds that since it was supported by student money, then no admission could be charged to UMass students. Fife was supported in his argument by Senator Paul Donahue ('65 At-Large) who stated that the Centennial name was being used as an excuse for a "big blast". Senator Sue Hajjar summed up the proponents' arguments by stating that "We are representing the students. The profits will be returned to the Senate."

The bill was passed.

Also, the Activities Committee revealed that the controversial Men's Interdormitory Council constitution will go to referendum. The council has come recently under fire after it was revealed that the organization had the power to tax all students living in dormitories.

Leadership Program Begins Sat.

The first Saturday session of the Student Leadership Program will be held tomorrow Saturday, March 9, and discussion will center around two principle topics: "The Value of Extra Curricular Activities", and "The Development of the Individual In Relation To Himself".

All applicants who have quallfied for the program should be in the Council Chambers no later

Headlines In The News

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A top Defense expert in the House said today that loose talk both in Congress and the administration is wrecking U.S. intelligence efforts. He called on all concerned to shut up.

"There has been talk of an intelligence gap," Rep. Goerge H. Mahon, (D-Tex.), told his House colleagues. "There is an intelligence gap. The gap is in the intelligence of those who are daily revealing the secrets of the intelligence operations of the United States government . . .

"Our immaturity and indiscretion in these constant disclosures is making us the laughing stock of the world."

BOSTON (UPI)—The Massachusetts Taxpayers Federation said today a limited sales tax would be preferable to Gov. Peabody's proposed boost in the state income tax as a means of creating new revenue.

Fran J. Zeo, executive director of the federation, said the governor deserves credit for facing the problem of increasing pressures "on the already overburdened local property and motor vehicle excise taxes."

"It is now squarely up to the legislature to choose between three alternatives: income tax increases, limited sales tax or no action at all."

BOSTON (UPI)—With atmospheric tests of nuclear weapons suspended, there should be no problems in the months ahead regarding iodine or strontium in milk supplies, a scientist said Wednesday.

Dr. Dade W. Maeller, director of the Northeastern Radiological Health Laboratory in Winchester, told the annual meeting of the New England Dairy and Food Council that iodine levels in milk are now below detectable limits.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy said today the four American fliers killed in the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion were "serving their country" on a completely voluntary basis.

Friday Curfew Extended

Curfew for University women will be extended one half hour on Friday, March 15, to aid the Campus Chest in its drive to raise funds.

The move, sanctioned by the Women's Affairs Council, will allow girls to stay out until 12:30 if they pay one penny for each minute they remain out after 12, the money so raised to go to the Campus Chest, Sue Davis of Women's Affairs Committee has announced.

Quantitative vs. Qualitative

"The individual student has no opportunity to try out his ideas subject to challenge by the instructor and fellow students. Nor does the instructor have an opportunity to probe the student's mind by a series of questions in order to force him to think more deeply than is his custom. The student loses his right to dissent or express disapproval of the teacher's statements; and teachers may not always be right or may have social objectives with which the student disagrees! The right of self-expression is the most vital part of a sound education and is lost in a large class."

This quote, taken from an article by Bruce Morris in the June, 1959 issue of the Bulletin of the AAUP deals with an educational process, a process that will confront human beings who are trying to enhance communication and the thought processes during their lives. Before discussing the aspects of "quantity vs. quality" in education as expressed in this quote, we have to consider the basic question: "What is education?" It could be generally defined as a confrontation, and then an inspiration, and lastly a transfiguration. This is a huge task, but it demands the energy of interested people and a situation of human dynamics, on the part of the teacher, on the part of the student. What is the issue?

As in any major issue at a large institution there are involved certain tangents which detract from the central potency of the issue. At the University of Massachusetts the issue is "quantity vs. quality' in education, but more centrally is it the leaving of Dr. Tinder and other professors? Dr. Tinder's leaving was directly involved in this question, but his leaving itself does not form the entire issue. Is the issue our Honors Program at the University? Again, the Honors Program is a part of the issue, and not the issue. Is the issue "publish or perish"? Likewise, only indirectly. Simply, the issue is the quality of education you are getting; that is with the march of students to State Universities, is the quality of education being dampened by the quantity of students being educated?

This is not to say that the quality can not be maintained in quantity, but our question rests: is it being maintained? One overt piece of evidence would be in discussion and evaluation of the issue at the University, but have you sensed any activity and discussion at UMass?

Our Honors Program is trying to alleviate this problem, but it involves a select number of students. However, the program is good, and is very sure to improve. Like our Honors Program, our undergraduate education is good, but it is not the best. It could be the best. We aren't becoming involved in it; we aren't confronting ourselves with it, and we are not causing a transfiguration in ourselves. Are our professors hampered in helping us?

One of the serious aspects of advanced societies today is that the scientific and technological influence is far out-weighing the area of values, of morals, and of the wisdoms of men. Education is one of the building blocks of values in our society. Also is it not the transmission of the feelings and ideas of our culture? With machines, gadgets and now people becoming mechanised in mass beaurocracies, it is at this point that we need diversity, judgment, and wisdom.

As our school becomes more and more mechanized, the ability to learn wisdom, diversity, and a sensitive feeling of judgment will become less and less.

This is the business of the students, for it is we, students, with the future of life before us. It is we who have come to put our trust in those who are educating us. Are they disillusioning us? This question involves all facets of the University. First, it involves the administration, for surely they wish to see our institution elevated and to watch the University grow to a higher level. Second, it involves the students. Third, the faculty. One merely has to note a quote by Dr. Paul Gagnon of the History Department taken from a paper concerning the quality of education at the University. "Our complaint is not that we are overloaded, some of us are, and some of us are not, but that where overloading occurs it means that we are no longer allowed to be teachers: that we are pressed into becoming instead the impersonal, remote administrators of remote operations without the time for the essence of teaching, the constant personal attention to what is happening in the minds of our students." Teaching is the life of a professor. Should anything else be said?

Mortar Board Comments

Editor's note: The opinions expressed in this column are those of the Mortar Board, and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Collegian.

Once again it is that time of year when students entering the Student Union are greeted by a large sign bearing a thermometer. Most members of the University community are aware that this poster heralds the annual Campus Chest drive, but then again many students and faculty members are unaware of who or what benefits from this drive.

In main, the proceeds of this drive are divided between two projects: 1) financial aid in the form of scholarships to World University Service, and 2) financial aid in the form of scholarships to University undergraduates. The former is a voluntary association of students and professors in some 50 countries on all continents, working for the material and intellectual advancement of the world university community. International WUS and the WUS National Committees administer a global program worth over $2,300,000 consisting of mutual assistance projects in the fields of student health, student lodgings and living, educational activities and facilities, and individual and emergency aid. The remainder of the proceeds go to individual scholarships on this campus and are administered through the Financial Aid Office in Machmer. Due to this drive last year, nine students were awarded scholarships.

The goal of Campus Chest is 100% participation in the form of some donation from every student and every unit (undergraduate dorms, married dorms, fraternities and sororities). The drive presents a challenge to everyone to be aware of Campus Chest and to back it. If the challenge is met, each and all should gain great satisfaction in that he or she has helped his fellow students at the University and throughout the world undertake and complete his education. It is perhaps through the education of man to reach his full potential that the world may come to know a lasting peace.

Thus the issue is brought forth for dicsussion, for critically sensitive evaluation. It should be in the minds of everyone, for it involves everyone. We the students can not let ourselves down. Our responsibility is as great, if not greater, than that of the faculty or the administration.

Thus education is a personal dynamic situation. In the words of Dr. Paul Gagnon, "more than ever we all, teachers and students, need to come together and talk, slowly and quietly in the privacy and freedom of the small group and the individual conference.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

As an alumnus of the University and a member of its faculty, I must protest several of the statements and assumptions in the editorial "Qualitative or Quantitative" in last Friday's Collegian. Although signed by a student editor, it bore unmistakable signs of having been inspired by other sources willing to use the student newspaper in order to obfuscate, and to forestall discussion of, the vital educational issues raised by the resignation of Professor Glenn Tinder from the Department of Government.

Most objectionable is the suggestion that Porfessor Tinder "questions the philosophy of public education." This is very near to calumny. His eleven-year career at the University, his devotion to its students and to the betterment of its intellectual atmosphere, expressed in a hundred ways beyond the call of duty, are proof enough of the absurdity of this charge. What he questions, and what a great many of us question, is the particular philosophy—or lack of any—that is shaping the character of a growing university at a critical moment in its history.

The attitude in question emerges in the very first paragraph, in which we are told that "public institutions do not have to match educational systems with private colleges—the public system provides a rather unique type of education which can stand on its own merits and need not be rated as being above or below that of private institutions." The implications of this statement are endless and cannot be explored thoroughly here. A familiar excuse for complacency and inaction, it combines cynicism and wishfulness. Worst and most indefensible of all, it gives our students an utterly false picture of what awaits them in the outside world. Public university graduates—regardless of their "unique" education—must compete in every sphere of life with the graduates of private institutions. In business, industry, government, graduate, medical and law schools, they are going to be rated "above or below" their competitors by one standard; they will succeed or fail according to whether our University, and especially its central College of Arts and Sciences, has prepared them to work, to think, to read and write, to know and discover, as competently as the graduates of the best private colleges in the country. To fail in this will be to perpetuate a class of higher education, profoundly undemocratic and a betrayal of the purposes for which the University was founded a century ago.

This is the central issue, which Professor Tinder and several faculty members who have left or have been forced out in recent years never lost sight of. It was to work for equality in excellence that they stayed as long as they did. And they departed because they came to believe that the balance of power was shifting to those who either ignored or misunderstood the purpose of any university, public or private, old or new. The Honors Program suggested by Professor Tinder, and seized upon by certain spokesmen as the excuse for letting him go, was a side issue brought up at the last moment to divert attention from much older, deeper questions. To focus the discussion of his resignation on the Honors Program is, paradoxically, at once to do injustice to the selfless work of Professor Greenbaum, the Director of Honors, and his many colleagues, and to claim for it a perfection they do not claim and for which the University has up to now been unwilling to pay.

To imply, with a show of assurance, that we are going to improve the quality of undergraduate education sometime in the future —after we triple in size—is to ignore the main tendencies of present University policy, one of which is the rapid expansion of graduate programs almost wholly at the expense of the undergraduates. A modern state university must, for many imperative reasons, offer advanced studies. But these must be added to, not substituted for, an excellent undergraduate program. Both will be hollow shells unless adequate staff and money are devoted to each. Our society demands both and can well afford both; a university faculty, to achieve its best potential, must work at both—and at its own research and publication as well. But up to now, graduate teaching and faculty publication have in certain fields meant the near-abandonment of efforts to preserve the quality of undergraduate education. The tendency is growing, not waning. Apart from the propriety of changing the character of a public institution without public discussion, this path of least resistance and least effort suggests a lack of direction and a failure of educational imagination.

It is these larger considerations, not details over small classes, honors programs and the like, that have induced a lack of confidence in the future of the University of Massachusetts. The costs of quality are high. No sideshows or public relations campaigns can hide the fact that a failure to pay the costs—while paying for many other things of minimal educational worth—has already driven devoted teachers away and brought us to a point at which students, their parents and the public may not be getting what they pay for. There has indeed arisen a "philosophic impasse" but it is not the one suggested on this page last week and the debate over it should not be obstructed by false optimism. We should not be concerned with the "point that Dr. Tinder has reached," but the point the University has reached. His departure is not only a great loss, but a severe warning.

trol. To deal with the assorted problems that occur in a residence hall takes patience and understanding.

According to question 2G, 86% of the responses indicate that the counselor is well-liked. This is very remarkable. Whenever a person in authority can be liked by better than eight out of ten people, he deserves recognition. Many of the men on campus, who are reluctant to apply for counselor positions because they fear they will lose their friends, should take a good look at the results of this question.

On question 3, 77% of the students surveyed felt that their counselors were doing a good job. It is apparent from these results, regardless of the faults of the system by which they were chosen, that at least the counselors as a whole are trying to do a good job.

With student cooperation these results could be even more promising. Also, if more men would apply for these positions, the results of any future survey might be even more gratifying.

SENATE FILE:

Senate Forms Student Affairs Policies; Holds Fiscal Control Of RSO Groups

What happens when a new campus organization wishes ratification of its constitution? What action is taken when an already-existing group needs additional funds for the proper continuance of its activities? What occurs when an emergency involving student welfare requires a well-coordinated response by the student body?

Ultimately questions such as these are resolved in some manner or form by the Student Senate, the legislative arm and final arbiter of the Student Government Association. Composed of students from each dormitory, the fraternities and sororities, the commuters, and married students, the Senate is an autonomous body, setting its own policy, with broad financial responsibility for the use of the Student Activities Tax, which it sets.

Areas of Policy Making

The Senate's functions may essentially be divided into the two areas of policy formation pertaining to the effective functioning of student government and student affairs, and fiscal control over all R.S.O. organizations and campus activities.

An example of the former would be the defeat several months ago of the 2.0 bill. Another would be seen in the Board of Trustees' recent decision to place the once-required R.O.T.C. program on a voluntary basis. The effort to reach this decision received its initial impetus from a resolution passed by the Student Senate.

However, this touches upon only a small area of the Senate's responsibility. Over $139,000 has been made available to the Senate during the 1962-1963 academic year, through the Student Activities Tax and other sources, for allocation to 17 R.S.O. organizations from Adelphia to Yahoo.

When special situations call for financial assistance, the Senate is empowered to take swift action. Not long ago, money was granted to send the Redmen Band and the Precisionettes to the Villanova football game. When a fire gutted Abigail Adams dormitory, a Campus Coordinating Committee was formed and received an appropriation from the Student Activities Stabilization Fund to aid the displaced girls. Quite recently, the Senate voted a sum of money in support of the UMass Centennial Program.

Permanent Committees

In addition there are a number of permanent committees designed to cope with virtually any problem, and to make recommendations in many diversified areas. While the Finance Committee handles immediate appropriation requests from various groups, the Budgets Committee reviews all tax matters and sets the budgets for those organizations covered by the Activities Tax.

The Curriculum Committee is a joint student-faculty body which makes recommendations concerning needs or revisions in the University's curriculum policy.

Matters involving the improvement of university food services, student aids, health conditions, and commercial operations involving students are taken up in the Student Services Committee.

Publicity for Student Government affairs and the execution of programs to further the prestige of the University falls to members of the Public Relations Committee.

The Men's Affairs Committee and the Women's Affairs Committee both review the University rules affecting men and women, and propose changes to improve the operation of the Men's and Women's Judiciary respectively. The charters of all clubs or groups on campus are reviewed by and must receive the approval of the Activities Committee in order to be valid.

The Elections Committee determines the rules for conducting all elections, and effects the necessary coordination of all Student Government elections, except those of the Judiciary.

Of course, the Senate can and often does enact a Committee's suggestions into legislation, but its functions are even more expansive. It is through the Senate that student appointments are made to ten University committees, from the Advisory Board to Foreign Students, to the Fine Arts Council, to the Student Social Activities Committee. It is also through the Senate that representatives are appointed to many other groups, including the International Weekend Committee, Campus Chest, Open House Weekend, and the Collegian Publishing Board.

Exciting ones. With plenty of room for your professional development. Western Electric's business depends on new ideas. And new engineers take responsible, immediate part in projects that implement the entire art of telephony — including electronic telephone offices, computer-controlled production techniques and microwave transmission. On many of these exciting advances in communications, Western's engineers work closely with engineers from our research team-mate, Bell Telephone Laboratories. For Western Electric to maintain the Bell System's ultra-high quality standards, extraordinary manufacturing, process and testing techniques are required. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors.

I.F.C. To Expand Athletic Program

Interfraternity Athletic competition is an integral part of campus activity, providing an athletic program for fraternity men who do not participate in varsity sports.

The system is directed by Ron Pettirossi, chairman of the I.F.C. athletic committee, and Justin Cobb, of the physical education department.

Numerous and varied activities are offered, including basketball, football, wrestling, bowling, and softball.

Fraternities are divided into two leagues. Champions are determined in conjunction with the University Intermural Program. Points are awarded to the first, second, and third place teams in each sport. These points are a part of the basis upon which the I.F.C. cup is awarded.

Perhaps the best known event of the Interfraternity Competition is the Chariot Race, held annually during Greek Week.

Greek "Olympics" planned for future years will include participants from other Yankee Conference schools. Hopefully the program will be expanded to include track and field and swimming events.

Twitchell Tops All Scorers As Redmen Finish 12-12

by STEVE HEWEY '63

For the second year in a row Redman forward Rodger Twitchell led the University of Massachusetts basketball squad in individual scoring totals. Last season as a sophomore, Twitchell scored 408 points for an average of 17 per game. At the end of the 1962-63 campaign Rodger has compiled 439 points in 24 games for an average of 18.3. He also shot better than 50 percent from the floor.

Runnerup in the race for individual scoring honors this season was sophomore guard Clarence Hill. In 23 games Hill dumped in 304 points to the tune of 13.2 a contest. Mike Johnson with 181 points in 20 games finished third in the scoring totals and compiled a 9.1 average.

For Pete Bernard, last year's number two point producer for the Redmen the season turned out to be disappointing. Plagued by a slump for half the schedule the junior guard ended the season with an 8.9 game average compared to his 12.3 of last year.

In addition to leading the Redmen scoring totals, Twitchell finished at the top of the pile in the Yankee Conference scoring race. In 10 Conference games, he netted 226. His nearest rival was New Hampshire's Jim Rich, with 197 in 10 contests.

Twitchell's two year total of 847 points is good enough to establish him as the fourth all time high scorer in Redmen court history. The all time spot belongs to Doug Grutchfield, a '61 UMass grad, who amassed 1257 points and a fistful of records while wearing a Redmen uniform.

Final statistics show that the Redmen in finishing the '62-'63 cage season with 12 wins and as many losses, averaged 70.7 points a contest, while holding their opponents to 69.4. As a team, UMass shot 42% from the floor; the opposition 40%. From the free-throw line they were 63%, while their opponents made 66%.

This season's individual game highs are as follows: total points scored: 33, Twitchell vs. Maine, March 2; field goals made: 14, Twitchell vs. Maine, March 2; free throws made: 10, Twitchell vs. UConn Dec. 12, and Hill vs. UNH Jan. 5; rebounds: 24, O'Rourke vs. Tufts, Dec. 15.

At the close of the season, the Redmen chose their all-opponent team. Steve Chubin, URI forward, and guard Vinnie Ernst of Providence College were the unanimous selections. Other first team choices were forward Pat Gallagher of Holy Cross, UConn's Toby Kimball at Center, and Don Burke of St. Johns, guard.

Named to the second all-opponent squad were forwards George Jonic of Iona, and P.C.'s John Thompson, center Randy Getchis of Rider College, John Stone of P.C., and Don Perno of Connecticut at guard.

Honorable mention selections were, St. John's Ken McIntyre, Dale Comey of Connectiut, Northeastern's John Malvey, Warren Issacs of Iona, and URI's Charlie Lee.

Zunic Wants To Tell His Side Of Story

by JEFF DAVIDOW '65

Matt Zunic's recent dismissal from his position as UMass head basketball coach has caused a storm of controversy with the most vociferous objector to the action being Mr. Zunic himself.

On Wednesday morning the University Sports Relation Department released a news article stating simply that "effective immediately Matt Zunic has been relieved of his assignment as head basketball coach at the University." Although the communique praised Zunic for his contributions to the UMass basketball scene, the fiery coach expressed indignation at his dismissal and feels that he has been unduly wronged.

MATT ZUNIC

Zunic conferred with President John Lederle on Wednesday after which he reported to newsmen that his prime concern was in clearing his name and rectifying the damages that he believes have been done to his reputation as a coach.

When pressed for further information concerning Zunic's dismissal, Director of Athletics Warren McGuirk said that Zunic's conduct with referees and representatives of other colleges was reprehensible and a prime cause for his dismissal.

Zunic termed this charge ridiculous, although admitting that he had used profane language to a referee after UMass' 54-52 loss to Canisius College, and said that his dismissal was merely a manifestation of a personality clash between himself and other members of the Athletic department.

The issue of his dismissal has received much note in the Boston and Springfield newspapers and has captured the eye of many state legislators, many of them personal friends of Zunic. Whether Zunic carries through his threat to take his case to the legislature is debatable, but whatever develops, the fact that Zunic wants to tell his side of the story is undeniable.

There are, no doubt, two sides to the story, and perhaps more complex issues are involved. However, the only question that now remains is how the varying viewpoints will be aired. It can only be hoped that a prolonged discussion of the facts will not be detrimental to the University, nor in any manner retard UMass' growing prestige in the eyes of the Massachusetts public.

COLLEGE ROUNDUP

Dons vs. Santa Clara In Crucial Contest

The University of San Francisco, which set the college basketball world on fire in the mid 1950's, is seeking to light the torch once again.

San Francisco still holds the all-time record for a college team of 60 wins in a row stretching from 1954-1956, including two straight NCAA championships. Leading the team in those banner years were Bill Russell and K. C. Jones, current stars with the professional champion Boston Celtics.

The Dons never could reach the same peak aagin, but still may cause a stir if they reach the NCAA tourney next week.

They moved into good position to do just this by turning back San Jose State, 51-46, on their home court Wednesday night. The triumph pushed the Dons back into a first place tie with Santa Clara in the West Coast Athletic Conference. The two top teams meet in a showdown game Saturday night with an NCAA berth awaiting the winner, and San Francisco will have the all-important home court advantage.

Villanova and Marquette, both of whom will play in the National Invitation Tournament, warmed up for the task with victories Wednesday night but Canisius, also headed for the New York tourney, was beaten by Dayton, 75-64.

Villanova snapped Seton Hall's 18-game home court winning streak's 71-64, as Wally Jones scored 38 points; Dick Nixon tallied 20 points to lead Marquette to a 74-68 triumph over Creighton; and Dayton coasted to victory over Canisius after opening a comfortable nine-point halftime lead.

Dave Lee scored 19 points for San Francisco and Ollie Johnson added 15 as the defense-minded Dons held San Jose to only 15 points in the first half. Dennis Bates of San Jose shared game honors with Lee by registering 19 points.

UPI ALL-EAST TEAM

Ward, Ernst, New England Picks On All-East Squad

by NORMAN MILLER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barry Kramer of New York University, Bill Bradley of Princeton and Bill O'Connor of Canisius, all among the nation's top dozen major college scorers, were chosen today on the 1962-63 United Press International All-East basketball team.

Two stars from New England—Jerry Ward of Boston College and 5-foot-8 Vinnie Ernst of Providence College—also were named to the first team. The group was chosen by writers in the Middle Atlantic and New England states, with help from leading coaches in the area.

Few sections of the country can produce as high-scoring a trio as Kramer, Bradley and O'Connor. Kramer, a 6-foot-4 backcourt man has a 29.2-point average that is second highest among major college players; Bradley ranks fifth with a 26.9 average, and O'Connor 12th with 24.4.

Werkman Heads 2nd Team

Oddly, Nick Werkman of Seton Hall, the major college scoring leader with a 30.5-point average, was beaten out for a place on the first team. The majority of coaches and writers canvassed by UPI felt that despite Werkman's remarkable scoring pace, he did not measure up in all-around forecourt ability to O'Connor, Bradley or Ward.

Kramer, a UPI second team All-America selection, is the outstanding choice on the team. With four NYU regulars scholastically ineligible during the first half of this season, the brunt of the team's scoring and rebounding fell on Kramer's shoulders. He was NYU's high scorer in 16 of 19 games and, although his 6-foot-4 height is not towering by modern college standards, he was the team's leading rebounder in 10 games. In fact, his average of 13 rebounds per game is the highest among the All-East first-team players.

Coach Lou Rossini feels that in any man-on-man situation on the court, there is not a collegian in the country who can stop Kramer from scoring.

If there is one conceivable weakness on this year's All-East team, it is the lack of a standout rebounder. Ward averaged 12 rebounds per game for Boston College, Bradley had an 11.7 average for Princeton and O'Connor grabbed only 10 per game for Canisius.

Ernst Only Repeater

But despite this shortcoming, the three forecourt men are excellent team ballplayers. Bradley, only a sophomore, has been compared favorably with three-time All-America Jerry Lucas of Ohio State at this stage of his development. Ward is an unusually good defensive forward with a 19.1-point scoring average.

Ernst, the only repeater from last year's team, has a scoring average of only 11.9, but is remarkable playmaker.

In a game against DePaul, he set a Providence record of 17 assists even though he did not score a point. He took only four shots in that game. And against Dayton, he made 13 assists as his team came from 13 points in arrears to win.

Ernst was pressed for the backcourt berth by two Philadelphia stars, Wally Jones of Villanova and little Jim Lynam of St. Joseph's. Besides these two and Werkman, the second team included Fred Crawford of St. Bonaventure and John Thompson, 6-foot-10 Providence center.

Selected to the third All-East team were: Brian Generalovich of Pitt, Frank Corace of LaSalle, Jim Barry of Georgetown, Andy O'Connell of Niagara and Rick Kaminsky of Yale.

"Twitch" Tops YC Scoring Champ'nship

Rodger Twitchell, who capped a fine season by scoring 33 points against Maine, is the 1962-63 Yankee Conference scoring champion, according to final statistics released by the Conference publicity office.

Twitchell, an all-Conference selection a year ago, posted a total of 226 points in 10 games for an average of 22.6 points per contest. In compiling his total, he shot an amazing 53 per cent from the field.

Jim Rich of the University of New Hampshire finished second in total points with 197 while Steve Chubin of the University of Rhode Island, who led the race most of the season, had the second best average of 21.5 The latter, playing the last part of the season with a badly bruised right elbow, missed one game completely because of the injury and although tremendously valuable to the Rams in keeping them in the race until the final game, had his marksmanship tail off.

Bob Logan, Rhode Island's side court bomber, took fourth place with 181 points and Ed Slomcenski of the champions from Connecticut was fifth with 171 points.

Trackmen Head For N.Y.; Footrick Has High Hopes

by GENE COLBURN '64

The Redmen varsity indoor track team will take its strongest contingent ever to the Eastern Championships, the IC4A's in New York on Saturday. UMass has never scored any points in this meet, but it looks like this is the year to end the drought.

Heading the UMass tracksters will be co-captain Dick Ward. Dick has been ranked nationally all year long for his distances in the 35 lb. weight. In New York Dick will face one of the few people who have tossed the weight a greater distance than he has. Ballard from Army has thrown 61'8½", which is 5 inches better than Ward's best toss. Touzen from Navy has reached 60'6". It looks like it will strictly be a battle between these three, as no on else has broken 60!

In the running events, co-captain Ken O'Brien, Dave Balch, and Bob Brouillet will carry the UMass hopes. "Obie" will compete in the 1,000 and will have his hands full. Last year's winning time was 2:11, and fifth place was 2:13.6. This shows how close the competition is. The big thing in Obie's favor will be his ability to run two good races in one day, as the runners first have to run a trial in the afternoon with the finals being held at night.

Dave Balch will compete in the mile. Dave's times this year have been around 4:20. This time would not earn Dave a place in the finals but he has been running very well in practice. He recently ran a 3:07 three-quarters of a mile. If Dave can have a good night he could very possibly run close to 4:15.

Bob "Digger" Brouillet will run in the 2-mile. After his 9:14.1 of last weekend Digger seems to be really ready for the I..C4A.'s. His time last weekend would have been good enough last year for fifth place. By getting in with some really good competition Digger could very well be the biggest surprise for UMass.

Regardless of how the team does, UMass will have reason to be very proud. Varsity track coach William Footrick is going to be presented with a special award during the meet. Mr. Footrick will be introduced to the crowd and a presentation will be made. It has not been revealed what the award will be for, but it will likely be for his tireless devotion and his contributions to his sport; track.

Stockbridge Ends With 6-9 Record

Coming back nicely after a slow start, the Stockbridge Basketball team finished with a five game winning streak to end the season with a 6-9 record.

The team's best effort of the season came with a 78-58 victory over Holyoke Junior College, avenging an earlier 81-63 defeat. The round-ballers also came back from a loss against Northampton Commercial College, beating them in the Cage, 74-60 and then taking the rubber game, 82-74.

Center Jerry McCarthy, after missing half the season with a back injury, came back to average nearly 20 points per game in February. Senior Captain Jim Gilligan also did an outstanding job in the backcourt. Gilligan was awarded the "Outstanding Basketball Player" trophy at the recent Stockbridge Progress Banquet. John Halunen proved to be the steadiest player on the squad as he scored 151 points over the season to lead the team in scoring. John Barrett proved a tremendous asset to the team with his scoring, rebounding and defensive play during the month of February.

Dorms Petition Maintenance For Improvements

apartments rented at $55 per month, have a 10' by 10' room, one measuring about 8' by 12', and one about 11½ by 12'.

The complaints cited in their petition by the residents of the married students' dorms are: "limited space, inadequate kitchen units for which parts are no longer made, amazing scarcity of storage and closet space, over-size closet rods, uneven heating which is not regulated with changes in the weather, poor screening and extremely drafty windows resulting in constant colds for many children. Other sore spots are the community bathrooms and one telephone to service thirty families, not including the lack of the University telephone lines the other dorms have."

Two of the apartments on the third floor of Suffolk are infested with cockroaches, according to dorm resident George Lake.

Many apartments are harrassed by mice and, according to Hampshire resident Denise Carney, several were recently caught in one apartment on the second floor of Suffolk.

Mrs. Carney also stated that one four-month old baby girl in Hampshire, presently suffering from bronchitis, is in a bedroom with walls so cold that steam from her vaporizer, turns to ice on the walls.

It was stated by residents in their petition that "At schools like Princeton and Syracuse married student housing of a higher quality and lower cost is provided than at our state university."

Several residents have voiced complaints about lack of proper storage space, noise which could be partially alleviated by accoustical tiling, such as is planned for other residence halls on campus, lack of janitorial service and lack of a fenced-in play area for the young children.

A priority list set up by the married dorms' representatives at the meeting, included a children's play yard, interior paint job, accoustical tile, heating improvements, and replacement of the kitchen units which worked improperly.

Lack of proper storage space is not only inconvenient, residents have said, but is a fire hazard as well. Stairwells, such as this, are commonly used as storage areas.

Recognize this — a mousehole in Suffolk House, home of happy but unwelcome mice.

Questioned about the possibility of using some of the rent money from the dorms ($2,765 per month) for repairs, Dean Field explained that rent goes into general state revenue and that the University has no authority to allocate any of this.

He said that $300,000 received this year, the first such allocation in several years, from the state legislature for the purpose of housing renovation is being used on a priority basis. The first dorms being repaired are Brooks (women), Baker (men) and Chadbourne (men) in that order.

Married Dorms' residents have asked, among their requests, that a brick facing be put on the dorms to replace the white cinder blocks which are presently an eyesore to the University community and look unreasonably dilapidated.

Work at Brooks, converted last September from a men's to a women's residence, has included renovation of the recreation room and, according to the Dean of Women's office, will include installation of built-in bookcases and wardrobe closets at some time during the current semester.

Middlesex and Berkshire representatives said that major complaints on their list are lack of a lounge or any furnished room in the dormitory where parents or visitors can wait, lack of accoustical ceiling tile which, along with the plywood walls in the dormitory, amplifies any noise in the dorm, old and sometimes broken furniture, the dingy interior and room size.

Rooms in each of these Stockbridge dorms are about 10' by 14' and accommodate two students.

According to Middlesex President Dave Greenstein several requisitions for repairs and renovations that his dorm's residents have filed with the maintenance office have been rejected with no explanation.

Field explained that before any repairs could be made, they must first be okayed, then put on the list. One reason, he said, why these dorms were not included on the list first was that the number of residents was smaller than that of Baker, where work is now being done, and thus affects less people.

However, it was pointed out there are 166 students in Brooks where work is now in progress.

Married dorm students last weekend had their cause pleaded in the Student Senate by Married Dorm Senator George Jones. A Senate Service Committee group this week investigated conditions in the dorms and will take some action.

Living Conditions Are To Be Investigated

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

A recent appeal by County Circle residents to the Governor's Office bore fruit as a UMass graduate was assigned to investigate the housing situation and see that satisfaction is obtained.

Jack Sweeney '56 was assigned by Assistant to the Governor Lester Hyman to investigate the charges of the County Circle residents.

According to Kevin McGrath, Assistant to the Governor's Appointments Secretary, Sweeney will have a threefold aim in his investigation. The first will be to alert the alumni to the situation, the second will be to confer with administration officials to determine solutions to the problem. Thirdly, he will, if satisfaction is not achieved, bring the matter to the attention of the Governor.

The action by Beacon Hill was the culmination of protests by married residents of the County Circle dorms over living conditions in the area. The protest action began with a letter to the administration, published in the Collegian on February 20. This letter, and subsequent action by Stockbridge students living in the area, precipitated a meeting between the residents and Dean of Students Field last Wednesday.

According to several sources, the students were not satisfied with the outcome of the meeting, and therefore decided to petition the Governor for aid. The residents were unsuccessful in making contact with the Governor that evening, and part of the next day.

Contact was made with the Governor's Office by the Collegian, the morning after the meeting. Mr. McGrath then announced the appointment of Mr. Sweeney to investigate.

The married students plan to send Sweeney a list of those repairs that they feel are necessary to their comfort, sending a copy of this to the University's Maintenance Department. They hope to receive a statement from that department as to if and|or when they plan to initiate these repairs.

Those things that they feel necessary, that Maintenance refuses to perform, they will attempt to get accomplished by State aid through the Governor's office, sources said.

So far they have met with a flat refusal from the Maintenance department to fix a leaky roof until it dries out.

IFC And PHC Plan Greek Week Activities

The Interfraternity and Pan-Hellenic Councils are now formulating plans for Greek Week, which will be held April 1 through 7.

This traditional spring week will be highlighted by events of interest to the entire University Community. Greek Week has a double purpose; to provide opportunities for members of fraternities and sororities to meet and discuss common problems and interests, and to provide entertainment for the University through special social events.

The most popular of these events is the Concert, which will be held Sunday, April 7, at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Saturday, April 6th, the traditional and colorful Chariot Races will be held. Each year a number of spectators line Ellis Drive to see the fraternities compete for prizes in the races. Plans are being made to include new events to be held Saturday, such as Olympics, including track and field events and team events, for which several fraternities will combine to form teams.

Following the Chariot Races, entertainment will be provided by several groups from fraternities.

During the week, Greeks will meet at such events as Greek Banquet, Sorority Workshops and Exchanges, and the Greek Ball.

The Greek Week Queen will be chosen from the sorority members to reign over the week's festivities.

Several new additions are being made this year. These and the traditional events held in past years should make Greek Week 1963 successful and entertaining.

'Orphee' To Be Presented By French Drama Group

The Treteau de Paris, noted French drama group, will present "Orphee" by Jean Cocteau and "L'Apollon de Bellac" by Jean Giraudoux in a special performance at UMass this week.

The two plays will be presented on Thursday evening, March 14, at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The University's department of Romance languages and the French Corridor are sponsoring the appearance of the French drama group.

Under auspices of the Association Francais d'Action Artistique and the patronage of the French Embassy's cultural services, the troupe is now on its fifth tour of American colleges and universities. The group was formed five years ago by Jean de Rigault, and will perform at more than 55 American universities and cultural centers this year.

The comedy "L'Apollon de Bellac" stars Nicole Desurmont in the role of Agnes, and Jean-Pierre Delage as de Bellac. The one act tragedy, "Orphee" stars Bernard Verley in the title role, and Colette Teissedre as Eurydice. Bernard Verley, a young actor who is being compared with the late Gerard Philipe, has been an outstanding success in the Treteau de Paris company.

The appearance of the French troupe provides a variety of opportunities for theatre-goers. Many people are attracted to the plays because of their interest in French language and culture. Others are interested in seeing the techniques used in bringing a French drama to the stage.

Jean Leuvrais, praised for his version of "Beast in the Jungle," directs "Orphee." The well-known actor and director Rene Clermont directs "L'Apollon de Bellac."

Common Market Is Theme Of International Weekend

This coming weekend, March 15, 16, and 17, marks the occasion of the tenth annual International Weekend.

This year's weekend, titled "A Country Called Europe", deals with the controversial and timely topic of the Common Market.

George R. Kaplan, the International Relations Officer for Political Affairs of the Bureau of European Affairs will be the keynote speaker. He will deliver an address, "The United States and the New Europe", Friday evening March 15, at 8 p.m. in the SU Ballroom.

There will be an informal coffee hour following the keynote address in the Colonial Lounge of the SU. All are invited.

The weekend also includes two panel discussions on Saturday, March 16 in the Council Chambers of the Student Senate.

The first panel will take place at 10 a.m. and will deal with "American Trade Interests in the Common Market". There will be three panelists. Gordon P. Smith, vice president of the Booz, Allen, and Hamilton Management Consultant firm, will present the Free Trad point of view. Miss Virginia Galbraith, Professor of Economics at Mount Holyoke College will give a summary view of American Trade Interests and Edwin L. Parker, President of the A. G. Spaulding Company will speak as a Protectionist. Professor Reuben Miller of the Economics department at this University will be moderator.

The second panel will convene Saturday at 1:30 p.m. The topic for this panel will be "Political Implications of the Common Market." The panelists will be Mr. Ted Van Dyk, Assistant Director of the European Community Information Service, Professor Henry Ehrmann of the Government Department of Dartmouth College, and Terrence Burke, professor of Geography at UMass. Professor Burke will be speaking from a British point of view, Professor Ehrmann will present the French stand, and Mr. Van Dyk will speak of the Common Market exclusive of France. Professor Luther Allen of the UMass Government department will moderate.

Throughout this week of March 11 to 17, there will be an Industrial Exhibit of the Common Market countries in the Middlesex Room of the SU.

On Saturday evening the Wesley Methodist Church will hold an International supper for all foreign students attending the Weekend. Following the supper, the International Club will hold a dance in conjunction with the weekend which is open to the public.

Sunday, there will be a jazz hour from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge of the SU.

Lederle Kicks Off '63 Campus Chest Drive

President John W. Lederle presents campus chest drive co-chairmen Manny Smith '64 and Lee Wilcox '64 a check to start off this year's drive.

by ANN MILLER '64

President John Lederle is shown above presenting a check to Campus Chest co-chairmen Manny Smith and Lee Wilcox to kick off the drive which will run today through Friday.

Lederle has urged "everyone in our University community to give as much as he or she can to the Campus Chest—our immediate means for achieving this worthiest of goals. The funds realized in this all-important campaign will help our own scholarship program as well as the work of the World University Service, dedicated to lending a hand to the students and teachers in areas of the world not so fortunate as ours."

This year's committee has set the goal for this year's drive at $1 from each student. 100% cooperation is needed, committee members said, to make the drive successful.

The Rev. J. Joseph Quigley, the Rev. J. Springer and Rabbi Louis Ruchames have indicated their whole-hearted support of the drive and urged support of the University community.

Theme of the drive is "Tomorrow's leaders need help today".

Each fraternity and sorority has been urged to enter contestants in the APO-sponsored Ugliest Man on Campus Contest and winners' pictures will be posted in the SU lobby. Trophies will be awarded the winner.

Women's dorm closing hours for Friday night, March 15, have been extended from midnight to 12:30 a.m. provided girls that stay out beyond the usual curfew will pay one cent for each minute beyond midnight they remain out.

NEW YORK (UPI) Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, explaining his new role in public life:

"I speak only as an individual citizen, free to express my views on my party, on my country, as I see fit."

SCOPE

In the issue of "quality vs. quantity" of education here at the University of Massachusetts, one must always remember that the student body should play a leading role towards improving the quality of education. The co-operation and effort of good students will certainly ease the difficulties of the faculty. It is also certain that teachers will be more interested in teaching if the students are interested in learning.

Towards this end the SCOPE project is performing a necessary function. SCOPE (Student Committee On Promising Entrants) seeks to attract the outstanding High School Students of Massachusetts to the University. Its second function is to acquaint High School Guidance Counselors with the University of Massachusetts so that these counselors may be better able to advise their High School students about UMass.

Far too many High School students and Guidance Counselors (not to mention the vast majority of the citizens of this Commonwealth) either do not know that a state university exists in Amherst, or if they know it exists they are misinformed. Attracting outstanding students to the University is important; informing Guidance Counselors about the University is essential.

Unlike some public institutions, the University of Massachusetts does not accept every qualified student who applies. We can be selective. But the quantity of applications is meaningless. Thousands of applications from poor or mediocre students will not equal the applications of a few hundred gifted students.

The SCOPE project (under the direction of Adelphia) will help to increase the number of applications from excellent students, and these applications are the truly meaningful ones.

But assuming that the quality of students who enter this University improves, we ask if the quality of education will improve at an equal pace. Raising the quality of the students who enter does not insure that we will graduate productive scholars and citizens.

The SCOPE project, for all its merit, is only attacking one side of the problem. What about the other side?

BOUNDARIES

There is "something that doesn't like a wall." And yet, walls take on many forms and dimensions. The substrates from which walls are built are as numerous as there are minds and people, groups and individuals. The stones of the wall are laid in contempt and pride—the contempt and pride of a stagnant consciousness, whose ears and heart are impermeable to the Pavlovian bells of close associations, which ring to awaken our minds that we might recognize our barriers.

The bells ring out with singular clarity, but we possess internal protective devices which enable us to overlook our own failings and to see only the perfection that is man. Although in our daily lives, most of us convey a desire and a need for the dissolution of the walls which serve to keep people apart, the intricacies of the mind are complex and able to accept the allusions which we create. We sometimes do not even realize our unconscious acts in building barriers. We're grasping humanity, not sure of our ends, but nevertheless, grasping.

A Review

Androcles

by D. B. AXELROD

After a long delay, the curtain rose on the University Theatre's attempt at Androcles and the Lion. It must be reported that the third performance of Androcles was not outstanding. The humor was there—it is a cleverly humorous play—but despite the excellent job of several actors, the performance was just not all it could have been.

In the prologue, Androcles' wife (Sheila Ferrini) played an effective part, while Androcles (Frank Powers) began his talented performance. Cowering and meek, with good facial expression, he never slackened in his fine efforts. Even as a mere by-stander he remained "very Christian-like." The Lion, played by George Bergen, was also skillfully done.

In the first act, the Captain (Robert Thornley) was well cast and successful. However, Lavinia and Centurion (Patricia Long and Gerry Goldhaber) lost some clearness of voice in the faster scenes. Ferrovius (Jonathan Tuttle) was, with Androcles, the other high rating performer. At moments, Tuttle's eyes would actually roll as he was carried away with the emotion of his conversions.

Well constructed scenery moved smoothly, and the show itself, though slow in parts, was accomplished quite rapidly. There were no obvious slips in lines or action. The problem in the presentation was an over-emphasis of effeminate young men. The first of these "questionables," Lentuius (James Wrynn), was presented with some success. The next, The Keeper of The Menagerie, was a little less successful. The job given The Emperor (Thomas Kerrigan) was well executed but seemed misinterpreted. With glasses(?) and all the gestures, his role and lack of masculinity were beaten to death, or at least lowered to a slapstick level.

The gladiators played a smaller role than they might have. The entire show, from an overview, was smoothly done but nothing memorable. The program showed much effort, and still made an enjoyable evening's change of pace.

It was Richard Lovelace who wrote, "Stone walls do not a prison make." To the contrary, walls between people imprison not only the parties involved, but also each of the parties in his own individuality.

There are methods by which close relationships are made. But these embody an ounce of mutual trust coupled with a pinch of corresponding respect and a squeeze of love. If the recipe lacks the assurity of its ingredients, then the medium exists within which the mortar and brick may leven into a wall of mistrust and disrespect.

At the University, we are fortunate in possessing a testing ground for the future. It is here that we may grow to fruition and become a prolific part of society. It is here that we may utilize our education and understanding in building a powerful conscious for man. Through socialization, the University provides the means for a broadening of the character and a plane of thought upon which future ideals as concerns man might be built. With an aware effort, with a feeling of man for man, man will break down the wall. In the future, a boundary of the past will remain, where the wall once stood, to remind us of our duties one for the other, of our needs, and the living needs of others.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GOODELL LIBRARY

To the Editor:

Students intending to study on the 3rd level of the library and finding it closed may wish to know why the Librarian has closed this reading room indefinitely.

On Thursday evening, February 27, 1963, a handle was removed from a water faucet and the floor drains were plugged in the men's room creating a minor flood since the water was allowed to run out over the floor. The Librarian does not feel that he can tolerate damage to and abuse of Commonwealth property.

This childish act caps a season of relatively unintelligent and immature use of the library reading areas which are provided as quiet study areas for serious students. The general practice of using the library for social purposes and the committing of silly pranks does not promote the scholarly atmosphere or the intelligent use which many would like to have in the library.

When there is evidence of adequate student behavior, this reading area can be re-opened.

Very truly yours,
Hugh Montgomery
University Librarian

To the Staff of the Library:

If it is the purpose of the library staff to adversely affect the study habits of University students, they have certainly done so successfully. In the four years we have been at the University, we have never seen conditions so over-crowded. This situation exists of course because level three has been closed to the entire student body due to the pranks of one or two members.

It is not our purpose in writing this letter to defend these misbehaved students. However, it is not, nor has it ever been the duty of the student body as a whole to bear the responsibility for the upsets caused by a few; therefore it is manifestly unfair to punish all the students for the pranks of only some. It is impossible in a University this size to accommodate all those students who wish to study in the library when only two levels are open. Even the Honors Colloquia Room on level six was without an empty seat for the first time in our memory.

It has always been our impression that in a community such as the University, when the majority wishes something an attempt is at least made to comply with those wishes if possible. We are sure we speak for all those students who must of necessity study in the library due to lack of study facilities, overcrowding, noise in the dorms, reserve book reading, etc., and for those who by choice prefer to study in the library, when we say we wish to have level three of the library opened again immediately; this is surely within the realm of possibility.

This is not high school and most of us realize this, therefore we do not play tricks; it is imperative then that the library not treat us like high school teenagers by taking away what is not a privilege, but a right. Yes, by dint of the fact that the taxpayers of Massachusetts, our parents included, paid money to see this library built, it is our right as residents of Massachusetts to be allowed to use these facilities to aid us in trying to attain our education with a minimum of physical discomfort. I might add if these errant students who, to say the least, used poor judgment are caught, they should be dealt with justly. Why then if those who commit misdemeanors have the right to justice must the student body be dealt with in what can only be termed a high-handed way.

In the last analysis, we can only appeal to the administration and above all the faculty who, if they have any respect for their students, will see that the full facilities of the library are again made available. We would conclude by saying that the library could not have chosen a more inopportune time to indulge in a fit of temper since the students are at present going through mid-semester exams.

UPI TELETYPE

To the Editor:

Congratulations on your new UPI service!

A Commuter

To the Editor:

Congratulations on your new U.P.I. service. It is a big step in the right direction. Many students such as myself don't purchase a daily newspaper. I hope that the Collegian can find the space to keep us up to date with news which we would otherwise miss.

D.M. '64

To the Editor:

The Collegian staff and the Senate have contributed much in placing a teletype in the Student Union Lobby, and are to be complimented for their action.

This should be a boon for those who require themselves to be aware of world and stock market happenings.

HAIL TO THE DEAN!

Today let us examine that much maligned, widely misunderstood, grossly overworked, wholly dedicated campus figure—the dean.

The dean (from the Latin Deanere—to expel) is not, as many think, primarily a disciplinary officer. He is a counselor and guide, a haven and refuge for the troubled student. The dean (from the Greek Deanos—to skewer) is characterized chiefly by sympathy, wisdom, patience, forbearance, and a fondness for homely pleasures like community singing, farina, spelldowns, and Marlboro Cigarettes. The dean (from the German Deangemacht—to poop a party) is fond of Marlboros for the same reason that all men of good will are fond of Marlboros—because Marlboro is an honest cigarette. Those good Marlboro tobaccos are honestly good, honestly aged to the peak of perfection, honestly blended for the best of all possible flavors. Marlboro honestly comes in two different containers—a soft pack which is honestly soft and a Flip-Top box which honestly flips. You too will flip when next you try an honest Marlboro, which, one honestly hopes, will be soon.

There is not a dry eye in Yutah

But I digress. We were learning how a dean helps poor, troubled undergraduates. To illustrate, let us take a typical case from the files of Dean S..... of the University of Y..... (Oh, why be so mysterious? The dean's name is Sigafoos and the University is Yutah.)

Wise, kindly Dean Sigafoos was visited one day by a freshman named Walter Aguincourt who came to ask permission to marry one Emma Blenheim, his dormitory laundress. To the dean the marriage seemed ill-advised, for Walter was only 18 years old and Emma was 91. Walter agreed with the dean, but said he felt obligated to go through with it because Emma had invested her life savings in a transparent rainhood to protect her from the mist at Niagara Falls, where they planned to spend their honeymoon. If Walter called off the wedding, what use would the poor woman possibly have for a rainhood in Yutah? The wise, kindly dean pondered briefly and came up with a brilliant answer: let Walter punch holes in the back of Emma's steam iron. With steam billowing back at the old lady, she would find a rainhood very useful—possibly even essential.

Whimpering with gratitude, Walter kissed the dean's Phi Beta Kappa key and hastened away to follow his advice—and the results, I am pleased to report, were madly successful!

Today Emma is a happy woman—singing lustily, wearing her rainhood, eating soft-center chocolates, and ironing clothes—twice as happy, to be candid, than if she had married Walter . . . And what of Walter? He is happy too. Freed from his unwanted liaison with Emma, he married a girl much nearer his own age—Agnes Yucca, 72. Walter is now the proud father—*step*father, to be perfectly accurate—of three fine, healthy boys from Agnes's first marriage—Everett, 38; Wilhelm, 43; and Irving, 55—and when Walter puts the boys on a lead and takes them for a stroll in the park on Sunday afternoon, you may be sure there is not a dry eye in Yutah.

And Dean Sigafoos? He too is happy—happy to spend long, tiring hours in his little office, giving counsel without stint and without complaint, doing his bit to set the young, uncertain feet of his charges on the path to a brighter tomorrow.

Air Society Will Hold Smokers

The John P. Granville Squadron of the Arnold Air Society, a service society recently formed on the UMass campus has announced it will hold a series of informal smoker-type gatherings to promote interest in AFROTC which will become voluntary next semester.

Commander Peter R. Hefler stated that "We hope to be able to increase the number of Freshmen who will remain in the program by this means."

"After a talk with Col. Carthart, the PAS at UMass, we felt the best way to promote interest is to have the Advanced Cadets talk with the Freshmen informally."

The meetings will be held in the Colonial Lounge of the SU. All Freshmen who took the Air Force officer qualifying test will be invited to attend.

Executive Officer Robert Caldwell who is in charge of the smoker said; "We hope to be able to answer the Cadets' Questions in relation to how this Detachment works and what they would do in it if they remained in the program."

The Arnold Air Society was chartered on Oct. 15, 1963. Since then it has been active in many things such as trips to Westover AFB, and a recent talk by some Westover personnel.

The Society is at the present composed of 36 Advanced Cadets but will begin to pledge interested Freshmen and Sophomores before the year's end.

Is U.S. Economy Endangered By Impact Of Total Peace?

by BOB CONSIDINE, U.P.I.

NEW YORK—Could the U.S. economy stand up under the impact of peace—total peace—if it suddenly broke out?

"News Front," a periodical devoted to management's side of the news, collects some unnerving statistics pertinent to the question raised above.

The $56 billion U.S. defense budget is larger than the total output of France. Defense contracting is the biggest industry in the world, the biggest, most complex and unstable. A B-58 has 100,000 electronic components. It takes 9,000 companies to build all the pieces that go into an intercontinental missile. A weapon that might take 10 years to develop could be made obsolete five years before its completion.

The work force that keeps the whole thing going has undergone as many changes in nature as the weaponry itself. There were single years during World War II when 90,000 planes were built. Now only a fraction of that figure are fabricated, and production has long since been shut down on manned bombers.

It cost DuPont from $27 to $45 million to develop nylon; RCA $100 million to produce color TV, and Boeing $165 million to prove out its 707. A study by Merton Peck and Frederic Scherer on the cost of perfecting 12 major weapons indicates that the cheapest of them cost $60 million, the average cost $400 million and the costliest over $1 billion.

Defense spending consumes 10 percent of the total U.S. output, employs 10 per cent of the labor force. Twenty-five per cent of all new plant and equipment installed in the U.S. goes to military hardware. Defense claims a whopping 50 per cent of the U.S. reaserch and development dollar.

Robert McNamara presides over an establishment that owns more real estate than the combined areas of Connecticut, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Delaware. If U.S. Steel, A.T.&T., General Motors, Metropolitan Life and Standard Oil of New Jersey combined into one colossal company, it would be smaller than the Defense Department. DD's inventory contains 3,400,000 items, stored in 35,000 buildings around the world at a warehousing cost of $1,600,000,000 a year.

Pardon me. I feel faint.

10th Intercollegiate Folk Festival Held Here Last Weekend

This past weekend saw the Tenth Annual Intercollegiate Folk Festival, sponsored by the Square Dance Club. The Union, especially the ballroom, resounded with the chatter and music of enthusiastic square and folk dancers.

Saturday afternoon, spectators witnessed the following groups: Brooklyn City College Israel Folk Dance Group; Durham Reelers from UNH; Four College Folk Dance Club; Framingham State College, Mount Holyoke, and Northeastern folk dance clubs; and the UMass Heymakers.

Saturday night, Dick Leger, with the Durfee Orchestra, called for a full house, who promenaded and do-si-doed their way to a fun packed evening. Banners were presented to exhibiting groups.

The other elements of the weekend: Friday night square dance, and informal get-together, Saturday night banquet, and Sunday folk sing were equally successful.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS SPECIAL

The Six Greatest Sport Injuries Of The Decade

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Most celebrated athletes are immortalized by their playing records; a few others gain entrance to the annals of sport not by what they did but by what was done to them . . . perhaps by a bat, a disease, a ball, and a glove. Of the many thousands of mishaps in sports over the last ten years, few knew the consequences to team and player as did those which occurred to the six men who stand out as being singularly unfortunate in wearing the black laurel crown of injury —the six Great Contretemps of the Decade 1953-1963.

Injury has powers beyond the scope of human endeavor. For twenty years, boxes and writers had been decrying the conditions of the ring sport; corruption and poor health standards prevailed. The game remained the same . . . until the night of March 24, 1962. It was then that light and soap were applied to boxing . . . under the pall-like silence of death. Emile Griffith, a fighting hat maker pounded Benny Paret until the Cuban dropped unconscious to the canvas in Madison Square Garden. A week later he was dead. In the ensuing months, several states banned boxing, ten others initiated state investigations, and congress took steps toward a reorganization of the sport. The injury to Paret was of fatal proportions, but the consequences of the event may have a more profound effect upon his sport than any other human effort.

Herb Score

Heroes often are made by being at the right place at the right time; tragic heroes are at the wrong place at the wrong time. Such was the case with Herb Score. Tris Speaker had previously said of Score: "This boy is going to be one of the great ones." After pitcher Score won 20 games and struck out 263 batters in 1956 with the greatest fastball the big leagues had seen since Bob Feller, Boston Red Sox GM Joe Cronin offered $1,000,000 for Score. And the Cleveland Indians said, "No." Months later, May 1957, Herb Score was carried off the field on a stretcher, his right eye severely damaged after being hit flush in the socket by a line drive off the bat of Gil McDougald. A year later, Score was back . . . but not to stay and never the same. Something was gone. He longer had the "stuff" which once brought batters to blink in disbelief. Traded, he languished in the minors, came back momentarily, and now is back in the minors.

The consequences of this injury to Score are evident; to the Cleveland Indians it meant: in 1957 they fell out of the top four teams in the A.L. for the first time since 1946; attracted only 720,000 fans at home where in 1948 they set a record of 2,620,627.

Ernie Davis

As is the case with injuries, man has few powers in preventing a disease like leukemia. While leukemia could be called an affliction to the player, it became one of the most consequential injuries to a team in all time. Ernie Davis was the greatest running back college football had seen since Jimmy Brown. Both men gravitated to Syracuse U. Brown joined the Cleveland Browns of the NFL, and upon graduation, Davis made plans for the same trip. With Davis under contract, Coach Paul Brown traded away fleet Bobby Mitchell and the Browns appeared invincible. They even traded away their league leading quarterback for one who might fit the new Brown-Davis offense. But before joining the Cleveland club in late summer, Davis had to set up a momentary camp with the College All-Stars and their classic game with the NFL champs. On the eve of the August 1962 contest, Davis was mysteriously taken out of the line-up and into a hospital. Two months later, his blood troubles were disagnosed as fatal leukemia. While doctors put the disease into a "state of remission", and gave him permission to play, Davis never saw action in 1962, and few feel he ever will again.

For Davis, leukemia means the end of a way of life and life itself; for the Cleveland Browns it meant: a fifth consecutive year without a title for a team that had won more championships in the last 16 years than any other team; a threatened resignation and sub-par year for Jimmy Brown; and the dismissal of Coach Paul Brown who was responsible for much of the offensive and defensive changes in pro football.

Few sports are affected by so few men as is basketball with its five member teams; and few teams are as affected by one man as the Celtics are by the awesome power tower named Russell. Without that big, goateed giant, the famous Celtics might call themselves the Knickerbockers. The Boston dynasty began, not with Honey Fitz, but with Bill Russell in 1957. In 1958, the Celtics were looking for their second consecutive championship. But then, as unprecedented as a baseball in the eyeball, Russell was gone. The 6-9 brown pillar of strength twisted an ankle and the basketball world gasped as the once-thought Invincible Celtics were routed by the underdog St. Louis Hawks, four games to two.

Maurice Richard

Like Homer's hero Achilles, Maurice Richard was an ideal of strength, beauty, and valor. Like Achilles, Richard appeared to be invincible and invulnerable. For the French Canadian and fictional Greek, life stretched immortally beyond the horizon. But as Paris' arrow pierced the vulnerable heel of the Grecian warrior, Toronto's Marc Reaume's ice skate severed the heel of the Canadian skater. At age 36, Richard was beginning another season as the oldest player in hockey and had stated publicly, "They'll have to force me to retire!"

On November 12, 1958, there were no retirement plans coming from the Canadian front office. Richard was leading the league in scoring and goals. But as unprecendented as Davis' leukemia, an opponent's skate blade severed the Achilles tendon on Richard's heel and put him out of action for the season. There was a momentary flash of old glory in the spring of '59 when he helped in the Stanley Cup playoffs, and a futile attempt in 1959-60 for old glory. Today, the Canadians are as strong as ever with another Richard (Henri) but Montreal's color and the glory of the immortal Richard ended sharply and unexpectedly —like that of a Greek hero—by a freak injury.

Most of the hallowed figures in record books owe their longevity to injuries . . . the injuries that halt the record breaking assault of challengers. Baseball's most established and longstanding pitching feats now owe their lives to four inches. It was the four inch index finger of young Sandy Kaufax in 1962 that stopped a complete destruction of past mound precedents.

In 1961, Kaufax won 18 games and broke Christy Mathewson's strikeout record with a 269 total. Thus, it came as no surprise to diamond fans in 1962 when Dodger Kaufax struck out 18 games in one game to tie Feller's record, pitched a no-hitter, struck out 10 men a game for a 209 total, and won 14 games . . . by MID-SEASON. Then, to the pennant racing Dodgers, like Russell to the '58 Celtics, he was gone. A blow, caused by Kaufax trying to bat lefty and getting jammed by a pitch near the hands, started a blood clot in the palm. In turn, the clot cut off the circulation to the index finger that spun a wonderful curve and controlled a monstrous fastball. The finger, eventually like the Dodgers without Koufax, collapsed without support. This week, Koufax is back spinning and controlling a baseball and his finger is back to circulating; but Score went back to seeing and pitching too . . . but never more to winning. It remains to be seen if winning returns with circulation.

What N.Y. Post scribe Leonard Shecter once said of Mickey Mantle might be applied to all six victims of the Six Great Contretemps: "It seems inconceivable there could ever be anything seriously wrong with his magnificent body. Men like him should be granted a measure of immortality. They're not, though. Only their accomplishments are immortal."

Daytona Out To Lure Kids Away From Fort Laudedale

by FRANK EIDGE, UPI

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. (UPI) — Boom - twang - twang! This is the year of the great hootenanny on the beaches of Fort Lauderdale and Daytona.

Every year a special kind of madness descends upon the two beaches in the shape of about 50,000 students turned loose for spring vacations from college campuses throughout the Midwest, Eastern Seaboard and Southland.

The townspeople surrounding the beaches have survived successive onslaughts of gold fish swallowers, rock-and-rollers, beatniks, bongo players, the limbo and, last year, the twist.

The college set goes big this year for folk singing, guitar and banjo plucking and scraggly goatees, if first arrivals are any indication.

The collegians have adopted the hootenanny, an old slave word now translated to mean a gathering of folk singers.

Officials Undaunted

The - thought of 50,000 folk singers parading through town in the next four weeks causes many persons to blanch. Not the officials of Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach, though.

Daytona Beach launched an all-out effort to lure the collegians away from Fort Lauderdale, and that city is fighting to keep its unofficial title as host to the vacationers.

Daytona Beach is offering four big-name folk music entertainment groups, a group of sports stars, the "expresso priest," a jazz music combo of university professors, and promises to treat the students like adults even if they do drink beer.

Fort Lauderdale is spending about $50,000 on entertainment and policing to make sure everything runs smoothly. The city is sponsoring 36 consecutive nighttime dances for the students.

Begins In Thirties

The spring migration of Fort Lauderdale began without promotion back in the late 1930's when the city began sponsoring intercollegiate swimming meets. Word got around the campuses that Fort Lauderdale was the place to go during spring vacation and the fad caught on rapidly after World War II.

Swelling the tide was a lurid novel several years ago entitled "Where The Boys are." Its theme was built around stories of unrestrained sex and pranks.

Such tales, coupled with the college craze for beatniks and bongos two years ago, erupted in riots here that taxed local authorities to the limit, brought reforms, tighter supervision and competition from Daytona Beach. More than 400 students were thrown in jail and several were hurt.

Beer Is Issue

The main bone of contention is beer, a beverage that always seems to find its level where college students gather. You can't drink beer legally in Florida unless you are 21.

Each beer joint here has a man at the door to check age credentials of any young-looking patron during college month. Police don't look the other way. They break up any signs of public drinking and haul off to jail any student who gets belligerent about a warning.

Disregarding the 1960 and 1961 student disorders at Fort Lauderdale, Daytona Beach stepped into the breach with the offer of beer. Authorities said beer-drinking on the beach was okay, as long as the students conducted themselves like adults. Some motel owners even offered to put up a keg per night to lure the students.

"The students may drink whatever beverages they wish, same as anyone else," said Daytona Beach City Commissioner Stan Nass, who is in charge of this year's arrangements. "Anyone who behaves will be welcome."

Collegian HasOpenings On Staff

The Collegian has openings on its staff for reporters, feature and editorial writers, artists, and page make-up workers.

Any student interested in working on the Collegian should drop in at the newspaper off ice located on the Student Union balcony and make his eagerness to work known to one of the staff members.

Quirks In The News

HARTFORD, CONN. (UPI)— The General Assembly Thursday adopted this resolution honoring Rep. Robert J. Testo, D-Bridgeport, for becoming the father of twins for a second time:

"Whereas this double-barrelled addition to the Testo family has increased the number of their offspring to the awesome total of nine, we do most heartily applaud this private population explosion of the Testo family."

MIAMI SPRINGS, FLA. (UPI)—More than 50 persons rushed to City Hall to pay delinquent water bills Thursday when a road grader accidentially cut through a water main and knocked out service to homes.

"They came dashing in as fast as they could, the money in their hands," Mrs. Florence Jones, a water department cashier said. "It was a scream."

LUBBOCK TEXAS, (UPI)— Mrs. F. W. Bushell reported Thursday somebody stole 80 sets of false teeth from her dental laboratory—Feb. 14.

Police asked why she waited so long to report it.

"I just couldn't believe it," she replied.

Dick Ward Wins IC4A 35 Pound Weight Throw Event

by GENE COLBURN '64

Co-captain Dick Ward closed out his varsity indoor track career with his greatest effort as he won the IC4A's 35 pound weight throw with a toss of 61'9.5" establishing a new University of Massachusetts record.

Ward had sprained his ankle in a physical education class on Thursday and it was feared that the injury would impair his chances of winning. Such was not the case though, for despite the sprain Dick's series of throws were his best ever. His second best throw of 61'3.5" would have been good enough to win the New York meet as Touzen of Army best heave was only 60'9.5".

Some days it just doesn't pay to get out of bed, and Saturday was such a day for Redmen co-captain Ken O'Brien. "Obie" was unfortunately placed in a slow heat with little competition when running the trials for the 1,000. The six fastest times were going to be picked for the final race, therefore Ken had to push himself all the day. Push he did, winning his heat by two seconds and setting a new UMass record of 2:13.5. Last year this time would have qualified him for the final, but not so this year as the sixth qualifier ran 2:13 flat.

In the mile and two mile races the Redmen's luck was just about the same. Dave Balch ran a 4:22 mile, his best effort of the year, but not good enough for a place. Somewhat disappointed with his time in the mile contest Dave decided to enter the two mile race, and turned in an excellent time of 9:30 that even surprised himself. Bob Brouillet dropped out the two mile shortly after the mile mark.

DICK WARD

To top off the day for the Redmen, Coach William Footrick was presented to the crowd and given a medal in honor of his twenty-five years of service as a track coach.

Redmen Swimmers Finish Seventh In New Haven Meet

by BUD PRATT '65

In the finals of the 44th Annual New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association Meet, held at New Haven, Saturday, Redmen swimmers compiled 16 points for a seventh-place berth. Williams College and Bowdoin finished one-two this year with 71 and 68 points respectively.

Mike Rothschild ('64) was high man for UMass with nine points. Mike finished second in the tortuous 1650-yd. freestyle on Thursday night behind Bowdoin's Pete Seaver, and third in the 500-yd. freestyle. Mike's time (5:26.2) in the 500 was his (and UM's) best yet, and was within .6 sec. of Ami Trauber, former Olympic swimmer, now competing for UConn.

Teammate Mike Bjornholm '64 placed in three events for the Redmen with a 4th place in the 50-yd. freestyle (23.0 sec., UM record), 5th in the 100-yd. freestyle (51.6), and 6th in the 200-yd. backstroke, an event in which he has not competed for some time; nonetheless, his 2:16.3 in this event established a new UMass record. This was no small feat for Bjornholm who swam the 100 freestyle and 200 backstroke in immediate succession, much to the amazement of his competitors.

Swimming his specialty, Co-capt. Bruce Morton took sixth place in the 200-yd. medley in 2:18.6, another UM record.

Redmen swimmer Bruce Morton cuts through the water in the backstroke portion of the 200-yard medley. Morton took sixth place in this event in the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association meet in New Haven on Saturday.

Without exception, Redmen swimmers, including Co-Capt. Jim Coffey and breaststroker Charlie Monnier, turned in their best performances of the season; and Coach Joe Rogers notes with satisfaction that his team's N.E. performance was UM's best in roughly ten years. It may be further noted that, unlike our competitors, UM swimmers compete without benefit of scholarship.

Secret(?) Service

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If there is one thing the chief of the U.S. Secret Service would like people to know, it is that his service really isn't very secret. But with a wry grin, Chief James J. Rowley confessed he has had a tough time getting this point across—particularly to the Soviet secret police.

"As much as I tried to convince those fellows that we are not a cloak and dagger operation, they did not believe it," Rowley recalled.

"The Russian police with Khrushchev just looked at me with quizzical smiles as if to say, 'Who are you spoofing?' Rowley added.

Unfortunately, the chief said, similar misconceptions exist in other countries—and in the United States. He would like to clear these up.

Zunic To Go Before Trustee Athletic Comm.

by JEFF DAVIDOW '65

In a special interview granted to the Collegian yesterday, Matt Zunic, coach-in-dispute of the UMass Redmen reiterated that his primary concern was in clearing his name.

Zunic told the Collegian that at the present he was awaiting word from UMass President John Lederle on a definite date at which time the man with the red socks would go before the Athletic Committee of University of Massachusetts Trustees and plead his case.

The Redmen coach wants the Athletic department to substantiate or deny certain claims it has made about a number of schools refusing to play UMass because of Zunic's alleged poor conduct on the court.

Zunic terms these charges as being ridiculous, and states that his conduct at basketball games has considerably improved over the past two years. "They knew what I was like when they hired me four years ago. Why didn't they fire me last year when I was a winner?"

When asked whether or not he would stay if and when his name was cleared, Zunic answered that the possibility of his remaining was good because he wants to finish what he has started, that is building a great UMass basketball team.

Zunic also stated that many people have urged him to stay including the members of his squad. In another Collegian interview Redmen co-captain Pete Bernard expressed shock at Zunic's dismissal and stated that he could not see any real grounds for the action. In regard to the Cannisius game after which Zunic admittedly swore at the referee, Bernard said that "it was a robbery and the poor officiating definitely cost the Redmen the game." Bernard also added that he felt anything Zunic said to the referee was perfectly justifiable even if a bit profane.

Zunic said that he is no way ashamed of any action he has committed and feels that he can walk anywhere with his head held high. He ended the interview by claiming that all he has done has been in the best interest of the basket team, in particular, and the University, in general.

When reached at his Curry Hicks Building office on Sunday evening Dean Warren McGuirk of the school of Physical Education declined to comment at the present time on Mr. Zunic's dismissal from his position as head basketball coach.

IS LASSIE A FAKE?

by PHYLLIS BATTELLE,

NEW YORK (UPI) — Until today, I had never known the real inside story on "Lassie."

Oh, I knew "Lassie" was really a boy dog, and I heard rumors that "Lassie" had eight stand-ins to do all the dirty work, like running through forest fires, getting shot, fighting bigger dogs and all that. I probably could have read innuendos about "Lassie's" affairs on Confidential somebody once told me "Lassie" had a thing going with a Doberman pinscher, but these rheumy eyes that so oft have wept over collies would not be caught red looking at such gossip.

To learn the true story on the great dog dynasty of movies and TV, I waited for the arrival in New York of Rudd Weatherwax.

Weatherwax sounds like an all-purpose finish coat for ship hulls—but actually he is the trainer of "Lassie."

"Lassie is a male, just as you heard—but the rest of that propaganda is inaccurate rumor," said the expert.

"Lassie does not have doubles for the arduous or dangerous scenes. Lassie, and only Lassie, is on camera in every situation, with just one exception—fight scenes with other animals. But even here, you're misadvised. We don't use doubles here to keep Lassie from being hurt. There are hidden muzzles on all animals in fight scenes so there isn't a chance in a thousand of any injury.

"So it's not a question of protecting Lassie. It's a simple case of preserving his gentleness.

"Since he's called on to play gentle scenes mostly, we don't want him to get a taste of violence. It might lead to a taste for violence."

"It's a long-drawn-out process, producing another Lassie. Females of each litter are automatically out, of course females shed in summer, and Hollywood can't take on half-year actors. Then most of the males are eliminated because their markings are not similar to Lassie's.

"When I do get a puppy who looks like his father, particularly as regards the 'blaze' on the forehead, that's just the beginning. When the little guy is six or seven weeks old, I take him to the studio to test his nervous system. Now, a dog who's maybe a little more nervous than average will still make a fine house pet; but if his life has to be lived on a movie set, that's something else again.

"The noise can drive even a normally adjusted dog out of his mind. Most of the pups show immediately that they can't take it. A few—a very few—seem to take it in stride, and these are the ones I then start to work with. By far the most important thing now comes up: Does the dog have basic intelligence equal to the job of being a movie hero? If he hasn't, one of my friends gets a real nice playmate for the kids."

In the last four years, Weatherwax claims, he's found no new Lassie. But he's made hundreds of kids happy!"

Operetta Guild And Music Department Will Present The Threepenny Opera

The record-breaking musical hit, The Threepenny Opera, will be presented by the UMass Operetta Guild and the Opera Workshop, in association with the Music Department, at Bowker Auditorium on April 15, 17, and 18.

This is the bitter-sweet show filled with Kurt Weill songhits which played 2,611 continuous performances in New York to surpass the runs of all previous musicals, including Oklahoma! and South Pacific. For six-and-a-quarter years The Threepenny Opera was one of the "must-see" tourist attractions in New York along with such other landmarks as the Statue of Liberty, the Empire State Building and the United Nations.

The raffish underworld of early Victorian London is the setting of The Threepenny Opera as adapted in 1928 by Bertold Brecht, for Berlin audiences, from John Gay's London hit of 1728 called The Beggar's Opera.

Marc Blitzstein's 1954 English version of the German adaptation that is to be seen here, tells the story of a larcenous hero, MacHeath, and his misadventures in romance and crime. He's known as Mack the Knife, and the hit-parade ballad about him which opens the show has been heard around the world.

Glen Biggum of Northampton will portray the jaunty trifler with women and the law who weds and deserts Paula Stephens as Polly Peachum, a girl whose parents run a shop for outfitting thieving mendicants.

All the characters in The Threepenny Opera are picturesque rogues of some sort, and their portrayal has been described by critics throughout Europe and America as a pungent comment on people in high places and low who live by cunning and deceit.

The shop specializing in beggars' props, presided over by the hard-crusted Mr. Peachum and his bibulous spouse, to be played by Paul Cwiklik and Mrs. Dorothy Ladd of Northampton, will be the most respectable setting in the procession of gaudy scenes frequented by the show's underworld denizens at their cutthroat work and soul-blistering play—except possibly the setting in Newgate Prison, where the gallows awaits the conscienceless MacHeath until he is reprieved by a spoofing twist of the authors.

The female contingent in this desperate society will include Maxine Forward as Jenny, a jilted lady out for revenge, and Ann Baxter as Lucy Brown, a prison trollop who succumbs to a murderer's charm.

Along with several thugs who make up MacHeath's gang will be an equally reprehensible representative of the law, the Police Commissioner, Tiger Brown, to be portrayed by Herbert Mongue.

Musical director of this sardonic musical expose will be Dr. Doric J. Alviani, who will be in charge of Kurt Weill's collection of 21 famous song hits.

Tickets will go on sale for The Threepenny Opera at the S.U. Box Office on April 1, or call Alpine 3-3411.

King Voted Outstanding Professor

A warm, outgoing personality with high appeal for students coupled with a scholarly creativeness has brought recognition to a UMass faculty member as the first recipient of an "Outstanding Professor Award" in the Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

Assoc. Prof. Gordon S. King, instructor of arboriculture and park management in the department of landscape architecture, recently was given the award in a surprise ceremony at a banquet for Stockbridge students. He received a plaque and cash award.

The award was sponsored by Stoso, an honorary service club for the two-year Stockbridge School students. Rone Medeiros, a senior, is president of the club. Practically all of the 375 Stockbridge students participated in the balloting to name an outstanding professor, with an advisory committee making the final selection. Stoso hopes to make the award an annual event, President Medeiros said.

King, described as a "stimulating and progressive teacher with a dedication to helping young men gain their objective," joined the College of Agriculture staff at UMass in 1950 as an assistant professor and instructor in arboriculture. He has been the instructor in this field for four-year as well as two-year students.

State Proposes $7.5 Million To UM

An average annual sum of $7,500,000 for construction at UMass has been recommended by the state division of building construction as part of a $256,372,000 capital outlay construction program for state institutions over a five-year period.

A total of $9,492,000 has been assigned for projects at the university during fiscal year 1964.

These allotments, in order of priority, include: $3,000,000 for the administration building and furnishings; $2,500,000 for classroom, laboratory and office buildings for the College of Arts and Science; $650,000 for lecture hall and office addition to Machmer Hall; $350,000 for coal storage facilities; $300,000 for the poultry plant laboratory; and $750,000 for addition to UMass utilities.

Other projects would include: $500,000 for reconditioning and relocation of older buildings; $567,000 for reconditioning dormitories; $65,000 for plans for research, instruction and service buildings of the College of Agriculture; $60,000 for plans for a central storage building; $100,000 for plans for another classroom and office building for the liberal arts section; and $150,000 for plans for graduate research facilities.

Completing the list of recommendations are $500,000 for paved areas, including roads and sidewalks; and $300,000 for procurement of equipment.

Recommendations on these priorities may be made by Governor Peabody. Final decisions on what will be in the capital outlay program for 1964 are up to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Stockbridge Men Present Petition To Administration

by ANN MILLER '64

Stockbridge representatives from Middlesex and Berkshire dorms Monday presented Administration officials with a petition of complaints concerning housing conditions in the Stockbridge dorms.

Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds Edmund Ryan said that a maintenance request put through by the Dean of Men's Office by County Circle residents is being held by him.

Ryan stated that "technically, we (Maintenance) could rule on any alteration and improvements." He pointed out, however, that students can't place requests with his office, that any such requisitions must first come through another University office to have authorization.

He said he expected to meet soon with Dean of Students William Field and Director of Physical Plant Harry S. Hugill to discuss the complaints from County Circle residents that have priority listing.

Stockbridge dorm spokesman John Frado has made public a committee report, comparing conditions in the Stockbridge dorms to those in men's dorms on the hill, which they have presented to the University Administration.

A double room in Berkshire or Middlesex is 126 square feet in area as compared to 182 square feet in Butterfield, 180 square feet in Van Meter, 196 square feet in Chadbourne, 300 square feet in Baker and 210 square feet in Mills, the report said.

The report pointed out that that the lounge or public room in Berkshire is 252 square feet in area, has no furniture or vending machines and only one phone as compared with furnished lounges, machines and two to four telephones in every other dorm.

The public room in Middlesex is 126 square feet; this dorm also has a television room in the basement which was furnished to some extent out of the student's own pockets.

Student Poll Reveals Awareness Of Authority

by DAVE CLANCY '64

Following is the third and last in a series of articles on a survey made by the Senate Men's Affairs Committee to discern men students' knowledge concerning counselor procedures on campus. The articles are written by members of the Committee, competent in this area.

Does your counselor have the authority to:

	YES	NO
A) Search your room?	74%	26%
B) The power of confiscation?	61%	39%
C) Take your I.D.?	21%	79%
D) The power of suspension from the dorm?	19%	81%

The results of the above questions indicate the students to be well informed as to the disciplinary powers of the counselors. This is in direct contrast to the general misinformation concerning the student's knowledge of counselor selection procedures (Collegian Mon. Mar. 4).

The wide difference can probably be attributed to the fact that most students aren't interested enough to find out about the selection procedures while every student wants to know how far the counselor can go.

"Does your counselor have ample authority vested in his position to enable him to carry out his responsibilities?". The answers revealed that 82% of those interviewed felt that he does indeed have enough authority.

The survey as a whole suggests that the problem to be considered isn't a matter of the strength of the whole system, or of the quality of the counselors themselves, but instead is the interest of the students. In answer to the question, "Are you going to apply for a counselor's job?", 79% relied "NO" and only 21% were at all interested. Among the reasons given for not applying were "lack of time", "not enough pay", and "don't want the responsibility". Also, the seniors interviewed, of course answered in the negative. However, the majority of "no" answers had no explanation at all.

It is evident that there is a general disinterest in the position. Why? The answers indicate most students don't want the responsibility and others do not wish to be separated from the rest of the group and perhaps have to clamp down on their friends.

This University will grow academically only as the correct at-

ROTC Flight Program Has Successful Year

The AFROTC detachment at UMass upon the recent completion of its first flight instruction program, has established an enviable record, according to Major Bamber, who is in charge of the program.

Official reports indicate that, of the 1500 cadets enrolled in flight instruction programs in 161 colleges and universities throughout the country, UMass finished first with all six cadets enrolled satisfactorily completing the program.

The cadets are Garry R. Kwist, Philip T. LaRoche, Thomas E. Dodge, John R. Marsden, Jr., Robert S. Henry, Jr., and Carl E. Anderson.

In addition, while obtaining a private pilot's license was not a requirement of the curriculum, three of the six cadets enrolled attained this added distinction.

The flight instruction program, providing initial flight instruction for future USAF pilots, entails 36½ hours of practical flight instruction in Cessna 150 type aircraft, and 30 hours of ground school instruction encompassing meteorology, navigation, and civil air regulations.

Civilian flight schools provide the flight instruction phase, while the ground school is conducted by the AFROTC Detachment.

This program is offered as a part of the AFROTC curriculum to those advanced cadets who will become the future pilots of the United States Air Force.

While the first class was admittedly small, it is anticipated that next year 16 cadets will be enrolled in the program.

The following year, when the present class of AFROTC sophomores becomes eligible, it is expected that approximately 30 cadets will be enrolled.

Unkown Prof Enters APO's "Ugly" Contest

Even the faculty is in on the act!

An "unknown" candidate has been entered in the UMOC contest, and an APO spokesman said that he is expecting to win by stuffiing the ballot box! He has challenged the fraternities, sororities and dorms to meet his votes and beat him in the contest.

Sponsors of the contest, Alpha Phi Omega, have appealed to the student body to help prevent the faculty from winning. Everyone is asked to vote for the candidate of his or her choice.

The pictures of the 24 ugly men are on display in the S.U. lobby with ballot boxes provided. Votes are counted one for a penny, with plaques being awarded to the winners. The contest will run for the next seven days, with all proceeds going to the annual Campus Chest drive, being held at this time. Get out and VOTE!.

Seven outstanding women from a variety of educational backgrounds will discuss opportunities for educated women in a special program at UMass this week.

Sponsored by the Student Senate women's affairs committee, the program on "Change and Challenge for the Educated Woman" will be held for University women and alumnae tomorrow in the Student Union.

Dr. Pauline Tompkins, political scientist-historian and General Director of the American Association of University Women, will be the keynote speaker for the day-long program. Her talk, on the role of women after graduation, will be held in the S.U. ballroom at 11 a.m. The talk is open to the public.

In the afternoon Dr. Tompkins will join a distingushed panel in a discussion of the challenge for educated women. The panel discussion, to be held at 4 p.m. in the S.U. ballroom, is open to the public.

Panelists will be: Dr. Mary Bunting, President of Radcliffe College; Dr. Gwendolyn Carter, author and an expert on Africa; and three distinguished UMass alumnae—Mrs. Judith Wood Langland, artist; Mrs. Mona Harrington Gagnon, lawyer; and Mrs. Anne Resigh Clough, mathematician. The panel will be moderated by Dr. Victoria Schuck, professor of political science at Mount Holyoke College and a trustee of UMass.

After the panel, returning alumnae and panelists will be taken to dinner at sorority houses and the Dining Commons in an effort to reach as many women students as possible. In the evening there will be a series of coffee hours and discussions in the residence halls to conclude the program.

THE THIRD LEVEL

The vandalism which forced the closing of the third level of the library was unfortunately not an isolated instance of the misbehavior of one or two students. It was just one more event in a long series, including the destruction of lightbulbs, the marking of desks, and the clogging of drains.

This sort of behavior has been coupled with general rowdiness and several complaints have been registered by students and graduate students in reference to noisiness throughout the library. The Dean's office is in full accord with Mr. Montgomery's actions and agrees with him that students must start policing themselves. Only when students institute measures for the self-policing of the library will the third level be reopened. It has been recommended by Mr. Montgomery that an ad hoc committee be set up by the Student Senate and that a delegation be sent to discuss the problem with Mr. Montgomery in order that a suitable solution might be worked out.

CAMPUS CHEST

THE STUDENT, THE NATION, THE WORLD

President Kennedy, in his Inaugural Address of January 20, 1961, made the following statement. "To those peoples in the huts and villages of half the globe struggling to break the bonds of mass misery, we pledge our best efforts to help them help themselves, for whatever period is required—not because the communists may be doing it, not because we seek their votes, but because it is right."

World University Service has helped in the universities in countries pick up the shattered fragments in times of crisis and out of these experiences of mutual assistance now responds to the revolution of rising expectations among the new nations.

The challenge is to help where there are limitations of educational facilities, the debilitation of disease and a lack of leadership which weaken universities in achieving their objectives. Mutual assistance through the World University Service brings new hope to frustrated students and professors.

Since its beginning in World War I, the World University Service has now spread through the world. The work of 40 national committees is coordinated at the international level by a permanent staff in Geneva, Switzerland.

Many people on campus are unaware of the fact that one-half of the monies collected from the Campus Chest Drive do in fact become distributed on an international basis through the World University Service. The remaining half of the money is utilized on campus in the University's Scholarship fund.

The goal of this year's drive has been set at one dollar per student. We urge you, as members of the University Community and as responsible citizens to aid in the fight for the students of the University and the world.

THE WASHINGTON TRIP

To the Editor:

On our recent trip to the Model General Assembly in Washington, D.C., the six of us representing Canada learned quite a bit.

As far as the organization of the conference went, we felt there was much to be desired. This, however, was due to the weakness of the President of the General Assembly. Had he known his Parliamentary Procedure as he should have, much of the confusion would have been absent. The importance of this problem, which Senate President Cournoyer has been trying to convey to the entire Senate body this year, became the source of much unnecessary confusion and loss of valuable time.

The conference, on the whole, however, was quite an experience. Besides learning about the functioning of the United Nations and the four topics which were discussed, we returned with a new interest in the university. Through the enthusiasm of other delegations in our proposals and our support of many important resolutions on the floor of the General Assembly, through congratulations on what was called a "job well done" on the part of the university, and the fact that we placed high when in competition with such "name" schools as West Point, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, U. Penn., etc.—they respected us and in turn we couldn't help but appreciate and admire the university even more than we had four days before.

Therefore, we would wholeheartedly endorse this program and would urge the Senate and the administration to support such a program, as it is only through this type of personal interaction that we, the students, can convey our feelings to other students. This student-to-student relationship, reached in an intellectual atmosphere, is the most effective means to discuss problems common to all and our respective universities.

—LETTERS TO THE EDITOR—

The Collegian has written to several members of the faculty and administration to express their views on the issue of "quality vs. quantity" of education here at the University. Mr. Stein's and Mr. Pippert's replies appear in today's Collegian.

Any member of the University community is encouraged to express his views on this issue.

"Quantity vs. Quality"

To the Editor:

Thank you for your letter of March 6, soliciting my views on the problem of "Quantity versus Quality" of education at the University of Massachusetts. I am happy to present these to you and to have them published in the Collegian.

This problem is a very important one, especially during this period of rapid expansion of the University. Many policies are being made which will affect our future in a very important way. Aspects of this problem are under control of (a) the legislature (b) the administration and faculty, and (c) the students. The legislature imposes a very real restriction on what can be done in specifying the budget of the University and the student faculty ratio. A few years ago this ratio was increased and this has indirectly resulted in the necessity of larger classes and less free time of faculty. I think it very important that no further increase occurs and that every effort be made to have this ratio decreased. Besides decreasing the available time that faculty members have to spend with students, an increase in the student faculty ratio would cause good faculty members to leave and make it very difficult to recruit new ones.

Within the frame work of what we can do in Amherst, there is a certain amount of flexibility. There is an average teaching load of about 10 or 12 hours for our faculty due to the existing faculty-student ratio. Some members of the faculty may have a higher teaching load than this, while others have a lower one. It is the responsibility of our administrators to distribute the teaching load so as to enable the members of our faculty to utilize their time most effectively. Where large sections are effective, we should have them and perhaps enlarge them. It has been said that it is better to sit fifty feet away from an excellent teacher than right next to a poor one. In these large sections we should do all that we can to make teaching conditions ideal, such as providing comfortable lecture halls, aid-conditioning, good audio-visual aids and adequate assistance to the lecturers so as to permit him to present good demonstrations and not have to spend time with routine tasks such as distributing exam papers and taking attendance. Closed circuit TV might help with visibility of demonstrations. The teaching time saved by such large sections should be utilized in providing a corresponding increase in smaller ones, so that students have an opportunity to meet with qualified teachers in a smaller group and have the opportunity to ask questions and have informal discussions. These groups should be differentiated according to students' interests and abilities. Students having common interests could be grouped together and given material that would best serve their needs.

The issue of "publish or perish" has been a lively one here. I think we need good teachers and good research people. Those who want mainly to teach might have a heavier teaching load, while those who are active in research and graduate education could be allowed to spend more time at this. It is the responsibility of the University both to pursue and disseminate knowledge. However, those of us who are actively engaged in research should be urged to spend some time teaching elementary courses so as to share our inspiration.

Part of the burden falls on the students. It is discouraging to schedule office hours and have no one show up until the day before an hour exam! It is a real pleasure to meet with a student who has done his work and has a genuine interest in the subject and wants to learn more. We welcome the opportunity of helping a student go further in his subject in an informal way. Teaching is not restricted to the class room. Invitations to student gatherings are appreciated.

I think it is a healthy sign in the development of our University to have the students interested in improving the quality of our University. It would be an impossible task if they were not.

Sincerely yours,
Richard S. Stein

To the Editor:

Let me choose a single issue fom the array of issues in your editorial. Granted that a number of important considerations are raised by you, yet a single issue is, in my judgment, of gravest concern. The question is clearly, who is responsible for your education? As you stated in your editorial: "We have come to school to learn, to educate ourselves." Yet in another sentence you ask your crucial question, "Are we being educated?"

The responsibility for your education is yours; frequently our too human weakness desires to forsake this responsibility to let us live a comfortable life of submission and adjustment, yet it rests squarely upon us. It is immediately evident from your editorial that you wish to find someone to blame—and relinquish responsibility to—for the circumstances of your world: the University, the teachers, the administrators.

Because the administering agents of the school have insulted you with its regulations, standards, and requirements, you have come to believe and argue that they have a rightful, dominating relationship over you. You submit to the indignities of the conforming pressures of marks and non-liberating "liberal" values; you have entered under the sacred sanction of admissions and entrance rituals, and guided by—from the mouth of God—advisement; you are admonished to yield to our established ways by the implicit threat of an eager waiting list of conformers ready to take your place at the University.

In this setting you ask, "Are we headed in the right direction?" "What problems must we overcome . . . ?" Is it really a question of how large? If viewed as an administrative question, the decision will likely be based on available students, available space, available staff. The question of the educational welfare of the student ought not to be a question for the space-planners to consider. This is your, the student's, responsibility. How large a class will you tolerate? How impersonal will you permit this process to be?

It is not overlooked, of course, that the University as a community of individuals has important responsibility in allowing and encouraging individuality among the students and should be soundly condemned for any effort to control the experiences of students. Furthermore, the University is obligated to provide opportunity for educative experiences, which are personal regardless of the total number of students on a campus.

This is not a suggestion for concerted protest or rebellion or mass demonstration, but rather for the constant, individual insistence for educationally excellent experiences. While a student accepts and does an assignment—that and only that; he might sometime wisely have at least declined to do it—he is contributing nothing to academic excellence. But if the student's aggressive, searching, inquisitive insistence forces the teacher to modify the jejune academic rope-dance, then progress toward the excellence you ask for is being made. Multiply this student by many students and there you have the impetus to improve the condition.

If you expect educational conditions to be improved for you, you are asking the wrong question; when you ask how to improve conditions for your education, you are moving in the right direction; when you finally recognize that the compiete and total responsibility for your education rests fully upon you, important educational progress can be expected. A University can survive a sleepy administration, a fuddled faculty, but not a passive student body.

Sincerely,
Ralph Pippert

House Education Committee Democrats Support Kennedy's 24 Point Program

WASHINGTON (CPS)—House Education Committee Democrats have decided to stick by the Kennedy administration omnibus education package until what will probably be the bitter end.

During a closed-door caucus, 16 of the 19 Democrats decided to push for passage of the 24-point program instead of dividing it into separate pieces of legislation.

Their action sounded the death knell for the $5.3 billion program.

Parceling of Program Urged

Republicans and the three dissenting Democrats have urged parceling of the program since President Kennedy sent it to Congress. The impossibility of the program's passage have even been reflected by chairman Adam Clayton Powell of the House Labor and Education Committee.

Spelling sure defeat for the program this year as it did last year is the church-and-state dispute. Kennedy wants to give $1.5 billion to help elementary and secondary public schools—leaving the nation's private schools out in the cold.

Strong Congressional support expected to override the church-state issue in re-enacting federal aid to impacted school areas. This program, which expires in June, gives federal funds to more than 4,000 school districts in 50 states which educate the children of government employees. Since it was enacted, $1.1 billion in federal money has been used in constructing classrooms, and $1.7 billion went to local school system budgets.

As the administration's program for aid to higher education stands now, providing it can be separated from the over-all program, chances of passage are about 50-50. Backing the aid programs for colleges and universities to the hilt are the powerful American Council on Education, National Education Association and National Catholic Welfare Conference.

In almost all of his aid programs to colleges and universities, Kennedy specified both public and non-profit private institu-

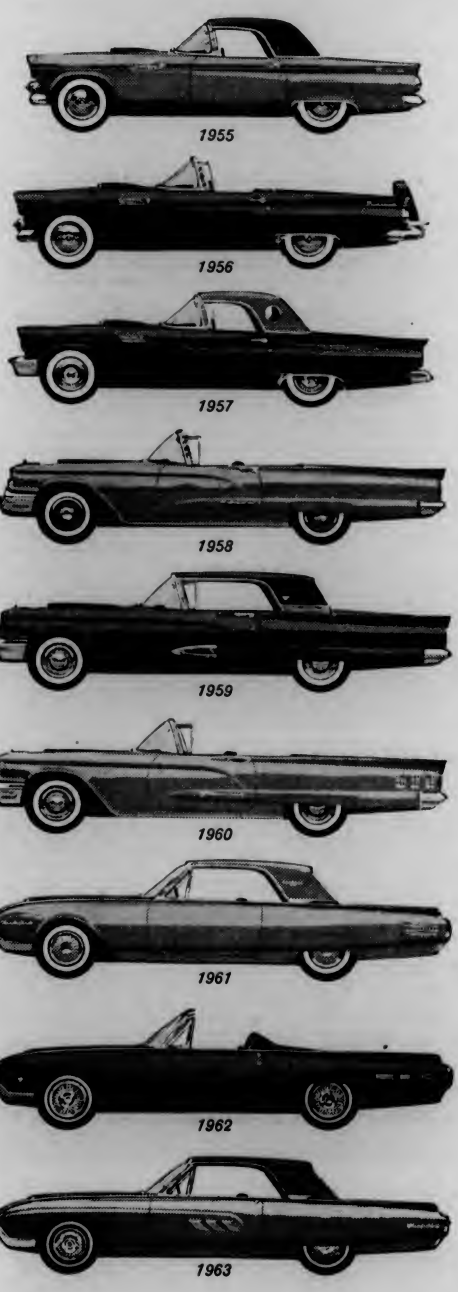
The story of a classic



In many ways the story of the Thunderbird is one of the most unusual in the automobile business. The whole idea of the car was born at one of the great European automobile shows. The then president of our company pointed to some of the small, lush sports cars that are always a center of attention at such shows and asked his companion, "Why can't we build something like these?"

The companion, who later became a vice president of the company, said, "It just so happens I have one on the boards. I'll show it to you when we get back to Detroit." Then as fast as he could discreetly get to a transatlantic telephone he called his assistant and told him, "Remember that car we've been talking about? Finish those sketches on it."

The Thunderbird became one of the few cars ever built that was produced essentially as the original sketches presented it. Most cars undergo countless changes in the design period. But there was a natural clarity and cleanness to the Thunderbird design that immediately captured all of us at Ford.

It was probably this clean, sharp look that won so many friends so fast when the car went into production. That first Thunderbird had its drawbacks. For example, it was too soft-sprung for true sports-car handling. But, the truth is, it was not designed in the European tradition of the fast performance car. Some people called it a sports car but we never did. We called it a "personal" car; a small, fairly luxurious car that was fun to look at and fun to drive. It had its own integrity: it was one alone.

We built the Thunderbird as a bellwether car for Ford. It was our intention to test new ideas before we put them into our Fords, Fairlanes and Falcons. The new Ford ride and Swing-Away steering wheel appeared first on the Thunderbird, for instance. However, we never foresaw the extraordinary influence Thunderbird would have on the whole automobile business here and abroad. Almost everybody offers the Thunderbird bucket seats these days. And the Thunderbird look is the most decisive styling of the '60s.

The Thunderbird is a classic, made so by a peculiar blend of magic ingredients of which we would love to know the secret. We're building cars right now we hope will become classics, but the truth is, we don't make classics, we make cars. People make the car a classic. And that's the story of the Thunderbird.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Congressional Bloc Tempers Support

While the higher education program may unite key Congressmen who remain at opposite poles on other parts of the program because of the church-state dispute, there is a Congressional bloc that tempers any overwhelming support.

Conservative Republicans and Democrats could defeat or at least present tough opposition to many of the higher education programs merely by objecting to their costs. It will be up to backers of the higher education programs to lay the effective groundwork, find a suitable compromise and fight a rough-and-tumble Congressional battle to offset the opposition.

Campus Chest Sets Largest Goal For '63

The Campus Chest Committee has announced that on Student Leaders Night in April a list of all donations of five dollars or more will be included with the program.

All proceeds go to the World University Service and the UMass Scholarship fund. The committee urges 100 per cent support from faculty and students alike for this worthiest of causes.

In front of the SU is posted a progress chart of all collections from dorms, fraternities, and sororities. This will be kept up from day to day, so watch for progress.

Checks should be made out to "Campus Chest 63," and sent to Box 301 in the R.S.O. office.

B.C.'s Ward Tops UPI All New-England Team

by DICK DEW
UPI Sports Writer

BOSTON UPI — A United Press International poll today showed only three seniors among the top ten players on the annual All-New England major college basketball squad.

One of the most promising crops of underclassmen in many years elbowed the seniors aside for berths on the UPI first and second teams when four juniors and three sophomores made the grade.

Boston College's Gerry Ward set the vote-getting pace in balloting by UPI newspaper sports editors, radio and television directors, and representatives of 30 colleges and universities in the six state region.

Ward, who won 47 of a possible 54 points, was joined on the first unit by two Providence College stars, big John Thompson and tiny Vin Ernst, Yankee Conference ace Toby Kimball of Connecticut, and Ivy Leaguer Rick Kaminsky of Yale.

John Wendelkin, sophomore standout on the Holy Cross squad, topped the second unit and was joined by three Yankee Conference players, Rodger Twitchell of Massachusetts, Ed Slomcenski of Connecticut, and Steve Chubin of Rhode Island, along with Brown University's Gene Barth of the Ivy League.

In addition to the two top teams, six players gained high honors on the honorable mention lst after just missing second team berths by between two and five points.

In long-standing fashion, only two of the top ten players are native New Englanders. They are Connecticut's Kimball, of Sudbury, Mass., and Slomcenski, of Naugatuck, Conn. As is usually the case, New Jersey contributed three of the top players, New York supplied a pair, and the rest were evenly spread.

The top team averages nearly six foot-four inches in height, ranging from backcourtman Ernst's five-foot, eight-inches up to teammate Thompson's six-foot, 10½ inches.

The taller second unit, with a more than six-foot, five-inch average, accounted for a cumulative scoring average of 83.8 points per game and captured 975 rebounds.

First Team

Gerry Ward, Boston College, Sr., 6-4, Bronx, N.Y.

Toby Kimball, Connecticut, Soph., 6-7 Sudbury, Mass.

John Thompson, Providence College, Jr. 6-10, Washington, D.C.

Rick Kaminsky, Yale, Jr., 6-1, Houston, Tex.

Second Team

Rodger Twitchell, Massachusetts, Jr., 6-6, Westfield, N.J.

Gene Barth, Brown, Sr., 6-7, Lake Forest, Ill.

Ed Slomcenski, Connecticut, Jr., 6-10, Naugatuck, Conn.

Redmen Skiers Wind Up Fourth; Hurlburt Second

The University of Massachusetts Ski Team finished fourth in the final race of the season at Okemo in Ludlow, Vermont and placed fourth for the season in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference.

The N.E.I.S.C. was formed in 1948 to provide intercollegiate skiing competition for schools located below New England's "snow belt". This is the University's second year in the conference. Eighteen New England colleges and universities participate with additional schools applying for membership each year. Because of it's large size, this year the conference was split into two divisions.

Redmen Captain Richard Hurlbut finished second in the conference with a total score for the season of 731.6 out of a possible 800. Rexford Morey of N.U. finished in first place for the third consecutive year with a score of 735.6 and Frank Bragg from Amherst College finished third with 718.7 points.

Donald Burgess, Tom Clark, Eric Schuhle and Norm Carpenter finished 12th, 13th, 20th, and 27th respectively out of over 145 skiers in the conference. Clark Bowlen, suffering from a broken leg, was unable to compete in the last meet.

Redmen ski team captain, Dick Hurlbut, who finished second in the rankings of the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference.

Coach William MacConnell has done a fine job in coaching the UMass ski team, and through his efforts good racers are being developed at the University.

Graduating seniors from this year's team are Richard Hurlbut, Eric Schuhle and Clark Bowlen.

UMass Riflers Win NRA Sectional Honors At West Point

A flash of maroon on a grey afternoon might well sum up the annual NRA Sectional Rifle Matches held at West Point, N.Y. last Saturday. Massachusetts sharpshooters prevented a kaydet clean sweep by placing third amid the Black, Grey, and Gold Teams of Army in a ten team match.

Firing an aggregate score of 1140 out of a possible 1200 the Redmen Riflers showed Carnegie Tech, Siena College, and Rutgers University that a New England team could dare invade the fortress on the Hudson and come within three points of Army's second place Grey Team and completely outshoulder the remainder of the visiting challengers.

The story was the same in the morning individual matches when West Point swept the first six places. Out of 35 contenders, UMass placed in the 9th, 10th, 13th, and 14th slots surrounded by the ever present display of marksmanship of the cadets and a lone Carnegie Tech rifleman who placed 7th.

Jim Carswell, a sophomore who joined the squad this year starred as high man for UMass not only in the morning individual matches with a 283 out of 300, but also in the afternoon team matches, by firing a 288 as anchor man of a determined Redmen group supported ably by Frank Fluet (286), Hal Butterworth (286) and Mark Nataupsky (280).

Team Coach, Captain Roy Fowler, expressed satisfaction with the showing made by the team especially considering the opposition which ranks among the top teams in the country. The results assure UMass being recognized nationally although the actual nation-wide scores will not be known for some time.

ECAC Squad

NEW YOK UPI—Nick Werkman of Seton Hall and Barry Kramer of New York University, ranked one-two in the nation in scoring, today headed the Eastern College Athletic Conference's 10-man All-East major college basketball team.

Bill Bradley of Princeton, Bill O'Connor of Canisius, Gerry Ward of Boston College, Fred Crawford of St. Bonaventure, Jim Barry of Georgetown, Jim Lynam of St. Joseph's, Vinnie Ernst of Providence and Wally Jones of Villanova complete the squad.

Werkman and O'Connor are the only repeaters from last year's team. Kramer, Bradley and Werkman were the leading nominees, in that order, for the selection, based on three points for a nomination.

County Circle Residents Join Forces In Housing Fight

The 'rec' room walls are in a constant state of disrepair due to leakage from floors above. Residents have contemplated the purchase of a boat.

The latest model of the Posturepedic line. Berkshire boys need three to sleep comfortably.

To expedite matters, Middlesex and Berkshire residents have set up a priority listing which calls for 1) painting of dorm inside and out, 2) new beds, 3) two new desks and one bureau per room, 4) accoustical tile in halls on ceiling, 5) plumbing and heating repairs, 6) roofing repairs to prevent and correct leaks 7) adequate locks on doors, 8) telephone and vending rooms enlarged in Middlesex, 9) furnished reception rooms in both dorms, 10) lounge and study room in Middlesex to service both dormitories, 11) a small kitchenette similar to that in Plymouth, 12) improved parking lots and 13) improvement of grounds.

One Middlesex resident has stated that every time he opens his desk, he is forced to reassemble it.

At a meeting last night of the Stockbridge Senate, it was agreed to join forces with the married dorms to solve the problem created by conditions at County Circle.

A married dorm spokesman, George Lake, said that "Since 1955, the married students have petitioned for repairs at County Circle as a whole... The dorm conditions there are the problem of both Stockbridge and married students.

"We should work together toward improvements, he said, because the needs and purposes are the same and the administration is apathetic to both our demands."

The chief worry about this ceiling is not over its obvious poor appearance, but whether it will last the semester.

Can Indian Democracy Survive?

by STEVEN CURTIS '64

What can we expect from India? Will democracy survive there, or does democracy exist there today? Could democracy survive, or even have been created in America in an environment similar to India's?

These were among questions discussed at last Wednesday evening's meeting of the Great Decisions discussion group. Russy A. Sumariwalla of Bombay, was guest member and speaker.

After his talk, several issues pertaining to democracy in India were brought up by the members of the group. Most of these issues centered around one point —that the term "democracy" should be defined before it is used in any conversation.

Many felt that democracy could thrive in India if cultured properly—one of the arguments being that the totalitarian government of China has not solved the same problems.

Once India's economy has a solid foundation and extreme poverty is eliminated, democracy will have proven it too has potential for survival, many agreed.

The problem of democracy in India is not a question of what the United States can or should do for India, but whether democracy can survive on its own feet the approaching future.

PETER, PAUL AND MARY

Plans Are Underway For Greek Festivities

One of the most popular events of Greek Week is the Sunday Concert, which has been a source of outstanding entertainment for several years. This year, Peter, Paul and Mary will appear on Sunday, April 7.

They have, as a leading critic has remarked, "found an honest way to sing folk music to our cosmopolitan society." Their recordings, such as "The Lemon Tree", "The Hammer Song", and "Five Hundred Miles", have gained immediate success.

They have appeared, on tour, at The Bitter End, the Gate of Horn, The Blue Angel, and The hungry "i". Other nightclub appearances, as well as concerts and several television appearances, have compiled their active personal tour.

Tickets are soon to go on sale. It is expected that this most popular of groups will provide a successful and entertaining Greek Week Concert.

Five finalists for Greek Week Queen will be selected by vote of campus Greeks on Monday, March 18. The polls in the S.U. will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and all Greeks will be eligible to vote.

The Queen will reign over the Greek Week festivities, April 1 through April 7.

Those nominated, their sororities, and the house nominating them are as follows: Gail Benvie, PBP, TC; Barbara Booth, SK, ASP; Mary Ann Carme, KKG, KKG; Judy Carr, IGV, ZN; Dottie Donavan, KKG, SAE; Barbara Ford, ACO, ACO; Dorothy Garneau, SSS, SSS;

Student Concert Charge Is Approved By Senate

by DICK WIMBERLY '66

Permission to charge admission to students for attending the Centennial Concert to be held May 12 was granted by the Student Senate Wednesday night to the Centennial Committee.

The Senate and the Class of '63 have each given $2000 to the Centennial Committee to sponsor the concert.

Opposing arguments stated at the meeting for and against charging admission were that students who actually attend the concert should pay more than those who don't and that once the student body has given money for an event, admission should not be charged to the individuals attending.

Chairman of Services Committee Paul Donahue reported nothing had been done by his committee about the married students' dorms situation because his committee members had been unable to contact Dean of Students William Field.

Curriculum Committee Chairman announced that those taking the committee's poll, conducted in the S.U. lobby, were 2 to 1 in favor of exempting students with a A rating in a course from taking the final. Also, the students polled were overwhelming in favor of reading periods of 3 to 5 days between the day classes end and the day finals begin. He also said he was going to appear befor the Faculty Senate Thursday (yesterday) to present his findings to that body.

The Debating Society budget of $1835.25 was passed with debate. Included in the budget was a taxi fare provision of $9 for College within an overall intransportation to Mt. Holyoke crease of $367.25 for transportation due to a ruling that no

Kaplan To Give Keynote Speech During International Weekend

A team of experts will discuss the future of the Common Market under the theme "A Country Called Europe" at the tenth annual International Weekend at UM this weekend.

George R. Kaplan, a 1947 graduate of the University and international relations officer for political affairs in the Office of Atlantic Political-Economic Affairs, Bureau of European Affairs, will give the keynote address. His address, "The United States and the New Europe," will be given tonight, at 8 p.m. in the SU Ballroom. The talk is open to the public without charge, and Mr. Kaplan will be available for questioning after the talk.

On Saturday, two panel discussions, "American Trade Interests in the Common Market," to be presented at 10 a.m., and "Political Implications of the Common Market," to be given at 1:30 p.m., will be held in the SU Senate Council Chambers.

Chest Drive Is Extended One Week

The Campus Chest Drive has been extended for another week and will run until March 23, the committee has announced.

Faculty and student support has been steady, and it is hoped that 100% cooperation will be seen in the last few days of this drive they said. Solicitations will be made in the dorms all this week and students are urged by Drive officials to give generously for the worthy causes that the drive subscribes to; the World University Service and the UMass Scholarship Fund.

The UMOC contest, sponsored by APO, for the benefit of Campus Chest, will continue throughout the next week, and a placque will be awarded to the winner, the Ugliest Man On Campus. This plaque is on display in a case in the SU lobby, where voting is taking place. The plaque will be presented to the sponsoring organization where it will remain permanently.

The faculty contestant is being changed every day.

Tonight, Friday March 15, girls' curfew has been extended to 12:30 and fraternity closing hours to midnight. For each minute after midnight that a girl stays out, she or her date must donate a penny to the Campus Chest Drive.

Faculty, RSO Organizations, fraternities and sororities are reminded by Drive officials that donations are still being accepted, and all checks are to be made out to "Campus Chest 63". All contributions of $5 or more will be listed in a special program on Student Leader's Night, April 30. Please help this Campus Chest Drive of 1963!

Panel Stresses Need For Women's Careers

by ELAINE CORSI '66 and JACKIE BEAUVAIS '66

The need for women to continue their education after marriage as well as the need of freedom of choice for women in selecting a career were stressed yesterday afternon by members of the panel on the Centennial Focus on Women.

The panel defined education as open-mindeness and a readines to understand other people's values.

Following the discussion, panelists attended an invitation dinner at the Dining Commons, and later appeared at coffee hour discussions in dormitories and sororities.

Some 500 campus women attended the panel discussion which featured Dr. Pauline Tompkins, consultant for the American Council on Education who gave the keynote talk for the program at 11 a.m. yesterday; Dr. Mary Bunting, President of Radcliffe College, and Dr. Gwendolyn Carter, Professor of Political Science at Smith.

Also speaking on the panel were UMass alumnae Mrs. Judith Wood Langland '37, an artist in her own right; Mrs. Mona Harrington Gagnon '57, a lawyer who is now completing her Ph.D. at Harvard; and Mrs. Anne Resigh Clough, a mathematician.

Dr. Victoria Schuck, author and member of the UMass Board of Trustees, served as moderator while Carol McDonough '63 of Mortar Board was student inquirer.

Leadership Program No. 2 Is Tomorrow

Dress is informal.

Instruction tomorrow will centeer around two principal topics: the developmeent of the individual in relation to others and the broad spectrum of extracurricular activities.

THIRD LEVEL OPENED

The University Librarian, Hugh Montgomery, announced yesterday that the third level reading room would be reopened immediately. The announcement was made following a conference with representatives of the Student Senate Services Committee, at which many aspects of this problem were aired.

The third level reading room is open between 7 p.m. and midnight, Sundays through Thursdays.

Quantitative vs. Qualitative

"In the minds of those concerned seeth the jewels of change." Are these the words of a Romantic, or do people actually have the power of changing attitudes and institutions. The students are able to exert a great deal of influence here at the University, more than they realize. A great responsibility lies with you, the Student Body. No matter how small the classes become, no matter how impersonal the faculty-student ratio there can be great students. Students interested in inquiry. Students who wish to learn. In considering "quantity or quality" at the University we should look to see growing developments. We should look to see what emphases are being placed on various developments of the University.

One cannot overlook and minimize the importance of UMass's swiftly growing graduate school. Its outward veneer is impressive. It gives one the feeling that the University is really growing, which raises serious questions.

Before raising these questions it should be noted that with the inclusion of the graduate schools, the faculty-student ratio, no matter how small isn't meaningful. Why? If there were one hundred students and ten faculty members the faculty-student ratio would be a 10:1 ratio. However if 20 of the 100 students are specialized graduate students this means that 5 of the 10 teachers might be devoted to the graduate students, leaving 5 teachers for the 80 unspecialized or undergraduate students. This makes the ratio 16:1 for undergraduate students.

What does the growth of our graduate school mean to us personnally. First of all it draws faculty from the undergrads. Hence classes will be larger. Perhaps in the sciences large classes are not as great a hindrance, but what about Government, History, Sociology, and other social studies where there is a great need for critical evaluation, both oral and written, of what the professor is saying, and even of ones own thoughts. This skill in evaluation comes only in a small class setting. Also, the large classes mean that teachers would give most of their time to their graduate courses since preparation for these would seem to be of a more extensive nature. Thus, if a teacher is involved in more graduate than undergraduate courses, in order to keep ahead of his graduate students most of his time would be taken up with the pursuit of graduate preparations.

The nature of this swiftly growing graduate program seems to indicate that a large interest lies with this program. Because of this the emphasis on the undergraduate program may be lessened by the very nature of the attitude of those administering the emphasis.

Perhaps the question should be asked concerning financial emphasis. For certainly the sources have to be drawn from all areas of the University budget. How much is being spent on the graduate program as opposed to the undergraduate program? There is no doubt that with an extended graduate program the name of the University of Massachusetts will grow, but at whose expense? Will it be at the expense of the undergraduates to whom the University is inherently responsible? Simply because our name grows, will this enhance the quality of the academic program? No! The quality of our academic program will be enhanced by the increased emphasis on the stimulation of fine students and interested faculty and administration; that is, faculty and administration who have the time to be interested.

With this influx of graduate students what role will they play in teaching? At this point let it be said that graduate students are needed and wanted at our University. In the 20th century specialization is a must. But certainly graduate students should not be made to take the place of our professors. Not only for the sake of the undergraduate education, but for the sake of the graduate students themselves.

When policy is decided (as it must be) on matters relating to the "quantity vs. quality" issue, the question of what role the graduate school should play in respect to that of the undergraduate schools shuld be considered as a central issue.

UPI

To the Editor:

The Collegian's latest toy provides the campus with headlines and news which is a day or two late. Don't you agree that this is a rather expensive toy?

B.S.L.

To the Editor:

After reading the past three issues of the Collegian I have decided that the addition of the UPI service has been a great asset to the paper. I enjoy reading the feature material, and in particular, the sports coverage has been excellent.

One suggestion I would offer is that a regular column be instituted concerning financial news. Many economics majors such as myself would find this a very valuable asset.

F.S. '64

Mortar Board Comments

Editor's note: The opinions expressed in this column are those of the Mortar Board, and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Collegian.

In the light of the recent vandalism which has occurred at the library and Mr. Montgomery's subsequent action, Mortar Board feels that it is high time some concrete facts on the library situation were presented.

It seems incredible that at a time in which the value of education is becoming increasingly important, destruction and inconsideracy in our library, the main source of this education, is also on the increase. Not only have the facilities been damaged, but also books have been stolen, articles ripped from magazines, quiet rules ignored, to mention only a few.

We are all guilty of these inconsideracies to some degree; yet, next to the Commons, the library is our main target of criticism. Granted some of this criticism is warranted, but let's look at both sides of the picture. How many times have you complained about the quantity and quality of books in the library? How many times have you heard that there are thousands of books in cartons in the depths of Goodell? How many times have you said nothing is being done about this situation? But are you aware of the fact that in the next ten years the total number of volumes is to be raised to 2 million, an increase of 1,736,000 over the present figure. Or that the library budget for next year is $350,000 which will hopefully be increased to $500,000 in 1965? Also, within the next 3 years a group of subject specialists will be hired to evaluate library collections to determine insufficiencies and suggest improvements in their areas. As of this fall three new cataloguers have been hired to alleviate the backlog of books.

If these facts fail to impress you, you might remember the problem inherent in library work. In the first place it takes highly trained personnel to serve us adequately in a library of such size, and the supply of such qualified people is limited. Secondly, the day to day maintainence of a library is an extensive operation, and student negligence doesn't make this task any easier.

We aren't advocating that you stop criticizing, but that you channel your criticism in a more positive direction. Students complained that the library wasn't open long enough. They took their criticism to the right people, and now we have 104 hours of library service per week; the same thing was true with the smoking room. If you have gripes and are really interested in the library and in your own welfare, then take your complaints to the right people. Mr. Montgomery, Provost Woodside and President Lederle are willing to speak to any concerned students.

Provost Woodside has been corresponding all year with members of the Legislature, keeping them informed as to the needs of our library. And as the Legislature is the source of library funds, letters to your own Congressman might be effective.

The individual departments are also channels for action. Approximately 70% of the requests and suggestions for books and periodicals come from the departments. Each department is allotted a certain portion of the library's budget for their use. If you feel we are lacking a specific book or periodical go to your advisor or department head with the suggestion.

Once again, we recognize that there are criticisms to be made. However, the privilege to criticize carries with it certain responsibilities: one, of behaving in a manner which warrents improvements and two, of using your criticism constructively to bring these improvements about.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

QUALITATIVE vs. QUANTITATIVE

If public institutions do not have to match educational systems with private colleges, if the public system provides a rather unique type of education which can stand on its own merits and need not be rated as being above or below that of private institutions; why does the question have to be asked which ponders whether a publicly supported institution, which enrolls many students, can match the quality of education offered to students at a smaller, private college? Surely this is ascribing quality to privately supported education, and with equal certainty it is ascribing quantity to publicly supported education. The expansion program has prompted the great amount of thought given to this question- Qualitative or Quantitative--and it has been decided that public education does not have to match private education.

If an analysis of the University of Massachusetts awakens the realization that the ultimate goal of its educational system is the embodiment of the best features of both the public and private systems, then how can it be construed as a "philosophical impasse" when a request is made for the incorporation into the public system of several of those best features of the private educational system? If the eventual goal of the University's educational system is this dual embodiment, why is it stated, "If this University ever adopts such a program . . . then UMass might be taking a giant step forward in combining the best of public and private education." Certainly that "If", if anything other than evasion is meant, should be written "When".

And when is this giant step to be taken? Is it, or is it not, the eventual goal of the University's educational system? And if it is, when is eventually?

If the point is reached where the solutions to the problems facing contemporary education may be obtained only by leaving the public sector to enter the privately supported sector of education, hasn't the University of Massachusetts reached that eventual point? If that point has been reached, can it be termed rightly as "philosophical impasse" when the University cannot adjust with sufficient rapidity to these new conditions? It does not seem that the proposals made question the philosophy of public education—nor do any of the answers in the ever-so-short interview in Monday's Collegian —if we are to believe that this philosophy, at this University, will eventually embrace these proposals. If, in truth, it will, why can't the University react fast enough to a set of proposals that are not peculiar to one man? If this is the eventual goal, why can't a start be made towards eventuality now? And if a man—has proposed changes in the University's educational system with the full realization that these changes cannot be implemented immediately, how can the University's saying that these changes cannot be implemented immediately together constitute a "philosophical impasse"? If no one doubts the verity of the motives implied in the proposed changes—and no one does—then, to justify this "philosophical impasse", is it necessary to doubt the University's motives?

The motives, as stated, of the University of Massachusetts are to combine the best features of that educational system it does not have to match (a contradiction in terms), in order to provide an education for every citizen of the Commonwealth, who desires an education, without a sacrifice in quality. In other words, the University of Massachusetts has to grow to Michigan State's size before it can conduct classes the size of those at Amherst? If quantity's uniqueness precludes the correctness of ranking it with quality, isn't it slight absurd to glibly assert that, eventually, quality will become the end result of quantity? Eli Whitney's interchangeable parts and Henry Ford's production-line included, intellects are not interchangeable and identicalness is not education.

If the University has too few faculty members to realize smaller clases now, where will it find these teachers when the current enrollment is doubled? Isn't it easier to construct a large wall from small bricks than it is to construct it of one piece, and then hack it up into small bricks? Or is it the uniqueness of public educational systems that precludes matching with private systems no more than another way of saying that it's easier to be big than it is to be good?

Issue should be, shall be, is being, taken with the glib generalities used as answers to the quality-quantity question now coming to a head. It is unfortunate that these flannel-mouthed cliches were ever dignified by being set in print. It is equally unfortunate that they were printed here. The basic honesty of an editorialist led him to seek authoritative answers to the quality-quantity question, his basic loyalty to Alma Mater led him to unquestioningly accept the answers given him. He wrote what he was told. Let not issue be taken with honesty, loyalty, and accuracy. But let issue be taken.

Wet Honey '62

Qualitative vs. Quantitative

To the Editor:

In considering the problem of maintaining a high quality of instruction in a growing state institution, it should be useful to ask ourselves if the much larger size of the state universities of Michigan, Wisconsin, and California has resulted in any noticeable lowering of instructional standards in them. It is my impression that these are all considered among the great universities of the world in quality as well as in size.

What has been possible for them can hardly be impossible for us.

In considering the influence of size upon the individualizing of instruction, the student- faculty ratio is surely more important than the total number of students. Not only most state universities but even many small private colleges have more students for each faculty member than we do and therefore less opportunity for individual association of student and professor.

If we have some very large lecture courses, we also have many quite small classes, not only in the colloquia, but also in the regular offerings.

As for the possibility of maintaining fine instruction while stressing research, we not only have the example of the state institutions already mentioned but of the best private ones as well. If research has not ruined instruction in Harvard and Yale, why must it do so here?

SORORITY NEWS

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Alpha Chi is buzzing with excitement. We are still talking about our wonderful Pledge Formal, which was held a few weeks ago at the Hotel Northampton. Many thanks and compliments go to our Social Chairman, Judy Hancock, who did a beautiful job. The overall effect of the many red carnations, the band of Tony Ravosa, an excellent dinner, and a festive atmosphere made it a night to be long remembered by the Delta Mu's. Toward the middle of the evening, we were proud to present our pledges: 1964—Judith Praskiewicz and Gisela Wagner; 1965—Linda Bodwell, Christina Cady, Carol Chapman, Susan Fall, Barbara Godek, Mae-Ellen Hayes, Maureen Lavalette, Joan Mendrek, Jean Pezzoli, Carol Rosch, Carolyn Sitkowski, Sally Strout, Marjorie Ward, Mary Jane White and Judith Winn; 1966—Carol Atwood, Anita Beaupre, Barbara Collins, Diane DelGenio Barbara Esielionis, Barbara Ford, Marilyn Jordan, Teresa Joseph, Joyce Lodico, Sharon Merrill, Arlene Nataupsky, Diane Oaks, Lorraine Osborn, Joan Panttila, Joanne Piela, Maureen Ricketts, Natalie Roulston, Sandra Ruscitti and Patricia Sattler.

Congratulations are in order to Mary Jane White, who was recently selected as a cheerleader; Peggy Maloney, for the fine job she did in leading Alpha Chi to a third place in the sing; and also to Betty Peck, who effectively presented our declamation.

March 1st was a special day at Alpha Chi. It was Hera Day, the day devoted to working on our National Altruistic Project. That Friday night was spent in making stuffed animals for children with cerebral palsy. The time passed quickly, and the result was a box full of "original" creations.

Turning to our social calendar, we would like to warmly thank the brothers of SAE for our recent exchange. We'll all remember the night that red carnations floated around the SAE house. We would also like to thank the brothers of PMD, for the exchange with the "Johnny Guitar" effect—as the sounds of folk music rang through the Alpha Chi house.

The new officers of Alpha Chi are: President, Eileen Reilly; first vice president, Leah Shepardson; second vice president, Gerri Walukevich; teasurer, Peggy McDonald; recording secretary, Lorraine Rees; corresponding secretary, Chris Cady; chaplain, Judy Praskiewicz; warden, Dee Ferrigno; historian, Maureen Lavalette; publicity and Lyre editor, Margie Ward; rush chairman, Ann Williams; scholarship chairman, Connie Jandris; activities chairman, Mary Jane White; social chairman, Barb Gregory; and house manager, Sylvia Oakes.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

The Lambda Phi's are still excited about their wonderful pledge formal weekend. The mix Friday night, pledge formal Saturday night at the Salem Cross Inn and a buffet Sunday kept all the sisters very busy. A great big thank you to our social chairman, Gretchen Cobb, for a memorable weekend.

Congratulations are in order for Phyllis Trabach, who was recently elected as Panhellenic co-rush chairman. Also to Patti Liberman for the amusing declamation that won Lambda Phi third place in the Inter-sorority Sing.

Wednesday evening the new officers of Lambda Phi were installed. We all wish them success in their positions.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

During the weekend of its initiation and installation, the members of Sigma Sigma Sigma elected the following slate of officers for the coming year:

President, Dottie Stackloso: vice president, Chris Ranta; treasurer, Judy Hripak; corresponding secretary, Ellie Ogilvie; keeper of the grades, Dana Paul; recording secretary, Donna Wilber; senior Panhellenic, Miriam Metinho; junior Panhellenic, Barb Smith; Founders' day, Libba Johnson; harmony hour, Betty Bourque; membership, Rose Arnone; music, Joan Janick; public relations, Elaine Klinker; Robbie Page memorial, Diane Solomon; scrapbook, Chris Olsen; sentinel, Carolyn Hulton; The Triangle correspondent, Maryann McAdams; directory, Mary Jane Briggs.

The sisters wish to thank the brothers of TKE for their exchange at which they were introduced to TKE's new housemother.

Presently the chapter is organizing itself so that it can actively participate in the Greek life on campus. At the first meeting, plans were made for the Pledge Formal which will take place in April at the Wayside Inn and for the Founders' day celebration. The new sisters are very pleased to announce that Sigma Sigma Sigma's National president, Mrs. Curtis C. Dixon, will revisit the Gamma Iota chapter early that month.

Pan-Hel Elects Officers; Plans for Greek Week

The Panhellenic Council would like to announce the officers for the academic year 1963-1964. They are as follows:

President, Marie Makinen; vice president, Barbara Farrell; secretary, Reggie Harrison; treasurer, Eileen Reilly; publicity chairman, Carolyn Howarth; co-rush chairmen, Judith Zenis, Phyllis Trabach. The new officers will be installed at a banquet to be held April 9.

The Council will be operating under a training program until then during which the new officers and new members will become acquainted with the procedures and aims of Panhellenic.

Congratulations are extended to the winners of the Panhellenic Sing and Declamation.

A thank you from the Council is extended to all who attended and to each sorority for their sincere interest in such a competition.

Plans are under way for Greek Week events ranging from the banquet to the ball with the annual mass exchange somewhere in the middle.

March 18 will see an all sorority workshop to define goals and evaluate this past academic years' activities as they pertain to the campus.

FRATERNITY NEWS

Zeta Nu, as has been proven in the past, has been bold in trying out new ideas. Recently, the humdrum of the usual Friday or Saturday night party has been alleviated by the showing of full length movies. What started out first as just an idea finally emerged a few weeks ago with the showing of "It Started in Naples."

Due to the favorable opinion and overwhelming attendance we decided to continue the policy. This past weekend, Alfred Hitchcock's thriller "Vertigo" was shown along with short subjects of the Winter Olympics held in Squaw Valley. Zeta Nu is planning to follow the trends of the warmer season by moving our theater to an outdoor setting.

We are very proud to have recently initiated as brothers of Zeta Nu the following: Jim Shaughnessy, '66; Bob Campbell, '66; Pete Clegg, '65; Dick Benjamin, '65; Frank Shea, '66; Ed Perreault, '66; Deckie Wood, '66; Dave Anderson, '64; Tony Donovan, '66; Mike Bennert, '66, and John MacLean, '66.

Zeta Nu would also like to welcome its four new pledges: Bob Edmonston, '66; Dave Rohrs, '66; Bob Scott, '66, and Gary St. Martin, '66.

Co-Eds Will Milk Cows In Annual Livestock Show

Saturday, March 16th, co-eds from the University of Massachusetts' campus will compete in the annual Co-ed Milking Contest. This contest is a special feature of the Little International Livestock Show that is held yearly at Grinnell Arena on the University of Massachusetts campus. Girls' dorms and sororities enter participants who compete against one another.

Each girl must run the length of Grinnell Arena, operate the proper spigot on one of the dairy cows that are "standing by" for the occasion, fill a test tube with milk and run back the length of the Arena to the starting point.

The contest winner is awarded an imported China jug and sugar bowl donated by the American Guernsey Cattle club. Ribbons are presented to the top four girls. Since space is limited in the Arena, the contestants are run in heats against time.

The fact that the contest rules prohibit the participation of any co-ed who has ever milked a cow adds interest to the event. The cooperation or lack of cooperation of the cows and the manner in which their spigots are operated adds zest to the event.

The Sounding-Board: Can You Reach Individuals in a Large University?

by RAISSA LANDOR '65

Following is the first in a series of columns which will reflect segments of campus opinion on pertinent questions concerning campus and other issues. The Collegian would appreciate receiving comments from its readers on how the column is received by them.

QUESTION: HOW WOULD IT BE POSSIBLE TO REACH THE INDIVIDUAL IN A LARGE UNIVERSITY?

(1) Francis Castine '64, English: "There should be smaller classes, more time and opportunities for meeting with professors. There should be more distinguished visiting professors in residence, like Robin Skelton, more time for study on your own with more work being required in majors and less in other fields. There should be higher pay for professors, so better qualified teachers will be attracted."

(2) Frank Higginbotham '63, Math: "A large university is forced to sacrifice individuality for proficiency. Therefore, the responsibility is on the student, who must reach out if he wants to distinguish himself. Mass lectures should be ended, as they make even interested students lose interest. But most of all, the administration should be more concerned with bringing students to the university who are interested in getting an education for itself, not just as a means to an end."

(3) Linda Muldoon, '64, English: "The whole university system should be revamped with more seminars, voluntary honors colloquia, more emphasis on writing, less on textbooks, more student-professor relationships, more chances for independent thought in class. Time should be made for independent projects during the school year as at Smith, where six weeks are set aside for reading during the year."

(4) Virginia Meyers '65, Nursing: "The main problem is that individuals cannot personalize (relate to themselves) things they learn. There should be more teacher-pupil relations, and more concern with presenting material in a meaningful way. However, there will always be apathy as individuals vary in sensitivity and all cannot relate to intellectual stimuli in the same way that 'intellectuals' might. But this is not necessarily bad, as it makes things varied."

(5) Grace Roberts, '64, Education: "Better qualified teachers can be acquired with more money. There should be less emphasis on theory and more on active, personal involvement in subjects. (Seeing Macbeth instead of just reading it, more field trips, etc.)"

(6) J Springer, Congregational chaplain: "Students should be rudely shocked out of their apathy, disturbed enough to make them want to become interested in more than just the social. There should be a move from the impersonal propositional stage to an existential personal stage. An individual must find out what is valuable to him, and then go after it. Students here are inclined to think this is a second class university, which excuses them from doing anything—they think. This needs to be changed. The creative minority is definitely growing. This is due partly to world events, which helps to shake people out of their apathy."

(7) Jonathan Tuttle, Graduate Student, Education: "A student who seeks intellectual stimuli can find it. It is not fair for the college professor entirely to assume the problem of an individual's motivation. In the system we now have one can only get a liberal education by reaching out for it himself. The University offers the individual who desires it a chance to achieve an education."

APO Critique Committee Prepares Questionnaire

by JOE KIELEC '64

Two weeks ago an article appeared in the Collegian outlining the purpose of the Critique committee which is temporarily being sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega. The goals of this committee are to help students select courses and to aid in the overall improvement of instruction here at the University. Since its organization three weeks ago, those on the committee have been interviewing University officials and faculty members in an attempt to determine the general feeling toward such an endeavor.

The general opinion expressed by the faculty and administration personnel consulted was favorable. Based upon these opinions, the committee is ready to start working. With a target date at the end of this semester for the distribution of questionnaires, much help will be needed to work on the committee and meet the scheduled deadline. Among things to be done before the end of May are a surveying of other colleges which are currently using critiques or evaluation forms to gain ideas and learn methods used. Also, the questionnaires must be made out. This involves deciding which questions to ask and what areas will be covered. Distribution and collection systems must be set up and many other small but important things must be done.

Interested students are invited to attend regular meeting on Wednesdays at 6:30, or to contribute ideas by writing to the Critique Committee, care of A.P.O., RSO, Box 315.

School of Education Sponsors Teacher Exchange Program

The UMass School of Education will again sponsor a one semester (junior year) exchange program with the Florida State University, the University of New Mexico, and possibly the University of South Florida and Purdue University.

If students are interested in participating in the exchange, they are invited to attend a general information meeting to be held at 4:00 p.m. Wednesday, March 20, at the Education Building Auditorium.

At that time students from New Mexico and Florida State will discuss their schools and their home states and will be available to answer all questions.

Students will also have an opportunity to talk with UMass girls who have attended Florida State and the University of New Mexico. Dr. Arthur D. Barfield will be present to answer technical questions. There will be opportunity at that time to make a formal application.

Twitchell Unanimous YanCon Selection

Rodger Twitchell of the University of Massachusetts and Steve Chubin of the University of Rhode Island were unanimous choices for the annual Yankee Conference basketball first team. The selection was made by a vote of the coaches.

For Twitchell, a 6-6 junior from Westfield, N.J., and the leading scorer in the conference, it marked the second time he has been maned to the conference first team. Chubin, a sophomore from Forest Hills, N.Y., paced the Rams in scoring with 510 points during the season.

Three members from the championship University of Connecticut Huskies round out the first team selections. They are Ed Slomcenski, 6-10, junior from Naugatuck, Conn., Gerry Manning, 6-6 senior from Clifton, N.J., and Toby Kimball, 6-7 sophomore from Sudbury, Mass.

The second team is made up of Jim Rich of New Hampshire, Bob Logan and Frank Nightingale of Rhode Island, Dale Comey of Connecticut and Clarence Hill of Massachusetts.

Mullaney, Dukeshire Choices For N.E. Coach Of The Year

BOSTON UPI—Joe Mullaney, who has directed his Providence College teams to five straight NIT berths and one national crown, and Dick Dukeshire of Northeastern today were named New England college basketball coaches of the year in a United Press International poll.

Mullaney, a Holy Cross teammate of Bob Cousy during his playing days, won top honors in the major college basketball class while Dukeshire, whose team last week won its second straight northeastern small college crown, toppd his own division. The selections in balloting by UPI newspaper sports editors, radio and television sports directors, and representatives of 30 New England colleges and universities were not without stiff competition.

Another member of the famed Cousy-Mullaney Holy Cross clubs, Frank Oftring, the present Crusader coach, was Mullaney's chief challenger in the major college race, closely followed by Connecticut's George Wigton.

Dukeshire won the small college honor despite considerable support for Springfield College coach Ed Steitz whose team pushed Northeastern into overtime in this year's NCAA regional tourney just last weekend.

Mullaney captured the major college coaching honor when his Friars, playing as tough a schedule as any New England team, won 21 games and lost only four. That record, which won the team another NIT bid, hiked Mullaney's Providence College coaching record over an eight season span to an amazing 175 victories and 55 defeats, a 75 per cent victory pace.

Oftring piloted his 1962-63 Crusaders to a 16-9 record that is unimpressive unless you consider that just about everything happened to Holy Cross except a roof collapse. Injuries, graduation of Jack The Shot Foley, injuries, suspensions, inexperienced players, and still more injuries plagued the rebuilding Crusaders.

Dukeshire's Northeastern team posted a 21-5 overall mark with a perfect 18 straight record against college division teams as determined by the NCAA rankings. It was virtually the same Dukeshire quintent which won the regional college division title at Rochester, N.Y. last season.

Wigton Big Surprise

Wigton's job in piloting Connecticut to the Yankee Conference crown this season was regarded as the most startling of the region's coaching accomplishments.

A one-time substitute at Ohio State and with just one season of freshman coaching behind him, Wigton took over the UConn reins after the mid-season death of coach Hugh Greer. The Nutmeggers, 7-3 at the time, finished the season going away with a 17-5 pace and with three underclassmen regularly in the starting lineup.

Steitz gained recognition for never having a losing season in seven outings at Springfield. The latest 20-6 record is the Maroons, Worcester, and winning the Springfield Invitational Tournament title.

Northeastern Edged By Wittenburg

Wittenberg, the nation's top small college basketball team, got a scare Wednesday night before downing 17th ranked Northeastern University, 48-47.

Wittenberg ran its season record to 25-1 in nipping the Beantown boys. The teams see-sawed razor thin margins until Wittenberg scored eight straight to go ahead, 48-36. Northeastern roared back with 11 straight, but time ran out on them.

Al Thrasher of Wittenberg led all scorers with 17 points while Tom Martin's 15 points were high for the Huskies.

Ward And O'Brien Break Five UMass Track Records

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity indoor track team will close out its 1963 season a week from tomorrow with the Connecticut Relays at Storrs.

Regardless of how UMass fares in the March 23rd meet, this season will be remembered as the best ever for the Redmen. Although the record in dual meet competition was only 2-3, no less than eight varsity and Cage records were broken.

Fred Lewis set a new broad jump standard of 22'11.5", and Bob Brouillet established a new mark with his 9:14, two mile run. Dave Sadowsky set new Cage record in the pole vault with a leap of 12'6".

Captains of teams are generally elected for both their athletic and leadership abilities. This year's Redmen co-captains, Ken O'Brien and Dick Ward filled their jobs perfectly. Both were exceptional leaders, and between the two of them they accounted for no less than five of the new varsity records.

"Obie" ran a 1:14.6 600, a 1:56 800, and a 2:15 1,000 during the season, to establish new records in each of these events. His performances tagged O'Brien as the greatest middle-distance runner in UMass history.

Just as "Obie" has carved a place for himself in UMass running history, Dick Ward has undoubtedly become the best weight man the Redmen squad has ever produced. Dick set new standards in both the shotput, 52'4.5", and in the thirty-five pound weight, 60'9.5". In the weight event, Dick has been consistently ranked in the top five in the country, and became the first Redman to win a title in the IC4A's.

With the indoor track team as a nucleus the outdoor track squad will be a definite threat for the Yankee Conference Championship this Spring.

Volunteers Needed For Belchertown Program

Students looking for a chance to help others and at the same time help themselves to a better understanding of their fellow man will find just such an opportunity in the volunteer program at the Belchertown State School for the Mentally Retarded.

The student volunteers work with other volunteers or recreational leaders at the school to provide many activities for the patients. Boys may take part in games with the patients, such as basketball or pool, or they may take patients for walks or write letters for them.

Girls can help with walks, softball games, dancing, letter writing, or teaching classes in arts and crafts or ettiquette.

One of the most important of the activities is conversation, for the patients are interested in hearing about the lives of others as well as discussing their own.

Those interested in visiting Belchertown should sign up on a list in the lobby of the SU across from the telephones, and those who want to learn more about the program are urged to attend an orientation meeting at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, March 19 in the Middlesex Room of the SU.

Faculty Resident Speaks

In an interview with a Collegian reporter yesterday Mr. Ralph G. Somes, Jr., Faculty Resident of Berkshire (Stockbridge) Dormitory, stated that "students claim they would like better living conditions but their actions speak louder than their words," he said.

He was referring, he said, to the squalid conditions on the east end of the Berkshire Dorm outside grounds, where milk cartons and other trash has been thrown into the snow.

He said that if students wanted better conditions in their dorms, they should do something about the grounds outside the dorms.

Four Woodrow Wilson Scholarships Awarded

Four UMass seniors have been awarded first-year Woodrow Wilson Fellowships for graduate study at universities of their choice.

Karen E. Canfield of Pittsfield, Jerry S. Kelly of Hyannis, Ruth B. Levine of Dorchester and Howard L. Shainheit of Springfield are the award-winning scholars.

The fellowships cover tuition and fees for the first year of graduate school, plus a $1500 stipend and dependency allowances.

This year's winners were selected by college professors and deans from almost 10,000 candidates in 907 American and Canadian colleges and universities. Fellowships were awarded to 1,475 students, while 1,154 more were accorded honorable mention.

Miss Canfield was graduated from Pittsfield High School in 7959. A history major, she is an honor student and has been a leader in student activities and honor societies.

Mr. Kelly, who is majoring in philosophy, graduated from Dennis-Yarmouth Regional High School in 1959. A member of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society, he intends to do graduate work in mathematical biology.

Miss Levine is a 1959 graduate of Girls' Latin High School. She is a French major, an honor student, and a member of Phi Kappa Phi. She belongs to the French, Russian and International Clubs at the University.

Mr. Shainheit is an English major currently doing an honors project on the works of Lawrence Durrell. A 1955 graduate of Classical High School in Springfield, he is a member of Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Kappa Phi.

Woodrow Wilson fellowship awards are given in hopes of stimulating outstanding students to enter college teaching.

Sir Hugh Taylor, president of the national foundation, said, "All these winners were chosen as 'good bets' for college teaching. We hope they will follow that career, yet we do not hold them to such a firm commitment. We ask only that they give college teaching serious consideration."

The fellowship program is made possible by grants from the Ford Foundation, which since 1957 has supported the expanded award program.

Three U of M students who received honorable mentioned were Steven F. Alger, a sociology major from Holliston; Edward D. Houde, zoology major from Attleboro; and Archie Strong, mathematics major from Springfield.

SCOPE Will Hold Annual High School Day April 16

by NEAL ANDELMAN '63

SCOPE (Student Committee on Promising Entrants) will hold its annual High School Day on April 16.

An Adelphia spokesman stated that the goal of the program is to acquaint and attract more outstanding students to UMass, and also to acquaint guidance counselors with UMass.

Five Junior honor students and one guidance counselor from fifty different High Schools will participate in this year's program. The morning program includes a welcoming message from Dean of Students William Field and a general panel discussion. After the general meeting, the 30 participants will divide into smaller groups to continue their discussions.

After luncheon Provost Gilbert Woodside will deliver a message to the group. After the Provost's speech the participants will again divide into several groups. Counselors will be given a tour of the registrar's office and will be informed of admissions procedures. Students will be given tours of the departments in which they are interested.

Adelphia (Senior Men's Honor Society) is directing the program with the assistance of Mortar Board and several members of the faculty and administration, including: Asst. Provost Venmen, (Chairman of SCOPE); Dean Field; Secretary of the University, John Ryan; Dean of Men Robert Hopkins; Dean of Women Helen Curtis; all of the academic deans; Dean of the Graduate School Edward C. Moore; Provost Woodside and President Lederle.

Newman Center Opening Planned For March 30

by DIANA D'INDIA '65

The newly-erected Newman Center will open Sunday, March 30, it has been announced. The building will be open to all UMass students.

Father David J. Power, Catholic chaplain at UMass, has been delegated by Bishop Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of Springfield, to consecrate the altars at 6:30 a.m. Monday, April 1. The first Mass in the Center chapel will immedately follow the consecration of the altars.

In the celebration of this Mass Father Power will be assisted by Father J. Joseph Quigley, assistant chaplain, and Father James McKenna, ecclesiastical secretary to Bishop Weldon. A second such Mass will be celebrated at noon the same day.

Weekday Masses from then on will be at 7 a.m. and noon. Sunday Masses will begin in the Center April 7. The Sunday Mass schedule is to be announced at a later date.

Formal dedication ceremonies will be held later on in the month.

The Center chapel has a seating capacity of 500. There are two adjoining classrooms which can be opened if additional space is needed. On the left wall of the chapel are six stained-glass windows, each depicting a noted Catholic scholar—St. Catherine, St. Theresa of Anta, St. Augustine, St. Pius X, St. Thomas Aquinas, and John Henry Cardinal Newman.

The design of the chapel, and of the rest of the building, is simple. The main altar is a solid block of North Chelmsford granite, and the Way of the Cross is illustrated by plain wooden crosses.

Keeping with the simplicity of design in the Center is a library, a lounge, two classrooms, a snack bar, and a recreation room and ballroom.

In the library, Catholic literature, including novels, biographies, and pamphlets will be available. Current periodicals, secular and religious, will be available in the lounge.

Doctrine classes, discussion groups, and seminars will be held in the classrooms. The classrooms contain chairs equipped with kneelers for convenience when the classrooms are used to supplement the seating capacity of the chapel.

Refreshments, including sandwiches, drinks, and pastries, will be available in the snack bar.

The Newman Club has extended an invitation to all members of the UMass community to visit the Center on March 30, and at any time in the future.

Special Events Committee To Sponsor Noted Consul

Dr. Schmidt-Schlegel, the German consul in Boston, will speak March 20 at 4 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the S.U. under the auspices of the S.U. Special Events Committee.

Born in 1916 in Bochum, Westphalia, where he attended high school, he studied law, economics, and languages at many European universities, including the ones in Heidelberg, Geneva, Paris, and Munich. He received his LL.D. in Heidelberg.

Drafted into World War II, he served as liaison officer with the French civil administration. The Soviet Army took him as prisoner of war in January, 1945, but released him at the end of the year.

He had a law practice from 1946 to 1951. During this period he acted as Counsel for the Defense at the French Military Tribunals in Tuebingen. He contributed to the Review "Europa-Archiv", on European political and economic affairs. He was also president of the Franco-German Student Association of Tuebingen University.

Fraternities Plan Greek Olympics

Interfraternity athletics competitions will be held Saturday, April 6 as part of the Greek Week celebrations, it has been announced.

The Greek Olympics will be held Saturday morning on the athletic field. This is an event new this year and will consist of various track and field events.

Four teams, each team consisting of four fraternities, will vie for first place honors, Greek Week officials said.

There will be nine events, including a decathalon, they said. Tryouts are now being held for the individual events.

As in previous years, spectators may line Ellis Drive to watch the colorful pageantry and the races.

The evening will include speakers from the faculty and administration, as well as leading citizens of the state.

Greek ideals and values will be discussed, as will facets of the University which are pertinent to the student body, officials said.

They said valuable suggestions pertaining to Greek organizations and the entire University community have resulted from past discussions and the inclusion of this aspect in the annual Greek Banquet is wholeheartedly supported by all Greeks.

Miami (UPI)—William K. Martin, 85, who followed Teddy Rosevelt up San Juan Hill in 1898, commenting about Cuba on arriving with other refugees:

Quantitative vs. Qualitative

The "qualitative vs. quantitative" aspect of education here at the University has been discussed a great deal in the Collegian. We are not trying to create controversy for its own sake; we are trying to present a real problem to the University community in expectation of constructive measures on the part of University officials.

We suggest that this problem is the concern of the Faculty Senate, the Administration, the Faculty, the Students, the Trustees, and the Legislature. We openly ask all of these groups what they intend to do about this issue. To admit that a problem exists is not enough; we must set policy before there are 20,000 students on campus. What policy exists now on class size? There is no formal policy, class size is determined by circumstances.

Procrastination now may mean a third rate education for future University of Massachusetts students. The situation will not improve by itself. N.C.A.

SPRING CONCERT

by LANGDON LOMBARD

On Saturday night at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, March 16, the University of Massachusetts Concert Band with Israel Kopmar conducting, presented the following program:

Mademoiselle Angot—Ballet Suite ..... Lecocq-Mohaupt
The Pearl Fishers Overture ... Bizet-Caillet
Praeludium and Allegro ..... Giannini
The Gladiator March ..... Sousa
Excerpts from the Sebastian Ballet .... Menotti-Lang
Fifth Symphony: Finale ..... Shostakovich

A crowd of almost five hundred people looked on in admiration Saturday night as the Concert Band of the University of Massachusetts began to meet its potential. With a program designed to cover the wide range of the band's versatility and a wide range of composers, the crowd was brought to its feet in many instances at the end for encores from the group.

The entire program came to a head with an arrangement especially for concert band of the finale to the Dimitri Shostakovich Fifth Symphony. It is a fairly militant work in its original form and the Concert Band could only serve to do the music justice. Besides the lone march in the program, one by Sousa, the Shostakovich showed just at what the band was best.

The two pieces that suffered most from being arranged for the concert band medium by the different arrangers were works by Lecocq and Menotti, the latter taking the worse beating. The clarinets ably led by Allen Blustine were magnificent, but clarinets are not strings, nor were they in large enough force to begin to sound the part. They could have done it perhaps if they had a little more depth to the section. But without more students of Mr. Blustine's caliber, the effect was very had to obtain.

The staging of the band was good in that the conductor, Israel Kopmar, who is the director of the Hartt College Concert Band, placed the brass back where their sometimes raucous and blatant sounds could not come out as they would have had they been placed in the front of the stage. Instead, these noises were lost to a great extent in the curtains and other back drops that were on the stage.

But the greatest mistake was made at the end of the concert. As the audience rose in their seats, there was somewhat of a confusion on the stage. Lights went on in the auditorium, lights went off on stage signaling to the audience that the program had ended for the evening only to have a band member on stage call for more applause. The occasion was but to thank Mr. Kopmar for all the things that he had done to make the concert a success it was. We think that it would have helped the evening's proceedings to have a few more numbers. But we do look forward to the next concert of the Concert Band coming up later this Spring with great expectations.

ASTERISK —

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

IS STALIN DEAD?

Although there are those in the West who maintain that cultural activity in the Soviet Union remains subordinate to the ideological structure of the regime, it would be unwise to assert that liberalization has not occurred under Premier Khrushchev. Despite Khrushchev's recent attack upon abstract art, Ilya Ehrenberg, and the poet, Yevtushenko, the Soviet intellectual community does not labor in an atmosphere of Stalinist control. This is not to say that regulation does not exist. Nevertheless, the type of regulation differs significantly. Physical violence has given way to subtle coercion and suggestion, and in some cases to freedom.

Khrushchev certainly realizes that it is almost impossible to stifle such a man as Ehrenberg, much less Yevtushenko. In the Soviet Union, Erhenberg is considered to be a hero of the Second World War. Yevtushenko, at this point, has projected a personality which would be difficult to repress. Furthermore, the poet symbolizes more than any other individual, the destalinization process through which Khrushchev must pass if he is to stave off the very real threat posed by the extreme left in the Soviet Union and, of course, China.

The Sunday Speech of Khrushchev to the intellectual community of the Soviet Union has been interpreted as a reversal of the liberalization process. The Boston Globe of March 12 said:

In the field of culture, he (Khrushchev) demands unswerving conformity with the party line.

In light of the present situation, I do not think that this position is tenable. Although the next few weeks may see a temporary reversal, it seems absurd to contend that Khrushchev opened the door only to close it. What does the Premier gain by criticising two artists (Ehrinberg and Yevtushenko) who are, in fact, untouchable? The answer is that he gains an ideological inch on the Stalinist clique which remains entrenched, nothing more. In effect Khrushchev is saying one thing and doing another. Politicians (and Khrushchev is a politician) have been doing this for centuries. In addition, and more importantly, Khrushchev is a realist. Thus, he realizes that in modern Russia it would be politically unwise to alienate the ideological elite, certain members of which reflect deeply felt aspirations of the Soviet people.

Liberalization continues to progress in the Soviet Union. In a sense Ehrenberg spawned Yevtushenko. And men such as Yevtushenko are harbingers of a better future.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

VANDALISM

To the Editor:

It seems a shame that the inefficiency attributed to the running of the State of Massachusetts is also reflected strongly in the running of its largest educational institution to whom many future leaders of tomorrow look for guidance. This is one of the places in the State where there is the greatest concentration of brain power and yet ironically out of this group of highly educated people we get inefficient government.

Two things to uphold this observation I would like to point out. (1) The residents of County Circle in their current attempt to secure badly needed repairs to their dwellings were told that there is only $300,000 available for maintenance and it is being used on a priority basis, e.g., to renovate the recreation room in Brooks House and to install built-in bookcases and wardrobe closets in the rooms. Also it was stated that the maintenance department could hardly keep up with the vandalism rate in the dormitories. There is a very simple solution to this vandalism problem. If each dorm was assessed for the vandalism and the cost divided among its residents, there is no doubt in my mind that this problem would very soon check itself. (2) It seems that the greatest overhead burden is being created by the maintenance department itself. When it takes four men one whole day to paint three rooms in a dormitory where there is no fancy woodwork or fixtures to delay the operation and the students have already removed the furniture, I would question the efficiency of the operation. Again, when it takes two or three men several hours to change a door, I would also question the efficiency of the operation. A student who works for maintenance was approached on the question "how much time do you actually work when 'working' a full day?" His reply was "about 2½ hours."

The problem is much deeper than a few needed repairs to the dormitories. It is hopeful that the inefficiency being brought to light by the students of County Circle will spur a more soul searching investigation into the basic problem.

PROMISES

To the Editor:

A glance at the Collegians of the past week indicates a certain unrest and dissatisfaction throughout the University community. Deplorable living conditions in the dormitories, the resignation of Dr. Tinder, the removal of Matt Zunic, and "quality vs. quantity" debates give one the impression that a crucial situation exists. And the source of these crises seems to be the philosophy of the Administration.

During summer counselling previous to our freshman years, Presidents, Deans and other Administrators promised, in their every lengthy speech that they and the University were dedicated to Excellence. Excellence was the promise, made and broken. South College now indicates that public education is not to be excellent but rather "unique." "Unique" presently seems to mean inferior to private education. The quality of the public institution should not be "unique" but equal to that of the private institution. Dr. Gagnon, in Friday's Collegian, clearly points out the dangers of class-structured inequality in education.

We, the students, demand the excellence that was promised.

WHERE TO EAT?

To the Editor:

On reading the Hatch schedule for the week of March 23-31, we were rather surprised. Apparently Mr. Scott does not realize that some students must remain on campus at that time for classes and final exams. Since we all don't have access to cars, meals are going to be quite a problem. Isn't there any way to extend the Hatch hours to include three meals a day?

GREAT DECISIONS

Need For Democratic System In South Vietnam Stressed By Dr. Luther Allen

by STEVEN H. CURTIS '64

America, instead of supporting the dictatorial Diem regime in South Vietnam, without "strings attached", should try to force Diem's government to allow a democratic system to flourish, Dr. Luther Allen of the UMass Government Department told members of the Great Decisions discussion group last Wednesday night.

Dr. Allen was guest speaker for the discussion last week on South Vietnam. Having spent several years in Saigon, the capital of South Vietnam, he gave the club members a brief resume of the actual South Vietnamese political situation and American-South Vietnamese relationship.

He then stated his disagreements with American foreign policy in this part of the world. An exponent of the view that democratic government can work in this part of the world, Dr. Allen said he felt it was our duty as the strongest democratic nation in the world to give force rather than lip-service to our idealistic beliefs (liberty and democracy).

Several members of the group disagreed with Allen. They said Dr. Allen was being idealistic, that democracy needs a proper environment to grow in.

Further, they said, South Vietnam is economically backward. If it is to be brought into the modern world, it must undergo drastic changes which only a strongly centralized (but not necessarily harsh) government can provide.

They pointed out the failure of democracy to survive in Cuba, Korea and Burma in order to support their view.

Arrangements for the interview appointment must be made in person; application information cards will be filled out at that time.

No one will be interviewed who lacks the required average or who neglects to make an appointment before the 20th of March.

For the elementary block, applications are being considered from sophomores and also from juniors who have not been interviewed before. For the secondary block, juniors only should apply.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS SPECIAL

STEERS, PROTEIN AND THE ARSONIST

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Back when schoolboy Dick Ward rode and wrestled his 1300 pound Black Angus steer around the back yard, he wasn't sure if he was on his way to the Laramie Rodeo Days or St. Nicholas Arena. As a 22-year-old collegian last week, Ward was heaving a much lighter, black 35 pound weight around New York City and this time he was certain where he was headed: Tokyo's 1964 Olympic village. When his throw of 61 feet 9 inches won the IC4A Indoor Championships, Ward thought he saw Japanese lanterns hanging in the drafty, horse-smelling Regiment Armory where the competition was held.

Frigid Surroundings

When the 6-3, 225 pound Ward, who looks like a blonde, crew cut Steve Reeves, and his voluntary tutor, Olympian Al Hall, showed up at the Armory that Saturday and found the temperature inside a frigid 45 degrees, they were delighted. "This is heaven!" the two exclaimed to shocked and shivering fellow competitors. Ward, competing for the University of Massachusetts, had been used to 20 degree and sometimes 15 degree tmperatures at his Bay State school where the lack of winter facilities forces the team's weightmen to do their throwing outside on the icy New England landscape. So it was no wonder that during the long, two hour event, the opposition shivered, threw frigidly, and gaped unbelievingly at the graceful tosses of the sweating Redman from up north.

If tradition determines such things, Dick Ward will be a U.S. Olympic team member in 1964, maybe, and in 1968 almost for certain. The tradition here is the same one that brings great football players out of Pennsylvania coal mines, basketball players out of Indian's Crispus Attucks high school, and track sprinters out of the Texas sagebrush. Massachusetts has long been the spawning grounds for hammer throwers and marathon runners. And if Ward's schoolboy aspirations for becoming a half-miler had materialized, he would have defied more than tradition; he would have slandered the natural law of his Massachusetts South Shore neighborhood, the hammer hotbed. Within 15 miles of Ward's home in the tiny community of Pembroke, lie the four towns of Hanson, Hanover, Hingham, and Dukesbury. Together, these hamlets have produced five Olympic hammer throwers since 1952: Connolly, Hall, McWilliams, Backus, and Blair. Yet, but for chance, Ward would have escaped this atmosphere untouched by the hammer influence.

At a post-season track banquet in the waning months of high school, Ward was introduced to the banquet speaker—Al Hall. Hall took one look at the 6 foot-1 inch, 175 lb. Ward and decided here was a hammer thrower. But it was only after Ward matriculated to UMass in the fall that he got his first taste of the hammer and its non-Olympic event, winter season brother—the 35 lb. weight. But he appeared futile beside freshman football players who were consistently beating him in autumn practices by as much as six feet.

"Charles Atlas" All Over Again

Trackmen are to the world of athletes what arsonists are to the world of criminals: they work alone in building their private fires. It was after only mediocre initial efforts with the hammer that World decided to privately build his fire. He retired to the relative obscurity in the balcony of the University's athletic hall and stoked his 6-1, 175 lb. frame to its present 6-3, 225 lbs. by weight lifting. "Guess I'm a Charley Atlas success story," he jokes.

In between studying (which at first came hard) throwing, and lifting, Ward gulped down super-hi-protein by the muscle-full and soon had his dormitory "protein and lift' conscious. Strangely, while his weight throwing improved with his added poundage, so also did his side event—the high jump. "The heavier he got, the higher he jumped," explains teammate George Giddings, himself an Olympic aspirant in the weightlift. His jumping improved to the 6 feet-four inches which won the Yankee Conference and placed second to John Thomas in the 1962 New England championships.

While Ward was building fires, UMass track coach Bill Footrick was trying to put out some fires. When Ward emerged from his seclusion as a 6-3 giant, the football and basketball coaches beat a hot path to his door. "Dick could have used the scholarship money but his marks could not have stood the loss of time he'd have incurred with football and basketball," explains Footrick. "We don't give track scholarships here, so I left the decision up to Dick." If the coach was content to let Ward make the choice, Dick's professors were not so inclined. "Take the scholarship and you won't last a month," they told him after class one day.

Today, his academic problems well behind him with his graduation average safely secured ("That's to my wife's credit,") Ward is debating the temptation to try college basketball. "I've used up by collegiate track eligibility but still have another year to go at UMass." Ward's decision will come this spring and he hopes it will be the sweetest decision he ever made.

Hammer Could Go To 200'

There are only two Americans today who continually throw the 16 lb. hammer beyond 200 feet: world record holder Harold Connolly (231'-10") and Al Hall (who resides outside UMass and works out with Ward on weekends); both men are now non-collegians. Thus, the remaining third spot on the U.S. Olympic team probably will be filled from the college ranks. Ward's victory at the IC4A championships qualifies him as the leading collegiate contender from the East and Mid-west. According to the physical education student's charts, since his indoor 35 lb. weight efforts increased this season from 57'-5" to 61'-9", his outdoor 16 lb. hammer tosses should move from 181' to 200' or better.

Best Bet In '68

Yet, while Ward prepares for the '64 Games, his coaches and followers pick the 1968 Olympics as his best opportunity. Their logic rests in Ward's age—22, a premature figure among weightmen who regularly peak near 30; Connolly, Hall, Backus, Nieder, and O'Brian bear out this theory. Ward, however, attacks his Olympic problems with all the haste and enthusiasm as if they were next month. The Yankee Conference, New Englands, and outdoor IC4A are his immediate concerns. Then, if the charts read "GO," Ward heads for New Mexico and the NCAA championships to meet the as-yet-unknown challengers from the West.

For Dick Ward, who remains a happy Li'l Abner who once wrestled his 1300 lb. Angus steers, the fire sparked by idle conversation with a banquet speaker burns brighter than ever. But win or lose, Ward has come a long way from the 175 lb. freshman gulping protein-saturated cereal under a newspaper photo of Olympic champion Harold Connolly taped to the dormitory ceiling.

Hockey Coaches Say Canadians Will Stay

BOSTON UPI— United States college hockey coaches want to maintain their present status quo on both Canadian skaters and their body checking rules.

The U.S. Hockey Coaches Association quickly reached those decisions during their annual meeting here Friday and were not expected to alter their positions in final sessions today and Sunday.

The coaches never even considered a move by a small group of eastern coaches to limit to 50 per cent the number of Canadian nationals on any U.S. college hockey squad. Of the four teams in the current NCAA championship here, one is all Canadian, one lists only four U.S. players, and another just one of its 19 players. The fourth team, Boston College, has no Canadians on its roster.

The association also overwhelmingly defeated a proposal by former Princeton hockey coach Richard F. Vaughan to swing to the professional rule of allowing body checking on all sections of the ice. The coaches voted to retain the present rule in which players may check only in their own defensive zone.

Kimball, Slomcenski Top UConn Scorers

Four University of Connecticut basketball players finished the season with double digits in the scoring column, according to final statistics. Two of them are seniors.

Six-seven sophomore standout Toby Kimball, on the strength of a 19-point performance in the NCAA game with West Virginia, took over the top spot in the scoring column with 362 points and a 15.1 average. Six-ten junior center Eddie Slomcenski checked just seven points behind Kimball with 355 points and a 14.2 average.

A couple of seniors were next. They were six-six forward Gerry Manning with 303 points and a 12.1 average and five-nine guard Dale Comey with 284 points and an 11.4 average. Comey's mark is more remarkable when one considers that he started only one game and played the entire season as a substitute.

Kimball and Slomcenski also finished one-two in the rebounds column with Kimball gathering in an average of 15.6 per game which should place him in the final national listings, and Slomcenski had a 10.6 average in this department.

Among the season's single-game individual highs, Slomcenski had most points (40 vs. Maine) and most baskets (17 vs. Maine) and he was tied (24 vs. Maine) with Kimball for most rebounds. Kimball's 24 rebounds were posted twice, against Holy Cross and New Hampshire. Comey had most free throws attempted (14 vs. Massachusetts) and most free throws made (11 of 13 vs. New Hampshire).

As a team, the Huskies scored 77.6 points per game and allowed 65.5. The high scoring mark came against New Hampshire (102) and the low was 19 against Loyola of New Orleans, a game that saw the Huskies lose by a basket. The opponents' low total was 49 by Yale and the high was the 77 points by West Virginia in the NCAA opening round game at the Penn Palestra.

Connecticut won back the Yankee Conference crown it gave up two seasons back to make it 13 championships in 16 years; and the Huskies improved upon their won-lost record by posting an 18-7 mark, compared to 16-8 the year before.

Bear Bellows Libel As Post Cries Fix

ATLANTA, Ga. UPI—Former University of Georgia Athletic Director Wally Butts and Alabama football coach Paul Bear Bryant today denied that they conspired to rig the result of the Georgia-Alabama game played last fall.

Butts said in a statement issued through his attorney that the charge, made in a Saturday Evening Post article, "is the most fantastic and ridiculous thing that I can imagine" while Bryant said he will bring a libel suit against the magazine.

The charge is made in a Saturday Evening Post story scheduled to reach newsstands on March 19. The story was released by Davis Thomas, managing editor of the magazine, Friday night.

Alabama, a 17-point favorite, defeated Georgia, 35-0, in the game which was played September 22, 1962.

The source of the story is George Burnett of Atlanta, Ga., who, the Post article said, accidentally overheard a telephone conversation in which Butts gave Bryant Georgia's plays and outlined its offensive formations.

In his statement, Butts said: ". . . To charge me with giving away offensive or defense secrets or plays of a Georgia team to an opposing coach prior to a game is the most fantastic and ridiculous thing that I can imagine. I emphatically and categorically deny these charges."

In his statement, Bryant said: "Conversation between opposing athletic directors and coaches prior to a football game is common practice . . . The charge against Mr. Butts of collusion in the game is simply false. I referred the matters to my attorneys, William F. Pritchard and Winston B. McCall, who are handling my pending libel suit against the Saturday Evening Post."

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

NASA Man In Solitary Confinement Since Nov. 7

by PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK (UPI)—You think you're tired at night, after a 16-hour day of personal and professional endeavor. Just can't hold you head up any longer. Got to get that eight hours sleep. That's normal, isn't it?

Apparently not.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has been conducting an experiment to determine how man will behave during the isolated, six-months journey to the nearest planets Venus and Mars, and the results indicate that environment may have made slugabeds of us all . . .

Whilden P. Breen Jr., a 35-year-old male subject, was confined to a specially designed experimental chamber last November 7. He was assigned to certain tasks. He is still in the chamber. One fascinating aspect of this claustrophobic experience is that Mr. Breen was not given a clock. He had no way of knowing the time of day, or of realizing the difference between day and night. Scientists watched eagerly to see if he would set up an unusual pattern of wake and sleep cycles. He didn't disappoint them.

In several instances, Breen was awake more than 30 hours at a stretch. He made no comment, at these times, to the effect that he was tired. He simply went to sleep when he felt the need for sleep—and it was far less often than the normal man with a wristwatch to tell him it's midnight and therefore he should be exhausted.

"In spite of lengthy periods of being awake," NASA reports, "one might suppose that biological rhythms would have terminated such periods in line with normal daily cycles." But such was not the case. Breen went right on with his ridiculous by socially accepted standards schedule, until on the 49th day of his scientific hibernation, he was presented with a clock, set to correct time.

He promptly fell into more "normal" sleeping hours. Now that he KNEW when was supposed to be tired, he apparently was.

Breen's quarters consist of a room about 12 feet square, with two small alcoves and a separate toilet room with shower and washstand. His activities—everything from work tasks to relaxing with a cigarette—are governed by a master control panel, composed of illuminated push-buttons. By means of this panel, he knows which activity he is in and what is to come next.

As one of his tasks, Breen had to depress a push-button a certain numebr of times to obtain cigarettes. At first, he would receive one cigarette for 80 presses of the button. Although this is the hard way to get cigarettes, he was undaunted and managed to smoke about 40 cigarettes during a 24-hour period.

Then the experimenters raised the work requirements for each cigarette to 500 presses. Breen's consumption promptly dropped off to 10 a day. However, he became so irritable "although he continued to perform satisfactorily" in his other tasks that the researchers changed the rules. They allowed him 20 cigarettes a day at a minimal 25 presses apiece, but he must press the button 1,000 times for 10 more cigarettes.

Breen has settled down to 20 cigarettes a day.

To press your fingers to the bone for cigarettes? This is ridiculous.

It's tough enough to walk a mile for one . . .

Noted Speakers Discuss Common Market Problems

The Common Market was subjected to sharp examination Friday and Saturday at the 10th annual International Week End. The program was part of the university's centennial observance.

Kaplan Keynote Speaker

George Kaplan, Friday night's keynote speaker and a member of the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of European Affairs, told an audience of 300 that current difficulties in Europe do not mean the end of the movement toward European unification.

"The vast majority of European people and, with only isolated exceptions, the leaders who represent them, realize that the Common Market is a European movement and must be open to all European countries that are prepared to adhere to serve particular national policies. It was precisely to replace national policies with European policies that it was created," Kaplan was graduated from UM in 1947.

At the Saturday morning panel discussion, Virginia Galbraith, Mount Holyoke College professor of economics, told the group in the Student Union that the European Economic Community has weakened the orderly expansion of world trade. She pointed out that the ECC "has a common agricultural policy that is purely protectionist. All agricultural exporting countries will be hurt by this policy."

Gordon P. Smith, vice-president of the management consultant firm of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, U. of M. class of '47, agreed with Miss Galbraith that the Common Market's great progress overshadows the problems encountered. He too, however, sounded a warning. "New barriers have risen to replace the internal tariff walls which are crumbling. In this connection, the six member nations of the Common Market have found ingenious and devious ways to hamper each other to counter the spirit of free trade that initially prompted the establishment of the market."

Smith termed President De Gaulle's recent success in thwarting Great Britain's entry into the Common Market, "an example of parochial attitude toward realization of the ultimate dream of facilitating economic intercourse throughout the free world."

"Regional Approach"

While lauding the Europeans for their remarkable success in establishing the Common Market, Smith pointed out that the market is "obviously a regional approach to free trade—one which establishes a virtual economic blockade against nonmember nations." It is he said, "a substantial deterrent to the promotion of free world trade under its present structure."

He called for the following changes within the American economic system in order to compete with the Common Market —improve control of production costs by stemming constant wage and price increases, improve the tax structure by removing confiscatory aspects of personal and corporate income taxes, encourage the accumulation of investment capital at home rather than in tax-haven nations and reduce nonessential spending in the federal government.

Proceed 'With Caution'

Edwin L. Parker, president of A. G. Spalding & Bros., Inc., presented what he called "the case for proceeding with caution." He cited as a common problem area, the continual talk about whether our balance of trade is favorable or unfavorable.

The afternoon panel discussed "Political Implications of the Common Market." The members of the panel are Luther Allen, UM professor, Terence Burke, UM assistant professor, Ted Van Dyk, and Henry Ehrmann.

by RUSSELL MURPHY '66

"England does not want to become a latter-day Spain," said Terence Burke, assistant professor of geography at UM, Saturday afternoon in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U. during an International Weekend panel discussion on the political implications of the European Common Market.

Dr. Luther Allen of UM's government department moderated the discussion.

Mr. Ted Van Dyke, assistant director of the European Community Information Service, began the discussion on the topic, "Europe is political."

He first pointed out that while the Common Market is at present principally an economic unit, it bears the makings of a political unit with a Council of Ministers, consultive parliament, and Court of Justice at the present time.

"There was an increasing momentum toward British membership in the Market," he stated, commenting on the events of this past January, and Britain may have achieved membership by the end of this year. However, DeGaulle's veto not only destroyed chances of this, but "brought back many feelings of nationalism."

Henry Ehrmann, professor of government at Dartmouth College, then presented the political implications of the Common Market from a French point of view.

He first noted that the same fears for the survival of the Common Market with the advent of DeGaulle's Fifth Republic are being expressed now—but the earlier fears came to nothing.

Today DeGaulle envisions a Europe of fatherlands, a compromise between nineteenth century nationalism and any future supranationalism. The bond uniting this Europe would be a carefully developed interest in unity and a feeling of emotional togetherness, he stated.

"Economics is the cement binding the six nations together," Ehrmann said, and noted that DeGaulle vetoed Britain's membership because he felt England's demands for special considerations would "dilute" this bond. Britain will come in some day, but as an equal.

In summing up Ehrmann said, "De Gaulle believes his long-ranged views will turn out right long after the short-ranged critics have quieted."

Mr. Burke then systematically refuted what Van Dyke and Ehrmann said. He began by attacking the idea of Europe as a political unit.

Europe is just an economical conglomeration called ECC," he said, noting that there are no plans on the objectives, forms, or extents of Europe as one political unit.

He noted that whatever the reasons France vetoed Britain's membership, the other five nations seemed to be completely in favor of the admittance.

"The talks were stopped because they were succeeding," he stated. "Before any profitable results can come of the European Common Market negotiations sanity must be returned in France. France must give up her idea of grandeur."

He closed by noting that although Britons once thought of Europe as "a small continent off the coast of the British Isles," today they are ready to join their destiny with that of Europe.

This year's Weekend, the tenth annual, is entitled "A Country called Europe," and is under the guidance of Prof. Cecil Cody of UM's history department. Ena E. Tunberg '63 is chairman of the Weekend.

UPI Collegiate Clippings

HANOVER, N.H. UPI—Dartmouth College freshman Robert F. Stewart of Winchester, Mass., was trying to set an armchair—sitting record recently.

As of 11 a.m. EST, he had sat 35 hours in the stuffed chair in his dormitory room. His goal is 66 hours of sitting.

A fellow student said Stewart's stunt is in protest against the reecnt hiking fad touched off by President Kennedy.

KINGSTON, R.I. UPI—Seven University of Rhode Island students have been suspended for periods of up to two weeks in connection with an all-night drinking party in Narragansett.

Four of the suspended students were coeds.

The assistant dean of men, Henry A. Dux, said 11 others have been placed on probation. The names of the students and a fraternity also disciplined in the matter, were not released.

The party took place early this month.

AUGUSTA, Maine UPI—Gov. John Reed has signed into law an act which makes military training for male students at the University of Maine elective rather than compulsory.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. William F. Boardman, R-Calais, who said the change was in line with plans of the Defense Department. Under the old law two years of military training were compulsory.

UMass Receives Grant To Renovate Chemistry Lab

Greek Week Queen Hopefuls

Richason Oversees $150,000 Project

UMass has received a $150,000 National Science Foundation grant to renovate and modernize its chemistry laboratory.

The grant, made on a matching-funds basis, includes $136,400 to be used for construction and fixed furnishings. The remaining $13,600 will be used to purchase necessary research equipment.

All renovations will be made in the University's Goessmann Chemistry Laboratory, a large plant that was built in 1922. A two and three-quarter million dollar addition to Goessman was completed in 1959.

Modifications to this addition and conversion of other areas in Goessmann will provide 10,000 square feet of new research space and accommodations for 68 researchers.

Work on Goessmann Laboratory will be performed under the direction of Prof. George R. Richason, Jr. of the department of chemistry.

With a rapidly expanding number of students working toward advanced degrees—graduate enrollment in chemistry doubled this year from 35 to 70—research space has been at a premium in the chemistry department. The graduate students in the department come from many states and several foreign countries.

In addition to general chemistry facilities, the Laboratory houses the Research Computer Center, the internationally known Polymer Research Institute, and the Sub-critical nuclear reactor.

Forty grants given to the University during the past year for use in department of chemistry research have amounted to a quarter of a million dollars. Researchers contributed over 40 articles to leading chemical journals during the past year.

The department of chemistry is headed by Dr. William E. McEwen, who came to the University in September 1962.

Renovation is scheduled to start immediately. It will be completed by 1964.

This Year's Drive Ends In A Success

The Campus Chest committee has requested that all collections and donations for this year's drive be turned in to the RSO office in the S.U. by 5 p.m. tomorrow.

Faculty contributions are still being accepted, and all donations should be addresed to RSO, Box 315. Checks may be made payable to Campus Chest 63.

All dorm treasurers are asked to bring completed collections at this time, and fraternities and sororities are expected to have their checks in the mail by the end of the week.

Also, sororities and girls' dorms must turn in the money from Friday's "Late Night" which is still outstanding.

Any RSO organization which has not as yet voted on the contribution is requested to leave a note in RSO Box 301 before vacation.

The UMOC Contest is over and the Ugliest Man On Campus will soon be announced, according to APO's official calculations.

A committee spokesman has stated that this year's drive has been an overwhelming success and thanks the entire campus community for its generous support. Scholarships and presentations as well as a list of donations will be made at Student Leaders night in April.

Opens Synthesis-Independents Series

Peace Leader Swann To Lecture

"Relevance of Pacifism and Non-violence in Today's World" is the topic of a talk being given by Synthesis-Young Independents Thursday night at 8 p.m. in the Senate Council Chambers of the S.U.

This is part of the series of programs conceived by Synthesis-Young Independents to promote independent political thought, a spokesman said.

The speaker is Robert Swann, Co-ordinator of New England Committee for Non-violent Action. Swann has had a great deal of experience in peace activity. He served two years in prison and three years on parole as a conscientious objector in World War II.

In 1962-63 he served 90 days of a one-year sentence with five years probation for activities in connection with a demonstration protesting the launching of a Polaris submarine. He built the sailboat Everyman I that sailed in the Pacific testing zone last summer to protest U.S. Nuclear testing. He is also a member of the North American Regional Council of the World Peace Brigade.

He is at present living on a Connecticut farm which is headquarters for N.E. C.N.V.A.

The talk is being preceded by a dinner given by Synthesis-Young Independents for Mr. Swann. Literature will be offered in the lobby on Thursday for those interested in more information about CNVA.

Sophomore Royal Feast On April 1

It's that time of year again when the ground begins to thaw, baseball players begin to throw, and sophomores begin thinking about the annual Sophomore Class Banquet.

This year things are no different; the grounds beginning to thaw, (see page four), pitchers are starting to throw (see Friday's Collegian Sports page), and sophomores are working feverishly in preparation for their class banquet (see any ticket agent for the class of '65).

This year's banquet, "Camelot", will be held the first evening after vacation, April 1, from 6-8:30 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

The sophomores are planning to live up to their Banquet slogan of "Come and be fed like a king," by serving a many-coursed roast beef dinner. The Royal Feast will be followed by Royal Entertainment and the crowning of a Royal couple chosen at random from those assembled.

Tickets will be on sale in the ticket booth of the S.U. only for the remainder of this week from the hours of 11 to 2.

Headlines In The News

BOSTON (UPI)—The Boston Common Underground Garage scandal trial was postponed yesterday for the 10th time. Another hearing was scheduled for Thursday. Superior Court Judge Francis J. Quirico ordered the latest delay because of the illness of one of the defendants.

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—The first U.S. attempts to link up two objects in orbit—a critical step toward development of manned space stations—probably will be delayed until 1965, it was indicated yesterday. This is a key goal that the Soviet Union came within four miles of achieving last August.

MADRID (UPI)—A mob attacked three Americans yesterday as they were making photographs for a magazine story on hot dogs in downtown Madrid.

One of the three, his face swollen from beatings, asked for medical attention. He was Larry Shaw, an assignment photographer for "Argosy" magazine. Milt Macklin, managing editor of the magazine, also was among those attacked.

It was not clear what motivated the attack or the ensuing free-for-all in which an estimated 200 persons took part for 10 minutes.

ANPA Blasts Government News Policy

By ALVIN SPIVAK
United Press International News

WASHINGTON — Publishers, editors and broadcasters accused the government yesterday of deceiving the American people during the Cuban crisis.

They warned that this imitates Communist techniques.

The news media representatives told the House government information subcommittee that the government has no right to lie to the public in any situation short of all-out war or unless national security is vitally involved. They said the Kennedy administration went beyond those limits in the Cuban crisis.

A spokesman for the American Newspaper Publishers Association (ANPA) demanded

A College Education

Why does a student come to college?

This question is as unanswerable as it is old. Some come with the sole object of obtaining a degree, the necessary key to enter their chosen fields; others simply wish to avoid the army, their families, or the Outside World and—even worse—Work, for four years; and many, in all sincerity, come to receive an education. Obviously, there is no single answer, and the question then becomes a different one:

What is the obligation of the college or university to the student who has enrolled? Again, there are as many good answers as the students themselves had reasons for enrolling. This raises a problem, however. Even the smallest liberal arts college can not—and could not be expected to—fulfill all of the individual needs of all of its students; a compromise, a common meeting-ground, must be found.

Our colleges and universities seem to feel that they have found this compromise, highly influenced by the ideals of their "educators" though it may be: a good liberal education. Thus the students who only wants his degree can emerge with it after four years; the "escaping" student need only obtain passing grades to retain his secure niche on campus; and for those who have come to be educated, there is the promise of the school to do so.

But do our colleges and universities fulfill their promise to this third category of undergraduates, those who are not only students but scholars? According to the proclaimed goal of a college education, it is the needs of these students that should be most thoroughly met . . . and it is undeniable that our schools are not doing all that they might in this respect. There are numerous ways in which the education of the young scholar is made to suffer.

There is the matter of inept teachers, for example. A university interested in increasing its prestige is likely to hire an increasingly larger proportion of professors who are well-known for their new theories, their research, or their voluminous published works—even though these men may be thoroughly incompetent as teachers. Specifically, they may be unable to communicate their subject matter—its interpretation and significance—to the students. But sufficient has been said about this particular problem in recent months.

An equally serious matter is that of wasted time. Only the most naive could assume that all instructors spend the full fifty minutes of each lecture hour "teaching." In all fairness, students are in part to blame: they arrive late, shove chairs around, and rattle papers before they are comfortably settled. Unable to begin without reasonable quiet and attention (for everyone turns to look at the late-comer), the lecturer thus loses some time at the beginning of each class. Then, as the end of the hour draws near, more papers begin to rattle, books slap closed, chairs creak as students wriggle back into their coats, and many professors conclude their lectures prematurely rather than struggle to be listened to, or even heard.

Then, as though these discourtesies hadn't robbed the students of a large enough chunk of their educational opportunities, the professors themselves have found a way to kill even more time: calling roll at each class meeting. For this there is no justification whatsoever. According to the Handbook section on "Attendance Regulations," "No administrative control of attendance is exercised . . ."

This means that each instructor sets his own attendance requirements; three cuts per 3-credit course per semester is the usual allowance, so common that many mistake it for a university ruling. And once an instructor has limited the number of cuts each student may take, a roll-call is the only way to keep track of them. Then valuable class time is wasted, and for what purpose?

In many instances, students can learn the course material without attending all-but-up-to-three lectures; if they can't, and prefer to flunk out, that should be their decision. The intelligent student will attend regardless, if he feels the lecture valuable to his education. In effect, limiting cuts merely serves to buffer a professor's ego against the implications of a nearly empty classroom. Should he not be a good enough teacher to motivate attendance

PROTECTION FROM THE LUNATIC FRINGE

To M.C.:

Just how do the Dean's office and Mr. Montgomery suggest that students "police themselves," a vigilante committee perhaps? How is one student supposed to regulate the actions of another, report him? Your editorial stated that this has been done, to no effect it seems. Policing is the administration's responsibility. Arbitrarily trespassing on the rights of all students is not the way to discipline the few idiots who obviously do not belong here.

No amount of ad hoc committees or discussions will change the fact that it is the duty of the administration to protect the majority of students from the lunatic fringe. It definitely is not a function of the administration to deny all students a right that they have paid for simply because the administration finds itself unable to fulfill its responsibility.

MAINTENANCE DEPARTMENT

To the Editor:

I feel that someone should take notice of a misuse of manpower and do something about the Maintenance Department. Recently I saw three men dig ice away from a sewer so that the water could drain. Two were leaning on their shovels and only the third was digging. What irks me is that all were getting paid! Last week I saw six men on one truck to carry Band instruments. When will this miscarriage of justice be alleviated?

LIBRARY RESOURCES

To the Editor:

It has recently been announced that the Goodell Library refuses use of the Inter-Library Loan System to Freshmen and Sophomores; the seeming basis of this refusal being individuals in these classes should have no need to use references outside of the Library.

First of all, the right of those at the Library to determine to what degree an individual participates in intellectual endeavors is questioned; this would seem to lie instead with the wishes the student, teacher, and head of department respectively.

Secondly, the lack of material in many fields at the Library, whether justified or not by other factors, would seem to necessitate the use of the Inter-Library System by inferior-by-class undergraduates when "ordinary" needs of these students cannot be met, which so often happens.

Even if use of I.L. is by special permission, for example, with that of the head of the department involved, any change is better than the present policy. This policy may save on costs (except for an occasional flood setback), but it isn't going to help much in solving the problem of an often apathetic and shallow student body, or raise the standards of the University.

Not even a Freshman should have to make a term paper conform to the depth and content of the material the Library has to offer in any particular field, yet this is so often the end result of this rule.

HOSPITALITY?

To the Editor:

The Tenth Annual International Weekend was a great success in so far as the panel discussions were concerned. The Weekend did little, however, to create goodwill towards UMass. The blame for this can be placed directly on the circular letter that was sent to the foreign students from Bowdoin, Connecticut College, Yale, Vermont, Wesleyan, and other universities. The letter stated in part that: "The International Weekend Committee will make arrangements to accommodate foreign students who wish to attend. There will be no charge to the foreign students for the weekend." Many of the foreign students assumed this to mean that they would receive free meals, and that they could attend the various activities free of charge. They quickly found out differently. While the International Weekend Committee members and the visiting speakers had a luncheon in the ballroom, the foreign students were obliged to eat in the Hatch at their own expense. When the Committee members dined at the Lord Jeff, the foreign students ate in a church basement. (No official host had been provided to direct and to transport the foreign students to the church.)

The dance put on by the International Club, supposedly in conjunction with the International Weekend, charged admission much to the resentment of the foreign students.

Many of the foreign students left with bitter opinions of UMass due to the above incidents.

It is this writer's opinion that the money spent on the entertainment of the International Weekend Committee, could have been better spent feeding the foreign students who were guests on our campus.

Operetta Guild's Future Attraction Has Origins In The Begger's Opera

Probably no play of Shakespeare's has been a richer source of stage adaptations in the modern world than the racy eighteenth century English musical which is the basis of the UMass Operetta Guild's next attraction, The Threepenny Opera.

The origin of this robust musical about knaves and rogues of the English underworld was John Gay's The Beggar's Opera, first produced in London in 1728. From then on it was one of the most constantly revived plays in the English theatre.

A production of the show in 1809 at London's Covent Garden caused riots over the high prices charged until arbiters decided that the increase was justified. A revival in London in 1920 ran for three and a half years.

The first American production was in New York in 1750, and it was a favorite of George Washington's in the 1780's. Victorian prudery prevented any American productions from 1870 to 1920.

A modernized version was written in German in 1928 by Bertold Brecht, with new music by Kurt Weill that became a European sensation, under the title of Die Dreigroschenoper. It is this version, in an English translation by Marc Blitzstein, and entitled The Three-penny Opera, that scored an overwhelming success in New York for six and a quarter years to 1961, and which is now to be seen at Bowker Auditorium on April 15, 17 and 18.

Still other adaptations have been made. Edwin Justus Mayer's delicately phrased, poetic drama called originally "The Jailer's Wench" and later "Children of Darkness," was clearly derived from Gay's tale of knavery in an English prison. So also deriving from John Gay's sharp travesty on underworld rascalities was a musical with a score by Duke Ellington and a book and lyrics by John La Touche called "Beggar's Holiday," produced in New York in 1946.

The French musical success, Irma La Douce, which ran four years in Paris from 1956 to 1960, and almost equally long in English versions in London and New York, also can trace its story of poules and mecs in the Montmartre underworld, from Brecht's version of Gay's original tale of blithe outlawry.

MARKING ON THE CURVE—AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Twonkey Crimscott was a professor. Choate Sigafoos was a sophomore. Twonkey Crimscott was keen, cold, brilliant. Choate Sigafoos was loose, vague, adenoidal. Twonkey Crimscott believed in diligence, discipline, and marking on the curve. Choate Sigafoos believed in elves, Julie London, and thirteen hours of sleep each night.

Yet there came a time when Twonkey Crimscott—mentor, sage, and savant—was thoroughly outthought, outfoxed, outmaneuvered, outployed, and outwitted by Choate Sigafoos, sophomore.

"You and your ideas!"

It happened one day when Choate was at the library studying for one of Mr. Crimscott's exams in sociology. Mr. Crimscott's exams were murder—plain, flat murder. They consisted of one hundred questions, each question having four possible answers—A, B, C, and D. You had to check the correct answer, but the trouble was that the four choices were so subtly shaded, so intricately worded, that students more clever by far than Choate Sigafoos were often set to gibbering.

So on this day Choate sat in the library poring over his sociology text, his tiny brow furrowed with concentration, while all around him sat the other members of the sociology class, every one studying like crazy, every one scared and pasty. Choate looked sadly at their stricken faces. "What a waste!" he thought. "All this youth, this verve, this bounce, chained to musty books in a musty library! We should be out singing and dancing and cutting didoes on the greensward! Instead we are here."

Then, suddenly, an absolute gasser of an idea hit Choate. "Listen!" he shouted to his classmates. "Tomorrow when we take the exam, let's all—every one of us—check Choice 'A' on every question—every one of them."

"Huh?" said his classmates.

"Oh, I know that Choice 'A' can't be the right answer to every question," said Choate. "But what's the difference? Mr. Crimscott marks on the curve. If we all check the same answers, then we all get the same score, and everybody in the class gets a 'C'."

"Hmm," said his classmates.

"So why should we knock ourselves out studying?" said Choate. "Let's get out of here and have a ball!"

So they all ran out and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and had a ball, as indeed, you will too when you light a Marlboro, for if there ever was a cigarette to lift the spirit and gladden the heart, to dispel the shades of night, to knot up the ravelled sleeve of care, to put spring in your gait and roses in your cheeks, it is filtered Marlboros—firm and pure and fragrant and filled with rich, natural, golden tobacco. And, what's more, this darlin' smoke comes in soft packs that are actually soft and flip-top boxes that actually flip.

Well sir, the next morning the whole class did what Choate said, and, sure enough, they all got 'C's, and they picked Choate up and carried him on their shoulders and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and plied him with sweetmeats and Marlboros and girls and put on buttons which said "I DOTE ON CHOATE."

But they were celebrating too soon. Because the next time shrewd old Mr. Crimscott gave them a test, he did not give them one hundred multiple choice questions. He only gave them one question—to wit: write a 30,000 word essay on "Crime Does Not Pay."

"You and your ideas," they said to Choate and tore off his epaulets and broke his sword and drummed him out of the school. Today, a broken man, he earns a living as a camshaft in Toledo.

AROUND THE COLLEGE CAMPI

by J.D., EXCHANGE EDITOR

Looking over an assortment of college newspapers, you'll notice that certain problems and controversies are common to most of our colleges and universities. Take, for instance, the matter of speakers; these are the stories from several campuses currently in the news:

At Ohio State, the student senate recently voted to request the administration to remove a ban on speakers with "undesirable affiliations or associations." The only opposition to the movement was led by the Young Republican Club. According to Wm. Van Alstyne, University law professor, speaker bans at American state universities are unconstitutional. He cites the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, which provides that no state may prohibit freedom of speech, and points out that state universities are part of the state.

At the University of Washington, President Charles E. Odegaard vetoed a planned open discussion on the University's ban on Communist speakers.

At Vanderbilt University, a scheduled talk by James R. Hoffa was cancelled, due to the threatened invasion by press and TV.

The McGill University Socialist Society sponsored an address by Gus Hall, leading Communist spokesman in the U.S., and currently under indictment for failure to register as a foreign agent. Mr. Hall also spoke recently at Yale University.

At Northeastern University, the American Nazi Party encountered opposition. Leader George Lincoln Rockwell had been invited to address a closed dormitory meeting, but his appearance was cancelled by administrative ban; the officials cited fear of violence as the reason for their decision: over 200 members of Jewish fraternities had been planning to picket Rockwell. Nonetheless, five party representatives appeared on the campus and distributed leaflets to several men's dorms.

Earlier this year, the University of Illinois cancelled a talk by Rockwell when local police refused to guarantee the safety of those attending the meeting.

Albee's "The Zoo Story" To Be Read Tomorrow

The Zoo Story, a dramatic reading by Edward Albee, will be presented, without charge to the campus community, tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

The Zoo Story will be read by the Reading Theatre of Boston University School of Theology, introduced by Mrs. Ruth Love, director of the group.

The Christian Association is sponsoring the event.

The play focuses on the humorous but ultimately fatal encounter between two men in a park on Sunday afternoon.

Introduced by Mrs. Love, some of the theatrical statements of modern man's struggle to grasp meaning for his life will be in focus, a CA spokesman said.

Albee's other works and those of Harold Pinter and Samuel Beckett will also be considered, she said.

The Reading Theatre makes appearances on the campuses and conferences of New England in addition to reading-discussions in its own community.

Banquet, Athletic Events Are Greek Week Activities

Greek Week activities will include a traditional banquet, April 3, featuring discussions of Greek ideals and values by members of the faculty and administration, as well as leading citizens of the state.

Interfraternity athletics competition, including a decathalon and eight other track and field events, will be held April 6, while Peter, Paul and Mary will complete the week's activities with a concert April 7. Tickets for the concert go on sale today at the S.U. ticket booth and will be on sale every day from 8 to 4.

Three Plus Three Equals Eleven?

CONCORD, N.H. UPI — If you're from the old school and think 3 plus 3 equals 6 and would like to make something out of it, keep reading.

Game, eh?

According to the conventional numeration system, it does add up to 6 but a new exercise in mental gymnastics says the total should be 11.

That's because the new system is based on units of 5 and not the old standby, 10. On a base of 5, 11 means 1 set of 5 and 1 unit which, of course, is 6.

Put on your thinking cap, here's your first problem:

23 base of 5 plus 42 base of 5 totals what? If you're rapid-fire, the answer is 120 on the five base which in the conventional system would be 35.

Here's the way it's figured: 23 base of 5 is 2 sets of 5 and 3 units, which, in the conventional number system, is 13.

42 base of 5 is 4 sets of five and 2 units, which, in the conventional system is 22. Thus, 22 and 13 are 35.

The total—represented by the figure 120—is translated thus: 1 set of five 5's, plus 2 sets of 5's, plus the zero. The 1, therefore, stands for 5 times 5, which is 25, the 2 stands for 2 times 5, which is 10. Twenty-five plus 10 equals 35.

Still game? Sorry. It's two exhausting even to write about, but school kids around New Hampshire are studying this system to help keep the mental gears meshing.

Ruth Hadley of the Lebanon Junior High School, who presented these examples with the help of James H. Williams, Lebanon Valley News education editor, says it works wonders. Engineers use it in automation and in computers.

It's ideal as a conversation piece. That is, if you want to drive somebody to distraction.

MUD FORMS ON CAMPUS

Miss Sadie Slush, B.W.O.C. from Glassboro State College (Which is for real), has recently announced the founding of MUD (Movement for Unlimited Dirt) on that campus. Miss Slush, recognizing the need for greater and greater mud at a university, where clean sidewalks present an unsightly contrast to the rest of the campus, she stated: "the student body must unite and demand more mud."

Inspired by this zealous crusader from Glassboro State College (which is for real), Miss Phylis Trid, B.W.O.C. on the UMass campus has announced that a local chapter of MUD is forming here at UMass. Miss Trid told the Collegian yesterday that "the UMass chapter of MUD will fight to uphold the ideals of Miss Slush."

The constitution of MUD has not yet been approved by RSO or the Student Senate, but Miss Trid told the Collegian that it boasts the following platform:

1. To eliminate any drainage system which may now be operating on campus. Miss Trid pointed out that at the present time there were no drainage systems know to be functioning, but this article was included in the platform to provide for future structural changes on campus.)
2. To wage a campaign against seeding lawns with grass seed which might interfere with the natural formation of mud.
3. To deepen the ruts and potholes all over campus so as to provide additional storage basins for melting snow and rain water. This water could be used in time of emergency when no other sources of water were available for making mud.
4. To petition the construction workers on campus to continue building sidewalks which are low in the middle and greatly aid the cause of collecting mud and water.
5. To insure that no parking lots are paved since the parking lots on campus provide one of the very best sources of mud.

Survival of The Fittest

One of the ideals of MUD is to completely eliminate all paved areas on campus. In the words of the late Miss Slush, (who sank into the Glassboro State College—for real—mud and has not been seen since last Thursday): "Two many students and faculty take refuge on paved walks and roads. We want to weed out the weaklings now."

Miss Trid elucidated on the topic by explaining that students who live in the newer dormitories on campus which are completely surrounded by mud have a distinct advantage over other students who reside in the older dormitories. "Practice makes perfect," explained Miss Trid. "and students who live in the newer dormitories have more access to mud and so have more chance to practice survival.

Miss Trid went on to recall how one of her very closest friends (no names were mentioned, but a check of the records revealed that the friend was Mary Emils) was lost in the mud two weeks ago. Miss Slush and Miss Emils are the first two victims of the year, but the season is only just begun.

Miss Trid complimented the Miss Emils lived in one of the older dormitories on campus and had not had the practice necessary for survival. "Mud is a necessity and an asset to this campus," said Miss Trid, "but there are certain dangers involved. We have to live with the dangers since the beneficial aspects of mud far outway the few lives which are lost each year."

Miss Trid complimented the many car owners on campus for the outstanding work that they have done in spreading the mud around for all to enjoy.

As a courtesy to Miss Trid, applications for membership in MUD will be accepted in the Collegian office all this week.

As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team, serving your country while you get a flying headstart on the technology of the future. The U.S. Air Force sponsors one of the world's most advanced research and development programs—and you can be part of it.

If you're within 210 days of graduation, get more information on OTS from the Professor of Air Science.

POLLUTION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) told Congress today that American industry was spending $500 million a year for air pollution control.

"The facts show that federal aid and controls are unnecessary," said NAM spokesman Daniel W. Cannon of New York.

Cannon made the comments in testimony prepared for the House health and safety subcommittee which is considering air pollution legislation.

He said "many people think that nothing is being done about this problem, and they jump to the conclusion that the federal government must take over with financial aid to communities and all sorts of authority to enforce controls . . .

"Actually, there has been a great ferment of activity for a good number of years, and a tremendous amount of money has been spent both by industrial enterprises and by individual citizens."

Cannon said great strides have been made in air pollution control through the voluntary efforts of civic and industrial groups working in cooperation with municipal authorities.

He said the list of cities included Chicago, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, New York, St. Paul, Minn., Detroit, Providence, R.I., St. Louis, Cleveland, and Louisville, Ky.

ALMANAC

By United Press International

Today is Wednesday, March 20, the 79th day of the year with 286 to follow in 1963.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning star is Venus.

The evening star is Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1852, Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was published in book form for the first time.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth, the man who later assassinated President Lincoln, failed in an attempt to abduct the Chief Executive when Lincoln failed to show up at a scheduled event.

without requiring it. Is that the purpose of a university, to "save" the feelings of its ineffectual teachers?

Undeniably, attendance increases the opportunity to learn, but a record of mere physical presence is no indication of how much material a student has absorbed; exams and papers are used to test that. Why, then, is so much precious time wasted on calling the roll, a job more befitting a camp counselor than a college professor?

Countless other examples might be given, and pages written on each. However, our purpose is not to make up such a list, but to create awareness that such conditions do exist which cheat the student out of the education which he deserves, for which he has paid, and which the university claims to be providing.

Only when an appreciable number of these impediments have been removed can a university truly claim to be providing its students with something worthy of the name "education."

Fix Foiled

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI)— An Oklahoma City University basketball player reported to the FBI that an unidentified man tried to bride him.

Eddie Jackson, 7-foot forward, said the man, apparently a gambler, approached him at a cafe here after his team's Friday night loss to Colorado in the NCAA Midwest tournament.

"What would it take to keep you from scoring 20 points tonight? Jackson said the man asked, referring to Saturday night's OCU, Texas consolation contest.

Jackson said he had scored 20 points only once since he became eligible at mid-term. He averaged 10.6 points per game.

Bryant Prepares To File Suit vs. Post

ATLANTA UPI—An attorney for former Georgia Athletic Director Wally Butts Monday night demanded that the Saturday Evening Post retract and correct an article entitled "The Story of a Football Fix" in its current publication.

The lawyer, William H. Schroder Jr., also requested in a telegram that the magazine print an editorial specifically repudiating the article which accuses Butts and Alabama football Coach Paul Bear Bryant of conspiring to rig the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game.

Schroder said, however, that he will file a libel suit, probably for $10 million, against the Post regardless of any subsequent action in the matter by the magazine. He said the telegram was a formality required by Georgia law as a basis for seeking punitive action.

Quotes Insurance Man

Both Butts, who resigned last month to end a 25-year era at Georgia, and Bryant have denied the allegation in the March 23rd edition of the Post. The article said George Burnett, an Atlanta insurance man, through some communications freak, was cut into a long distance telephone conversation between Butts and Bryant last Sept. 14. Burnett, according to the article, said he heard Butts giving Bryant Georgia's offensive plays and other strategy for the Sept. 22 game which Alabama won 35-0.

Burnett said Monday he was motivated only by "an impulsive desire that the truth be known" when he revealed the alleged telephone conversation.

Investigations Under Way

A number of investigations are under way. Georgia Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook began a probe Monday; the FBI said it has made "preliminary inquiries"; and a spokesman said the Senate Rackets subcommittee would look into the matter.

Commissioner Bernie Moore of the Southeastern Conference SEC also was conducting an investigation. The National Collegiate Athletic Association NCAA said it was awaiting word from Moore.

"We have been in close communication with the commissioner of the SEC, who has had the report under investigation for some time," said Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA. "For the present, we have no further comment to make."

Alabama Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers said the Post article "is not sufficient to warrant an investigation" by his office.

Bryant currently has a $500,000 libel suit pending against the Saturday Evening Post for an article it published last October alleging that Bryant condoned brutality by his players.

He termed the current article "another malicious attempt to destroy me, my reputation for honesty and my integrity in order to attempt to affect the outcome of this earlier suit."

COLLEGIAN SPORTS SPECIAL

Like Old, Knowledgeable Uncles

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Very shortly, those wonderful, black and white, mis-printed, worldly and morally conscious, dearly-missed New York newspapers will be back. And when they return one should feel an anxiousness as he sits down for renewed acquaintance, as with an old, knowledgeable uncle returned with the scents of far-away places. For some folks, it will be a memorable moment when Messrs. Reston and Alsop return; others will studiously devour the critics Kerr, Taubman, and Crosby. But for me . . . for me, it'll be like sitting down to dinner and philosophy with the gods when Red Smith and Arthur Daley begin to print again.

Red Smith. Arthur Daley. In the sporting world, they stand alone. Complete sentences, these two. Like Grantland Rice. Or Babe Ruth. As the two most widely syndicated and well read columnists in their field, Daley and Smith reach from coast to coast and across the Atlantic in more than 150 dailies. Yet, to put Arther Daley in a print other than the Times' (his home paper) or Red Smith in other than the Herald Tribune's it is like . . . well, it's like Babe Ruth in that Boston Braves uniform. It just ain't right!

When Art Daley goes to a World Series, he sees what every writer sees . . . and then some. Like the others, he finds the gay bunting, brisk breeze from left field, smiling veterans, and nervous rookies. But Daley also discovers the heaviness of the locker room, the philosophy of a loser, and the strange twist of fate. He has the wonderful perception into a thrill that dissects an upset into equal parts—tragic, human, and divine.

After fourteen years in a compact, print box called Sports in the Times, Daley has pruned his literary athletics to a style all his own . . . and the Times'. His sentences, like those of Smith, are hewn with taste; his exclamations and criticisms tempered by the sights of past champions. But writers' words have the color and class of artists who see things as they are. It is these traits that win even the non-sports enthusiast to Daley and Smith.

This reporter remembers the evening Dr. Gilbert Woodside, provost at the University of Massachusetts, turned football official when the after-dinner discussion involved Navy's 1962 gridiron trickery with the rules. Now the Provost is a scholarly gentleman, dedicated to excellence in scholarship and one would not think he knew a "strong right formation" from a "draft Goldwater movement." But lo and behold! Dr. Woodside that evening went into a thorough explanation of famous trickery in football history and so impressed his listeners that they thought themselves in the presence of the immortal Amos Alonzo himself.

It was all so pleasant that this listener had not the heart to divulge the source of the Provost's dissertation: Arthur Daley's column of that morning. Later in the evening, we hinted that we, too, read Daley. "Isn't he great," he explained. "I never miss that column." And THAT is the epitome of Daley's greatness as a writer.

If Arthur Daley, with his objective, unbiased eye, is the play-by-play man of the duo, then Red Smith more than qualifies as the color man. Like his counterpart at the Times, Smith quickly sees that special something that makes a champion, an underdog, or a Kentucky Derby. But when Red Smith journeys to Churchill Downs in April each year, his readers next morning smell blue grass, Kentucky Colonels, Old Crow, and the straw for thoroughbreds.

Smith's knowledge of sports and its anecdotes, if collected and bound, would make the Encyclopedia Britannica look like a tattered copy of Readers Digest. He has the rare capacity to come up with the original anecdote for the auspicious occasion; like last year when the New York Mets honored Stan Musial at the Polo Grounds and Smith's column of the day told of the gray-haired old lady coming up to Musial at an All-Star game and requesting an autograph from him, her favorite player. The old lady? Ted Williams' mother. It was the kind of note that closes most Red Smith columns. In short, it is the ability to find and describe the power and warmth of sports—the very gusto of a spectacle—that pronounces greatness in Red Smith's writing.

To paraphrase Grantland Rice:
When that One Great Scorer comes to write against their names
He'll mark—not won or lost, nor how they played the game.

Instead, He'll sit back gladly to enjoy His Heaven with The selected prose of Arthur Daley and colorful Red Smith.

Belchertown Patients Flee Dormitory Fire

BELCHERTOWN, Mass. UPI —Forty-three female patients including teen-age girls fled safely yesterday when fire broke out in a dormitory basement at the Belchertown State Mental School. The fire was believed set by two girl patients.

Five attendants in the two-story brick building assisted the patients from the structure. The Belchertown State school fire department confined the fire to a basement recreation room.

Dr. Lawrence Bowser, school superintendent, said the blaze was believed set.

He said the two girls subsequently fled the school grounds.

Firemen were able to extinguish the fire within 15 minutes.

Dr. Bowser said clothing and curtains were burned in the fire. Smoke damage was extensive, and a school maintenance man estimated the loss at between $3,000 and $5,000.

Keppel Holds Kennedy To Promises

WASHINGTON (CPS)—New U.S. Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel is reportedly holding the Kennedy administration to its promises to expand the scope and quality of governmental assistance to education.

The 46 year old former dean of Harvard's College of Education is said to have negotiated at length for a bigger, better, and more influential role for the Office of Education before he decided to take on the job.

Keppel, who was officially confirmed as Commissioner of Education only two weeks ago, is rapidly earning a reputation as one of the most aggressive of the New Frontiersmen. President Kennedy repeatedly mentioned that he would like to see the authority of the Office of Education expanded in presenting his education message and budget to Congress this year.

Keppel moved into a circle of old friends in Washington. His longstanding friendships with such key men as Arthur Schlesinger and McGeorge Bundy haven't hindered with plans for expansion.

Before Keppel had even been confirmed in his new position, he won White House approval of a $51.4 million budget increase for education during the coming fiscal year. For U.S. colleges and universities, the new $713.5 million budget would mean:

$17 million to "develop course content materials, improve teacher training, demonstrate research findings, and identify research gaps."

$2.5 million for study grants and seminars to improve modern foreign language and area study programs.

$11. million for land-grant colleges and universities under the Bankhead-Jones Act.

Keppel To Direct NDEA

Particularly significant for higher education in the years to come will be Keppel's direction of the National Defense Education Act, in which he takes a great interest. Since the original Russian success in space in 1958, the NDEA has provided more than $230 million in loans to 380,000 students in 1,450 institutions. In the last fiscal year alone, 150,000 students have borrowed $73 million. Now that the highly controversial loyalty oath provision of the act has been removed by Congress, the government expects to grant loans to more than 200,000 students next year. More than 30 schools, including most of the "prestige" schools, refused to participate in the program until the loyalty oath and non-subversive disclaimer was removed.

Since students borrowing money under the NDEA may take as long as ten years to repay the money at three per cent interest, the act has proved to be one of the most popular, as well as simple to administer, forms of aid to higher education.

For fiscal 1964, the Office of Education hopes to get a full $90 million authorization for the NDEA student loan program, and $21 million for 12,000 NDEA graduate fellowships — an increase of more than 10,000 fellowships.

But Keppel, with the President's backing, wants to go even farther.

Congress has also been asked this year to increase the $90 million ceiling on NDEA student loans as well as to guarantee extension of the act, which is slated to expire at the end of the academic year in 1964. The administration also would like to end the limitation on the amount of student loan funds available to any single institution.

In hopes of wooing Catholic and private school support of the new education proposals, the administration has proposed that private colleges and universities be cut in on the forgiveness features of the loan program, which progressively decreases the amount to be paid back in certain areas vital to the national security, such as sciences and language instruction.

Concert Association Budget Stirs Senate

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

Lengthy debate over the Concert Association budget was the highlight of Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting. In an objection to the budget, Senator Don Crasco ('64 Greenough) stated that there was no real effort made to determine whether or not the student body wanted a series of chamber concerts. He felt that a more accurate opinion ought to be determined before the budget was passed. Senator Jon Fife agreed with Crasco, saying, "With all due consideration of the budget, we should look at the attendance figures before we pass the budget."

Disagreeing, Budgets Committee Chairman Ross Jones ('64 Brett) stated that the function of the Fine Arts Council, of which the Concert Association is a member, is to relieve the Senate of the very responsibility that it would wish to undertake.

Further debate centered around whether or not the so-called Chamber Series was "successful". This continued until President Cournoyer declared that statements to this effect were "value judgments" and would be declared out of order.

Senator Robert Brauer ('64 Butterfield) rose in objection to a motion to table, stating that the muddle over to Fine Arts Council was due, in part, to the fact that neither of the two Senate representatives to the Council was asked his opinion. He elaborated, stating that as a member of the Council, he could see no objection to the program unless the Senate felt it out of line with student wishes.

Senator Fife ended debate with a motion to table until full information about attendance at the various functions could be obtained.

As a result of the debate, the Fine Arts Council budget was passed with the exception of the Concert Association portion, this

Sir Patrick Dean Declares That Future Of UN Bright

by RUSSELL MURPHY '66

"The UN is not instant peace, nor instant world government," said Sir Patrick Dean, British Ambassador to the UN in an address here yesterday in the Commonwealth room of the S.U.

The address, sponsored by the UM Government Department, was entitled, "The Future of the United Nations."

"The UN is seemingly flourishing today," Sir Patrick said, noting however that critics and Senator Fulbright say it would be better for the West to withdraw from the UN and set up a purely Western organization.

Sir Patrick pointed out that the gradual decline of the power of the Security Power, since 1945, has put the power in the hands of the General Assembly.

At first, the West controlled the voting in the Assembly, but now the Assembly vote is 50 percent in the hands of the Afro-Asian block, he stated, and this has caused fears.

These neutral nations are lacking in any recent history of self-government, very poor, and mostly former colonial nations. Because of these factors, they expect and deserve as a right, aid from the richer nations and a place in the UN proceedings, he continued.

"To these nations, the UN is one of the most important visible proofs of their existence as a nation," Sir Patrick said. They are now heeded in all the capitals of the world.

He went on then to point out that these critics of the UN also fear the way the Soviet Union is continually trying to exploit the voting power of these neutrals, and fear the growing power of the secretariat, and the Secretary-General.

"Instead of concentrating on the real problems of our time, the critics of the UN say, the UN has lent itself to national opportunism."

Sir Patrick proceeded in the rest of his address to answer these criticisms, which he felt were very exaggerated.

He pointed out, that we should not dislike the neutrals for being neutral. Every nation has "an inherent right to choose its own foreign policy. We can make and keep our friends without insisting they be our allies."

Concerning the Soviet attempts to woo the neutral block, he noted that the neutrals, especially in their defence of the Secretary-General have voted against the Soviets.

Cleath Brooks and he are editors and authors of a series of Freshman English texts used extensively in this country, including Approach to Literature, used in a number of UMass Freshman English sections.

Professor of English William G. O'Donnell stated: "Warren and Brooks have had enormous influence in this country on the teaching of undergraduate English. Their texts are probably the most widely used texts of their type in the country."

UM Bridge Teams Enter Into Collegiate Competition

by DAVE HARACZ '66

The UMass entrants in the National Intercollegiate Bridge Contest, held Sunday, March 3 between United States and Canadian schools and colleges, have, in the words of director H. W. Smart, "made a creditable showing." The final results will not be known until some time in April.

The contestants play previously-prepared hands and are scored twice, first for correct bidding and then for skillful playing.

The most successful of the UM teams was that of James Crawford '64 and James Fitzgerald '64.

The S.U. entered four pairs in the Northeastern Intercollegiate competition at Harvard College, where 44 pairs competed in an open pair game on Saturday, March 16.

One UMass team, Frank Higginbotham '63 and James Crawford '64 were top for their section and fourth overall in the session.

The Thursday evening games at the SU are organized at 6:45, start at 7, and are over by 10, and are open to anyone who wants some fun and a chance to improve his bridge game by experience.

(UPI)—A thought for the day: Irish author Oscar Wilde said: "What is a cynic? A cynic is a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

Perspective—

by G. MASSELAM

The expanses of knowledge are growing to levels never before conceived. During the Renaissance, Leonardo DeVinci, keeping the tradition of the well-rounded man, endeavored to enrich himself with knowledge from all areas of life. It is safe to say he knew all there was to know at the time he lived. From that time knowledge gradually became more specific until it exploded in the Enlightment with a penetrating diversity. Now we live in the twentieth century, when not too much is known by anybody. Our fields of study have grown so specific that unbreachable gaps have risen between areas of study. Our industry and large businesses, our government, are demanding specialization. Our universities and colleges are fulfilling this need for specialization with an intensity. Thus graduate schools have taken on an extremely important aspect of our educational needs. And perhaps it should.

There are definite advantages to a high level graduate school:

1. It will attract some of the finest minds in our country to our campus. This will definitely improve the quality of both graduate and undergraduate education.

2. It will inspire a sense of pride in the university on the part of the most cynical elements at our University.

3. And more obviously it will make the University a real center of learning, which is its inherent purpose.

4. It will be fulfilling the needs of our society.

Thus the argument is not raised against having a good graduate school. Rather the argument is directed at the cost at which graduate education will come about at the University. Is our undergraduate education suffering at the expense of the graduate? — which leads us into a final point. If the administration is directly concerned with the undergraduate education, it should be making definite statements of policy about undergraduate education. Because their position has been attacked, it should be defended. They have an obligation to put forth the other side of this "Qualitative vs. Quantitative" issue. If they don't, who will? They should be taking direct steps at improving the Honors Program at the University and other areas of undergraduate education. As the graduate program grows, there will be many advantages for the University. However, it should be noted just what is being sacrificed in order to bring these advantages to us.

STUDENT SENATE

We have, in past issues, reminded the Senate of its responsibilities to the students, especially in fiscal matters. However, it would seem that our pleadings have gone unheeded by a number of our Student Senate. This was, we feel, well pointed out during the debate on the Concert Association budget.

Issue was made as to whether the future programs of the group were being made up with student or faculty tastes in mind. It was further brought out that the Association has not provided the Senate with the attendance figures for its concerts as is stipulated in the budget of the organization. These discrepancies did not faze the Senators who would have passed the budget without further investigation.

Too often we see cash outlay bills passed with little or not debate. While we do not find fault with the committees, we do feel that there are many unanswered questions even after a bill has left committee. It is to answer these questions that bills are brought to the floor. It was evident that the questions on the Concert Association could not be answered, at least not that night, yet some still tried to "get the bill out of the way" by passing it.

True fiscal responsibilities for our Senate are, we feel, directly proportional to the amount of discussion. An organization cannot claim to represent the students even in the smallest way, unless proper consideration is given to all financial bills. The questions must be answered—all the questions.

Mortar Board Comments

Editor's note: The opinions expressed in this column are those of the Mortar Board, and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Collegian.

We find it necessary to correct certain misconceptions which arose from our previous article concerning the inequalities between the men's and women's counselor systems. Very briefly, the article to which we are referring implied that women counselors received unequal remuneration for their counseling duties in comparison with that received by the men counselors in light of their duties. It was not our purpose to degrade in any respect the role of the men counselors. We merely wanted to point out unequal recompense for similar jobs. Through a series of meetings with representatives from the male counseling staff, we have realized that men counselors take their responsibilities seriously, and on the whole present themselves as being extremely capable and sincere in their duties.

More and more men and women counselors are realizing that in order to fulfill their roles more adequately they must work together. The Gryphon Society (a group of counselors representing each men's dormitory) will be meeting with the House Chairmen of the women's dormitories to insure future cooperation. Already a joint social committee comprised of men and women counselors and the social chairmen of every dormitory on campus has planned social events for the near future.

We realize that the problems with which counselors are faced in the women's and men's dormitories are dissimilar in some areas. However, because each system fulfills an extremely significant part in dormitory living, we feel that the distinctions in remunerations should be removed. The men and women should not be treated separately in their over-all role as counselors.

EATING CROW

The public charge that a member of the Student Senate has betrayed the confidence of his colleagues is certainly a serious one. If the charges are true, however, they should be brought to the attention of the students with legitimate proof.

In last Wednesday night's Senate meeting Senator Ross Jones made such a charge (and others) against Senator John Fife. These charges were presented without acceptable proof.

At the next Senate meeting Senator Jones must either present proof of his accusations or present a public apology to Senator Fife. The responsibility of being a Senator must not be considered a trivial one, nor should Senatorial powers be taken lightly.

Although the accusations were "stricken from the record" for the time being, nevertheless, the charges were publicly brought to the floor of the Senate and still persist even though they are not included in the official minutes.

It seems certain that at the next Senate meeting at least one Senator will eat crow.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHO WAS THAT APPARITION?

To the Editor:

Your cartoon in Wednesday's Collegian said more than the yards of copy you have printed on "Qualitative vs. Quantitative." I certainly hope the "phantom" wakes from his South College stupor and does something constructive to insure that future UMass students do not have to stand for a "second rate education."

A Departing Senior

To the Editor:

The recent Collegian cartoon has caused a severe argument between a close friend and myself. The issue of the controversy is what figure does the "spirit" in the cartoon represent. I claim it is President Lederle; my friend claims the figure is the death of quality education. Who is right?

L.M. '64

You pays your money, you takes your choice.—Ed.

To the Editor:

I assume that the ghost in your recent Collegian editorial cartoon was the Massachusetts Legislature. If this University plans to have 20,000 students on campus by 1975 then the figure of death was certainly an accurate one.

QUALITATIVE vs. QUANTITATIVE

To the Editor:

I don't know about the rest of the campus, but I am getting rather sick of seeing page after page of editorials on "qualitative vs. quantitative." I am sure that you have stated (and re-stated) your case by now.

If you insist on editorializing about the same things day after day why not switch to sex. At least that would hold the reader's interest.

SCIENTIFIC ATMOSPHERE

To the Editor:

Whenever a topic is brought up in history or English class for general discussion, few seem interested and it is always the same few who offer their opinions and ideas. The others either didn't read the assignment or they were afraid to offer their comment for fear of group disapproval or ridicule. Only those who have the courage in their convictions to stand alone give the answer. The rest are sheep. The very rugged individualism which made this country possible is now stifled by the scientific atmosphere. Our new society is bent on scientific facts and scientific progress to the detriment of constructive thought. If we are to remain a free country we must not let ourselves become narrow-minded and put the whole emphasis on science and let philosophical institutions become stagnant.

Our once open society is becoming a closed society in which people seek comfort and security by conformity, and people are no longer bothering to voice their opinions, but are forming groups and electing a leader to speak for them. The group acts as a whole and individualism is stifled—a dissenter in the group is ousted. The sheep fears the pressure of the group and remains quiet, a puppet. Isolationist conformity may lead to security, but it does not lead to comfort, and if we become a Nation of Sheep it will be our downfall.

I urge anyone with a sense of patriotism or self respect not to blindly accept facts, but to think for himself and assert his right to be heard.

Edward Carmichael

STUDENT Union

To the Editor:

This is to protest the complete disregard which the S.U. has for the students who support it.

The incident which provoked this letter occured in the Governor's Lounge of the Union on March 18. There were about fifteen students trying to study while catering service proceeded to make as much noise as possible setting up cups for a "Coffee Hour." Were this for a University or an R.S.O. function one might have tolerated being driven out but this was not the case. It was for New England Registered Nurses!

The only solution to this and similar situations is either to buy back the Union from whoever now owns it, or to boycott of the Hatch, University Store and the lobby counter until the situation is remedied.

Armed Services Debate On Non-Compulsory ROTC

WASHINGTON (CPS — An inter-service debate is currently delaying Congressional action on a drastic revision of Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) programs at U.S. colleges and universities.

Pentagon officials hope to have the revised ROTC program on its way to Capitol Hill within two weeks for hearings by the House Armed Services Committee. But a debate between Army, Navy, and Air Force officials will have to be ironed out first.

Essentially, the revised ROTC legislation will end compulsory ROTC at land-grant universities, where male students are now normally required to take one or two years of military training. The new program would be selective and voluntary, with outstanding participants becoming eligible for government scholarships ranging from $1,000 to $2,000.

Questions To Be Ironed Out

The new proposal grew out of a marriage of Air Force and Navy thinking on the efficacy and efficiency of the compulsory ROTC program. All three services, however, are not yet agreed on certain important aspects, such as the amount of scholarships, the length of training in college, and the degree of selectivity of the program.

If the reserve representatives of the three branches of the armed services reach a stalemate in the negotiations on the ROTC question, it will be up to Navy Capt. W. S. Bradway, Jr. to smooth over the debated points. Bradway is the Pentagon officer assigned to the development of the new program by the Defense Department. He described the current negotiations between the service branches as "crucial" to the success of the proposal.

The Navy pioneered the new plan when it introduced the so-called "Holloway Plan" offering scholarships to outstanding students who would plan on a Navy career. The NROTC "regular" program provides books, fees, tuition, and a living allowance for students on the program.

Air Force officials soon borrowed the Navy idea: after instituting a few changes of its own, the Air Force came up with essentially the program currently being debated. As envisioned, the new program would enroll only juniors and seniors. Freshmen would be interviewed each year, and those selected would enter training during the summer preceding their junior year. Formal military training would being after completion of the summer camp, and would continue through the senior year, with a second summer training period after graduation.

Financial Aspects Widely Supported

The section of the new proposal expected to come under the closer Congressional scrutiny is the size of the scholarships the services hope to able to offer. The Pentagon, however, isn't too worried about passage of the measure. The new program would certainly be cheaper than the tremendous overhead now required by mass compulsory ROTC.

Investigation Of Campus Movie Asked

KINGSTON, R.I. UPI — The president of the University of Rhode Island says the college will "cooperate fully" if the legislature investigates the showing of movies on the campus.

The movie controversy arose this week after URI President Dr. Francis H. Horn refused the Catholic chaplain's request to ban the showing of "Never On Sunday." The Rev. Edmond C. Micarelli made the request in a letter.

Sen. Antonio C. Trovato, R-Westerly, Wednesday suggested a legislative inquiry if the "proper authorities" at the university failed to act.

Trovato asked, "Is this the type of entertainment which our students are to see at their leisure at our state college campuses?"

"This, to me, is shocking, indecent and obscene," Trovato said.

Protest Made On Student Parking

Protest was made in a communication to the Amherst Board of Selectmen Wednesday against conditions caused by parking of University students on Fairfield St. and Fairview Way. The complaint signed by 10 residents said the parking created a hazard since it blocked the approach to Mark Meadows School and damaged adjoining lawns.

Stephen Allen of Fairfield St. presented the protest signed by 10 citizens living on Fairfield St. and Fairview Way. He said there are 30 children attending the Marks Meadow School, and the parking causes a safety hazard since fire equipment would have difficult in getting through. He said there is no street curbing and parking is done on lawns.

Will Contact Officials

The board said this matter will be taken up with officials at the University, the campus police and the town manager, in an effort to alleviate the situation. Hills Skillings, member of the UM faculty and a selectman, said the trustees are considering a new system of student parking, which will go into effect in September.

being tabled back to the Budgets committee.

A second hassle developed over the budget of the University Bands-Athletic Events. This would allow the Marching Band two trips. The impasse developed when an amendment was moved to insert a binding clause which would state: Binding: That the Athletic Department be seriously approached as to the possibility of contributing to the support of the budget. Senator Betsy Robicheau ('63 At-Large) stated that she felt the binding clause necessary so that future Senates will not forget the problem. She further revealed that both she President Cournoyer had approached the Administration and learned that its support is not feasible this year.

"How long will the Senate be duped?" asked Senator Bob McDonnell ('65 Brett). He charged that "when we voted on the Villanova budget, many Senators who led the fight for the appropriation told us that this would be the last budget." He elaborated, stating that it was his feeling that the bands should be fully supported by the Administration. Senator Robicheau agreed, stating that she too, felt that the bands were a part of the Athletic program. Thus, she said, we are justified in asking for funds.

Regional Science Fair To be Held Sunday in S.U.

The sixth annual Western Massachusetts regional science fair will be held Sunday, March 24.

Exhibits from young student-scientists in Western Massachusetts high schools will be open for the public's inspection at the University's ballroom from 11 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.

About 60 exhibits from some 18 area high schools are expected at this year's science fair.

Winners of the regional contest will have an opportunity to compete in further science fairs at the state, New England and national levels.

The fair's aim is to encourage greater interest in science, develop more public awareness of modern science and technology, recognize talented young scientists and promote closer ties between University and secondary school teachers.

Cups, plaques and cash awards will be presented to the students with the winning entries.

At the awards ceremony, to be held in the ballroom at 3 p.m., Dr. Richard S. Stein, Commonwealth professor of chemistry at the University, will speak on "Taming Giant Molecules."

Organizations lending support to this year's science fair include: the Hampshire County Public Health association, the Connecticut Valley Chapter of the American Chemical Society and the Massachusetts Heart Association.

Also, Stanley Home Products, Inc., Easthampton; Eastern States Farmers Exchange, West Springfield; Technifax Corp., Holyoke; Chicopee Manufacturing Co., Chicopee Falls; Shawinigan Resins Co., West Springfield; General Electric Co., Pittsfield; Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton; American Legion Post 148, Amherst, and the New Britain Machine Co. of New Britain, Conn.

This year's science fair was planned by a faculty committee headed by Prof. O. T. Zajicek of the chemistry department at UM.

Draft Order Gives Fathers Low Priority

WASHINGTON UPI — President Kennedy's new order transferring fathers' draft classification from 1A to 3A will keep them subject to induction until the age of 36 instead of 26, defense officials said today.

Actually, the order merely formalizes a practice well established since 1956 of not drafting fathers except in rare cases. But, it will make fathers eligible for the draft, however unlikely, for nine additional years.

The President's order, which he signed Friday shortly before leaving for a meeting of Central American presidents in Costa Rica, applies to all bona fide fathers except doctors, dentists and veterinarians. The vets are still used in the services for meat inspection and some other animal-connected purposes.

Under present practice, a father otherwise eligible for military service is placed in 1A, but is given a low priority which in effect means he will not be inducted. When he reaches the age of 26, he is no longer subject to draft.

Under the new plan he will be in class 3A, and unless he has enjoyed a deferment will be technically subject to draft until 35.

The 3A class until now has been for heads of families who could show that their induction would cause "undue hardship" for their dependents.

SORORITY NEWS

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

First and foremost, Alpha Chi proudly welcomes two new pledges, Diane LaFrance and Martha Mosley.

Congratulations to one of our juniors, Dee Ferrigno. Dee was stage manager for "Androcles and the Lion."

Congratulations are also extended to our two Pan-Hellenic representatives: Senior representative, Eileen Reilly, who was elected Pan-Hellenic treasurer, and Junior representative, Carolyn Howarth, who is Pan-Hel's new publicity chairman.

A few weeks ago, in the quiet of the early morning, a group of Alpha Chi Big Sisters were stirring. Pledges were roused from their beds at six a.m., blindfolded and "kidnapped." A brisk walk in the new-fallen snow managed to waken our drowsy pledges. Suddenly a car pulled up, and by groups of five and six, our pledges were driven away. The secret meeting place was 813 North Pleasant Street. When the group had all gathered —"Off with the blindfolds, kids!! Get upstairs and wake up the sisters in the house!!" There was no waiting for a second invitation. The winter morning stillness was broken with cries of victory and dismay. The pledges didn't leave without their reward. The Big Sisters served them breakfast before returning them to their warm beds—or their 8 o'clock classes.

Strange things were happening last Friday. Sisters were carrying pledges' books, waiting on them in the Hatch, running around buying cigarettes, newspapers, etc. Sound backwards? Well, it was! Last Friday was Omega Chi Alpha Day, when the roles of sister and pledge were reversed, and the pledges had senority. Sisters were sent packing to the Commons for dinner and to the dorms for the night. Needless to say, our pledges didn't waste this day and sisters are still recuperating.

CHI OMEGA

The Chi O's certainly enjoyed their Pledge Formal Weekend which was held recently and wish to extend congratulations to sisters who received awards for scholarship at the formal.

The Chi Omega award to the all-around senior was received by Joan Hussey, while Judy Clark and Kathy Manning received awards for their top scholastic averages in the junior and sophomore classes, respectively. Improvement award bracelets were given to Mimi Halper, Marie Brazao and Eileen Diggle. Our pledges entertained everyone with their powerful pledge songs which they had recently composed.

Our thanks go to the brothers of TEP and Theta Delta Chi at Amherst for the exchanges we have recently shared.

The sisters sincerely enjoyed and benefited from the Centennial Focus on Women Program put on by the University last Thursday and were pleased to have Provost and Mrs. Woodside and Miss Nancy Rupp as guests for our discussions concerning the program that evening after a delicious meal.

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

After many weeks of planning and hoping, the Iota Gams were excited to hear that the Kappa house was theirs. Co-ordination was difficult this year because of the lack of a common meeting place—but next year things will be different. We have already started day dreaming of our "first home."

Our first pledge formal at Wiggin's Tavern was a complete success. Everyone enjoyed both dinner and dancing and the presentation of the pledges and sisters will never be forgotten.

We are proud that two pledges, Judy Carr and Helen Tefs have been nominated for Greek queen.

A new slate of officers has been elected for the coming year and is getting off to a tremendous start. They are: president, Pat Genetti; vice president, Ginny Mallison; recording secretary, Carolyn Sakakeeny; corresponding secretary, Judy Ferris; treasurer, Nancy Jansen; assistant treasurer, H e l e n Radowitz; master of ritual, Janet Rosata; social chairman, Cherie Laboisioniere; rush chairman, Kay Johnson; pledge trainer, Linda Kretschmar; assistant pledge trainer, Connie Kari; activities chairman, Lynne Knubbe; song director, Carol Rose; historian, Claudia Kelly; senior Pan Hel representative, Sue Morash; junior Pan Hel representative, Sue Barrett; scholarship chairman, Evie Hanson; Balfour representative, Sandy Commons; editor, Joan Holland; junior Pan Hel council, Judy Carr and Sue Bonelli.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Welcome back to the girls who participated in Beta weekend. On Friday five of the sisters left to spend a weekend with our sister chapter at URI. The weekend was most enjoyable and informative, and we of Alpha chapter are looking forward to returning the hospitality very soon.

Carol McDonough, PBP, to Dick Kyley.

Maureen McWeeney, PBP, to Bruce McLean, PMD, '63.

The sisters of Lambda Delta Phi wish to extend a sincere thank you to our guest of the Women's Day program, Mrs. Wentworth, who spoke to us about career opportunities in home economics.

Congratulations are in order for our newly-appointed officers: alumnae chairman, Dottie Johnson; scholarship chairman, Bev Trull; historian, Bonnie Goldman, Sandi May.

Last Sunday saw the traditional wearing of the green and a St. Patrick's Day celebration at Lambda Phi. Thanks to the refreshment committee (the shamrocks were delicious) and to the pledges for producing a rollicking skit about the dangerous trek from Bartlett to the WPE building in the "rainy" season.

A final bulletin: the presidency of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Udders was copped this weekend by our very own Linda Leen, who won the cow milking contest.

PI BETA PHI

388 N. Pleasant has been the scene of much activity in recent weeks. Two weeks ago the Pi Phi's held their annual Pledge Formal at the Northampton Inn. Our thanks to Bobbie Hanna who did such a wonderful job in making it a success.

The sisters and pledges would like to extend their congratulations to Marie Makinen who was recently elected president of the Panhellenic Council and to Marion Smith, '66, who was elected to Women's Judiciary. We would also like to thank the brothers of Lambda Chi and AEPi for two pleasant exchanges.

Last Sunday saw the initiation of 13 new sisters. They are: Joan Congdon, '65; Teresa Wright, '65; Ruth Owen, '64; Roberta Rayfield, '65; Geraldine Tomaselli, '65, and the following freshmen: Julie Alger, Donna Bangs, Carol Gennari, Susan Morris, Marion Smith, Bonnie Stokes, Kathryn Watson and Michele Wyatt. Congratulations, new initiates!

Over Forty Applicants For Redmen Coaching Position

Late last week, Matt Zunic and the Athletic Committee of the University of Massachusetts Trustees reached what was termed "a mutual agreement."

According to the terms of this agreement Mr. Zunic has agreed to accept the decision of Dean Warren McGuirk of the school of Physical Education requiring the red-stockinged loop coach to give up his duties as head basketball mentor at UMass and assume the duties of the post of professor of Physical Education.

Since the agreement was reached, and even before, rumors were being circulated around the campus as to who the next Redmen coach would be.

The most prevalent of these rumors was that Jim Luscotoff, hatchet-man for the Boston Celtics, had applied for the job, and was a shoo-in for the position.

It is true that Loscotoff did apply for the job, but he is only one of over forty applicants with varying backrounds in high school, collegiate and professional hoop circles, and is by no means a shoo-in for the job.

President John Lederle has appointed a three man screening board to interview applicants for the position.

At the present time Dean McGuirk and Evan Johnston, Executive Director of the University of Massachusetts Alumni Association, are in Louisville for the NCAA basketball finals, and it is expected that they will probably be interviewing applicants for the position this weekend.

It has also been reported from reliable sources that Zunic may also be in Louisville this weekend to talk shop with some of his basketball friends, and perhaps see about another coaching position for himself.

However, as the situation now stands, Zunic is still a member of the University faculty and will remain so until he decides to leave UMass on his own volition.

It is expected that the screening board will reach a decision, and select a new man for the coaching job in the opening days of April, at which time the new coach will be presented to the press at luncheons here at the University and in Boston.

Top Teams Compete In NCAA Tourney

by JOHN DIETRICK
UPI Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Officials of the NCAA pointed with more than a little pride today to the national collegiate basketball finals coming up here this weekend, with a four-team field for the silver anniversary tournament that might be the best yet.

In defending champion Cincinnati, Duke, Loyola of Chicago and Oregon State, the finals have the nation's first, second and fourth ranking teams in the UPI ratings; while Oregon State, ranked 14th, knocked off No. 3 Arizona State to get here.

All told, the four have won 100 games and lost but 12. Cincinnati comes in with a 25-1 record, Loyola at 27-2, Duke at 26-2, while Oregon State has lost more than the other three combined, a 22-7.

Top Offensive Club

Loyola is the nation's top offensive club with a 92.9 per game scoring average; Cincinnati is the national defensive leader, holding its opposition to a 52.8 average; and Duke had the best shooting average in the nation this season at .517.

Individually, the field will include four of the five members of this year's UPI All-America team — Ron Bonham and Tom Thacker of Cincinnati, Art Heyman of Duke, and Jerry Harkness of Loyola.

Tournament chairman B. A. Shively of the University of Kentucky pointed out one reason why the quality of the field is so high. "This is the first year," Shively noted, "that every team eligible and invited to play in this tournament has accepted."

Shively didn't mention by name the National Invitation Tournament which for years battled the NCAA for the top teams, but he said, "before this year some teams have accepted bids from another tournament, and in some cases we had a racial problem."

Box-Office Bonanza

The tournament has become a box-office bonanza, too. All of Freedom Hall's 18,500 seats were sold within hours after they went on sale—weeks before any of the contestants were determined.

Shively noted, "Not even Oregon State has turned back a single one of its ticket allotment. They're coming in here in several planeloads with a pep band and the whole works."

Loyola and Duke meet in the first game—the Eastern semi-final — Friday night, with Cincinnati opening its national title defense against Oregon State in the second game, the Western semi-final.

36 DAYS THAT CHANGED THE PERFORMANCE PICTURE IN AMERICA

In 36 days, starting with the Monte Carlo Rallye in January of this year, our products have posted a series of competition wins that have made performance history. Here's what has happeneu.

Three V-8 Falcon Sprints were entered in the Monte Carlo Rallye. This is not a race. It is a trial of a car's total capabilities. We did it (nervously) for the experience and with practically no sense of expectation, because we had not entered an event like this before. One Sprint ended the experiment in a snowbank. But the others finished 1-2 in their class with such authority that they moved the good, grey London Times to say: "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country in the world." That was Number One.

Number Two was a double win in the Pure Oil Performance Trials. Fords captured Class 1 and Class 2 (for high performance and large V-8's). Both of these trials were for over-all points rolled up in economy, acceleration and braking tests.

Then, at Riverside in California, in America's only long-distance stock car event that is run on a road course (as opposed to closed circuit, banked tracks such as the track at Daytona), Dan Gurney pushed a Ford to first place.

The latest news comes north from Daytona. There in the open test that tears cars apart—the Daytona 500—Ford durability conquered the field. Fords swept the first 5 places . . . something no one else had equaled in the history of the event. In a competition —which anyone can enter—designed to prove how well a car hangs together, 9 Fords finished out of 12 entered . . . a truly remarkable record considering that over 50% of all cars entered failed to finish.

Why do we keep such an interested eye on competitions such as these? Is speed important to us? Frankly, no. The speed capabilities of the leading American cars are now grouped so closely together that the differences have no real meaning. To us, who are building cars, success in this kind of competition means just one thing: the car is strong. This kind of performance capability means that the car is so well built that it can stand up to normal driving—the kind of day-in, day-out demands you put your own car through—for thousands of miles longer than less capable cars.

In tests like the Daytona 500 and Riverside, we find out in an afternoon what might take us 100,000 test-track miles to discover. We learn how to build superior strength into suspension systems, steering systems, drive train, body, tires. Anyone can build a fast car. What we're interested in is the concept of "total" performance.

We believe in this kind of total performance because the search for performance made the automobile the wonderfully efficient and pleasurable instrument it is today—and will make it better tomorrow.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Justice Found No "Fix"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department said a preliminary inquiry into the alleged "Fix" of the Georgia-Alabama football game last fall did not indicate violations of federal law.

The Justice Department started its inquiry after the Saturday Evening Post published an article in which an Atlanta insurance man claimed that former Georgia Athletic Director Wallace Butts gave team secrets to Alabama coach Paul Bear Bryant.

Redmen Travel South To Open Baseball Slate

Squad Leaves Saturday; Lorden Eyes Yan-Con Title

A veteran-laden University of Massachusetts baseball team leaves on its annual vacation-week Southern trip Saturday morning that will find the Redmen visiting Camp Lejeune, N.C., Fort Lee, Va. and Randolph-Macon College.

Coach Earl Lorden, beginning his 16th year at the helm of the Redmen, feels that his club should be a contender again for the Yankee Conference title. And the nucleus of the team, which has been together since their frosh days, hope to avoid the frustration of the past two second place finishes.

COACH EARL LORDEN

Lorden hopes to square away his pitching staff in the Southlands. The Redmen will be playing at least three games at Camp Lejeune March 25-27, then travel to Fort Lee for games on the 28th and 29th. The final game of the trip will be at Randolph-Macon in Ashland, Va. on the 30th. There will be other college teams at the service bases and Lorden deosn't know yet exactly whom the Redmen will be playing.

Three veterans form the crux of the pitching corps. Lefty Dick Wilson (Amherst), and right-handers Rod Corey (Grafton) and Lew Pia (Pittsfield) return from the 1962 staff that compiled a 1.86 earned run average, third best nationally behind St. John's and Murray State. Wilson was 4-2 with a 2.94 e.r.a., Corey, a relief specialist, was 1-1 with a 0.74 e.r.a., and Pia finished 3-0 with a 2.06 e.r.a. Last year's ace, Carl Elmstrom (7-2, 0.86), signed with the Milwaukee Braves organization following graduation. Senior Walt Crotty (Winchester), junior Dick Farrell (Florence) and sophs Tom Linnehan (Wayland) and Jim Ritchie (Grafton) will battle for the number four position.

Senior Dave Krukonis (Bridgewater) returns for his third regular season. Last Spring Krukonis was bothered by a shoulder injury and missed most of the early-season games. But Dave seems ready to go at full strength and should be an important steadying-influences on the moundmen. Sophs Karl Kamena (Teaheck, N.J.) and Jack Farley (Abington) will understudy Krukonis.

"BIG STICKERS" SCHMOYER and HUGHES

Capt. Tony Williams (Milford) heads the returning infield list that could shape up as a solid all-around unit. The slick-fielding third baseman is joined by another three-year regular, hard-hitting Jim Schmoyer (Pittsfield), at second base. Senior Pete Larkin (Belmont) has earned two letters as an able handyman all over the infield and outfield. Now Pete appears to have the inside track on the shortstop position vacated by the graduation of Frank Pisiewski, who signed with the Boston Red Sox. William was an All Yankee Conference selection last Spring, while Schmoyer made second-team All New England. The fourth member of the infield will probably be junior first baseman John Awdycki (Gardner).

Also in the infield picture are juniors Joe Apicella (Hopedale), Dick Ricciardi (Worcester) and Gerry Street (Scituate), and soph first baseman Dick Stewart (Lynnfield).

The outfield could be one of the Redmen strong points, despite Centerfielder Bob Hughes (Belmont) hit .367 as a soph and .304 last year, although hampered by a pulled leg muscle. Lettermen Ken Clark (Amherst) and Neil Harris (No. Attleboro) will contend for the left field spot, while highly-promising sophomore Steve Wojnar (Holyoke) should start in right.

Detroit To Represent U.S. In Olympic Site Competition

by FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. George Romney of Michigan and Mayor Jerome Cavanagh of Detroit expressed confidence today that a "total effort" in money and manpower will convince the International Olympic Committee that the 1968 summer games should be held in Detroit.

Detroit won designation as the United States candidate from members of the U.S. Olympic Committee Board of Directors Monday but must still be approved by the international committee, which also will study bids from Mexico City, Buenos Aires, Lausanne, and Lyons, France.

Last Held In 1932

The Olympics have not been staged in the United States since 1932 when they were held in Los Angeles—one of the four cities which competed with Detroit Monday for the honor of being named the U.S. candidate for 1968. The IOC adopted a rule in 1950 that only one city from a country may bid for an Olympiad and it must have the approval of its National Olympic Committee.

Informed sources say the IOC is inclined to select a non-United States city as the site for the 1968 Olympics but Gov. Romney and Mayor Cavanagh believe Detroit will make the best presentation to the IOC when it meets in Nairobi, Kenya, next October.

"No U.S. city is better known through the world than Detroit," said Gov. Romney. "We believe we will get the IOC bid."

"We are optimistic," said Mayor Cavanagh. "As soon as I return to Detroit I will again call upon our citizens' committee which we have created and detail our plans for making the best possible presentation to the International Olympic Comm.

To Ask Federal Help

"I'll also be calling upon our federal government representatives in Washington to assist us in making this presentation so we can be sure to bring the games to the United States in 1968."

Kenneth L. Tug Wilson, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, also was optimistic.

"I'm optimistic about getting the Olympic Games for the United States for 1968," said Wilson. "The committee members agreed to make a concerted effort to bring the Olympics to the U.S."

Wilson revealed that the 40-man Olympic committee gave 32 of its votes to Detroit. Los Angeles received four votes, Portland two and San Francisco and Philadelphia one each.

Headlines In The News

ROME (UPI)—A space collaboration agreement between the United States and Russia could lead to a joint launching of probes to Venus and Mars, scientific experts said yesterday.

The two powers, in a major space breakthrough, announced agreement Wednesday on details of their first cooperative project in satellite communications.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has denied charges that its non-medical officials have been allowing potentially dangerous drugs to reach the market.

The FDA said that Dr. John O. Nestor, one of its own doctors, had never informed the agency of his complaints before he made the charge Wednesday at a Senate hearing.

Nestor refused to comment on the FDA denial.

PARIS (UPI)—Most of the Western allies lined up against France yesterday in backing President Kennedy's plan for a multi-nation nuclear defense against Communist aggression.

West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, Greece and Turkey all indicated their support or active interest in the plan at Wednesday's meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO council.

Sixty Freshmen Selected To Participate In Second Semester Honors Colloquia

by NEAL ANDELMAN '63

The following is the final article in a series on the University's Honor's Colloquia program. This article concerns the Freshmen Colloquia.

The number of applicants for the Freshman Colloquia presented quite a problem to the Honors staff, for 40 vacancies in the program to be filled by Freshmen, but there were about 150 applicants.

Twenty members of the Honors staff, in terms of three, interviewed each of the candidates, finally selecting 60 Freshmen to participate in the regular program.

Ten Freshmen were given advanced standing and invited to participate in the Sophomore Colloquia.

One Colloquium, under direction of Mr. William Ross, Professor of Physics (and the man voted outstanding teacher at this year's Centennial Convocation) and Mr. Leland Varley, Professor of English, is discussing History, Its' Meaning and Uses. The group is now reading The Uses of the Past and plans to read other books such as: The Philosophy of History in Our Times, The Case for Modern Man, and Philosophy of History.

Dr. Ross described this Colloquium in this way: ". . . A bunch of rugged individualists, and we have been willing to let them be individuals. We are running this as wide open as any Colloquium has ever been run . . . We have discussed quality vs. quantity, Has America reached its apex of imperialism? . . ."

A second Colloquium is discussing: Man, His Ideals, and Society. This group has Mr. John Conlon, Asst. Dean of the School of Business, and Mr. Robert Wellman, Asst. Professor of Education, as faculty participants.

Dr. Wellman offered his opinions of the program. "As a teacher I am all in favor of the program. John Conlon and I have a very good group of students. I feel it is unfortunate that this type of thing is not spread out through the entire University. Some faculty feel only the top students can gain from this type of program. My own opinion is that other undergraduates could profit from this more than the top students."

This group is reading such books as: Thomas Jefferson on Democracy, The American Political Tradition, and The Great Ascent.

Another Colloquium has Mr. Robert Williams, Asst. Professor of Chemistry and Mr. Harry Schumer, Asst. Professor of Psychology as its faculty participants.

The fourth Colloquium is working in the area of population. They are reading such books as: On Population: Three Essays, The Limits of the Earth, and Overpopulation, 20th Century Nemesis.

Faculty participants are Mr. Klaus Kroner, Asst. Professor of Mechanical Engineering, and Mr. Hamed El-Bisi, Professor of Food Technology. Dr. Kroner had this to say about the Colloquium: "I'm amazed at what these students can do. I never dreamed students could have a discussion on such a high plane."

The financial aspects of the new plan are also eliciting support of many college and university officials, Pentagon proponents assert. The smaller, selective ROTC program will be a boon to many schools with crowded physical plants burdened by large ROTC units. And, Pentagon officials are hopeful that all three services can be represented at many schools under the new plan.

Pentagon officials also note that many universities have decided not to wait for Congressional action to unburden themselves of compulsory ROTC programs. Land grant colleges and universities are required by law only to maintain military training programs—not mandatory ones, and a number of schools have switched to voluntary in the past few years, often after ROTC in the past few years, often after concerted student pressure had worked for some time to effect the change.

Pentagon personnel report that over a dozen schools have already eliminated compulsory ROTC in anticipation of the new plan, and many are offering only an advanced two-year program.

Van Meter To Be Girls' Dorm; Men To Go Back To Plymouth

Van Meter, the men's dorm that's "halfway to heaven", is going to the girls next year.

The news comes from an announcement released by the Dean of Students' office yesterday. It was also announced that Brooks will continue to be used for women students and Plymouth will be returned to the men.

Cause of the switch, which will give the campus' largest dorm to the fair sex, is a delay in the construction schedules of the four residence halls to be located north of Van Meter. Another factor is the increased number of women now on campus and already selected for next year's freshman class.

Van Meter, now housing about 350 men students, was built for about 420 capacity, according to Housing Officer Frank Thomas. He said that, since many rooms will be triples, over 450 girls will probably be placed there in September.

Thomas said the four halls now under construction are not expected to be all completed until September of 1964. He said, though, that one or two should be ready for occupancy by next January. The four halls will house 1300 students.

All residence halls will necessarily house more students than normally is expected. Additional rooms will have to be used as triples and many singles will be converted to doubles until the new halls are ready.

Students occupying rooms above their normal capacity will receive refunds of 20% in the rent payment if the crowding continues beyond October 18, 1963.

The Housing Office will assist men seeking off-campus housing for next year, either in Amherst or the surrounding towns. Lists of available rooms will be solicited for this area and will be made available through the Housing Office to students.

The announcement stated that priorities will be given students seeking off-campus housing in order that they may have adequate car and parking privileges on the campus.

If the number of students seeking such off-campus arrangements with the attendant car permissions exceeds the capacity of the University parking facilities, it may be necessary to restrict the usual blanket car permission granted to seniors to those persons who particularly need car registration.

According to the Dean of Students' office the construction delay became known only after plans and admissions procedures for next year were final.

Cites Need For Improvements

Business Leaders Hear Lederle

President Lederle told business leaders Friday that improvements on three fronts are needed to keep government services and operations "sound and workable."

Speaking on the UM campus at the 11th annual management seminar of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Lederle called for better communication between government agencies and the general public, higher pay for persons in government service, and a healthier public attitude toward politics and the political process.

Lederle declared that "government can keep from operating in a vacuum when government officials with all their expert resources help the people to get adequate information."

He urged more direct contact between public officials and their constituents as well as improvement in the quality of reports and other informational materials issued by government agencies.

Higher Pay

Pointing to low salaries of public officials as a possible cause of ineffective government, Lederle told the businessmen and industrialists that adequate pay public service personnel is "part of the investment responsibility of every firm and every citizen in Massachusetts."

To keep government salaries at a competitive level, Lederle recommended a continuing study, with an annual report to the legislature, to provide data on "wage changes that have occurred in the labor market and what must be done to keep Massachusetts public service abreast of these changes. Sound personnel management requires that the state government keep its wage rates fully competitive."

Lax Public To Blame

Lederle laid some of the blame for ineffective government, whenever it exists, on lax citizens. He attacked the "negative attitude" of people who think of politics "as a business to stay out of," adding: "How we can have our form of government without politics is beyond me."

Lederle said that he realized that "much of what I am saying is unpopular. But somebody has to say it."

Lederle added that, in his view, "Massachusetts is much, much better than its image sometimes seems to indicate."

Lit. Series To Continue This Month

The WMUA lecture series dealing with works covered in English 25 and 26 courses will continue during April.

English 25 lectures will be broadcast on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 8 p.m., with a talk on the "Philosophy of Plato" starting off the program tonight.

Other English 25 topics to be covered this month include "Readings in Dante," April 10; and "Dante's Divine Comedy" April 17 and 24.

A discussion of Keats on April 8 at 7:30 p.m. will be the first of the English 2 series this month, while later lectures will deal with "Dostoevsky's Crime and Punishment," April 15 and 22; and Yeats, April 29.

A listening room will be set aside in the SU each Monday and Wednesday evening for the convenience of students without radios.

Sec. White To Lecture On Reforms

Kevin H. White, Secretary of the Commonwealth, will lecture on "Election Laws: Need for Reform" on April 9 at 4 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the SU.

A graduate of Williams College '52 and Boston College Law School '55, Mr. White is a member of the law firm of Cameron & White located on Tremont St. in Boston.

He served as assistant district attorney of Suffolk County prior at his election as secretary in 1960.

Re-elected secretary in 1962, Mr. White introduced several bills to the legislature last year on the need for election law reform.

The father of three children, he lives at 30 Cedar Lane Way in Boston.

His talk is being sponsored by the UMass Political Science Association, a non-partisan student political group on campus.

MUA Airs Warren's SU Speech

Campus radio station WMUA will broadcast the lecture tonight by Pulitzer Prize winning novelist-poet Robert Penn Warren in the SU Ballroom at 8 p.m.

All students who cannot attend the lecture may tune it in on WMUA at 91.1 F.M. or 190 A.M.

The topic of the lecture will be "The End of an Era". Warren will discuss Hemingway, Faulkner and Frost.

This will be the second in this year's series of Alumni War Memorial Lectures; it is open to the public without charge.

Warren won a Pulitzer Prize for fiction in 1947 for his novel, "All the King's Men." In 1958 he won a second Pulitzer Prize, this time for poetry. He is the only writer to be honored in both these fields.

In recent years, he has divided his time between creative writing—novels, poetry and criticism—and teaching at Yale University.

State Official To Investigate 'Staggering' UM Phone Bill

The high cost of telephone service at UMass was questioned just as the University was going on vacation by State Comptroller Joseph Alecks. Alecks said he is withholding payment of a bill of $7,034.57 for February's service.

At this rate, the Comptroller stated, the taxpayers of the Commonwealth will pay about $84,000.00 for the University phone bill for a year.

"This is a staggering amount," Alecks said.

Alecks said he is sending one of his field accountants to the University to determine whether phones in private homes are being paid by the State; why so many toll charges when the mail might have been used for far less cost; why personal telephone calls are made; whether any Federal taxes are paid on personal calls; why calls in many instances do not go through the switchboard; and why the callers are not taking advantage of the wide area phone service recently installed at the University for the purpose of saving money.

Tickets for the Greek Week concert Sunday featuring Peter, Paul and Mary are almost gone, officials have announced.

Those planning to attend are urged to obtain tickets as soon as possible.

Editorial Page

Sayonara

On the eve of the final issue of the Collegian for the 1962-63 Executive Board I am going to cast aside the "we and theys" and take advantage of my position as editorial editor and have my first person say.

My purpose is not to defend or congratulate the Collegian on the papers published during our stay in office. This is the perogative of the reader. I would like to take this opportunity to discuss a subject that never quite fit into regular editorial pages.

It is the traditional custom of the students (and, I might add, the faculty) to severely criticize this University. I pride myself that I have added my name to those who have criticized, but there are certain dangers involved in this type of activity.

As Mr. Larry Johnson recently pointed out at an informal discussion in Butterfield Dormitory, people on the inside of an institution (I use that word with some hesitation) tend to be its most severe critics. I believe that this applies very well to UMass. We know the dirty insides of the University and so there is a tendency to forget whatever gleam is on the outside. Perhaps this might explain why Harvard, Yale and MIT are looked on as Utopia by most students at UMass and about every other college in the area.

The next time you get a chance, talk to someone from one of the above schools and see if that person paints a rosy picture of his alma mater or tends to notice the dirty insides. Of course I'm not trying to say that UMass can be included in the category of Harvard, Yale or MIT—we can not.

I'm not saying that we should stop criticizing our University—only a fool would claim that at UMass criticism is not needed in some areas—but I ask that we stop for one minute to remember that the University of Massachusetts has a black side to the ledger as well as a red one.

For all of UMass' faults I am proud to have attended for four years at this institution and I know that many of my peers feel the same way.

Now if you will permit me a small footnote addressed to all of the writers of the "Letters To The Editor" who have called me a communist, right-winger, left winger, gullible fool, and a coward: I'm really a nice guy.

Invitation To Greek Week

Each year the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils present a week of events which highlights the fraternity system's spring social calendar. This year Greek Week will be held from April 1 through April 7. During this week all fraternities and sororities will participate in various events which are designed towards informing the entire campus of Greek activities while forming tighter bonds between the various fraternal organizations.

The week officially began Tuesday evening with a mass exchange supper between all sorority houses. On Wednesday Dr. Schumer of the Psychology Department and Dean Field will address the annual Greek Banquet held at Wiggins Tavern. Friday night's Ball will feature the crowning of this year's Greek Week Queen. On Saturday some of the athletes in each of the sixteen fraternities will be testing thir skills and stamina in the Greek Olympics and Chariot races. The curtain will finally fall on Greek Week festivities when "Peter, Paul and Mary" present a two hour concert on Sunday afternoon.

The aim of this year's Greek Week is to present a true picture of Greek life to the entire campus. Therefore, on behalf of the Executive Boards of the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils I would like to invite the entire campus to witness the several events to be held this weekend. If anyone is unsure of the time or place of a particular event, Greek Week programs are available throughout the campus and a schedule of events will also appear in the Collegian.

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

FREE SPEECH AND THE ACADEMIC COMMUNITY

Dr. Abram Sachar is the first and only president of Brandeis. In this position he has sought to create for Brandeis the image of a "great" educational institution. He has done remarkably well. Yet, last week Dr. Sachar spoke his mind and carried Brandeis back to the era of "respectable" dissent, when basic criticism of this country's foreign policy could not be tolerated, especially if this criticism emanated from the academic community.

In June, Dr. David F. Aberle and his wife Kathleen Gough Aberle will leave Brandeis. Last October, Mrs. Aberle said in a speech to students, "I am one of those who support Fidel Castro and his revolutionary government." For this speech, she was reprimanded by Dr. Sachar:

"She spoke her mind on a day of desperate tension. As president, I had the responsibility to reprimand her, not because she expressed a dissenting opinion but because of the recklessness and the irresponsibility of her language."

Thus, Dr. Sachar asserts that Mrs. Aberle was in error not because of what she said but rather because of how she said it. With this statement, Dr. Sachar retains his position as the Gorgias of Brandeis.

The Saturday edition of the Globe carries the headline:

"reprimand 'an error,' but . . .

BRANDEIS FACULTY BACKS SACHAR"

Yet, the story conflicts significantly with the lead. In it, we see that the faculty of Brandeis supports Dr. Sachar's right "to disassociate the university" from the remarks of Mrs. Aberle. However, we then read that Dr. Sachar's reprimand of Mrs. Aberle "was an error of judgement and could be interpreted as an infringement of academic freedom." Thus, the faculty, we find, has not "backed" Dr. Sachar but has rather criticised him! But even the statement of the faculty has an unpleasant odor. It says that Dr. Sachar's reprimand "could be interpreted" as an infringement . . . " Indeed, elsewhere in the statement of the faculty we read:

"The resignation of Dr. Aberle has prevented a clear test of the issue."

Supposedly, this "clear test" would have come if professors David and Kathleen Aberle had not resigned and a direct confrontation had resulted. Apparently the faculty feels that the pressures exerted by Dr. Sachar upon these professors do not constitute direct action. Thus, along with Dr. Sachar, the faculty goes the way of all flesh.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Qualitative vs. Quantitative

There are three crucial problems to be solved at all institutions of higher education, hence at the University of Massachusetts as well. In order of importance, they are: (1) motivation of students, (2) recruitment of first-rate faculty, (3) provision of adequate "plant". By plant I mean all the physical objects that go to make up the campus of the University—science buildings, dormitories, grass, lawnmowers, books, etc. Obviously, books are the most important part of the "plant".

If one could solve the first problem, that of motivating students to learn, then all remaining problems dissolve. For if we had here at the University only students whose entire concern in life was to learn, to seek out as much knowledge as they are capable of, to understand as much of man and the universe as their most intense efforts will allow, then we faculty members would have scarcely any work to do. Give us the names and addresses of such students, stamps and envelopes, and we shall send them long and difficult reading lists. Indeed, this already involves more "plant" than necessary. Just post the address of the University in a few public places, and the kind of student I have in mind will seek out the faculty and get the lists without further prompting.

I am exaggerating, of course, in order to make a point. Students in the sciences need supervised instruction with expensive laboratory equipment, and all that sort of thing. Still, the idea stands up. Given highly motivated students, there will be excellent education in spite of anticipted plant, in spite even of the faculty. Solve the problem of motivation of students, and you solve at one stroke all of the remaining problems.

It is obvious, of course, that most of this problem of motivating students falls on the already over-burdened shoulders of primary and secondary educators. If they can provide the sort of student I have in mind—who, by the way, need by no means be a genius, or even unusually intelligent—then not even the most adverse of circumstances is going to prevent him from getting a superior education at the University of Massachusetts. Fortunately, at the University we are helping things along considerably with SCOPE, whose work in recruiting able students ought to start paying big dividends shortly.

The two remaining problems that I listed initially are much more easily solved than the first one, which is without a doubt the crucial problem of education. They are so easy to solve that one can express the key trick in one word, "money". But a solution to either of them is at least a partial solution to the first problem. Let me illustrate. Suppose we had a logician here at the University of the stature of a Godel or a Quine. Then students from all over the world would sacrifice every material possession they had in order to study logic in Amherst under such a scholar. I mean this literally. Graduate students flock from all over the world to Princeton and Harvard, on a financial shoe-string, to study with the intellectual titans these institutions have on their faculties. And at least part of the solution to getting such men is to pay them decent salaries. Or else tempt them here—and this applies especially to the sciences—with the best equipment, the best "plant" in the world. Actually, this is remarkably easy to do, granted one has enough money. Were somebody to give me a billion dollars, I guarantee you that I could make the University of Massachusetts the world center for studies in particle physics. I would simply build the largest particle accelerator in the world here in Amherst, then offer the world's top physicists positions as janitors, with the provision that they could play with the accelerator during lunch hours and after work. They would accept, all right. That is why they are the world's top physicists. Because they allow nothing to stand between them and that chance to push back, just a bit, the frontiers of knowledge; to lift, be it ever so little, the veil that seals off the unknown.

This brings us full circle back to the original problem, that of motivation. My hypothetical janitor-physicist is what he is today, because he was, as a student thirty years previously, motivated to get his hands on all the knowledge that existed in physics. Find the trick to inspire students toward goals of this sort, and you have solved, I repeat, all the problems of education.

THE QUESTION BOX

To the Editor:

We are about to institute an idea in the Student Union which is motivated by a sincere desire to answer any and all questions which might arise, and which many times are left unanswered because of lack of a common means of communication.

We are calling this a "Question Box," and it will be in an easily accessible spot at the Lobby Counter.

Any student with any question in his mind concerning or pertaining to Student Union or Student Activities in any way, is invited to drop his question in the box.

Any communication signed by a student, with his campus address, will receive a personal reply. Also, the answer will be put on the bulletin board.

Redmen Acquire Tan And Experience Down South

by AL RICE '66

Spring training, Massachusetts style, proved a worthwhile venture during the vacation week when the UMass baseball team traveled to Virginia and North Carolina to play Camp Lejeune and Ft. Lee to get in shape for their regular schedule that begins a week from today with a game at American International College. Until the trip Earl Lorden's club had almost no outside practice and the team was not in shape. Therefore their record for the week was a disappointing 1-6, but the UMass mentor was well satisfied with things as a whole since the main purpose of the trip was well fulfilled.

The weather was perfect every day the boys were down South, and they used it to best advantage, working out all day during their stay at Camp Lejeune. Getting his boys into shape and looking over new talent were the orders of the day, and the latter half of the problem was also solved as Lorden came up with some new boys who are good prospects and will give the regulars a fight for their jobs.

Steve Wojnar, a sophomore right fielder from Holyoke, swung the heaviest bat on the trip and showed his .475 batting average with the Freshman team was no fluke. Wojnar is sure of an outfield spot, and Ken Clark and Tom Hughes are set at the present for the other spots, but Coach Lorden indicated that there are few others around who have their sights set on a garden post. "We have mainly a veteran team, but there are some young ones who are going to push the regulars for jobs." Ralph Moore, a .333 hitter with the freshman last year, and a pair of juniors out for the first time, Tony Kazukonis and Tony Simone, were the ones who impressed Lorden most on the southern swing. They did not get to see a lot of action, but they are scheduled to receive a more thorough test before opening day.

John Awdycki, a junior who saw very limited action last season has all but clinched the first base job, and captain Tony Williams, a second team All-New England selection in 1962, is a fixture at the hot corner. The double play combination underwent a switch when last year's second sacker Jim Schmoyer was moved to short and Pete Larkin, a utility man last year was given the second base berth. Before the season Larkin had figured to be the shortstop.

Overall the team played well throughout the trip, but the big missing factor was consistency. Most of the regulars did well with their bats, but the hits didn't come at the times needed to win games. UMass left a lot of men in scoring position. The fielding was up to par for the most part, too, but the Redmen blew a game last Friday to Fort Lee when all the errors started coming at once.

Considering the little time the pitchers had in getting ready, they were satisfactory though not exceptional. As expected Dick Wilson holds the distinction of number one left hander and Lew Pia is the top righty. Rod Corey, hard throwing right hander relief hurler, was somewhat disappointing with his wildness, but Lorden expects him to come around before long. Others who looked good on the mound were Dick Farrell and Jim Ritchie. Farrell, from Florence, is another junior out for the team his first time, but he has already clinched a spot as number two postsider on the Redmen staff. Ritchie, a first year varsity man, has shown he will be a help to the club although he probably won't be a starter right from the first.

If the warm weather continues for a few more days, the Redmen will be in good shape to match last year's 15-5 record in 1963: The nucleus of a fine club is present from the previous season. Only five men departed, of which three went with the pros. Last year's catcher, Ted Osetek, split time with Dave Krukonis who is set for the job now, so that position did not suffer a loss. If Krukonis fails, sophomores Jack Farley and Karl Kamena are ready and able to take over, a condition that exists with nearly every one of the nine positions on the team, so Coach Lorden can expect his regulars to be working one hundred percent.

INTRAMURAL SOFTBALL

1. With graduation coming up, looks like we'll have to start thinking about the future.

My philosophy is to live from day to day.

2. That's fine when you have no responsibilities. But chances are you'll have a wife to think about soon.

I may just decide to lead the bachelor life.

3. Hardly likely, since 93 per cent of all men and women get married.

Is that so?

4. Yes, indeed. What's more, you'll have children to consider.

Maybe we won't have any.

5. I doubt that—after all, 90 per cent of the women who get married today have children. And, on the average, they have all their children before they're 27.

All my life I've shirked responsibility. Have a ball, enjoy yourself—that's my motto. Now, in two minutes, you've given me a wife and who knows how many children to take care of. What should I do? Where do I begin?

6. First relax. Then look into some good insurance... like Living Insurance from Equitable. It gives the kind of protection every family should have. Helps you save for the future, too. And don't worry—your chances for a happy family life are very good.

Orr Looks Forward To Winning Seasons For UM

radio and representatives of the University got their first chance to meet the 35-year old Orr at a press luncheon held at the S.U. yesterday afternoon. Director of Athletics Warren P. McGuirk told the gathering that after a long and careful search UMass has come up with the best possible candidate of those who were considered for the post.

In looking for a new man, McGuirk mentioned that expert opinion was sought out from top calibre basketball coaching personnel across the country. And Orr comes to Amherst with a back pocket full of recommendations from such well-knowns of the court world as Joe Lapchick of St. John's, George Smith, athletic director and former head coach of Cincinnati and Adolph Rupp of the University of Kentucky.

Orr has had a full and interesting career both as a player and a coach. While at Taylorville, Illinois, High, he was the top scorer of a team that ran up an amazing string of 45 games in one season ending with the 1944 Illinois state schoolboy crown.

In his first year at Illinois U. he was mentioned for Big Ten freshmen honors. Orr's last three college playing years were spent at Beloit College where he was named three times to the All-Midwest Conference team and was a NAIB All-American first squad choice in 1947 and 1948.

The new Redmen coach also saw action after graduation. He played with the Peoria Caterpillars in the National AAU tournament in 1948 and spent the 1949-50 season as a member of several teams of the old National Basketball Association.

Orr's coaching days began with Milton Union High in Milton, Wisc. After compiling a 15 and 7 slate there, he moved to Dubuque, Iowa, to amass an eight year high school record of 103-71. His first taste of college coaching began in 1959 when he became assistant varsity coach at Wisconsin.

After yesterday's luncheon Orr settled down to give the press a preview of what to expect from him as a coach and what he expects from his players. When asked if he would employ any particular brand of offense or defense Orr replied that he would like to go with a combination of the fast break and working with the big pivot man. He said that he likes a running game and will use it as often as he can.

On defense Orr likes the press, three quarter court, full court, or whatever he feels is necessary under the circumstances. To make his offensive and defensive tactics work to the fullest Orr said that he will demand a one hundred percent effort from his ball players. And he said that this requires being in top condition. "I guarantee that they'll be in condition," he stated emphatically, "and when on the court, they'll be thinking of basketball."

Orr stated enthusiastically that he is looking forward to a good season next year. He said he is quite optimistic in his outlook and rightly so, for he inherits a squad that returns intact next year including first team All-New England forward Rodger Twitchell.

Lacrosse — A Short History

by WALTER GREEN '66

Lacrosse originated with the Indians and is one of the few purely American sports. This, the national game of Canada, combines the beauty of team play with the thrill of individual skill. It contains the rough and tumble of football, the speed of basketball, the endurance of long distance running, and the finesse and skill of hockey. It calls for nerve and strength, and also adroitness and intelligence. It has been rightly called the "fastest game on two feet."

Lacrosse is played by two teams of ten players each. Each team attacking the opponent's goal and defending its own. The object of both sides is to put the ball into the goal of the opponent, and all the running, dodging, passing, and checking tend to that end. The ball may not be touched by the hands, except by the goalkeeper when attempting to prevent the scoring of a goal. The ball is kept in play by being carried, thrown or batted with the stick, or kicked in any direction within the confines of the playing field.

A game is sixty minutes in length, divided into four quarters of fifteen minutes each. There is a one minute interval between quarters, with a half-time interval of ten minutes. Tie scores result in two five minutes overtimes.

At the beginning of each quarter, and after each goal is scored, play is started at the center of the field by a faceoff between the two centers.

Lacrosse is played in approximately sixty colleges in the country, mostly on the East coast; New England, Long Island, Maryland, New York, and Ohio being the states where the game is primarily concentrated; yet there are some teams in the mid-west. Perennial powers include Johns Hopkins, Army, Navy, and Maryland.

The history of Lacrosse is colorful as are the games played here on most Wednesdays and Saturdays this Spring. This week the Redmen will be scrimmaging Union College on Wednesday and Thursday, Williams on Friday, and the Boston Lacrosse Club on Saturday, which sports two former UMass stars. Why not plan to witness a fine sample of the "fastest game on two feet" on one or more of these dates this week. The place is the field directly behind Curry S. Hicks Cage.

Novelist Warren Discusses The Future Of Poetry

by OLEN PAWLUK '65

Neither critics nor reviews, but a sound core of enthusiastic readers is what makes poetry survive, Robert Penn Warren, Pulitzer Prize winning novelist and poet, declared in the second Alumni Memorial Lecture.

Warren's talk, "The End of an Era," was held Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the S.U. Ballroom before a near capacity audience. Poetry became the main theme of Warren's talk in place of "The Contemporary Novel" which had originally been scheduled.

"Shakespeare is not the morning newspaper to us," began Warren. "The same poem," he added, "may be prophecy for one individual and art for another."

Warren went on to state that the forward march of our society and culture has tended to alienate the poet. The poets of the past, such as Tennyson and Longfellow, observed Warren, became culture heroes, while the modern poets of today have to struggle with society to express their views.

"Our age is the age of unmasking, the peeling away of the onion," Warren commented. "The two great onion peelers," he continued, "were Marx and Freud, and they robbed the poet of his romantic dignity."

The element in poetry which survives, remarked Warren, may be completely different from what the age clamors for and what the people think they want. He went on to note that the prophetic element of poetry may disappear in a short time, but the element of art will always remain.

"Revolution in poetry," concluded Warren, "is made by new poems, and not by the repudiation of old ones."

Accusations Fly In Stormy Session Of Student Senate

by DICK WIMBERLY '66

Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting erupted in a storm of controversy over charges made by Senator Ross Jones against Senators Jon Fife ('64 Van Meter) and George Jones (Married Dorms) that the two had violated the confidence of various executive sessions of Senate committees.

The Executive Committee of the Senate ruled that Senator Jon Fife (Van Meter) and Senator George Jones (Married Students) be considered exonerated from any accusations heretofore mentioned on the Senate floor and proposed that an informal closed Senate meeting be held.

After the end of the regular meeting Pres. Cournoyer convened the informal meeting and ordered all non-Senators out of the Senate Chamber. Sen. Ross Jones ('64-Brett) stated that he felt that the meeting was "arbitrary, illegal, and unwise" and promptly departed from the meeting.

After a short closed meeting, a 5-minute recess was called. When the meeting reconvened it was in open session. Pres. Cournoyer declared that something had to be done about the allegations and asked if anyone wished to move that a trial be set up to examine any charges against anyone. No one made such a motion. A motion to adjourn was made and defeated.

Senator George Jones said that an apology to the Senate should be made. Senator Jon Fife said that he felt that Sen. George Jones and himself were being called liars and that he also would like an apolgy.

A motion was then made to accept the executive committee's report that "because of lack of evidence Senators George Jones and Jon Fife are obsolved of all allegations made against them". This was passed 15 for, 9 against, 8 abstaining.

The regular meeting was somewhat less spectacular. The Concert Assoc. budget of $17,975 was passed, along with those of the Political Science Assoc. and the Amateur Radio Assoc.

The Women's Interdorm Council amended Constitution was passed.

(UPI), Jackson, Miss.—Gov. Ross Barnett, on sending speakers to other states to gain support for Mississippi's position on states' rights:

"I think we're getting some good results. I believe the pendulum is swinging our way."

SOMETHING ANEW

The free expression of opinion gives dignity to man. It gives to man not a weapon of arms and force, but that of understanding and rationality. From opinion grows ideas, movements, revolutions, and above all, reasons for living. About every action, about every idea, about every man, someone has an opinion. But it is the opinion based on reason that ultimately brings change. With these maxims in mind the Collegian's editorial page begins another year with its main emphasis being the student on campus, and the student in the world.

"Human nature is not a machine; it is like a tree, drawing from all around it to supply the inward forces within it, in order to become a freely expressive personality with a gradual development of the individual." —John Stuart Mills

The student on campus: a person who is in the process of learning who he is—part of this self-actualizing is the stretching out of an individual's being and the learning how one feels; and to experience the utterings of these feelings in expressions of opinion. Thus the editorial page becomes extremely important! For here is a place where opinions run rampant, here is a place where the whole University community is invited to share their own feelings, be they students, faculty or administration. It will be the policy of this page to deal with issues. Names? never. All those who feel that Franklin Delano Roosevelt is the last word in presidents; then again all those who believe in Barry Goldwater as the savior of the American political-economic structures; for those who sense that Bertrand Russell has the solution to the problems of mankind; for those who turn to Edward Teller for the solution of man; for those who feel at all—the editorial page is open.

We will not only attempt to represent opinion on campus but we will also try to activate discussion and opinion among the student body. To put a vitality and subjective spark into the relatively objective news.

This page then, is your expression. It's emphasis is the student on campus and the student in the world. But, what of the student in the world? Is there such a thing? Do we think of the world? One does not go through a day without thinking in terms of a world. A world, which is confused. A world where things are at times somewhat hopelessly depressing. A world which offers us fear. And yet it is a world that we must come to grips with. A world we can come to grips with. Our attitude determines the hope and the beauty we see in it. For in our opinion or attitude lay the power for a constructive or destructive action in the world. Thus the editorial page will be concerned with the world and how it is relative to us as we live our lives in a peaceful town lost in the fertile valley of western Massachusetts. The direction of local, national, and international events will be towards what they mean to us.

We are fortunate. We more than most people in the history of mankind are given the freedom to express ourselves. And we do! The problem lies in how rational and productive is the expression. The writers on the Collegian's editorial page put themselves before the University community to be examined and scrutinized for their rationality, intelligence and wisdom. If there is a criticism of anything on this page during the forthcoming year, a coward, an irresponsible coward is the person who doesn't react to it in some sort of oral or written communication.

Mortar Board Comments

For many years now House Councils, House Mothers, and the Dean of Women's office all have been plagued with the problem of illegal guests on big weekends such as Homecoming and Winter Carni. In the Handbook, under Women's Residence Regulations, the rules state that the guest "must be a personal friend of her hostess," she must have a bed in which to sleep and a guest card must be made out by her hostess, and signed by the Housemother before she arrives.

This rule has been broken numerous times on all three counts. First, most guests on big weekends are not personal friends of their hostesses. They are the dates of acquaintances of the girl's boyfriend, or some other such obscure relationship. The "personal friend" stipulation is important to insure that the guests will feel a responsibility to keep the rules. But most girls are so grateful just to have a place to sleep that they do observe the rules. Second, in some dorms there are approximately 20 to 60 illegal guests; that is, girls without beds in which to sleep. This is certainly a potentially dangerous situation If there should ever be an emergency in a dorm no one could be sure that everyone had fled. However, this danger is just as serious as that of strictly enforcing the rule. The House Council who attempted such a task would find itself so disliked that it would not be able to ask the co-operation of the girls for anything else. Third, the rules do not make any provisions for the last minute guests which are many on big weekends. This rule protects the girl who has gone home and whose room the guest will use. She has a right to know ahead of time who will be in her room and what kind of person she is. However, on the big weekends all beds are taken far in advance and the last minute guest must double with her hostess or sleep on the floor. She is therefore not a threat to the rights of the girls who have gone home and she, like the guest who was planned, far in advance, needs overnight accommodations.

At the present time the guest rule is literally unenforceable on big weekends for the following reasons. First of all, because all the hotels and motels were filled long in advance, there is no other place for these girls to go. The Dean of Women has said at various times that the University has no responsibility for these girls. If they choose to come they personally must take the consequences of having no place to stay. This may mean that girls will have to sleep alone in the lounges of men's dorms or in parked cars. They should not be forced into an uncomfortable position out of necessity.

Second, as has been mentioned before, a House Council cannot enforce this rule because it would mean a complete and thorough room check. It not only would be easy for girls to move from room to room during the check and thus escape being caught, but also it would increase the similarity between the House Council and the police force, and, decrease the possibility of the council's being effective in other areas of dorm life. It is also very hard for a group to enforce a rule in which it doesn't itself believe.

What, then, is the solution to the problem? Clearly, it is not the strict enforcement of the rules. Other universities handle the problem by either emptying a men's dorm for the guests, or by having them sleep in the fraternity houses. Unfortunately, however, probably neither one of these solutions would work within the present structure of the University. Yet we feel that by simply saying that the University has no responsibility for its guests, the problem is ignored and no workable solution is possible.

We recommend that the University assume the responsibility to provide adequate housing facilities for its guests. We further recommend that extra beds or even mattresses be purchased and set up during the big weekends in the Rec Room of every woman's dorm. A small fee of one or two dollars could be charged to each girl who wants a bed so that the money spent on the new beds would be paid back in a few years. In this way guests would have a place to stay which is safer than the overcrowded dorm and the rule would be made enforcable.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

QUANTITY vs. QUALITY

To the Editor:
Re: Quantitative vs. ualitative (Dr. J. W. Swanson)

That there are three crucial problems to be solved at all institutions of higher learning: (1) motivation of students, (2) recruitment of first-rate faculty, (3) provision of adequate plant, I agree. However, I do not agree that, "if one could solve the first problem, that of motivating students to learn, then all remaining problems dissolve." For as you say, even if we had here at the University only students whose entire concern was to learn it would certainly make the faculty members' jobs easier but it would not mean that "faculty members would have scarcely any work to do." Many an eager young student arriving at this honored house of bibliolatry, exuberant and enthusiastic, has been disillusioned and consequently rendered apathetic, by the relative indifference of a battle-weary professor. By the same token I realize that there are cases where the opposite is true and that the enthusiasm of a dedicated teacher may motivate a previously apathetic student.

True, Dr. Swanson, "given highly motivated students, there will be excellent education in spite of anticipated plant," but not "in spite of faculty." By solving the problem of student motivation you do not necessarily solve at one stroke all remaining problems. You seem to underestimate the tremendous amount of influence exerted by a faculty. Allow me to suggest, Sir, that even if primary and secondary educators do provide highly motivated students your job is no less easier, and that you can create circumstances (and they need not be the most adverse (whereby students will be prevented from receiving a superior education.

To a degree I agree when you say that the two remaining problems (recruiting faculty and provision of adequate plant) may be simply solved by money. Money makes it possible to attract great names and to improve the physical plant. Yes, great names do attract students from near and far, but let us not forget that these great men have become such because of their dedication and enthusiasm in their field of study. And so, in the long run, it is still the enthusiasm of the faculty that attracts and inspires students.

Now I am aware that a teacher's enthusiasm may often be suffocated mercilessly by an academically apathetic class, but there appears to me no good reason at all why indifferent students and nonchalant teachers should be numb each other's zeal. Is is not a teacher's duty (or perhaps it's his privilege to maintain (or in some cases resurrect) his enthusiasm (however difficult it may be in the yawning face to student apathy) and to infect his students with this same enthusiasm?

If I may, I should like to revise the order of these three crucial problems of higher education. I need only to place (2) in the number one spot and your statement, "solve the first problem, then all remaining problems dissolve," is correct.

Now that (2) is (I) how do we solve it? We already mentioned one way—money. But suppose the cupboard is bare and we can't get a billion dollars, anywhere? The answer is, I believe, greater faculty-student relations. Outside the classroom relations. I sincerely believe that when the faculty gets together with the students no matter how battle-weary some may feel it is inevitable that from deep within a spark of dedication will reignite a blaze of enthusiasm so intense that none will escape it's warmth.

With due respect, I urge the faculty to conflagrate, you have your students to motivate.

Students' motivation may easily be stymied. Dr. Swanson, but if faculty enthusiasm refuses to be dulled, I say: from Quantity we have nothing to fear, so long as Quality is waiting for it here.

Respectfully,
Richard L. Towers '63

Students Stage Commando Raids Over Spring Vacation

NEW YORK UPI — Students from three greater Boston colleges and several other universities reportedly are spending their weekends and vacations staging commando raids on Cuba to arm and supply anti-Castro guerrilla fighters.

Alexander I. Rorke, Jr., a 36-year-old lecturer and free lance television reporter, made the disclosure Tuesday night on an American Broadcasting Co. ABC television interview program. He identified himself as a leader of a band of 200 Americans who are supplying arms to the underground.

Rorke said 23 students from

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

AMONG MY KINFOLK

My favorite cousin, Mandolin Glebe, a sweet, unspoiled country boy, has just started college. Today I got a letter from him which I will reprint here because I know Mandolin's problems are so much like your own. Mandolin writes:

Dear Mandolin (he thinks my name is Mandolin too),

I see by the college paper that you are writing a column for Marlboro Cigarettes. I think Marlboros are jim-dandy cigarettes with real nice tobacco and a ginger-peachy filter, and I want to tell you why I don't smoke them.

It all started the very first day I arrived at college. I was walking across the campus, swinging my paper valise and singing traditional airs like Blue Tail Fly and Death and Transfiguration, when all of a sudden I ran into this here collegiate-looking fellow with a monogram on his breast pocket. He asked me was I a freshman. I said yes. He asked me did I want to be a BMOC and the envy of all the in crowd. I said yes. He said the only way to make these keen things happen was to join a fraternity. Fortunately he happened to have a pledge card with him, so he pricked my thumb and I signed. He didn't tell me the name of the fraternity or where it is located, but I suppose I'll find out when I go active.

She carried me to a chic French restaurant

Meanwhile this fellow comes around every week to collect the dues, which are $100, plus a $10 fine for missing the weekly meeting, plus a $5 assessment to buy a headstone for Spot, the late, beloved beagle who was the fraternity mascot.

I have never regretted joining the fraternity, because it is my dearest wish to be a BMOC and the envy of all the in crowd, but you can see that it is not cheap. It wouldn't be so bad if I slept at the frat house, but you must agree that I can't sleep at the house if I don't know where the house is.

I have rented a room which is not only grotesquely expensive, but it is not at all the kind of room I was looking for. I wanted someplace reasonably priced, clean, comfortable, and within easy walking distance of classes, the shopping district, and San Francisco and New York. What I found was a bedroom in the home of a local costermonger which is dingy, expensive, and uncomfortable—and I don't even get to use the bed till 7 a.m. when my landlord goes out to mong his costers.

Well anyhow, I got settled and the next thing I did, naturally, was to look for a girl. And I found her. Harriet, her name is, a beautiful creature standing just under seven feet high and weighing 385 pounds. I first spied her leaning against the statue of the Founder, dozing lightly. I talked to her for several hours without effect. Only when I mentioned dinner did she stir. Her milky little eyes opened, she raised a brawny arm, seized my nape, and carried me to a chic French restaurant called Le Clipjoint where she consumed, according to my calculations, her own weight in chateaubriand.

After dinner she lapsed into a torpor from which I could not rouse her, no matter how I tried. I banged my glass with a fork, I pinched her great pendulous jowls, I rubbed the legs of my corduroy pants together. But nothing worked, and finally I slang her over my shoulder and carried her to the girls dorm, slipping several discs in the process.

Fortunately, medical care for students is provided free at the college infirmary. All I had to pay for were a few extras, like X-rays, anaesthesia, forceps, hemostats, scalpels, catgut, linen, towels, amortization, and nurses. They would not, however, let me keep the nurses.

So, dear cousin, it is lack of funds, not lack of enthusiasm, that is keeping me from Marlboro Cigarettes—dear, good Marlboros with their fine blend of choice tobaccos and their pure white Selectrate filter and their soft pack and their flip top box.

Well, I must close now. My pencil is wore out and I can't afford another. Keep 'em flying.

Yr. cousin Mandolin Glebe

SORORITY NEWS

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Lambda Phi wishes to express a sincere thank you to Pi Beta Phi for a most enjoyable exchange supper and after dinner gathering. Many thanks, also, to the brothers of Phi Sigma Delta, who were magnificent hosts at our exchange supper and informal get-together. A final note of appreciation to all the sororities for the royal treatment received at Mass Exchange.

We stay-at-homes certainly envied girls like Sandi May, who soaked up the sun in Fla., and Joanie Shusta, who "managed world affairs" in Washington for a week, as well as the eight sisters who saw the doings in New York. Looking forward to Greek Week, Lambdi Phi will play hostess to twelve members of our sister chapter at URI. They will observe and participate in the festivities of this coming weekend. On Tuesday evening, we were happy to pledge Lynn Weaver of Arnold into our sisterhood. Welcome, Lynn.

AROUND THE COLLEGE CAMPI

by J.D., EXCHANGE EDITOR

Segregation is still a topic of concern at many American colleges and universities. All aspects of the schools are under fire: admissions, housing, fraternities. The following schools made news because of matters of discrimination:

The University of Mississippi is still first in the news. Many of its finest instructors and administrators have left because of the recent incidents. The latest move at "Ole Miss" was a resolution by the campus senate calling for the 300 remaining troops to leave the campus.

After a 129-year history of exclusively white attendance, Tulane University registered 11 Negro students this semester, without incident. The decision was a voluntary one by the board of administrators.

At the University of Illinois, students and a university housing official were at odds. Students claimed that most housing in question is not open to Negroes or dark-skinned foreign students.

The student council at UCLA resolved to oppose university housing discrimination; the housing office is to refer to the council any landlord who has been reported twice as a policy violator.

Swarthmore College has begun a new program to encourage Negroes to seek college educations. The program works through representatives who visit high schools to speak with interested students.

Placement Directors Job Is Part Of Two Worlds

"We are graduating students to work, although we are not vocationally orienting them."

Helping to find jobs for many senior and graduate women is the job of the new Placement Director for Women, Miss Carolyn Hawes.

Miss Hawes states that: "My job is exciting because it is a part of two worlds—the academic and the intellectual life of a university, plus the realistic contact with the worlds of industry, business and education.

The students are fortunate to have such an experienced person to assist them. Miss Hawes served as Vocational Counselor at Cornell for five years, after which she joined the administration of Boston University in the position of Assistant Dean of Women. After five years at B.U. she resumed her career as a counselor last fall when she joined the Placement staff here at UMass.

Miss Hawes obtained her B.A. in English from the University of Rhode Island, and her M.A. in counseling Psychology from Columbia.

She believes that a woman's role today is necessarily a dual one, that of being a housewife and a wage earner. "This is so because of economic purposes, because of the high divorce rate, and because of the number of widows in the U. S."

Comparing B. U. to the University, Miss Hawes states that although B. U. students have the advantage of being in an urbanized area that is intellectually oriented, she loves the freshness and "real eagerness to learn" that is evident in the UMass student body.

Professors Offer Idea For "How To Be Sharp" Course

(Reprinted from The New Hampshire)

"I would guarantee that we could make any girl or guy 100% more datable—provided, of course, they had the guts to acknowledge their inadequacy!" exclaimed Mr. Arthur Bleich, new journalism instructor.

He was speculating on a proposal to offer a non-credit extra curricular course entitled "How to be sharp," or "Sophistication in the boondocks."

Will Hear Experts

The core of the proposed course will be the discussion of problems that arise in sophisticated heterosexual relationships.

"We are upset", said Mr. Bleich. We feel that if UNH students were placed in a sophisticated situation, they would not be able to hold their own. This is not a joke," he added. "Many students have expressed a concerned interest."

Conformity Is Bloated

The question of conformity, he suggested, has become bloated. "If people want to be judged on their intellectual accomplishments, their dress and behavior should be such that they do not detract from or even enter into such a judgment."

"Etiquette, or more simply, manners, involves a certain element of reciprocity and most young women today do not realize this," said the journalist.

Problem Orientation

Many girls do not know when to offer assistance to men, and some men do not know when to accept it. There are also somewhat more unusual situations that may arise which demand reasonable and not highly emotional reactions.

Mr. Bleich outlined some of these problems:

"What ought you do when your date gets drunk?"

"How ought you react when shocked or insulted?"

"What ought you do when your date leaves you?"

Sad, Depressing

Mr. Bleich emphasized that the success of the course depends upon students' interest and he said: "If there were no interest it would be sad; to be satisfied with the status quo is depressing."

Prof. Michael DiSalle Urges Abolition of Capital Punishment

Michael DiSalle, former Ohio governor and this semester professor of Practical Politics at the University, urged abolition of capital punishment in Massachusetts at a hearing before the committee on the judiciary recently.

DiSalle spoke in the State House while there with a group of students from his University class. He took the group to Boston for the hearings on capital punishment as a part of the politics course he is teaching.

While he was governor, he said, not one of the 18 cases which came before him involved a person who was able to hire a defense lawyer out of his own funds. He described all 18 persons as "insignificant" in the eyes of society.

SU Presents Paintings Of Jan Scott

An unusually fine collection of paintings is being exhibited this week in the Commonwealth Room of the SU.

The artist is Jan Scott of Montague Road, North Amherst.

During the summer, Jan Scott gravitates to North Truro and the Art Colonies of Cape Cod.

Her unusual range of styles, she explains, is the result of experimental searching and dissatisfaction with any single style for the variety of subjects which appeal to her. Her specialty, however, is oil portraits, and people are the subject of 14 out of 25 paintings in her current one-woman show.

She has recently completed a portrait of Dean Jeffrey of the Department of Agriculture at the University, Edwin Ford, prominent Washington Lawyer, and Edwin Podolak, Northampton Attorney, are among the many who have sat for her.

A member of the Springfield Art League, Mrs. Scott has exhibited at the Springfield Museum, at Eastern States, at the Brockton National show and on the cape.

THE SOUNDING BOARD

Is Pacifism Relevant To Today's World?

Mike Fear '63—Pre-Med: It is a nice ideal but can't work as people are human and possess all the treacherous qualities which mean that men will always be warring against each other. People will always have hope the world will not be annihilated, and so cannot appeal to their better instincts to change the present situation.

Fred Lazin '66—Sociology: Although it is inherent in man to defend himself, the present situation must cause men to change their war. For a nuclear war will lead to destruction and annihilation. In any case, war is immoral. But the present common belief of deterrent is very dangerous, as with both Russia and U.S. so powerful there is very good chance of accidental war. But also, the money that is being used to maintain and continually build up our military forces (¾ of the budget) could be used in more creative areas, e.g. education and medicine. Should work for more positive solutions to present problems instead of concentrating on the negative of bomb shelters and bigger bombs.

Steve Orlin '64—English: Pacifism is an attempt I respect, but see as fruitless taking into consideration man's innate bellicose instinct. Fighting back is man's nature. But, the more sophisticated man uses words. We're not far enough for this yet. Pacifism is the most courageous argument, but it is foolish to apply it to foreign policy. It works in the South as our fighting laws, but there are not yet any international laws which countries respect.

Skip Brack '66—Political Philosophy: No. In my opinion, pacifism is unrealistic, and impractical for instituting a policy of pacifism would have results not beneficial to the U.S. in regard to the ideological conflict, with Russia, and economic repercussions. If the U.S. disarmed or used a hands-off policy Russia would take specific and definite advantage. Other countries would feel they were being deserted by the U.S. and would perhaps turn to Russia. War is sometimes necessary to maintain our way of life. Cuba is a good example of a risk we had to take.

Lorraine Jarnes '63—English: No. In today's society we must be realistic. With modern communications cannot afford to be isolationist. By being pacifistic we are being isolationists as we are cutting the U.S. off from defending other countries. U.S. has a responsibility to defend other countries, which pacifism does not fulfill.

Nancy Hopkins '63 — Physical Education: Pacifism is useful when used in the south, but futile in connection with foreign policy. I don't believe in the turn the other cheek approach in foreign policy. Pacifism will not gain us any more respect than violence. We shouldn't be so concerned with extremes. We must learn to be more active in more constructively moderate ways like the Peace Corps.

Dr. David Leonard — History: As long as men believe their security is directly obtained by the use of force, just so long will pacifism not be relevant to politics. If men were to take away the occasion for war it would free other men from the necessity to arm. Pacifism is essentially a revolution in attitude. The gain in change of spirit that pacifism would cause could transfigure the human situation. It would take great courage and great imagination, but it is just as possible (and really the only alternative to) the horrors of the balance of terror.

Third Annual All-American Tilt June 29

by Martin Gleason
UPI Sports Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. UPI—Sixty of the nation's outstanding college football players will trot onto the War Memorial Stadium turf on the night of June 29 for the third annual All-America game.

D. O. Tuss McLaughry, executive secretary-treasurer of the American Football Coaches Association AFCA, announced the selection of 30 senior stars who will represent the East in the summer football classic.

Record Crowd Expected

Jack Guthrie, president of the All-America Bowl Association, said early ticket requests indicate a crowd of about 33,000, surpassing the 1962 total by at least 10,000. The game, sponsored by the AFCA and the Buffalo, N.Y. Evening News, will be televised nationally to 170 outlets by the American Broadcasting Co.

Milt Bruhn, who led the Wisconsin Badgers to the Big Ten championship and a Rose Bowl berth last season, will have his star quarterback, Ron Vanderkelen, ready for duty along with Daryle Lamonica of Notre Dame and Glynn Griffing of Mississippi. John McKay of National champion Southern California will be head coach of the West squad, to be announced at a later date.

Series Tied 1-1

The West captured the inaugural contest in 1961 under Minnesota's Murray Warmath, 30-20. Woody Hayes of Ohio State and his East team beat Warmath's Westerners, 13-8, last June.

The east has an impressive array of backs, topped by Jerry Stovall of Louisiana State, Roger Kochman of Penn State, Willie Richardson of Jackson, Miss. State and George Saimes of Michigan State.

Such sparkling names as Pat Richter of Wisconsin and Walt Sweeney of Syracuse lead the end brigade. Jim Dunaway of Mississippi and Fred Miller of LSU will hold down tackle posts, Rufus Guthrie of Georgia Tech and Dave Behrman of Michigan State will be at guards, and Lee Roy Jordan of Alabama at center.

Freshman Baseball Coach Bergquist Faces Problems

by ALAN RICE '66

Dick Bergquist, coach of the freshman baseball team, is faced with the problem of having too many good ball players on his team, and for most any coach that problem is as difficult as not having enough good men. There are presently 42 frosh out for the team which will carry only 20 men throughout its ten faced with getting rid of half of his team which includes a lot of fine prospects.

The final cut will be early next week after a series of squad games this past week gave Bergquist an opportunity to see all his boys in action. Wednesday was only the third day the team had outdoors after three weeks working out in the cage, so there had been little opportunity for a good look at the talent until the past two days. Pitching, second base, and first base are the positions most in doubt now. There are eight second sackers trying out for the team of which only two will be kept. All are nearly equal in glove ability so their hitting in the intra-squad games will determine who wins the jobs.

First base has four good left-handed candidates and all may be kept to supply depth to the infield and outfield. The outfield roster will not have many men so Bergquist plans to keep a few players who can play more than one position. Dennis Della Piana of Malden has clinched one berth in the field but the others are in doubt until the final cut.

Only one of the pitching candidates is assured of a spot right now, and that is Ross Piken from Brookine and Worcester Academy. His battery mate at Worcester last year, Dick Tierney, and Ray Yando of Indian Orchard have both clinched berths on the catching squad, the only position that is definite now.

The outlook for the team is excellent with the excess of good talent. The competition for the 20 spots on the rosters has been tough since the beginning of practice. The regular schedule opens April 17, when the Redmen face Springfield College in a home game.

The schedule is exactly the same as last year when Mass had a 6-4 record except that Leicester Junior College has replaced Mount Hermon School. The UMass frosh last season won their first four before dropping games to Trinity and Holy Cross and ending the season with losses to Springfield and Worcester Academy. This is Coach Bergquist's fourth year with the team and he has never had a losing season. The 1963 freshmen could be his best yet.

A Heritage Of Dreams

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Settled upon the banks of the lazy Savannah River with the elegance of a magnolia manor is Augusta, Georgia. Unlike late summer when Georgia sizzles like a tired piece of hell, the April of Augusta is said to be a place "made for peace and neighborliness"; a cathedral-like place where the arching purple mountains and towering Georgia pines inspire young men to dream great things.

In 1857, a Belgian horticulturist became enchanted with the climatic and terrestial offerings of Augusta, Ga. A fantastic dream took hold of his imagination and he promptly bought 365 acres of Depression-priced land. Nicknaming his estate "Fruitlands", Baron Berckmans began the South's first nursery by importing exotic plants, shrubs, and fruit trees from across the globe. In the Belgian nobleman, Augusta had inspired her first dreamer—an inspiration that today blazes like a huge bird of Paradise with its regal plants and plumming Georgia pine, sprinkled along sloping greens and blue water hazards.

With the frosty departure of the winter of 1904, a hot-headed 17-year-old lad hopped a railroad spur line from Royston, Ga. into Augusta. This had been the only town in the South Atlantic Baseball League to answer his query for a diamond tryout. Living only on his dreams, the young man was the sole team candidate forced to pay his way to camp, buy his own meals, and pay for a bed. He was also the only player to ride the bench in every exhibition game that spring. But with the steel-like determination that Arnold Palmer and Ben Hogan would show that town again a half-century later, Ty Cobb stayed with the game he began under the violet spring nights of Augusta, Georgia in 1904.

Twelve years later, in Atlanta, just 80 miles short of Cobb's Royston, a tweed-capped youngsters of 14 years won an amateur golf tournament — the Georgia State Championship — that, he later said, "marked the beginning of my taste for and appreciation of really competitive golf." It also marked the beginning of a dream that would stay with him for 18 years. In 1930, that young man retired after winning the U.S. Amateur five times, the U.S. Open four times, the Grand Slam, and 13 major championships. Robert Tyre Jones, Jr. had retired as the greatest golfer of all time to bring into reality that haunting dream he had begun years ago.

With eyes that had known a thousand golf courses the world over, Jones now began the search for land he would use in building the ideal course; a structure that within 30 years would influence more than 500 American golf courses; a course that golfdom would pronounce the Masters.

There was a dreamy sparkle to Jones' gaze the day he discovered the land in Augusta's Fruitlands, a dreaminess similar to that of Ty Cobb the day arrived in that little Georgia town. Aided by the Scotch craft of one of golf's great architects, Dr. Alister MacKenzie, and the financial wizardry of Cliff Roberts, Jones took the natural contours of Fruitlands in hand and, with god-like precision, molded the Augusta National Golf Club. It was to this, with Baron Berckmans' magnolia and fruits in springtime bud, that Jones invited the touring professionals in 1934.

Initially, only a handful of name players showed for the tourney. Newspaper coverage of the contest was meager. The great Grantland Rice covered that Masters for the same reason that the handful of pros had played: out of respect for Bobby Jones. But that one tourney on Augusta's National was enough to convince the visitors that here was a great course; a great event to match golf's Great Man. Under Jones' experienced care, Augusta National has earned the following and respect associated with Yankee Stadium, the Statue of Liberty, and the Holy Land.

Only baseball's World Series ring rivals in sport the emerald-green blazer awarded to the Masters' victor. So great has become the Masters' stature that in oder to be invited to compete one must fulfill one or more of 16 requirements. And that is a long chip-shot from 1934 when only a sentimental handful showed up to witness Bobby Jones' dream come true.

Students Are Excused For Passover

The religious observance of Passover for Jewish students will be on April 9 and 10; the concluding days on April 15 and 16. It will be appreciated if instructors will honor requests from individual students for excuse from attending afternoon classes on April 8, also, when such class attendance would interfere with students being able to reach their homes by 6 p.m.

A revised WMUA Constitution and an amended Panhellenic Constitution were passed.

A Financial Policy Act was passed which prohibited "red ink" accounts and set up requirements of orgarizations wanting funds for long range expensive capital equipment.

$410 was appropriated to send the Musigals to Lycoming College to participate in an intercollegiate singing composition if they are accepted for the participation. The twelve may be going by plane for May 9 and 10 pending acceptance of a recording of the group's singing by contest officials. The finals are being recorded by Capital Records.

Operetta Guild, Music Dept. Planning April Musical

The Threepenny Opera, the tuneful musical that gave the world such song-hits as "Mack the Knife" and "The Bilbao Song," is coming to Bowker Theatre at the Univ. of Mass. on April 15, 17, and 18, bearing the credentials of having been the longest-running musical show in the history of the American theatre when it ended its six and a quarter years' run in New York in December, 1961.

The Threepenny Opera, under the direction of Dr. Doric J. Alviani, will be presented by the UMass Operetta Guild and Opera Workshop, in association with the Department of Music.

Based on John Gay's satirical romp, The Beggar's Opera, that first delighted London in 1728, The Threepenny Opera was written in 1928 by Bertold Brecht when that subsequently world-famous dramatist was in his youth.

It is a sardonic tale of underworld characters, thieves, beggars, loose ladies, informers, fences and corrupt police officials. It has been set in the slums of London at the time of Queen Victoria's coronation, and its central figure is a raffish cutthroat named Mac Heath.

Glenn Biggam of Northampton will be seen as the swaggering gangster whose exploits have been immortalized. His three principal female pursuers will be Maxine Forward, Paula Stephens, and Ann Baxter.

Mr. and Mrs. Peachum, the slatternly merchants in misery, will be played by Paul Cwiklik and Mrs. Dorothy Ladd of Northampton.

Tickets for The Threepenny Opera are on sale at the Student Union Box Office. Call Alpine 3-3411. All seats are reserved.

Blaze Delays New Dorm Construction

by ELWIN McNAMARA '64

The University's plans for an early completion of its high rise dormitories were delt a severe blow as fire ravaged a major portion of scaffolding to be used in their construction.

The initial alarm was received by both telephone and box at 3:56 p.m. Saturday. Responding were two engine and one ladder company under command of Captain Alfred Tidlund of the Amherst Fire Department.

The fire had gained great headway before the alarm was transmitted, so firefighters fought a difficult battle to hold the flames in check.

Cause of the fire, according to Captain Tidlund, is tentatively attributed to overheating of a "salamander", a heating device used to dry concrete.

Dean of Students William Field was contacted by the Collegian and stated that he can't imagine "it making a significant difference" in the time needed for construction.

However, Charles Walsh, President of M. J. Walsh, the contractor for the building, stated that he felt that there would be a delay of at least "a few weeks" in construction of the dorms.

Adelphians Hold Awards Banquet

A special awards banquet was held last Saturday night at Wiggin's Tavern, honoring the Rookie of the Year, the Most Valuable Player, and the Coach of the Year. No, it wasn't a heldover banquet from last year's baseball season, it was the first annual awards banquet held by Adelphia (the Senior men's honor society.)

Under false pretenses (each of the recipient's wives "forced" her husband to take her out to dinner at Wiggin's) the unsuspecting heroes arrived at the Hotel Northampton and were met by the Adelphians.

William Field, Dean of Students, was awarded the MVP plaque. The plaque read:

John W. Ryan, Executive Secretary of the University was granted the Rookie of the Year award. His placque read:

Massachusetts Secretary Of State Slated To Speak

The Political Science Association reminds all students of the coming lecture by Secretary of State Kevin White. The lecture will discuss "Election Laws, The Need for Reform."

A Williams College graduate of 1952, White attended Boston College Law School, graduating in 1955.

Prior to his election as Secretary of State, he served as assistant district attorney of Suffolk County. He has, as Secretary, introduced several bills on the need of election reform.

White made his reputation more known though his work in the recent gubernatorial recount.

The lecture is scheduled for 4 p.m. in the Council Chambers.

Capacity Crowd Fills Cage For Greek Week Concert

by DAVE HARACZ '66

As Spring loosens the grip of Winter and the campus emerges from a seemingly eternal blanket of snow, UMass resembles for a week a city of the Golden Age during the traditional festivities of Greek Week.

Sponsored by the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils, Greek Week is an annual Spring event during which fraternities and sororities sponsor activities such as exchange suppers, parties, the Greek Ball and Greek Banquet, Olympics, Chariot Races, and the Greek Week Concert.

This year's Greek Week, April 1 through 7, began with the sorority Mass Exchange Dinner Tuesday, during which various sorority members were guests at other chapter houses to encourage better friendship and understanding among the University's Greek Women.

Also held Tuesday night was the Fraternity Manager's Association Board of Directors Dinner at the Grist Mill in Amherst.

Ronn Metcalfe and his orchestra provided music for dancing Friday evening in the Student Union Ballroom. During intermission, Janice Kwapien was crowned Greek Week Queen. The members of her court are Carolyn Oliver, '64, Ginny Spence, '65, Kathy Patten, '66, and Mary Ann Carme, '66.

JAN KWAPIEN stares in disbelief as she is crowned Greek Week Queen at the Greek Ball Friday night. Mary Anne Carme and Ginny Spence look on. Other runners-up are Carolyn Oliver and Kathy Patten. Need we say anything in regard to Miss Spence's pose?

Winners of the Olympics held Saturday morning at Alumni Field were Team IV (BKP, PSD, SPE, and ZN), with 40 points. Runners-up were as follows: second, Team III (ATG, PMD, SAE, TC) (36); third, team I (AEP, KS, PSK, TEP) (22); fourth, team II (ASP, LCA, QTV, TKE) (11).

Individual Olympic results were: Broad jump: 1. Parnell I (17' 6¾"), 2. First, II, 3. Conors, III, 4. Ceasario, III;

1963 Campus Chest Drive Collects $3000; Biggest Ever

Lee Wilcox and Manny Smith, co-chairmen of the Campus Chest announced Saturday that receipts for this year have reached an all-time high. The $3,000 received surpasses the previous high of $2700, set in 1958.

In dormitory competition, Crabtree House won first place. Fine support from the Greeks and Faculty were also noted, in addition to that shown by RSO organizations.

Alpha Phi Omega contributed greatly, Smith stated, with their Ugly Man on Campus contest, and Faculty drive. Winner in the UMOC contest was Baker Dorm, with Allen Gehring as the Ugly Man.

The money will be donated to the University Scholarship Fund and the World University Service, $2000 to the former and $1000 to the latter.

Ten $200 scholarships will be awarded on Student Leader's Night, April 30th. Also to be announced at this time will be a list of all contributions of $5 or more.

The entire committee, and its advisor Father Quigley, wish to thank all those who made the drive a huge success.

Campus Varieties To Stage Original Musical Comedy

Anatomically speaking, The Kidney-Shaped Heart is in the tradition of the great musical comedies, not overly cerebral, but still raucous, glandular, satiric, and crammed with japes, diatribes, and darts aimed straight at the heart of the faculty members. Paul Theroux, noted far and wide for his literary lead balloons, wrote the play and lyrics.

Revelers has pulled Campus Varieties "off-campus" this year due to insurmountable technical difficulties. "C.V's" is an original musical comedy written, directed, produced, and performed by student amateurs and is unique in that it is the only totally student-run production remaining on or off campus.

Last year there was not a Campus Varieties with the result that many students do not remember the rollicking, witty, good time. This year's script has a long history of date changes, and the date of production will be three months later than originally scheduled, but the show is going on. The Kidney-Shaped Heart will be staged HER weekend May 3 and 4 at 8 o'clock at the Amherst Regional High School.

LIVING BROTHERHOOD

We in America are so eager to spread the gospel of equality that we rarely think of the true meaning of the word in its historic context, or of how we should go about achieving it. Equality under the constitution has always meant equality before the law; it cannot in light of the past suffering of man mean an equality inherent in the minds of men. Inequality is not something distinctively Western in its conception. India, China, Russia, both Tsarist and Communist, all have in them elements of inequality. It is not limited to the feelings between races, for the rich White feels that the poor White should not have the same rights as he does; the Black Muslim despises the Negro who tries to make his place in a White society. Each man who fears that his world may be threatened and his beliefs torn away seeks to impose a supremacy on those he considers his inferiors.

The world, however, is tearing itself to pieces over preventing each man from being forever equal. In our own society there is one way in which every man can achieve the dignity which is his by virtue of the fact that he is a human being; that way is through the law. Not by the letter of the law, which by its very rigidity, cannot take in the variations of the human mind, but by ensuring that the law will be served by justice and that justice will be tempered by mercy. Justice and mercy are what make up the essence of any code, but true justice, being the creation of a rational mind, must, if it is applied in the light of its real meaning, render to each man his birth right.

There is only one place where a man can recapture the feeling for justice and it is not in a court which may punish but does not prevent injustice; rather it is in the mind of man himself. How can there be justice and equality in a heart which excuses cheating, lynching and segregation with the weak excuse that, after all, man is "only human." In the name of real humanity, where is the person who says, "Enough! This man is a man and I must, however bitter it may seem to me now, treat him as one who was created in the same image as myself." We cannot compromise with those feelings which degrade us as human beings, we must think them through. There is no doubt that man is weak, but to make that weakness an excuse for persecution, injustice and inequality, is only to compound the weakness rather than searching it out and overcoming it.

We cannot be silent, when speech would root out the evil; we do not live in a vacuum, for what we meet out as justice today may come back to haunt us in the future. Our own injustices in the hands of others may be a retribution more horrible than the drowning of the Egyptians by the Red Sea. We have in this country the tools to save ourselves and each other, we need only use them and use the image of ourselves as benevolent, just and humane to recapture our integrity and dispose of this enervating tendency toward self-compromise. We can then perhaps deal with our own groundless fears regarding other men, black or white. Give them the justice which we feel is so rightly ours, and we will have gone a long way in erasing the historic inequality which continues to sap the strength of every generation.

Perspective—

by G. MASSELAM

Another week is beginning—not just an ordinary week. People all over the Judeo-Christian world will experience Passover, and Easter. These holidays represent not only a search for the freedom of being, but a sense of renewal of an individual. That is, deep-set in the minds of men there rests a hope—a hope for a better situation, a hope for a change in one's spirit. What is this drive that urges men on for the sake of those lost in the abysmal dankness of the blackened south, what urges men on to die for the sake of democracy, or for the sake of Communism. What compels men to die for their ideals. It is this hope of changing to a better situation, and leaving the oppression of the past.

Then on the individual level. What is the source of dealing with alcoholics, with problem children, with apathetic, or despondent individuals, with the mentally ill, with understanding parents and friends. The answer is this hope in individual development. That men can learn and grow, that man can become aware of greater realities not known to him before, and rise up to them.

Thus this is an optimistic week, a week in which man can become aware of the hope for changing his situation; a week in which we at the University of Massachusetts can look at those people with whom we relate with a new awareness. An awareness which nurtures an understanding, a tolerance; a week which we can learn of the potential for emotional growth which lies within the reach of all.

CAESURA: A Review

by JUDY DICKSTEIN

Caesura arrived on campus last fall with a new staff, a new name, and a promise of good things to come. The new issue has done a lot in the direction of fulfilling that promise.

The first thing to notice—and who could help but notice?—is a cover which might easily qualify as the most attractive in the history of the magazine.

The art section opens with a technically competent, if compositionally trite, photograph of Crasco. Sculptures by Katz and Trufant are the most attractive offerings. The drawings, however, suffer from lack of contrast on the pages. One looks cramped and cropped, and might have been shown to better advantage within dark "frames" or borders.

In fiction, the man in the spotlight is Maurice Cocchi, a newcomer to Caesura: "All the Cool Streams" is the more competent and enjoyable of his two offerings. It is Joe's story of his brother, and of his resolution to search all the cool streams of the world to find him. Mr. Cocchi easily qualifies as one of the most promising authors of the class of '63, along with Lester Neale and Paul Theroux.

This issue, Paul Theroux's offering is entitled "The Amazing Wife of Edwin Yeti." Although it is a competent piece of writing, and contains many particularly delightful passages, it does not quite match the fine caliber of some of the author's other published works.

The issue opens on the bright note of Steve Orlen's timely story "'In the Here and Now'." Mr. Orlen takes us back to 1888, the year of the great blizzard, and the year Samuel was attending Mass. Aggie and met a very special gal, one of the school's first co-eds. Despite lapses in consistency of time and language, and some concluding lines hackneyed enough to make anyone cringe, this story should prove a source of delight for any UMass student. It overshadows Mr. Orlen's second story, although the latter is superior in many respects.

Sam Gorvine is author of the sixth story "Dinosaur." A careful reading in depth can provide clues to the essence of what may, on the surface, appear to be a meaningless relation of an afternoon in the life of a psychiatrist.

Three of Douglas Flaherty's poems, and the one by N. C. Bowlen are the best of the poetry offered. "A Quartet for the Seasons" is outstanding, beginning: "A drum taut tide/ Of shiny black umbrellas/ Bursts between iron gates . . ."

Mr. Flaherty's first offering, a tongue-in-cheek delight entitled "Triumvirate," opens dynamically, reminiscent of the epic: "Out of the purple undulation/ of the midnight sky/ rode three saintly gaunt men/ on wild mustangs." "A Perspective" is certain to please even the most superficial reader, even though it deals with a "shunky," which word is not to be found in any standard dictionary of the English language. "What Path Love?" is the third of Mr. Flaherty's best poems.

The remainder of the poetry shows a good deal of variety. Steve Jenkins' "'Seated Harlequin' by Picasso" is among the best of these, along with "Love" by Howard L. Shainheit and two poems by David Axelrod. "Cobblestone" becomes the more prominent of the two by virtue of such lines as "Cobbler hobbling over cobbled city streets/ Hustler rustling to clobber the eight . . ." The range was from these to others (e.g., "Making a Grotto," "'Amid a Million Strands of Grass'," and "Only for the World") which were insipid, immature, or maudlin enough to cause the reader to wonder how they ever happened to be selected for publication. Fortunately, these were few, and minor in light of the volume of more competent works.

The essay by Emile R. Drwila, "Academic Survival in a Changing World," helped lighten the tone of Caesura, rendering the magazine a great deal more "readable" than tradition has seen it. Although "Academic Survival . . ." may first strike the reader as a Yahoo reject, it is entertaining, and its style retains enough dignity for it to be appropriate in a "literary" magazine. In addition, it is most refreshing beside the other essay, Charles Dean's "Pechorin," a study of Mikhail Lermontov's "A Hero of Our Times," with its staid, droning academic language.

Should there be any reason to level negative criticism at the latest issue of Caesura, the actual contents are the least likely to come under fire. Shoddy composition would be the main target, and this is as likely to be the fault of the printers as the editors.

However, printers can't take all the blame. In a magazine put out by a literary board of all English majors, save one, a certain degree of punctiliousness is to be expected. Even overlooking the repeated negligence which allowed such errors as "You're" for "Your," we might at least hope that the names of contributors would appear correctly spelled. The current issue contains at least three such errors (Trufant, Bowlen, and Drwila.)

Caesura appears to be approaching the apogee of its evolution. More students than ever before pick up their copies, take the time to read them, and enjoy what they read. Our literary magazine is no longer for the select few, for the editors, their friends (the contributors), and the faculty of the English department. It has become a popular, widely-read campus publication without the least sacrifice of quality.

No college campus can expect more than this from the editors of its literary magazine; we tip our proverbial hat to the staff of Caesura and to the contributors who so kindly share their art with us.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks You All

With the culmination of this year's Campus Chest Drive and the achieving of a success not even dreamed of, that of attaining the highest monetary total in the history of the drive, thanks must be given to the many people involved in making the drive the huge rewarding success that it was.

The highest total on record from previous drives was $2700 in 1958. This year, over $3000 was collected, far surpassing all previous years. Of that amount, $1000 will go to the World University Service, and $2000 will go toward University scholarships, to be awarded on Student Leader's Night. This success has been largely due to the intense spirit and unfailing energy of the key people at all levels of the organization.

Right by our side with much inspiration and guidance has been Father Quigley, our able advisor. His constant concern and assistance was greatly appreciated. Support from the administration must also be noted including President Lederle, Dean Field, Dean Hopkins, Mr. Deminoff, Mr. Buck, Mr. Watts, Mrs. Versailles, and all the RSO office staff.

The largest percentage of the income received by the drive, of course, came from the students themselves. Nearly all of the "Greeks" supported us very strongly and the dorms were also quite generous in individual response. Here, we must thank the students for their great warmth in their vigorous support of the drive. The IFC, Panhell, and Interdorm Councils deserve a vast amount of credit in making their respective facets of the drive so successful, having taken the drive right to the heart of the student body.

Very sincere thanks are due to Maureen Flavin for her assistance and patience with us, to Gardner Howe, our very competent treasurer, and to Marilyn Singer, who helped out untiringly through publicity. Much of our success is due to the excellent coverage and support by WMUA and the Collegian, without which we could never have survived. Also mention must be given to the Maroon Keys and Scrolls who were extremely helpful in some important integral projects of the drive, and to Mortar Board for their much appreciated support and publicity.

Last but by no means least, the two fine service groups on campus must be thanked. Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma played a very large part in our success. The UMOC contest, run by APO, was a brilliant accomplishment which will not soon be forgotten. Together, APO and GSS took care of the faculty solicitations, and this too was most successful. These fine, dedicated, and often unnoticed workers cannot be thanked enough. Their service to the campus and the community should be greatly appreciated.

Thanks again to all the above mentioned groups and individuals whose combined efforts and excellent cooperation is warmly and graciously appreciated. And a very sincere and deeply felt thanks to the entire campus for making Campus Chest '63 the best drive ever.

Lenten Vesper Production To Deal With Modern Theme

A Lenten Vesper service will be held on Tuesday, April 9 at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U. The service is in the form of a play written by a former UMass student, Peter Gezork, and includes the acting of Horace Waters and Paul Theroux. Mr. Gezork makes the following statement about his play, "Rejected Memory, or Two Characters in Search of an Audience:"

"Grandmotherism! Anthropophagy! There's too much of it every Sunday. We gorge ourselves on Christ! We crucify Him. What the church needs is a new world of innocence and wonder. The church socials are leading to a downfall of man.

This play tries to find meaning in the modern situation. It pulls no punches."

HOW TO GET EDUCATED ALTHOUGH ATTENDING COLLEGE

In your quest for a college degree, are you becoming a narrow specialist, or are you being educated in the broad, classical sense of the word?

This question is being asked today by many serious observers—including my barber, my roofer, and my little dog Spot—and it would be well to seek an answer.

Are we becoming experts only in the confined area of our majors, or does our knowledge range far and wide? Do we, for example, know who fought in the Battle of Jenkins' Ear, or Kant's epistemology, or Planck's constant, or Valsalva's maneuver, or what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey?

If we do not, we are turning, alas, into specialists. How then can we broaden our vistas, lengthen our horizons—become, in short, educated?

Well sir, the first thing we must do is throw away our curricula. Tomorrow, instead of going to the same old classes, let us try something new. Let us not think of college as a rigid discipline, but as a kind of vast academic smorgasbord, with all kinds of tempting intellectual tidbits to savor. Let's start sampling tomorrow.

He was so moved he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal 'Trees'

We will begin the day with a stimulating seminar in Hittite artifacts. Then we will go over to marine biology and spend a happy hour with the sea slugs. Then we will open our pores by drilling a spell with the ROTC. Then we'll go over to journalism and tear out the front page. Then we'll go to the medical school and autograph some casts. Then we'll go to home economics and have lunch.

And between classes we'll smoke Marlboro Cigarettes. This, let me emphasize, is not an added fillip to the broadening of our education. This is an essential. To learn to live fully and well is an important part of education, and Marlboros are an important part of living fully and well. What a sense of completeness you will get from Marlboro's fine tobaccos, from Marlboro's pure filter! What flavor Marlboro delivers! Through that immaculate filter comes flavor in full measure, flavor without stint or compromise, flavor that wrinkled care derides, flavor holding both its sides. This triumph of the tobacconist's art comes to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box and can be lighted with match, lighter, candle, Welsbach mantle, or by rubbing two small Indians together.

When we have embarked on this new regimen—or, more accurately, lack of regimen—we will soon be cultured as all get out. When strangers accost us on the street and say, "What was Wordsworth doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey, hey?" we will no longer slink away in silent abashment. We will reply loud and clear:

"As any truly educated person knows, Wordsworth, Shelley, and Keats used to go to the Widdicombe Fair every year for the poetry-writing contests and three-legged races, both of which they enjoyed lyrically. Well sir, imagine their chagrin when they arrived at the Fair in 1776 and learned that Oliver Cromwell, uneasy because Guy Fawkes had just invented the spinning jenny, had cancelled all public gatherings, including the Widdicombe Fair and Liverpool. Shelley was so upset that he drowned himself in a butt of malmsey. Keats went to London and became Charlotte Bronte. Wordsworth ran blindly into the forest until he collapsed in a heap ten miles above Tintern Abbey. There he lay for several years, sobbing and kicking his little fat legs. At length, peace returned to him. He looked around, noted the beauty of the forest, and was so moved that he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal Trees . . . And that, smart-apple, is what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey."

Guess who offered me an executive position with a leading organization, where I'll get good pay, further my education, and enjoy world travel?

My uncle.

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. And the best way to get it is through Air Force ROTC—because the Air Force prefers to commission its officers directly upon graduation. But if you couldn't fit AFROTC into your schedule, you can still apply for Air Force Officer Training School.

OTS offers college men and women an opportunity to assume great responsibility. When you complete the three-month course, you'll be commissioned a second lieutenant, and become a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but the same may not be true next year. So if you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information from the Professor of Air Science.

Lacrossemen Return From Successful Southern Swing

by WALT GREEN '66

The lacrosse team from Massachusetts made a swing of the Eastern Seaboard during the past vacation week, playing three exhibitions and three regulation games before opening the regular season this Wednesday with Wesleyan University of Connecticut.

The Redmen scrimmaged at West Point on Monday losing 11-4, on this, the first day out. Tuesday found the men in red at Philadelphia, where they battled to a 4-4 tie with the University of Pennsylvania in two overtimes. The team then brought their talents to Baltimore on March 27th, 28th, and 29th, where they played Kenyon College of Ohio, Townson State and Loyola, both of Maryland. These were the three league games and the team fared pretty well in this competition, beating Kenyon 6-3 and Townson 7-3, Townson scoring only in the third period of play. The Redmen allowed six Loyola goals in the third period and as a result lost the game 9-7. On Saturday, March 30th, Garber's men were back in Philadelphia for an exhibition game with Swarthmore College which they won with a goal in each period, 4-2.

Coach Dick Garber expected the team to be stronger defensively this season and rightly so, for the team showed excellent defensive lacrosse on the tour. Outstanding in this department were Paul Majeski, whom we all remember from his performances last fall wearing football shoes, Co-Capt. "Dutch" Dieterle, a two-letter performer, and Jon Kallio, another two-letter performer from Westboro. The goalie's duties were aptly handled by Junior Dick Baird of Bedford. Others who saw action on defense were seniors John Hartnett of Newton, Tom Kirby of North Adams, and sophomore Hal Ryder from Saugus.

Coach Garber didn't figure the Redmen to be too strong offensively since the four top scorers from last season have left via graduation. Nevertheless, all factors considered, UMass did well in this department also. Senior Don Tremblay and junior Steve Harrington averaged two goals per game. Ken Kezer, Ron Chiras, Fran Gilliatt, Joe Moro, Jerry Clinton, Tom Brophy, Fran Casey and John Prior, all chucked in at least one apiece.

On the first day out at Army, Charlie Glew, one of last year's top scorers, suffered an ankle injury, which could keep him out for the rest of the season, certainly a blow to the UMass offensive attack. Another injury was sustained by Tom Brophy of Pittsfield in a scrimmage with Union College last Tuesday.

On the whole, the tour proved to be very beneficial for the team as well as the coaching staff, but with the injuries and graduation, something will have to be done to give the Redmen some sound offensive punch. Steve Harrington and Don Tremblay are certainly a good start.

The UMass team opens the regular season at home on Wednesday at 3:00 with Wesleyan College which has a series record of 0-7 against Massachusetts.

Lacrosse Co-Captains Frank Gilliatt (11) and Bowen (Dutch) Dieterle confer with Coach Richard Garber.

Defense Tops, But We Need To Score Goals

In an interview last Saturday, Varsity Lacrosse Coach Richard Garber was asked to comment on his squad's progress up to this week. The team has played six games on its southern tour, and five other scrimmages at UMass.

The coach broke the team down into positions, and commented on each separately.

GOAL: At present, it looks like Dick Baird ('64) is our top goalie, with Charlie Ruma ('64) in the second spot. On the southern tour and in recent scrimmages, the two have alternated games.

CLOSE DEFENSE: The coach commented that this is by far, his strongest position. "Dutch" Dieterle (co-captain, '63), Jon Kallio ('63), and Paul Majeski ('63), have been the best defense against any team. The second line looks like Tom Kirby ('63), John Hartnett ('63), and Hal Ryder ('65). This is the best part of the team; they give up very few goals.

ATTACK (OFFENSE): We started off very well, but were hit hard by injuries. Don Tremblay ('63), Steve Harrington ('64), and Ron Chiras ('63), have been going almost 60 minutes every game. Charlie Glew broke his ankle at West Point and will be out for the rest of the season. Al Morris ('64) is sick, and the doctors have advised him not to play for the rest of the season. But, we did get some help when Bill MacLeod came back out to add some depth to the squad.

MIDFIELD: This is "the real heart and soul of the team. They have to play both offense and defense." The boys have done a real good job, but we've had to try a lot of combinations because of injuries. Ken Kezer ('63) is out with torn ligaments in his right arm, and Tom Brophy ('64) is lost because of a broken collarbone. Frank Gilliatt (co-captain, '63), has had a bad back all last week. We've therefore lost our first team because of injuries. But, Joe Moro ('63), Frank Infusino ('64) and Jerry Clinton ('63), have done a good job in taking over the first string assignment. Our second line now consists of Fran Casey ('64), Gordie Webb ('64), and John Prior ('63).

* * * *

Overall, it looks like our defense is real strong, with the offense so-so. Our conditioning has been better, as we've outhustled nearly all of the teams we've played.

Our trouble seems to be to score with the man advantage. Today (Saturday), we had eleven man advantages, and only scored twice (UMass lost to the Boston L. C., 6-4). We'll have to keep the other team's score down, as we lack guys who can shoot." Probably our best scorers are Harrington and Trembly. Gilliatt should be good, but he's been hobbled by injury. We're averaging only four goals per game compared to last year's nine. We've had the shots, but they've been off target.

ALL-AMERICANS: In the last couple of years we've had Walt Klinsky (grad. student), Jim Ellingwood (Boston L.C.), and John Banberry (B.L.C.) receive honorable mention. Our best bet for honors this year is Majeski, or possibly Dieterle.

CONCLUSION: We have all the spirit, drive, and hustle you could ask for, all we need is a little more experience and we could go all the way.

Yankees Unanimous Pick For A.L. Championship

by AL RICE '66

The American League season doesn't start in full swing until tomorrow but already the Yankees have won the pennant, despite the fact that after five weeks playing in the Grapefruit League the Bombers record stood a long way below the .500 mark. The Washington Senators also have been accorded the honor of finishing tenth for two straight years. Or at least this is the way the experts figure the race to end come next September 29. when it comes time to figure out how the other eight teams are going to do, the experts become guessers and the agreement stops.

Fight For Second Spot

Ten different authorities expect another typical Yankee finish and another typical Senator finish, no different from almost every year in the past twenty. Minnesota and Detroit each picked up five votes for second money, but after that it is anybody's race the way the predictors see it. A composite of all ten has a first division of New York, Minnesota, Detroit, Baltimore, and Chicago with Los Angeles, Cleveland, Boston, Kansas City, and Washington falling in behind. Since each one of the ten relied 75% on hunches, the composite is the best way to get a clear picture.

Based on last year's results, changes in personnel, the assumption there will be no crippling injuries, and ignoring unforeseen developments which number into the hundreds in the course of a season the pickers see the Twins and the Tigers as the closest competition to the Yankees. The Twins are figured no lower than third while Detroit, picking up the same number of second place ballots and one more third place vote than Minnesota, did not instill much confidence in Jerry Coleman of CBS radio who picked them for sixth or Sport Magazine who figured the Bengals for fifth.

The young Baltimore team that at first glance does not look half as strong as the Birds of two years ago when Paul Richards was at the helm is the rage of the spring training season and looks like a sure pennant contender. However, that type team usually runs out of gas after a while, or so the swamis think. Four of them gave the Orioles a fourth place year while the other six were in a state of confusion. Young teams are hard to figure so they got two votes for third, two for sixth, and Hal Lebovitz of Cleveland and Til Ferdenzi of New York relegated them to eighth which is rather hard to believe of a team that has Brooks Robinson, Jack Brandt, Luis Aparicio, Jim Gentile, and Steve Barber in its lineup.

The Chicago White Sox are a team with a little of everything and not a lot of anything. The opinion of the pickers varied on how much they do have. The Sox were figured in every spot from third to eight. In their two years of existence the Los Angeles Angels have defied all laws of baseball logic, and there is no reason they won't again this season. Eight of their ten votes were cast for fifth or sixth, on the reasoning that they were too good for any spot lower and weren't good enough for another finish as high as third.

Cleveland's voting averaged out to be seventh, but the guessing was far from unanimous. The Indians story is a question of having potentially the best pitching in the league if not the majors and have potentially the worst hitting which is quite an achievement considering Washington is in the league. Dick Donovan, Pedro Ramos, Mudcat Grant, Jim Perry Sam McDowell, Gary Bell, and Barry Latman are all fine pitchers so it seems trading a good hitting third sacker like Bubba Phillips for two more far less experienced hurlers, Ron Nischwitz and Gordon Seyfried, weakened the batting attack still more though Joe Adcock is a heavy hitter at first base which lets Tito Francona go back to his outfield post.

Bosox Eighth

The Red Sox are figured for an eighth place repeat of last year though Sport Magazine was during enough to pick them for a third place finish. The composite voting had the Hose only one point behind the Indians.

Kansas City is the choice of eight of the voters for the next to last spot only because of the shortage of anything resembling pitchers.

Their tenth place finish is the only thing anyone is sure about with the Senators.

UM Third In UConns; Lewis Stars In South

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity track team finished up its indoor season by taking third in the Connecticut Relays, held on March 23, at Storrs, Connecticut. Dick Ward was the only victor for the Redmen, winning his specialty, the 35 pound weight throw, with a toss of 60 feet. Dick also took a fourth in the shot put.

Yale won the meet with 54 points, Boston College second with 29, UMass third with 27, and Connecticut forth with 25. Although the Redmen won only a single event, several turned in outstanding efforts. Craig Erikson ran two quarters on two different relays and turned in good times of :52.3 and :52.8. Bob Brouillet ran on the distance medlay relay which took second, and the two mile relay which took third, as well taking third in the Invitational Two Mile Run. Ken O'Brien and Dave Balch ran on both the distance medley relay and the two mile relay. Tom Panke took third in the Invitational Mile and sixth in the two mile. Bob Ramey was fifth in the mile.

Immediately after the meet, the team left for a week of training in Florida. The week ended with a tri-meet among Miami, UMass, and Roanoke College. Miami took the meet with a 105 score, Massachusetts scored 53, and Roanoke ended up with 17 points.

Fred Lewis demonstrated in the meet why he is considered such a good athlete by scoring 19 points. Fred won the broad jump with 22 ft. 4½ in., the hop, step, and jump with 42' 1½", the hundred yard dash in ten seconds, and tied for first in the high jump with a leap of five feet ten inches. Brouillet scored an impressive double with wins in the mile and two mile. Dave Balch gave Brouillet strong backing by finishing second in both races.

The spring track season will open at home against Holy Cross on April 17.

Telephone Bill OK'd After Investigation

The recent furor over a bill for telephone service totaling approximately $7,000 has been found to be unnecessary. Mr. Francis Teahan, procurement officer for the University told the Collegian that the bill was found to be comparable to any institution of similar size.

Teahan also stated that many accounts were included in the bill for which the University is reimbursed. This would include Infirmary, Student Union, Dormitory phones, and all toll calls made by faculty on personal business. He also stated that the Peace Corps reimbursed the University for calls made by members of the organization made during their ten week stay.

In addition to regular telephone service for the University, Teahan pointed out that the bill also included charges for the Waltham and Wareham field stations, the School of Nursing in Springfield, and the phone loop to radio station WFCR.

Flying Redmen Take 18th Overall In National Drill Team Contest

The UMass AFROTC Drill Team, the "Flying Redmen", placed high in the National Drill Team Competition held at Washington, D.C. last Thursday, April 4.

The Redmen placed 18th of the 53 teams competing at Washington, from throughout the nation, an increase of six positions over last year, and, fourth of the 20 competing Air Force teams, an increase of four positions over last year.

The Drill Team is composed mainly of freshmen and is under the command of Cadet Lt. Col. Peter A. Cabana.

Each of the drill teams competing in the National Competition is a champion from a particular area in the United States. The National Drill Team Competition consists of Air Force, Army, and Navy ROTC units. The "Flying Redmen" represent Area "A", which is for New England and Upper New York state.

The "Flying Redmen" participated in the National Cherry Blossom Parade held last Saturday, April 6. The parade was locally and nationally televised through the facilities of Washington television.

The Drill Team met with Senators Saltonstall and Kennedy on the steps of the Capitol Building last Thursday. At this time the Arnold Air Society Commander, Peter R. Hefler, presented both Senators certificates of honorary membership in the John P. Granville Squadron of the Arnold Air Society.

Accompanying the Drill Team were Col. Thomas Carhart, the AFROTC Professor of Air Science; Maj. Thomas Killion, advisor to the Team; Capt. Charles Costantino; SSgt. Indian Song, Dance, Drama Scheduled Next Weekend

An evening program entitled "The Spirit of India in Song, Dance and Drama" will be presented of UMass on April 20 at 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

An Indian classical dance called "Bharat Natyam and Kuchipudi' by Surya Kumari, an internationally acclaimed actress, will comprise the program.

Miss Kumari has made twenty films in India in four different languages and has played in a variety of roles ranging from light to heavy parts.

Secretary Scores Mass Apathy

White Asks Voters To Improve Polling Laws

by ANN MILLER '64

The special need for young people to be aware of electoral system flaws and work to correct them was emphasized by Massachusetts Secretary of State Kevin White yesterday afternoon before about 30 persons in the Council Chambers of the SU.

The talk was sponsored by the Political Science Association.

Secretary White sharply denounced Massachusetts' present election laws regarding nomination procedures, campaign expenditures, registration, recount and voting, as a deterrent to good government in the state.

Election laws are, he said, "the keystone to our democratic system."

Affiliating with and working for a party, and exercising the right—the moral right—to vote are important steps each person should take to help insure proper election proceedings.

Campaign financing is "the root evil of the democratic system when practicaliy applied . . . If there's any case of an appeal for reform in reverse—where the politician cries to the electorate instead of vice versa—it's in the field of campaign financing . . . but enforcement of campaign rules depends on an interested community."

In this state, he said, it costs close to a million dollars to run for governor successfully.

"When you lose you're faced with financial disaster and when you win, you're faced with obligations difficult to fulfill."

With 2,800,000 registered voters in Massachusetts, the registered independent vote equals the combined registered vote of the Democratic and Republican parties.

The reasons for this are 1) apathy, 2) feeling of sophistication about being an independent and 3) desire to honestly be independent.

When a voter is independent because he is apathetic or because he thinks he is being sophisticated, the results are bad, White declared. What this voter is after is merely "a well-packaged product."

Massachusetts, he pointed out, has gone as low as a 32% turnout in a general election. It is especially the responsibility of young people to get out working for a party of their choice, to combat apathy, he suggested.

In this state, a person only needs 25 signatures to get his name on the ballot. Thus, anyone who can get his name first on the ballot, or who has a 'magical name', has a great advantage toward getting elected. Nomination procedures, he said, should be strengthened.

BLUE MONDAY

In addition to its religious significance, Easter, to many people, is one of the few times during the school year when entire families may gather for a restful and enjoyable day together. This, ideally, is what Easter should be. However, for many UMass students, this Sunday will be quite a different story. There will be no leisurely stroll after church, or pleasant evening at home with friends and family; there will be, instead, a hurried dash to the bus, or an early start hitching back to Amherst. Why the University thinks it necessary to hold classes on the Monday following Easter is unexplainable. In the future, such occurrences should be avoided.

During this week, the Jewish holiday of Passover also brings great social significance to the Jewish family. Under the present arrangement, students of this faith may be dismissed from classes, that they may travel to their homes for the family's celebration of the holiday. Upon their return, however, they must face the possibility of making up work missed, which not only acts as a discouraging force, but may even dissuade them from going at all. Another complaint that many voice, concerning the scheduling of April vacations, is made when comparing our calendar to that of other schools. While other colleges have planned a more convenient Spring vacation, our week off, that began on March 23rd, not only left UMass students alone at home during the early time off, but resulted in the present conflict in observing religious days.

We suggest that future administrative plans and scheduling show a more realistic attitude. If at all possible, a ten to twelve day spring vacation should be planned including in its time span both Easter and Passover, and perhaps coincide more closely with the vacations of other Universities.

Student Life Slendered

by MARCIA ELASOWICH
and MARK CHEREN

The first of two articles published in the Boston Herald by John Chaffee Jr. represented an overt slur to the UMass student body. Mr. Chaffee asserts, ". . . the University lacks an intellectual atmosphere. The center of student life at UMass is the centrally located Student Union, which has become a 'damn dive' in the words of one professor.

"At the Union, students congregate for coffee in a massive basement room which features a constantly blaring jukebox. Down the hall are pool tables and bowling alleys. At regular intervals through the school year movies such as 'Where The Boys Are' are shown."

This is plainly a narrow, distorted view of the University's student life which misrepresents us to the people of Massachusetts. Anyone who has tried to decide WHICH concert, lecture, or movie to go to on any night of the UMass week realizes this.

Furthermore, we defend the student's right to relax. We defend his right to watch "Where The Boys Are," if he wants to, just as we defend his right to see "Ballad of A Soldier," Dylan Thomas's "Under Milkwood," or "Oedipus."

We are surprised that in addition to deriding our pool dens and bowling alleys Mr. Chaffee neglected to mention our violent table tennis tournaments.

While Mr. Chaffee's commentary on the quality vs. quantity conflict is a fair evaluation of the current situation, we feel he blighted an otherwise accurate evaluation by asserting that an intellectual vacuum prevails at the University.

Editor's Note: The entire article will be posted on the Collegian office window for all interested students and professors.

Benevolent Monarchy... 1963

by PAUL FRANK LEVY

"Our country, with her tinted sky, her varied contours, her fertile soil, our fields full of fine corn and vines and livestock, our gifts of initiative, adaptation and self-respect, make us above all others, a race created for brilliant deeds." (DeGaulle—1934)

DeGaulle has left no doubt as to what he desires and what he is determined to have. He has excluded Britain from the Common Market and has refused to accept any proposals for further integrating the European defense system in cooperation with that of the United States. His concept of European power excludes the United States and erects a Franco-German alliance as the nucleus of a third power of Europe. DeGaulle is essentially a nationalist, replete with dreams of grandeur for France. His attempt at Bonapartism is a bone of contention for the United States and the western world.

His Concept

In vetoing Britain's entry into the Common Market and in rejecting United States arms proposals, DeGaulle feels that he is freeing Europe from American military, economic, and financial power. He feels that these actions also strengthen his own hand diplomatically. Britain, at present, represents to DeGaulle a manifestation of Anglo-American designs.

Nationalistically, the acceptance of a multinational force would mean the merging or surrendering of France's national identity since the defense of French national interests would be turned over to the United States who would control the force.

The United States commitment in Europe involves vital interests which can not be abandoned. The fate of Europe and the United States are interlaced, economically, culturally, and politically. President Kennedy has offered to join with a United Europe in an Atlantic partnership of "full equality in all the great and burdensome tasks of building and defending a community of free nations." In accordance with these desires, the United States has spent some $41.5 billion for economic rehabilitation of NATO countries and has 440,000 Americans now stationed in that part of the world. The United States, last December, at Nassau, also agreed with Britain's acceptance of the Polaris missile in putting its nuclear weapons under NATO.

DeGaulle is making a stand for the creation of a strong and independent Europe—not a Europe opposing the United States, but a Europe strong enough to make a partnership with the United States of its own accord. DeGaulle has said, "Who in good faith can dispute the fact that France must help to build Western Europe into an organized union of States so that gradually there may be established the most powerful, prosperous, influential, political, economic, and military complex in the world."

France is staunchly behind DeGaulle. In the elections of the National Assembly, DeGaulle's candidates received the parliamentary majority. The voters also entrusted DeGaulle with personal powers such as no other ruler of France has wielded since Louis Napoleon. With DeGaulle has come the self-confidence and the spirit of unity in the nation which was for so long the sick man of Europe; the end of the ruinous Algerian War; the orderly independence of fifteen African colonies; and an economic and fiscal comeback.

For the immediate future, the hands of the "Operator, I would like to place a long distance phone call to the State Comptroller's Office."

"Thank you. Deposit $8,000 plee-us."

Well, you've got to admit that installing coin boxes on all University phones is one way to beat the phone bill. It might be embarrassing to interrupt a conversation with a graduate school because your three minutes are up, but we must consider more important things.

Now take the Comptroller's office. Do you think they have time to pay an eight thousand dollar phone bill for UMass? No indeed! They have more important things to do. Why I'll bet it takes the better part of every morning and afternoon just to pay the bills for the garage under historic Boston Common. Hours each day are devoted to paying bills which pave the roads to Massachusetts' race tracks (they run extra days now so they get a lot more traffic.) And while on this topic it must be noted (in all fairness to the Comptroller's office) that Swartz's Key Shop never once submitted a bill for eight-thousand dollars.

With all of this busy activity who can blame that Guardian of the taxpayer's dollars who hesitated over our phone bill?

We would do well to institute certain precautions on phone usage from now on to insure that our bill never reaches such mammoth proportions again. We could eliminate calls to other colleges to help place UMass undergraduates in graduate schools, calls to High School guidance counselors to try and recruit candidates for UMass and the other needless telephone chit-chat that goes on here in the Berkshire hills.

But just to put the shoe on the other foot for a moment the Comptroller must realize that certain difficulties are involved in all of the digit dialing that we have to do. By the time a professor finishes dialing the area code and the number, he has wasted so much time that he could easily have published an article in a professional magazine if the time had been put to better use. And let's face it, a chemist with a sore dialing finger is just finished when it comes to swirling Erlenmyer flasks.

The problem is certainly a serious one, and it's going to take sincere effort on both sides if a compromise is to be reached. Perhaps they can get together by phone.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:
Re: Sayonara

As transfer students from one of the eastern "Utopias," namely Mount Holyoke College, we wish to congratulate Neal Andelman on the views he expressed in last Wednesday's Collegian. We are in a position to recognize the strengths and shortcomings of both schools, and we feel that socially, academically, and intellectually the University of Massachusetts may be placed in the ranks of the superior. Admittedly, it may be criticized in certain areas. So may every college, though many refuse to accept criticism. Our self-criticism, often expressed in the Collegian, has brought improvements, and will continue to bring them. Let us contnue to criticize wisely, then, and let us take pride in our progress.

Home Economics Students Elect Council To Consult With Dean

Home Economics students at the University of Massachusetts have a voice and a role in helping the School of Home Economics develop to its fullest potential. To further this, each class has recently elected two representatives to the newly formed Dean's Student Council. The members are: Linda Paul, Sandra Schmalz, Joanne Buron, Dorothy Donovan, Jan Crowell, Joyce Blum, Judy Kelley, Carol Lindstol, Grace Fitzpatrick.

The Council members have charged themselves with objectivity in developing constructive suggestions. They are working closely with Dean Marion A. Niederpruem. The Council reflects the students' desire to attain high academic levels in their chosen field, for they realize they are in a profession that is both expanding and dynamic in nature. In the light of modern trends within higher education, they are aware that liberal education and professional preparation are not ends in themselves but goals of our times. To meet these goals, they seek challenging assignments and learning experiences which will give them the oportunity to weld together a strong background of arts and science with professional training.

Not only do they seek professionalism in the academic area, but they have announced plans for a Code of Ethics Brochure for Home Economics students.

The Council is currently sponsoring a series of coffee hours at which faculty and students have an opportunity to meet with each other informally and exchange ideas.

Dean Niederpruem is pleased with their progress, noting "This Council represents progressive thinking and the continuing search for curriculum strength and attainment of high professional standards."

Anatomy Of A Football Scandal; First Break

by ALAN RICE '66

"I was curious, naturally," George Burnett said. This human reaction by a Georgia insurance salesman has caused the biggest sports controversy since the 1919 Black Sox World Series.

On September 14, 1962 Burnett dialed the office number of Milt Flack, a friend and former associate, at the Communications International public relations firm in Atlanta. The call, placed at 10:25 in the morning, reached not Flack's phone, but a phone in a back office on which Wally Butts, former coach of footbal at the University of Georgia and at that time its athletic director, was using. Butts was a director of the firm and a good friend of its president Mitchell Werbel.

The first thing Burnett heard, which was enough for him to realize he had cut in on an interesting call was, "Coach Bryant is on the field, but he'll come to the phone. Do you want to hold, Coach Butts, or shall we call you back." It was obvious to anyone with a fair knowledge of college football that the call was from Wally Bear Bryant of Alabama, the two most famous names in Southeastern Conference football if not in all of the collegiate sport.

Bryant had led his team to the national championship the previous season with an unbeaten season climaxed by a 10-3 win over Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl that earned him the Coach of the Year distinction. Butts had been head coach at Georgia for 22 years before leaving the post under curious circumstances after the 1960 season. "Mr. Football" as he was called in the Southeastern Conference, had four championship winning seasons in the SEC and had won numerous bowl games. It was no wonder Burnett was too curious to put the phoned down when he found he had not made his connection.

The results of that conversation were known only to Bryant, Butts, and Burnett for over three months, until Burnett told his story to Bob Edwards, a friend of Burnett's and also a friend of Johnny Griffith, present coach at Georgia. According to Burnett, Butts went over the plays and defensive alignments that Georgia would use in its game on September 22, with Alabama. Butts mentioned that quarterback Larry Rakestraw tipped off his calls by the way he moved his feet, and other information concerning Georgia plays and players.

Considering the results of the game, these observations were hardly out of line. The betting line had Alabama slightly more than a two touchdown favorite over the young Georgia team. The final score was 35-0 Alabama. Rakestraw's first pass was intercepted, and Bama scored quickly on a 52 yard pass play. The Georgia quarterback told reporter Jim Minter after the game, "They seemed to know every play we were going to run. End Mickey Babb told Furman Bisher, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal, "The Alabama players taunted us. 'You can't run 88 Pop on us,' they'd yell. They knew just what we are going to run, and just what we called it." Bisher got nearly the same quote from Sam Richwine, the Georgia trainer.

Burnett dialed the operator after the call and asked what number he was connected with. He was told it was the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa. That afternoon Burnett told Flack what he had heard, but the two thought it over and decided to forget about it.

Could the call have been more serious than either realized? There would be no question of the call except that Burnett had not completely forgotten about it. When he told Bob Edwards, it became only a matter of time until many more questions were being asked. Burnett and Edwards met with Griffith in mid-January at the Biltmore Hotel in Atlanta during the conference coaches' convention.

According to Burnett, Griffith's reactions were thus: "I didn't believe you until this minute, but here's something in your notes that you couldn't possibly have dreamed up . . . this thing about our pass patterns. I took this over from Wally Butts when I became coach, and I gave it a different name. Nobody uses the old name for this pattern but one man. Wally Butts." After he finished reading Burnett's notes, he added, "We knew somebody'd given our plays to Alabama, and maybe to a couple of other teams we played too. But we had no idea it was Wally Butts. You know, during the first half of the Alabama game my players kept coming to the sidelines and saying, 'Coach, we been sold out. Their linebackers are hollering out our plays while we're still calling our signals.'"

A coach, a ball player, or even a trainer is apt to tell a reporter most anything after his team was clobered, and they usually are not regarded with much more than sympathy over their loss, but the words of the Georgia personnel took on new meaning when George Burnett told his story first to the Georgia coach and then to everyone in the country by way of publishing it in the Saturday Evening Post, a magazine with national circulation. The question changed from, "What happened to Georgia, did they fall apart?" to "What happened to Georgia, were they expected to fall apart?"

Peanut Butter On Sandpaper

by JIM TRELEASE '63

With handsome, knowledgeable ex-big league stars dominating the sportscasting profession, it is a Ripley wonder that HE ever got by the ushers department. His crew cut has that 15-hour-slept-in look; his ears are only the thickness of a dime behind Casey Stengle's in the race for Largest in Sports; his voice has the tone of peanut butter and gravel on toasted sandpaper. Nevertheless, only the Boston Celtic starting five and Auerbach surpass Celtic announcer Johnny Most in fame and renown in Beantown and points 50 miles north, south, and west.

In a time when broadcasting is becoming increasingly impartial in its presentations, Most is striking in his biased support of the Celtics. If Mel Allen and Chris Schenkel's "home" enthusiasm tends to be excitable, Most's is downright violent. During one game of the 1962 play-offs, when the Warrior's Guy Rodgers had involved himself in three separate scuffles with the Celtics, Most became more and more incensed with each incident until finally he exploded. "This is awful. This . . . this is a disgrace to basketball. This is terrible! This guy Guy Rodgers should be banned from basketball for life. I'm gonna write the commissioner!" A few nights later, when Boston had won the division title and he had cooled off, Most apologized for the outburst.

With the possible exception of Lord Mayor Briscoe of Dublin, Johnny Most is the greatest Jewish protector of Celtic shamrocks. There was the night when the Boston team and their opposition became involved in a huge free-for-all. Most was describing the blow-by-blow account of Tom Heinsohn and an opponent when suddenly, out of the corner of his eye, Most spotted what appeared to him as unbelievable. "No!" he screamed. "They're . . . they're hittin' the Cooz!" he exclaimed, horrified, as though someone had assaulted a saint of the church instead of Bob Cousy.

There is little denial that Most's bottom-of-the-barrel sound and enthusiastic machine gun delivery is among the finest around today. His ability to paint a true picture of the ball situation for listeners is hard to match. But it is his love for the Beantowners that endears him to his many fans and earns him the wrath of his critics. Excluding the minority group of critics (who usually turn out to be Celtic-haters), John still owns a huge following. Many listen to the broadcasts just to hear his audiomated antics. The unorthodox voice of Johnny Most has become as much a part of the Celtic personality as have Bob Cousy's behind-the-back passes.

Though Boston fans may be understanding of John's bias, other NBA cities are not. There was the most famous of all John Most incidents now known as the St. Louis story. John and the St. Louis Hawks' equally volatile owner and emporer, Ben Kerner, become so enraged at each other over the game that their post-game antics made Kiel Auditorium look like St. Nicholas Arena with the two battling away in a wrestling slugfest.

Another time, the Philadelphia Warriors seated a vociferous team official on the Warrior bench a few feet from Most's microphones. At first, John tolerated the caustic remarks of the bench jockey directed toward the Celtics. His patience finally worn thin, Most exclaimed, "I'd like to apologize to our listeners back in Boston for this LOUD-MOUTHED Warrior official sitting a few feet from us. I wish someone would get him out of here!" Another St. Louis scene was averted when the official moved for the second-half.

Most's enthusiasm seldom irritates Boston fans but occasionally it costs them a dry cleaning. There was, for example, the night when Most became so excited he threw a cup of coffee into the air and all over the unsuspecting spectator in front of him. The radio signal from Boston Garden was suddenly interrupted until Most and Garden ushers could quiet the flaming, coffee-coated fan who insisted upon screaming choice adjectives into the radio microphones.

But for all his antics and unpredictability, Most remains the best advertisement for Celtic basketball Walter Brown ever hired. This week, after more than ten years with Aurbach and Co., Johnny Most probably will be calling the NBA play-off finals "from high above courtside." And if by chance you are among the few fortunate enough to attend one of the finals and if you happen to see a body fall out of the balcony with a trail of cigar smoke behind him, call radio station WHDH in Boston. They'll want to know what happened to their announcer.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?
All depends on why he uses it.
Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.
So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?
Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.
How intelligent!

Redmen Open Vs. American International Today

Wilson Vs. Flynn At A.I.C. Field

by ALAN RICE '66

Earl Lorden's UMass baseball club opens its 1963 season today, in Springfield against American International College, and hopes are that it will be as successful as last year's 15-5 season with a Yankee Conference championship to boot. It doesn't shape up as too easy a task, however, because a lot of the clubs on the Redmen's slate are far from pushovers.

Bridesmaids—But Never Brides

Massachusetts lost the YanCon flag two years ago to UConn by half a game, and last year their 7-3 mark came in behind Vermont's record of 8-2. This year could be just as tough since the Catamounts again have a strong team and Connecticut has a load of promising sophomores who should help the team improve on their 7-7 finish in 1962. Vermont is led in defense of their leagues title by fastballer Dick Cassani, one of the top hurling prospects in the East. Cassani had the enviable record of nine starts, nine complete games, and nine wins with an ERA of 1.11, eighth best in the country. His 87 strikeouts against on only 22 walks are equally impressing. The team as a whole had a fine 2.91 but it wasn't quite up to the 1.86 of the Redmen.

The Huskies from Connecticut don't have much in the way of returning pitchers, but the infield is strong with Doug Gaffney and Jim Penders as the keystone combination and Pete Mottla of Quincy who hit .375 last year as a freshman, as the first sacker. The mound crew has returnees Ed Jones (3-3) and Jim Parmelee (2-3) and sophomores Russ Rotko and Dick Baranowski set for jobs.

Due to the poor spring weather conditions Maine is almost never able to field a powerful team, and New Hampshire will be struggling to better its 2-12 mark of the previous season, although the Wildcats gave UMass a few anxious moments before dropping both their games by one run. Rhode Island has a few good hitters, but the Rams aren't expected to be in contention with UMass, Vermont, or Connecticut, either.

Holy Cross Toughest Opponent

The non-conference half of the Redmen's schedule also contains some tough opposition. The next to last game of the year pits Holy Cross against Massachusetts here in Amherst, and the game will likely be a tuneup before the NCAA playoffs for the Crusaders since they are picked to be the top team in the East and one of the top in the country this year. The 1962 Holy Cross nine finished with a 21-5 season and now they are even stronger. All of their starters are returning and several promising newcomers have been added to the team. Lefty Dick Joyce, the ace of last year's freshman staff, joins Mike Skane (9-2), Don Riedl (7-0), and Paul Symeon (4-2) to forms a powerful array of pitching talent. Infielder John Peterman was the fifth leading base stealer in the collegiate ranks last season. Holy Cross takes an overall 15-3 record against UMass into this year's game.

Springfield can also be counted on for a stiff fight since they have a staff of six experienced pitchers led by Roland Thompson (5-1) and an All-American centerfielder in Archie Moore. AIC will not have as powerful a club as their cross town rivals, but the Aces have a winning record over Massachusetts during the past few years and can't be counted on as pushover. The two teams on the card from the Little Three aren't expected to be as hard to handle. Williams has a good hitter in third baseman George Mayer who hit .389 and Amherst has a good lefthander in Pete Haggerty, but neither team will be rated near the top in New England unless some sophomores develop into outstanding players.

Tufts had a losing record in only seven games last year, but one of their wins was a 7-5 upset of Massachusetts near the end of the season. In past years the Jumboes' records were far better than last year, so whether or not Mass is in for more trouble from the Medford team won't be known until May 14, when the two squads tangle here in Amherst.

Coach Earl Lorden and Captain Pete Larkin look forward to opening game and a winning season tomorrow at Springfield.

It's Borgia Vs. Celtics At Garden Tonight

BOSTON UPI—"We already know we're in for a rough game Wednesday night. When Sid Borgia and Norm Drucker work a game, it's bound to be rough. But we're determined to win."

So Arnold Red Auerbach, coach of the Boston Celtics, sounded the battle cry preparing for the seventh game of the N.B.A.'s Eastern palyoff finals.

"We'd still get tagged with technical fouls if we talked back to the officials. Just like they got Bob Cousy here the other night.

"But in the game at Cincinnati, three of the Royals kept charging the officials and getting away with it. When they saw that, they kept it up.

"You know, Borgia didn't used to back water in any town. I never thought I'd see Borgia back up like he did. All I want is an even break. We're not asking for anything else, just an even break.

"It's Borgia's ambition to see us lose. There's definitely no question in my mind that he's got no use for me or for Cousy.

"The Royals were climbing up our backs and when we did the same thing we got called for it. The officials took the play away from us, giving us a few fouls late in the game when it was too late. I can see why St. Louis and Los Angeles don't want these two officials.

"It's got to be a war with Borgia in it. He was working out west and they didn't want him. So he comes over to louse up our games," Auerbach said.

GREAT DECISIONS

Cuba's Challenge To U.S. Topic At Recent Meeting

by JOHN LOCKE '63

The challenge that Cuba poses for the United States and all of Latin America was discussed at the recent meeting of the series entitled "Great Decisions" which have been held on a weekly basis.

The discussion ranged over the socio-economic and political conditions in all of Latin America. It was stated that the Alliance for Progress was oversold in the beginning by the Kennedy Administration and not enough thought was given to hitting the crux of the problem which is found in the oligarchic rule of many Latin American countries.

Professor Leonard of the History Department emphasized that corrupt political machines rule countries like Peru and Chile and these ruling cliques keep delaying the reforms urged by the Alliance for Progress.

Professor Leonard went on to say that of all the Latin American countries only Mexico and Cuba have a corrupt-free bureaucracy while the other countries with the exception of Uruquay and Puerto Rico are ruled either by the military or landowning classes or by a coalition of the two.

The situation in Argentina, Venezuela, and Brazil was described as explosive with Argentina being particularly unstable even though it has undertaken many of the reforms urged by the Alliance for Progress.

It was concluded by many present that more violent revolutions in Latin America are a real possibility unless economic and social reforms are made quickly. It was suggested as an alternative to the Alliance for Progress that the United States should foment violent social revolutions to meet the great challenge of Castroism in Latin America.

Government, Labor, Industry Heads To Attend Charter Day

Carlos Romulo Speaks As DVP's Final Guest

Carlos P. Romulo, former president of the Philippine Republic, will appear at the University on Monday, April 22, at 8 p.m. in the S.U.

His appearance is the final

CARLOS ROMULO

event of the Distinguished Visitors Program for the year.

Romulo also served as president of the General Assembly of the United Nations in the critical period before the outbreak of the Korean conflict.

A distinguished writer as well as statesman, Romulo received the Pulitzer Prize in Journalism for a series of articles written as a result of a trip through the Far East preceding World War II.

John Burke, chairman of the Program, has described Romulo as "a dynamic speaker" whose position in the world enables him to speak authoritatively on his subject, "The New Strategy of Communism."

It is expected that he will discuss the growing rift in philosophy between Russia and Communist China.

AEC's Seaborg Will Deliver April 29th Keynote Speech

Leaders in American labor, industry, government, science and education will take part in Centennial Charter Day activities to be held at the University on Monday, April 29.

Chief participants in a panel program commemorating the Centennial will include George Meany, President of the AFL-CIO; Charles F. Avila, President of the Boston Edison Company; and Dr. James K. Pollock, Murfin Professor of Political Science at the University of Michigan.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, Nobel prize-winner and chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

Peabody To Attend

Governor Endicott Peabody will lead a large delegation of legislators and Commonwealth officials at the major Centennial event. Thousands of alumni, faculty members, students, parents and friends of the University are expected to view the Charter Day ceremonies to be conducted under the theme, "Public Higher Education and the National Good."

The keynote address will be delivered by AEC Chairman Seaborg at the Charter Day Convocation to be held at 11 a.m. An afternoon symposium, in which Meany, Avila and Pollock will take part, will explore the response of public higher education to the needs of labor, government and industry.

Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the University's Graduate School, will moderate the symposium discussion.

Students in Procession

Outstanding student leaders from the Class of 1963 will be honored for their achievements through participation in the formal academic procession. Presiding over Charter Day ceremonies will be Dr. John W. Lederle, President of the University. The University's Board of Trustees, led by board chairman Frank L. Boyden, will take part in the day-long exercises.

George Meany, who was instrumental in bringing about the merger of the AFL and the CIO and has been its only president, worked his way up through the ranks of labor. As early as 1945 he denounced the World Federation of Trade Unions as an agency destined to come under communist domination. He later worked to establish the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

Charles F. Avila, a graduate of Harvard University, joined the Boston Edison Company in 1929. He became president and general manager in 1960. In addition to his duties at Boston Edison Co., he is a member of the board of directors of 14 major organizations and corporations.

Representing both the field of education and government will be Dr. James K. Pollock, one of the country's most distinguished political scientists.

He is the only American to have been president of the International Political Science Association. Dr. Pollock has been a member of the Hoover Commission on organization of the executive branch, adviser to the High Commissioner in Germany, and adviser to the Department of State and Defense.

Author of several books and many articles, he was awarded the Medal for Merit by the U.S. government in 1946, our country's highest civilian decoration.

Tub Pushers Set Record In Santa Fe

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI)—Students from St. Michael's College passed up the 50-mile hike craze to start a new long distance event—the bathtub push. A second-hand tub was rolled on wheels from Santa Fe to Albuquerque, a distance of 62 miles, by 14 students at the Roman Catholic school.

After the trip the tub was filled with liquid refreshment and donated to the college in ceremonies at a picnic.

New Members Of Judiciary To Be Named Over Weekend

On April 20th and 21st, selections for Men's Judiciary will take place in the Student Union. One freshman and two sophomores will be chosen.

Applications are available in the Dean of Men's office and will be due by 3:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 18th.

The Men's Judiciary board consists of seven, four-year undergraduate students. There are three seniors, three juniors, and one sophomore on the board. The selection committee is composed of equal numbers of Judiciary members and male senators.

The selections this week-end will be for one freshman to join the Judiciary board as the sophomore member and two more sophomores to make the complement of three juniors. Once selected, the individual remains on the board until his class graduates from the University.

The Judiciary board handles cases referred to it by the office of the Dean of Men that do not occur in the residence halls. (These are handled by the Area Judiciary).

The selection procedures have long been known as the most difficult and impartial proceedings of their kind on campus. As such a quality of candidates that the process isn't one of weeding out the weaker candidates, but rather of trying to pick one or two persons from a strong field.

Each applicant will be given a case to look over and then be called in before the selection board. In this first round, every applicant will be asked the same five questions and then his opinion on the case be studied.

After this, the board will vote, without discussing the applicants, for those persons they wish to see return.

The chairman of the meeting will place the number totals only, that each person has received, on a blackboard.

Seeing only the number totals and not the names that they represent, the board establishes a cutting point.

Those people above the cutting point are called in again and questioned extensively by individual members of the board.

The final selection is usually made after this round, although it is sometimes necessary to bring back the candidates still a third time.

The whole procedure lasts five to eight hours and is quite exhaustive for both the applicants and the members of the selection board.

Boston Chorus In Concert This Sunday

This Sunday night, April 21, at 8 p.m., the Handel and Haydn Choral Society of Boston will present a choral concert at the Curry Hicks cage at the University of Massachusetts.

The Choral Society, numbering more than 200 voices, will be assisted by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a presentation of the rarely heard Johannes Brahms' "German Requiem."

A choral work by the English composer, Henry Purcell, will also be performed.

This entire program was presented recently by this same group earlier in Symphony Hall, Boston and was received by a full house. A full house is also expected at the Cage.

Students will be admitted by showing their UMass student ID's at the door. Single tickets can be purchased at the door, and series tickets will be accepted.

Folk Singer Oscar Brand Here May 3

On Friday, May 3, 1963 at 7:30 p.m., the Student Union will present the first event of its H.E.R. weekend—Oscar Brand.

This concert will be held outside on the South Terrace of the Student Union. There is no admission charge. Oscar Brand is well known in this area. He achieved his popularity through his many TV appearances, his weekly radio program on WNYC in New York and his forty-five albums.

The New York Times has called him "One of America's best folk singers." While best known for his "bawdy songs and backroom ballads," such as "Seven Old Ladies Locked in The Lavatory," Mr. Brand hits his richest mark in pure folk story tunes.

He has a repertoire of 3,000 songs and competently accompanies himself with a guitar.

He often gives several versions of the same song, as it has developed over the decades and over the world.

In the face of current extensions of the folklore media, under which a wide variety of new groups have cropped up with generally popularized versions of age-old material, Oscar Brand stands out significantly as a major exponent of folk music as it is meant to be done.

Elections Scheduled Tomorrow

A heavy voter turnout is expected for tomorrow's primary elections in which 27 hopefuls will vie for a total of 12 offices. Of these 12, only 5 offices are uncontested.

The primary will cover the offices of president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer of the classes of '64, '65 and '66.

The class of '66 shows the greatest competition. A total of 15 hopefuls are competing for 4 offices. The sophomore and junior classes have 7 and 5 nominees respectively.

Freshmen will have an opportunity to view the candidates and hear their views on duties of the office, at the Freshman Forums, today at 4 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U.

This is the first of a series of two, the second to be held April 24, the day before the final elections.

Times for balloting will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the lobby of the S.U.

EXPRESSIONAL VITALITY

Every spring with a change in the weather, there comes a change in the leadership of the student body. New leaders are chosen for honor societies, clubs, class officers, certain senators, Collegian, Concert Association. Thus with the crispy freshness of buds, grass and flowers, a newness of ideas begins to appear in the many groups on campus. But, does the leadership become anymore creative. Are our student leaders equipped with the intrinsic dynamics of leadership ability.

Webster defines a leader as "a person who goes before and shows the way and guides." Certainly this defines one type of leader—the administrator. But what about the leader who exudes a vitality for what he is trying to do. The leader whose excitement for his goals motivates others to work with him in achieving his goals. A leader who wishes constructive change, and with a dedication works for this change. Does he belong to a college campus? It is this type of leader who motivates religious, political or social groups. It is this type of leader who is most effective in the lives of those who follow him.

Our campus abounds with the former—the administrator. The person who accepts his position, functions as a committee head, carries out his duties, produces a few ideas, organizes people to carry them out. Then the latter type, who views the potentialities and limitations of his group, decides upon the goals of his groups, makes the changes needed and initiates his work zealously. There are such leaders on campus. Sometimes they are in strategic positions, sometimes not. The former leader seems to be the safest and the more popular of the two. That is one of the reasons for his prevelance.

Other significant reasons entail the type of individual who seeks leadership positions. Looking at some of the world and national leaders—Castro, Mao-sze-tung, John McCloy, advisors to Kennedy, all are scholarly intelligent people. The scholars at the University form an isolated group, not involved in extra-curricular activity. The leaders tend to be those who are willing to give the time to the position. Because many feel that student leaders are limited in what they can do, they choose not to become involved. Also the student body, feeling that leaders can never be effective due to limitations of their positions, become alienated from their leaders. As a result they don't vote or even care. This reaction is evidenced in senate and class officer elections. Before we become overly critical, let it be said that our leaders are the reflection of us, the student body. They are only as effective as the student body. Perhaps, if we were more vital, the choice of leaders would be more meaningful.

But enough of words. What of facts. No one can dispute that the Senate has been more effective than it was last year. It has functioned better, and has been more organized. Yet we can nostalgically reflect upon the year 1960 when the Distinguished Visitors Program bill was passed. Or perhaps there might have been some referendums. Or there also could have been more comment on the administration's policy. What about Adelphia, Mortar Board, Scrolls, Keys? They have filled their positions. Yet there are trends of vitality as expressed through such outstanding projects as Adelphia's Scope project, which brought honor high school students to our campus yesterday. WMUA and the Collegian have not been overwhelming. However one can not overlook the Collegians influence in having the Library hours extended; or WMUA's presentation of fine music to the campus.

If the leadership has been less vital then it could be; if it hasn't been dynamic; it has functioned. With the picking of new officers, let us, the student body, be vital.

GM

SENATE

The Constitution of the Student Government Association delegates power to the Presidents of the various classes to, under certain circumstances, appoint a Senator-at-Large if a vacancy exists. It is, however, necessary that this power be exercised with the best interests of the particular constituency in mind.

It is our opinion that a class president has erred in his judgment of an appointee. We do not make this judgment hastily, or with any antipathy towards any of the parties concerned, but rather speak with the best interests of the Senate and the constituency involved.

We have observed that this appointee makes a habit of making a very abrupt departure from the Senate almost immediately following the roll call at the beginning of meetings. We have also learned that this appointee's committee work amounts to little or nothing. Her record of absenteeism is phenominal for one in the Senate for such a short time. It is evident from this conduct that either other activities are interfering with Senate duties, or this person does not wish to participate. Whichever of these is true, we would ask the person who appointed her "Why?".

However, this will not solve the problem. Admittedly, many other Senators are guilty of the same acts, but here we find a special case: an appointed Senator. By virtue of the fact that she was appointed, we should be able to infer that she is the person best fitted to represent her class. This we cannot in conscience do. It is our feeling that the Student Senate, the ultimate judge of its own membership, should act to cleanse that membership.

The Gentle Art of Dog-Raising In Alabama

by JOHN B. CHILDS

I am the inferior of any man whose rights
I trample under foot ... The superior man
... stands erect by bending above the fallen.
He rises by lifting others

—Robert Ingersoll

Somewhat below the border of justice, deep in the territory of blinded antagonism stretches the state of Alabama. It stretches lazily but also uncomfortably, for cold northern winds make it shiver, and indigestable bits of democracy upset its internals.

But enough of the geography or anatomy, well, whatever it is, enough of it. We are writing not of geography but of culture, or refinement. One does not have to search far to realize that Alabama abounds with culture and refinement. Nowhere is this more demonstrated than in the Alabama sport of dog-raising.

What do we mean by dog-raising? We mean the breeding and development of fine, strong, beautiful animals. We mean the loving and gentle care which is lavished upon them. And, as everyone knows Alabama is noted for its loving and gentle actions.

But to explain a little more, these are not ordinary dogs. No, these are strong, well toothed German Shepherds. They are indeed a fine sight to see. Bounding into action on lithe limbs they make beautiful photographs as recent newspaper editions have indicated.

Perhaps you haven't the story behind those photographs? Well, it seems that these cultured and refined dogs, as cultured and refined as their masters, were shocked one day to hear the unrefined cries of a group of "Negras" (as they say in Alabama) demanding the right to vote.

Well of course all the gentlemen of Alabama immediately agreed that this was not at all according to the rules of etiquette. The poor dogs having been brought up in such a refined and genteel atmosphere were shocked to hear such foul words as "We shall overcome" and "Votes for all Americans". The flew into temper tantrums and sunk their cultured teeth into the hides of some of the Negras".

The poor dogs were taken to the vet at once to see if any contageous ideas of democracy had been contracted from the blood streams of those who dared to break the rules of ediquette.

There is no doubt about it. The peak of culture and refinement which Alabama has reached is something to wonder at. One peculiar aspect of this peak does attract one's attention. The peak is inversed, it points down, if one wishes to reach it, he cannot climb, but must close eyes, mind, and heart, take a running leap, and allow himself to fall. By so doing one will reach this great peak of culture and refinement.

THE UMASS JUDICIAL SYSTEM

This weekend, April 20 and 21, the annual selections for Men's Judiciary will take place. Two sophomores and one freshman will be chosen based on interviews held by a joint committee consisting of members of Men's Judiciary and Senators from the Men's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate.

The workings of the judicial system here on campus are little known; its operation and function are often unnoticed. It is only fitting that on the eve of the coming selections, some pertinent information appear concerning judiciary, to break the silence and dispel the prevailing ignorance about this branch of our student government system.

The men's judicial system at the University of Massachusetts consists of The University Discipline Board, the Men's Judiciary Board, and two Area Judiciary Boards. The University Discipline Board consists of eleven members of the faculty, the Deans and Chairmen of Men's and Women's Judiciary and serves as an Appellate Board only. It hears appeals from judgments rendered by any of the other boards. The Men's Judiciary Board consists of seven undergraduates. This assures judgment by a student's peers. Cases of a general nature occuring on the campus but not in either of the two Areas (Residence halls, Area I or II) are referred to the Men's Judiciary Board by the Office of the Dean of Men.

The Judiciary Board recommends to the Dean that a specific kind of action be taken. If it be probation, suspension, or expulsion, it is up to the Dean or his staff members to effect the recommendation if he approves of it.

When a student is sent to the Men's Judiciary Board, a form is filled out stating his name and class, residence while at the University, and a "specification" (a detailed description of exactly what took place to generate his being sent to the Judiciary Board). This form is returned to the Office of the Dean after the hearing at which the student is present, and contains the recommendation of the Board. In practically all instances, the recommendation of the Board is followed and in no case is the penalty increased by a member of the administration.

The two Area Judiciary Boards are similar in composition with the presiding officer selected from Men's Judiciary. The range of penalties which may be invoked by Area Judiciary Boards are precisely the same as those that may be imposed by the Men's Judiciary. The Area Judiciary Boards are designed to hear cases of misdemeanor occuring within their geographical jurisdictions. For example, a student who resides in Hadley, and commits an offense in Butterfield House would then be tried by Area I Judiciary.

After a student has been tried by one of the Judiciary Boards, he is informed of the finding of the Board. A student always has the right to appeal any judgment. In general, students' appeals are based on the introduction of new evidence, and not simply on the severity of the punishment. It is axiomatic that punishments that are appealed are not to be increased—they can be wiped out or simply lessened in severity.

The entire judiciary system as described above places greatest emphasis on student self-government. Over the past 15 years, a growing maturity on the part of the Men's Judiciary Board as it has gained experience has been observed.

The Judiciary Boards have great respect on campus, positions on the boards are eagerly sought by serious-minded, responsible students. All proceedings of the Boards are conducted in a non-legalistic manner; they are considered as courts of equity not courts of law.

The University has reason to be extremely proud of the Judiciary Boards and can be optimistic about the future. It is still too early to assess accurately the worth of the Area Judiciary Boards; but from what little experience that has been had, it can be surmised that their methods will be as highly respected as those of the parent organization. Their maturity shown in their one year of operation is to be highly commended.

Every student is entitled to a fair and complete hearing. That is one of the privileges of being a member of the student body at the University. This fine system is one of the best in operation in the country; we are rightly proud of it on our campus.

and Area Judiciary Member

A REVIEW

Threepenny Opera: Too Hot To Handle

by ANN MILLER '64

Too hot to handle was what Threepenny Opera was for the UMass Operetta Guild in their opening night performance Monday in Bowker Auditorium. Their rendition of Die Dreigroschenoper had high spots and low spots, but didn't quite click.

Threepenny Opera* is a masterpiece of beauty and meaning. Its impact on the perceptive theatregoer is of more magnitude than almost anything the American stage today could provide. It has been described as "the weightiest possible lowbrow opera for highbrows and the most full-blooded highbrow musical for lowbrows." Written for the colorful and sordid Berlin of 1928, it was sarcastic enough of German society to be placed under a total ban by the Nazis in 1933. The failure of the OG group to convey this meaning in correct perspective was the main flaw of the performance.

Writer Bertolt Brecht took his inspiration for Threepenny Opera from John Gay's The Beggar's Opera (1727) which equated the established govenment of the Walpole administration with that of the London underworld. Musician Kurt Weill disciplined his music for singing actors and not for operatic singers. Although several outstanding performances were turned in Monday, the generally unpolished acting mightily dulled the brilliance of the play's theme.

The best performances were given by Glenn Biggam (Macheath), Paul Cwiklik (Mr. Peachum); Dorothy Ladd (Mrs. Peachum); Dolce Alviani (Lucy), and Paula Stevens (Polly)—in that order.

A senior English major, Mr. Cwiklik has given the campus a number of memorable performances in Operetta Guild and Roister Doister shows in the past four years—his talent and devotion will be missed. Miss Stevens seemed to lack training more than talent—her voice is perhaps stronger than her control of it. This is hopefully just the beginning of her association with the Guild. A high school student, Miss Alviani displayed amazing talent.

Robert Emerson (Street Singer), who opened the show with the Ballad of Mack the Knife, was definitely above par. Maxine Forward (Jenny), was sometimes good and sometimes bad; but she came across as the always unfairly-treated prostitute: Herbert Mongue (Police Commissioner Tiger Brown), though an excellent singer, was a poor actor; his lackluster portrayal greatly detracted from the meaningful relationship between

NOW YOU CAN BE YOUNGER THAN SHE IS

It is a scientific fact that girls reach emotional maturity earlier than boys. For this reason freshman girls are reluctant to make romantic alliances with freshman boys, but instead choose men from the upper classes.

Thus the freshman boys are left dateless, and many is the night the entire freshman dorm sobs itself to sleep. An equally moist situation exists among upper-class girls. With upper-class men being snapped up by freshman girls, the poor ladies of the upper class are reduced to dreary, manless evenings of Monopoly and home permanents.

It pleasures me to report there is a solution for this morbid situation—indeed, a very simple solution. Why don't the two great have-not groups—the freshman boys and the upper-class girls—find solace with each other?

True, there is something of an age differential, but that need not matter. Take, for example, the case of Albert Payson Sigafoos and Eustacia Vye.

Albert Payson, a freshman in sand and gravel at Vanderbilt University, was walking across the campus one day, weeping softly in his loneliness. Blinded by tears, he stumbled upon the supine form of Eustacia Vye, a senior in wicker and raffia, who was collapsed in a wretched heap on the turf.

We could build a Snowman...

"Why don't you watch where you're going, you minor youth?" said Eustacia peevishly.

"I'm sorry, lady," said Albert Payson and started to move on. But suddenly he stopped, struck by an inspiration. "Lady," he said, tugging his forelock, "don't think me forward, but I know why you're miserable. It's because you can't get a date. Well, neither can I. So why don't we date each other?"

"Surely you jest!" cried Eustacia, looking with scorn upon his tiny head and body.

"Oh, I know I'm younger than you are," said Albert Payson, "but that doesn't mean we can't find lots of fun things to do together."

"Like what?" she asked.

"Well," said Albert Payson, "we could build a Snowman."

"Bah!" said Eustacia, grinding her teeth.

"All right then," said Albert Payson, "we could go down to the pond and catch some frogs."

"Ugh!" said Eustacia, shuddering her entire length.

"How about some Run-Sheep-Run?" suggested Albert Payson.

"You are callow, green, and immature," said Eustacia, "and I will thank you to remove your underaged presence from mine eyes."

Sighing, Albert Payson lighted a cigarette and started away.

"Stay!" cried Eustacia.

He stayed.

"Was that a Marlboro Cigarette you just lighted?" she asked.

"What else?" said Albert Payson.

"Then you are not immature!" she exclaimed, clasping him to her clavicle. "For to smoke Marlboros is the very essence of wisdom, the height of American know-how, the incontrovertible proof that you can tell gold from dross, right from wrong, fine aged tobaccos from pale, pathetic substitutes. Albert Payson, if you will still have me, I am yours!"

"I will," he said, and did, and today they are married and run the second biggest wicker and raffia establishment in Duluth, Minnesota.

There's something particularly painful about being bitten by a dog that you are feeding. I assume that the Student Senate (which has had an amazing history of creating such dogs) is in pain a good deal of the time.

Take RSO for an example. That little bastion of democracy was created a few years back by the Senate as an advisory board. Today RSO has the power to block legislation that the Senate passes. In fact, all Senate bills must be considered by RSO before they go on for consideration by the President of the University (who was not created by the Student Senate.) The President, in turn, has veto power over Student Senate legislation.

It might be of general interest to try and determine just what the Student Senate does (since this would undoubtedly be of great use to some of the Senators who are wondering about just this problem.) At the risk of offending several esteemed Senators I would propose that the Senate taxes the students (which makes them the bad guys) and then gives the money back to the students in the form of the Collegian, WMUA, and other worthwhile activities on campus. Other than collecting and distributing this money the Senate doesn't do very much.

Please do not send me irate letters proclaiming that the Senate takes trips to Washington, approves Constitutions, supervises elections on a campus wide basis, supervises men's and women's affairs (whatever that means) and several other functions of an indespensable nature. I am aware that the Senate does perform these functions. So good for them because someone has to do these menial tasks.

But it seems to me that the Senate could be doing something more important. It's true that on a few occasions this year's Student Senate has excerised some real initiative in such matters as the "garduating average bill" and the Constitutional Convention. But these flashes of creative legislative activity are far too few.

The Student Senate (despite the powers of RSO and the President) may excercise a good deal of authority. The President's veto power has never been used and there is little reason to believe that it will be used. I doubt that Dr. Lederle would oppose the will of the Student representatives even if he did not agree with the legislation passed. If he were to do so, the student body, which generally doesn't give a hoot about what goes on in the Senate, would rally round the flag to support their elected representatives and burn the President in effigy. That kind of publicity in a State operated school is almost always to be avoided by the administration.

* * * *

If the Senate does have authority in judicial matters, elections, and several other areas, then why hasn't this authority been used?

Frankly there's a lot of dead wood in the Senate. Despite Cournoyer's guillotine (which to date has chopped about thirty heads from the roster of the Senate—most of whom were non-Senator members of Senate Committees) the Senate meetings are still a battle of parlimentary red tape. The Senate President has chopped away at some of this tape, but he doesn't have a big enough hatchet to cut all of it.

I don't really care about a particular Senator's desire to do "the best job that he can", I'm interested in the job that he's doing. When committee meetings consist of nine-tenths bickering then something is wrong. When the full meeting of the Senate bogs down in parliamentary procedure, then something is wrong.

MacCombie's Chopin

by LANGDON LOMBARD

Tuesday evening April 9, an expectant crowd was presented with an all-Chopin recital by John MacCombie, an instructor in the University's Department of Romance Languages, at Bartlett Auditorium.

He was called upon to play three encores, two of his own works and the first movement of the famous Beethoven "Moonlight" Sonata. The two encores composed by the artist were diametrically opposed to some of the things being produced in the University's Music Department. We are glad that we heard them.

The program was chosen wisely: there were not too many pieces of technical difficulty. For those pieces that had elements of virtuosity, there was enough calm to offset the bombastic sound of the concert grand which seemed to have somewhat of a burdensome effect in the relatively small hall.

Mr. MacCombie seemed most at home with those pieces that called for great amounts of sympathy. Most notable in this respect was the "Raindrop" Prelude. The second section of the concert should have ended with this piece rather than with the

Dance Club To Present Spring Show

The Modern Dance Club at UMass will present its ninth annual spring concert on Friday and Saturday, April 26 and 27, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Thirty members of the club will appear in a dozen pieces of original student-composed choreography. The program, one of the University's Centennial events, is open to the public without charge.

Sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association at the University, the Modern Dance Club endeavors to present dancing as a performing art and as an artistic means of self-expression.

Misses Shirley Roby and Georgia Reid, the club's faculty advisors, both hold advanced fine arts degrees in dance. They have studied under Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham, and Jose Limon.

Club members receive lecture demonstrations during the year from such choreographic artists as Pearl Primus, Alwin Nicholais of New York's Henry St. Playhouse, and Oliver Cosstock, who is affiliated with the Hanya Holm Studios in New York City.

The choreography and make-up were very good; the lighting and sets were well-done, nicely tailored to the production in which "everybody is a rogue".

We would quarrel with Dr. Alviani's change of script in giving the song Piarte Jenny Seerauberjenny) to Polly, rather having it sung by Jenny. The play's serious meaning is perhaps most poignantly expressed in this song and the finale. Pirate Jenny, in the Weill-Brecht version, tells us of Jenny's daydreams and heartaches in a classic and deeply emotional scene, the focal point of the melodrama comedy. In placing this song in the first act, when Jenny isn't introduced to us until the second, much of the song's original intent was lost.

Prelude No. 22 in G Minor calling for a great disturbance of chordal sound.

Occasionally the pianist was guilty of overusing the principle of rubato. There have been others of note who have not learned the proper amounts of rubato either, and Mr. MacCombie is another member of the list. At times when the artist shone, he frequently made a mistake in lack of differentiation of touch.

It could be that with his teaching chores here at the University, the artist could not find time to give the proper amount of practice to so ambitious a program. This fault does not lie entirely with the artist but also with the University which could have seen fit to give special time to Mr. MacCombie to prepare for such a program.

Somethin' For Nothin'

Time has come again for the annual give-away from J. D.'s Corner. Old-timers know the rules; for the newcomers, here's how it works:

Take an envelope — any size, any kind—or a small cardboard box, and put your name and address on it along with an appropriate amount of postage. Then send or bring it to the Collegian office.

The envelope will be returned to you filled with as much give-away material as the size and postage allow. (Rates are 4 cents for the first 2 ounces, and 2 cents for each additional ounce. A plain business envelope should be able to hold 4 to 6 ounces.)

Get in on the annual schlock give-away. Get "sumpthin' for nothin'." Do it today.

Lacrossemen Trip Wesleyan 3-2; Harrington Top Scorer

by WALT GREEN '66

The University of Massachusetts Lacrosse team opened their 1963 season last Wednesday with a very impressive win over Wesleyan University. The final score was 3-2.

Both teams played cautiously and there were no goals scored in the first half of the game. UMass showed fine scoring potential in the first half and they fired a number of shots at the Wesleyan goal, but none seemed to hit the mark. Some were so close that they bounced off the rim of the goal. Wesleyan only shot a few times, some being on the mark but stopped by goalie Dick Baird.

After a shortened half-time break because of the cold, both teams came back and were more effective in the scoring department.

After about three and one half minutes had elapsed in the second half, a Wesleyan defenseman was penalized and UMass had a one man advantage. UMass took advantage of the situation with a Harrington to Gilliatt pass, who in turn passed to Don Trembley in front of the goal for the first Redman score of the afternoon. At 9:19 Frank Gilliatt, again with the ball, passed to Steve Harrington for the second Redman goal. At 10:56 Tom Burt scored the first Wesleyan goal. But the UMass ten let them cheer for only a minute when at 11:57, John Prior scored on a pass from Steve Harrington.

After the quarterbreak, the men from Connecticut didn't waste any time as they scored a goal after only 29 seconds and passed in the Fourth period. UMass didn't score again; but neither did Wesleyan and the score remained as a victory for the Redmen 3-2.

UMass spent only 30 seconds in the penalty box compared to four minutes spent there by Wesleyan.

Defensively, the UMass ten played excellent, as expected, Dick Baird, in his first year as goalie, played a fine game as he was called on to make numerous of saves. Paul Majeski, Co-captain Dutch Dieterle, Jon Kallio, Fran Casey, Frank Infusino, and Joe Moro did a fine job in ballhawking and breaking up the Wesleyan attack.

The Midfielders did as well as any in the league, but they have some weakness in their stickhandling and ball control, due to the lack of experience and the weather.

Frank Gilliatt, a former midfielder who hurt his back in preseason warm up activity, has consequently been shifted to an attack position where he has been very effective, netting assists against Wesleyan.

"Our riding, clearing, and checking have been fine," commented Coach Garber, "We've played fine defensive lacrosse. Now if we can just get 'on the goal' we will be tough to beat."

SPRING SOCCER

Spring soccer practice will begin next Monday at 4:00 in the lower field. All those interested should contact Coach Leaman in room nine of the Cage.

Culligan & Kahn: Dry Cleaners

by JIM TRELEASE '63

It has been estimated that there are 15 million certified and uncertified sports fans running loose in American recreation and athletic facilities, to say nothing of 15 million more descending upon supermarkets, drug stores, and clothing shops. This year, by their very nature, these sports fans will buy more hair tonic (thanks to Tom Tresh), more television sets (thanks to Paul Hornung), more filter cigarettes (thanks to Arnold Palmer), and more copies of The Saturday Evening Post (thanks to Joe Culligan and Roger Kahn) than ever before.

In a few months, a one-eyed Irishman named Joe Culligan will celebrate his first anniversary with the Curtis Publishing Company. In this one year, Mr. Culligan wrought more sweat from the sports world than Bo Belinsky has from his guardian angel in 27 years. Reluctantly persuaded into the Presidency of a cryptic Curtis Publications, i.e. The Saturday Evening Post, after it had lost $4,000,000 in 1961, Culligan promptly went about resurrecting his third corpse. Previously he single-handedly rebuilt flonudering NBC radio and gasping Good Housekeeipng magazine.

Culligan, who exists on a relentless 15-20 hour workday, knows the communications field like Richard Burton knows Liz Taylor. He realized that when Americans communicate in magazines, on TV, in offices, on subways, or over backyard fences, the chances are 5-1 that sooner or later they will turn to speaking of sports. So Culligan went out and lured one of the best sportswriters in America away from his editor's seat at Newsweek—Roger Kahn.

In a major overhauling that had the Sat Eve's fresh Madison Avenue Ivy Leaguers taking orders instead of giving them, Culligan sent Kahn to The Post's senior sports editor's desk to win over and back Post readers. If the World Series, All-Star games, prize fights, and track meets could bring NBC radio back to life after TV had annihilated it, and if they earned Time Inc. 1,000,000 readers with Sports Illustrated in less than ten years, sports could do the same for Curtis. So began the task of Roger Kahn.

The Avenging Finger

In their new sports editor, The Post had a man who knew good writing. Kahn's feature story for Sports Illustrated in October, 1961 entitled — "PURSUIT OF NO. 60: THE ORDEAL OF ROGER MARIS"—has been rated as one of the 25 best sports features in the last 15 years and one of the greatest baseball stories ever written. Culligan, realizing the craft and reputation of Kahn, left only this advice: "We want The Post to be the conscience of the whole competitive enterprise system. We want The Post to become a place where the good, responsible individuals who are helping to make our competitive enterprise stronger will be glorified." Also, Culligan wanted no part of sensational expose for the sake of sensationalism. But if there is a wrong to be righted, then "We'll become an avenging finger," Culligan advised Kahn, "pointing at those people who play our system false."

It all began in the brotherly city of Philadelphia. In less than a year, The Post moved to hard hitting New York City and Culligan and Kahn made America again conscious of The Post; and surprisingly, they did it with finger pointing. Perhaps there were more wrong players around than Culligan imagined. Competing medias soon accused The Post, Culligan, and Kahn of unnecessarily rattling the bones in sport's closets.

If Kahn at times appears to be portraying the seamier side of sports in those articles he selects for publication, it may be that sports slowly have taken on a sooty complexion within the last five years. Americans, motivated by the same ideology that moves them to smoke a particular brand of cigarettes because a winning golfer does, have long refused to see their sports idols for what they are: fallible human beings who need just as much scrutiny as the cashier at the local bank. As a consequence to this narrow-mindedness by America, there begins to grow every so often a small minority of athletes who thrive under the guise of idolatry while fixing basketball, football, and boxing contests. And like an old, revered hat, sport occasionally needs to be cleaned and blocked.

Scandal In Sports

Aware that the violators, though a minority, may spread if not checked, the SatEve has spent a year dry cleaning. Boxing and football have received the most extensive efforts. Three days before Davey Moore died, The Post published a story—"I KILLED A MAN" —by ex-fighter Roger Donoghue and two weeks later ex-fight promoter Bill Fugazy wrote—"WHY I'M GETTING OUT". Both articles called for extensive clean-ups in boxing. Back in September, 1962, Furm Bisher and The Post garnered a $500,000 law suit from Paul Bryant for supposedly libeling him in an article about college football brutality. By the end of September, six players had died; and 18 succumbed by the end of the 1962 season. Then there was (and still is) the famous Georgia-Alabama fix article. Both gridiron stories specifically called for corrections in coaching attitudes but were not condemnations of the sports. Basketball was pointed out as a violator when All-American Barry Kramer's recruiting story was published. Here again, The Post called for changes in coaching ethics.

Soon, there will come once more that time when The Post returns to the good, responsible individuals like Palmer, Patterson, Pettit, and Pietronsante. But until the grass grows green on the gridiron, the blood is wiped from the fight canvas, and the angles are right on the backboards, Culligan and Kahn will point the avenging finger that boxing commissioners, athletic coaches and conference officials are reluctant to point. And 30 million sports fans should realize that they are pointing to ordinary human beings called athletes who have just as much character and integrity as you and I have or do not have.

Pia Hurls One-Hitter; Redmen Down Maroons, 3-1

Williams' Three-Base Hit Drives In Two

The city of Springfield provided all the opposition for the UMass baseball team in the first week of the season when Earl Lorden's boys opened with a 3-0 loss at American International last Wednesday and then came back with a win over Springfield College Monday in Amherst. The first game was just a bad dream for the Redmen after the 3-1 victory this week in which righty Lew Pia hurled a one-hitter. The Aces already had wins over Fairfield and Southern Connecticut State under the belt when they took on Massachusetts. Their left handed curveballer Jim Flynn had an 0-4 record last season, but he succeeded in tying the Mass bats in knots. Bob Hughes, John Awdycki, Tony Williams, and Dave Krukonis untied those knots Monday afternoon, however, when they accounted for three runs off Bob Willis of Springfield College.

Flynn did not look too impressive at first glance in the opener with AIC, but Mass had problems galore in mounting any kind of attack. A pair of walks and two errors in the first three innings gave the Redmen ample opportunity to score, and they kept the pressure on Flynn. Each time he got in a hole, Flynn came up with an easy out though. UMass kept hitting Flynn's serves into the dirt all afternoon.

Bob Hughes opened the game by reaching on an error, and he moved into scoring position with a stolen base. Three outs later he was still on second. The following frame Pete Larkin reached base by the same method, an infield error, but the next two batters went out before Krukonis walked to supply two runners. A routine grounder to second nipped whatever threat was present.

The sixth inning was the only other time that Massachusetts had more than one man on base. Awdycki broke up Flynn's potential no-hitter with a long double to center. Things looked black after Steve Wojnar flied to left and Ken Clark went down on strikes, but Larkin reached on four balls to give Mass a ray of hope. Jim Schmoyer's fly to right center ended the inning, leaving the fifth and sixth men stranded. A walk and wild pitch put Krukonis on third with one man away in the seventh frame, but once more Flynn took command and kept the AIC unbeaten record intact.

Not scoring Krukonis from third in the top of the seventh proved to be the downfall of the Redmen, because at the time they were behind only by the run that AIC socred in the first inning. After Mass was retired in the seventh the Aces went down to business and boosted their edge to a safer margin. Right fielder Bob Janis singled and Dick Wilson served up a walk to Mike Lonczak with two out. The ball game was as good as over when Terry Richard smashed out a long two bagger into center that drove in both base runners.

Wilson turned in a top effort for Mass, a three hitter with 12 strikeouts and five walks, but unfortunately a passed ball in the first inning and the double in the seventh nullifid a fine performance.

Big Lew Pia stretched his overall record to 6-0 in the season's home opener with the Maroons of Springfield College. Pia had not lost in two years going into the game, and in the second inning the UMass batters made sure the record wouldn't end. Awdycki started the parade of base hits by lining a two base blow just inside the right field foul line. Ken Clark picked up a walk from Willis, who had a 2-6 mark with the Maroons last year including a 2-1 loss to the Redmen. Captain Tony Williams pounded a long blast into deep straightaway center that Dick Bartsch chased and came within two feet of catching. Williams legged it around to third and Awdycki and Clark easily scored ahead of him. A long sacrifice fly to center off the bat og Krukonis sent home Williams with the third and final Massachusetts tally of the contest.

Springfield captain Ev Venturini reached on an error by Larkin in the first and Tom Bolko followed with a walk to give Pia something to worry about, but the UMass hurler got his final out of the inning on a fly to center by Ken MacFadyen. An error in the second and a walk in the third accounted for two Maroon runners, and then Pia retired eight in a row before Venturini picked up his second free pass of the game in this sixth. Bolko, the sophomore catcher, ended Pia's bid for a no-hitter and a shutout with a double to right center that split the gap between Hughes and Wojnar. A walk prolonged the threat, but Bartsch forced Bolko at third and Dave Jacobs lofted a fly to left that Ken Clark pulled in. Pia set the side down one-two-three in the final three innings.

Coach Lorden's squad will open its Yankee Conference schedule at 2 p.m. this Friday, when the University of Maine plays the first of a two game weekend series at Alumni Field. The second game is scheduled for the same time Saturday. At Orono last year the Redmen won both games by a single run, 7-6 and 5-4.

Anatomy Of A Scandal: Part Two

by ALAN RICE '66

The week of March 17-23, 1963 was the most hectic seven day stretch that the sport of football has ever seen in its off-season, and unfortunately it may not be forgotten for a long time to come. On Tuesday of that week, March 19, the Saturday Evening Post printed the story of the conversation overheard between Bear Bryant and Wally Butts prior to the Alabama-Georgia game last September.

Word of the contents of the article by George Burnett leaked out the previous weekend and set off a string of denials by Butts and Bryant, calls for investigations by the state of Georgia, the FBI, and the Southeastern Conference, and threats of suits by those involved. The story of the possible fixing of a college football game made headlines in nearly every paper in the country for three weeks.

The whole affair was vociferously denied by Wally Butts, Georgia athletic director, and Bear Bryant, Alabama coach, and most people refused to believe the stories during the first few days. Sunday, March 17, before the magazine hit the stands, Bryant denied everything on a Montgomery television program and also announced he had taken and passed a lie detector test, and had turned its results over to the University of Alabama. At the same time in Georgia, state attorney general Eugene Cook announced he would begin a thorough investigation of everything concerned in any way with the principals of the case, Burnett, Butts, and Bryant. Acting on the orders of Governor Carl Saunders, Cook stated he would carry his work "from here to the end."

George Burnett, the man who started the whole scandal off by overhearing the phone call between Butts and Bryant, taped a show for WSB-TV in Atlanta Monday, still a day before the country would be able to read for themselves just what had happened, in which he went over his story including the notes of the specific plays that were discussed in the conversation. The same day he also issued a statement that he would cooperate one hundred percent with Cook in the investigation.

That weekend Wally Butts refused to take a lie test on the advice of his attorney William Schroder, but he consented three days later, Wednesday of the week in question, and flew to Jacksonville, Florida to take the polygraph test given by an expert in that field whose name was not divulged to the public. The results immediately were forwarded to Attorney General Cook.

While the state of Georgia was taking great pains to get to the bottom of the whole mess, Alabama was still sitting back in a spirit of disbelief.

Little concrete proof was offered except for the test Bryant took the day after the news of the story was made public. Jimmy Sharpe, a senior guard for Alabama this past year, told a reporter that knowing Georgia's plays and calling the signals while Georgia was still in formation was not an unusual occurrence since the great amount of hours any large team spends in scouting will make this possible. This to a certain extent is undeniably true with any team, except that Alabama idea of the usual quantity of scouting differs with that of Johnny Griffith, the Georgia coach whose observations on the 35-0 Alabama massacre appeared in Burnett's story.

The U. S. justice department announced in the middle of the week that their preliminary investigation showed no signs of the game being rigged, and no more was heard from them at any time in the future. However, just a short time later, a check with the phone company revealed a call had been made from the Communications International firm to the University of Alabama September 14 and was charged to the number of the University of Georgia.

Two weeks after the spotlight was first turned on the case, Burnett took a second polygraph lie test, given by Major Barney Raydale, chief of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. His first test was in February shortly after he had presented his story to the Georgia Athletic Board. Ragdale indicated that Burnett had answered everything truthfully. Forty-eight hours later, on the last day of the month, Cook announced that his report would be finished the following day and turned over to the governor. Cook also divulged enough unofficial information that day to keep the case very much in the news. His preview of the report stated that Butts had passed vital information to Bryant.

Schroder immediately denied this on the spot, claiming his client had not given enough time by Cook to present his written statement, though many reports came out of Atlanta Friday that had Butts at a ninety minute conference in Cook's office.

The investigation concluded that the information passed "was not casual in nature but it relater to football plays, formations, and patterns." Schroder emphatically denied the report which he described as "replete with inaccuracies and untruths." Cooke also included in his /ndings the discovery that Butts had amassed a fortune of $206,000 although his salary was only $16,000 a year from the University and that he was known to have lost a great deal of money in a land deal in Florida that did not turn out well. Coaches on the Georgia staff, after going over Burnett's notes with the investigators, believed that the information could have affected the outcome of the game.

The story ends here, at least for now. Most of the results of the investigation were left unexplained. What the findings mean were also left unexplained. Since April 5, the only news of the case has been the announcement of suits filed against the Saturday Evening Post by Butts and Bryant.

Like a volcano, it could erupt again any time, or like a volcano, it could quietly fade away and never be heard from again. Time heals all wounds and only time will heal the Southeastern Conference.

The Controversial Speaker On Campus

by Collegiate Press Service

The right of college students to discuss unpop ular subjects and to hear controversial and unpopular speakers has become a hotly contested issue o n at least five major U.S. campuses this year, the American Civil Liberties Union reports.

The ACLU says that most of the cases invol ve student resistance to faculty or administrative attempts to regulate the choice of speakers at stu dent meetings. One case concerns sanctions against a student newspaper editor who allowed unfavora ble mention of Senator Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) to be published in a book review.

In brief, these are the issues:

Gary Althen, editor of the University of Colorado Daily, was fired from his post by university president Quigg Newton after the publication of a book review written by another student, which referred to Sen. Goldwater as a "fool, a mountebank, a murderer, no better than a common criminal."

An appearance by Herbert Aptheker, a member of the Communist Party's National Committee, was blocked at the University of Buffalo, New York.

University of California officials refused to grant permission for a student body to sponsor a debate on the Riverside campus of the university, which included, among others, two members of the Communist Party.

The Young Socialist group at the University of Washington applied for permission for Benjamin Davis to speak on the campus. The permission was denied, and the group has appealed to the president.

The ACLU, which supports the "widest intellectual freedom," said that it will take part in a number of these cases.

In the Colorado case, the student newspaper had published an article by Carl Mitcham, senior from Texas, attacking Goldwater's views. The Senator replied with a letter demanding an apology and a retraction. An apology, signed by editor Althen, was printed, conceding "crude, intemperate, and false" statements concerning the senator. Following a state-wide political furor, Althen was subsequently removed from his position.

The Michigan ACLU has sent a letter to the chairman of the Committee on Speaker Policy, Michigan Coordinating Council for Public Higher Education, recommending that colleges place as few restrictions as possible on campus speakers so that educational freedom will not be impeded. It points out in the letter that First Amendment rights protect public speech and that speakers are personally accountable for violations of state or federal law.

Once-Imprisoned Freedom Rider To Speak At Amherst

John Maguire of Wesleyan University, one of the 1961 Freedom Riders, will speak in the Babbott Room at Amherst College this Tuesday April 23 at 8:30 p.m. His topic will be "Nonviolence and Social Action."

Born in Montgomery, Alabama, Maguire returned twenty-nine years later with the Freedom Riders and was imprisoned briefly there for challenging segregated terminal facilities. He has been on the Northern Student Movement's advisory board since that civil rights organization was founded; in 1962 he was appointed to the Connecticut Advisory Committee of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Maguire was invited to speak after Amherst held an exchange with Tougaloo University in Mississippi. Many of the students participating returned shaken and afraid that there would be no peaceful solution of that state's problems. Recent issues of the Amherst STUDENT have been carrying articles with titles like "Racial Tension in Mississippi Jars Amherst Men at Tougaloo," "Shock of the South," and "The Violence of Collison."

Alleged Communist Leader Will Participate On Panel

by RAISSA LANDOR '65

"American Democracy and the Communist Party will be the subject of a panel discussion to be presented in the Education Building auditorium on Wednesday, April 24th, at 8:00 p.m. It is part of a series being presented by Synthesis/Young Independents to promote independent political thought and education on campus. Three UMass professors, a Smith professor, and a contributor to the Communist paper "The Worker" will be participating.

Arnold Johnson, holder of many degrees in such fields as education and theology, was among the "second string" of communist leaders who were arrested and tried under the Smith Act and served a three year prison sentence in a Federal jail. He is presently one of fourteen persons who have been hauled before the Subversive Activities Control Board and ordered to register as a Communist. This is on appeal.

He has been involved in many projects, such as the 1931 Harlan miners struggle and was held in Harlan County jail in Kentucky for six weeks. This was the beginning of his interest in the labor movement in the U.S.

He has written for "Political Affairs" (the monthly theoretical organ of the Communist Party) and for "The Worker". He has traveled extensively in the Soviet Union and Europe. The day before speaking at UMass he is speaking at UConn in a meeting sponsored by the Independent Students Organization.

Also participating on the panel is Dr. Harold Gordon, member of the History Dept. of UMass. He is particularly noted for his book "Reichswehr and the German Republic 1919-1926", and several articles on similar topics. His speciality is the Communist Party in Russia and Germany. Dr. Gordon has also been a military intelligence research analyst with special reference to the Soviet Union.

Dr. David Leonard is another member of the panel from the History department at UMass. Dr. Leonard has studied at Brown and the University of Michigan, where he received his doctorate in Latin American History.

Dr. Mario DePillis from UMass History Department is the moderator for this panel. His speciality is American History with an emphasis on Utopian socialism.

Dr. Max Salvadori, is the participant from the Smith History Department. Dr. Salvadori is an Italian, who left Italy when Mussolini came into power. For a while he was an active participant in the underground movement in opposition to the Fascist regime. He has written a number of books. Among these are The Economics of Freedom: American Capitalism Today, which was highly recommended by President Eisenhower. Also, The Rise of Modern Communism: A Brief History of the Communist Movement in the Twentieth Century.

Columbia Men Search For Perfect Book

NEW YORK UPI—Columbia University undergraduates are searching for the perfect book—one that won't keep the door open too much.

The unusual literary problem arose Sunday when, for the first time in 209 years, women were allowed to visit the male students' dormitories.

The new policy allows visiting every other Sunday, from 2 to 5 p.m. One rule must be followed: The students are required keep their doors doors open "a space comparable to the width of a book."

The door-holding books ranged from a slim volume by Lenin, apparently signifying the revolution in dormitory life, to a paperback appropriately titled "Problems in American Ethics."

Across the street from one dormitory, the brothers of one fraternity, Phi Sigma Delta, hung a banner to warn: "Don't do anything we haven't done in the last 209 years."

COLLEGIAN SECRETARY

The Collegian will begin interviewing for a NON-student secretary for the 1963-1964 academic year on Tuesday, April 23. All interested applicants should come to the Collegian office on the 2nd floor of the Student Union PRIOR to that date, to fill out an application with Mrs. Fuller. This is an excellent job for a student's wife.

Here We Go Again

A precedent was set last Tuesday night, April 16, when Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and Amherst gave a musical tribute to the University of Massachusetts. The idea originated in the mind of an Amherst professor, Henry Mishkin, of the Music Dept., and was carried out by Dr. Ruth Douglass, chairman of the Music Dept. at Mt. Holyoke. We were very fortunate in being honored by these schools. None of the other four colleges has been shown this tribute. Music of Massachusetts composers was presented. In fact, Doric Alviani composed a large choral piece especially for the occasion. To the chagrin of those involved the event was not supported by the student body. The music was sung by Choral groups of Smith, Amherst, and Mt. Holyoke. And we, those to whom the tribute was being made, were not there. At this point you are all waiting to be chastised about being apathetic. But after some observation it seems it is a waste of time to tell anyone that apathy exists; for people have become apathetic to apathy.

We are involved in a community. A community that has existed for one hundred years. A community that has become important to many, many people. Now that this community is celebrating its one hundredth anniversary, we choose not to be involved in a community that we are a part of. What is the fear that keeps people away from involvement. Is it a concern that their work won't be done? Is it just a lack of interest? If it is a lack of interest, something is amiss. Before we get too general, let it be said that a man is the expression of his interests. If we don't have interests or if they are limited to social events or school assignments (work) then man becomes less than he could be.

Thus UMass celebrates its centennial year. The Spring Convocation or Charter Day will be April 29, 1963. But looking beyond the Centennial, thousands of speakers, musicians, and professors will be coming to this campus. Will we only be concerned for Peter, Paul and Mary, or the Brothers Four, or will our energies rise to a higher level, such as classical musicians, or scholarly experts. The resources and interests are here for our choosing.

THE PRETTIEST GIRL

by MANUEL SMITH

You may not think it possible, but on a recent weekend, the prettiest girls on campus sat in Saturday night without a date! Ridiculous you say? Not so; because of the prevailing philosophy existing on campus, the apathetic outlook, this may well have happened. What does this apathy have to do with our dateless campus queen? It is quite possible that "Oh, she must have a date already" went through the minds of a hundred guys and the result was the seemingly impossible, a lonely weekend for the prettiest girl.

This may be a far fetched example but when examined more closely, it seems that the analogy is well-founded. It appears to me that except for a select few, the same select few every time, no one is doing anything on this campus! True, not everyone here is capable of leadership ability and many honestly can't afford the time for outside activities, but the majority of the student body ought to spend some time in any one of the many worthwhile constructive organizations on campus. But this is not happening. There is an abundance of talent being wasted here!

To get back to the original analogy: Granted, a very conscious apathy exists here, and it has been raked over the coals too much already. But along with this feeling exists an even worse attitude. How many times have you complained about something, anything major or minor that is wrong on campus, an honest concerned complaint, yet how many times have you done anything about it? It's the "let George do it" "it will get done without me" attiude that is wrong, more wrong than the prevalence of mass apathy.

"If I don't ask her out someone else will" becomes "If I don't do it (join, protest, work, help correct injustices or wrongs) someone else will." If by some quirk of fate, everyone, 100% of the student body felt this way, where would we be?! This attitude is contemptible; it's time to do something about it! No one else will do it, you must do it yourself.

How many of you even know whom to see or where to go with complaints to get action, or how to join an organization or even what organizations exist that you may be interested in? Do you know: that there are over 150 campus student organizations very much interested in finding the right person? Or that the faculty and administration is only too willing to talk over gripes and suggestions with interested students? Open your eyes, student body, there's a lot to be done, and a lot of help is needed. Stop complaining, start acting and all will benefit. It won't get done unless you do it yourself! Negativism is worthless, it deteriorates progress. Think of that proverbial prettiest girl. . .

The Twain And The Meeting

by JOHN B. CHILDS

Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet,
Till Earth and Sky stand presently at God's great Judgement Seat;
—Rudyard Kipling

Kipling, with a few strokes of his pen in the Ballad of East and West, erected what may become an eternal literary trap from which many writers do not seem able to escape. "Never the twain shall meet" says Kipling, and that line has fascinated, intimidated, and enticed more than a few who write about anything concerning "western" and "eastern" peoples.

We are no exception. We cannot write of Indian Association's program of song, dance, and drama, of Saturday night without speaking of "the twain." Indeed the twain was quite visible that night, the silken costumes of the dancers, the high lilting of the shanai flute, all developed what tourist books call an "exotic" atmosphere, an atmosphere quite different from what we are used to.

But what of the twain? It fell before us as does water of the swift river. The river flows on, but underneath even its swiftest deepest waters is the great earth, mighty in its unity. Unity, meeting, how much they impressed us that Saturday night. The hushed silence of the audience, as the very gods danced before them in the form of man and woman. The laughter of the audience at the antics of tricksters and lovers, tales of a thousand years and a million men.

We saw the twain that night. We also saw something more important. In that dance program we saw a unity of understanding between two cultures, a unity of understanding which exists not in spite of the twain, but around it.

If there is any hope in this world of crises, of misunderstanding, and distrust it was demonstrated in the dancing of Surya Kumari and Bali Ram. And, though it may sound naive, it is a hope that we are glad to see demonstrated. We will not end here, we yield to a far better writer, the great Indian poet Robindranath Tagore.

Where the Mind is Without Fear
Where the mind is without fear and the head is held high;
Where knowledge is free;
Where the world has not been broken up into fragments by narrow domestic walls;
Where words come out from the depth of truth;
Where tireless striving stretches its arms towards perfection;
Where the clear stream of reason has not lost its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit;
Where the mind is led forward by thee into everwidening thought and action—
Into that heaven of freedom, my Father, let my country awake.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Justified Neglect

To the Editor:

Students who remained on campus during the brief Easter weekend did so either because of the distance of their homes or because they wished to study. However, no studying was accomplished at the library this weekend — mainly bescause it was closed, (except for Friday). This greatly inconvenienced students by shutting off sources for research work on up-coming term papers.

The library justifies its closing because this weekend was a recess. In accordance with library policy, the library shall be open 8:30-4:30 Monday through Friday and closed on Saturday and Sunday. Although a long holiday weekend, the brief vacation could hardly be labeled a recess. It is highly unnecessary that students be forced to travel to Amherst and Smith libraries when a skeleton crew could be easily maintained at the University library.

Centennial Serenade

To The Editor:

The Centennial Serenade Tuesday evening April 16th was an outstanding tribute to the University and its students. The broadcast of the production is proof of the excellence in broadcasting which WMUA is capable of achieving. The high fidelity obtained in the broadcast from the cage is a technical achievement on the part of WMUA's technical department. Particular credit should go to George Drake for his work as audio engineer. The production at the cage presented unusually complex technical problems due to the scope of the production. Similarly Langdon Lombard deserves congratulations for his excellence in announcing for the program. To use an old but true phrase, it was a job well done.

Apathy Away

To the Editor:

Last week our Secretary of State lectured on "Our election laws: the need for reform" and twenty students attended. Yes, twenty students out of approximately seven thousand were interested enough to attend this lecture on reforming our Massachusetts government. This means that ninety-nine and ½% were not interested. These same people, however, can frequently be heard criticizing the government; and this does not make sense. We should realize that talking rarely solves anything and criticism should be followed by a course of action that leads to reform. It is our government and it will be whatever we make it.

For Whom The Horn Blows

Dear Editor:

What a wonderful opportunity to become an extra in a movie on this campus. The other night it sounded like Cecil B. DeMille was bringing his entire cast through campus shooting The Charge of the Light Brigade, The Last of the Mohicans, and the Gene Krupa Story all at once. I believe the scene, that was shot in front of Wheeler was the one in which the British, led by their avid bugler, made their famous charge against the Indians. If there are a few more travelling concessions, there will be enough instruments to give everyone a jazz concert. There is, however, one concept for the preservation of one's auditory system. That is, the concessionaires should come around throwing food in people's windows to remind them to come out and buy instruments: Two drums and a sax, please.

FILLING A WELL-NEEDED GAP

Although my son is a college freshman, I am glad to say that he is still not too old to climb up on my lap and have a heart-to-heart talk when things are troubling him. My boy is enrolled at Harvard where he is studying to be a fireman. From the time he was a little tiny baby he always said he wanted to be a fireman. Of course, my wife and I believed that he would eventually grow out of it, but no sir, the little chap never wavered in his ambition for one minute!

So here he is at Harvard today taking courses in net holding, mouth-to-mouth breathing, carbon tetrachloride, and Dalmatian dogs. It is a full schedule for the young man, and that, in fact, is exactly what we talked about when last he climbed upon my lap.

He complained that every bit of his time is taken up with his major requirements. He doesn't have so much as one hour a week to sample any of the fascinating courses outside his major —history, literature, language, science, or any of the thousand and one things that appeal to his keen young mind.

I am sure that many of you find yourselves in the same scholastic bind; you are taking so many requirements that you can't find time for some appealing electives. Therefore, in today's column I will forego levity and give you a brief survey in a subject that is probably not included in your curriculum.

He's still not too Old

I have asked the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes whether I might employ this column—normally a vehicle for innocent merriment—to pursue this serious end. "Of course you may, crazy kid," they replied kindlily, their grey eyes crinkling at the corners, their manly mouths twisted in funny little grins. If you are a Marlboro smoker—and what intelligent human person is not?—you would expect the makers of Marlboro to be fine men. And so they are—wonderful guys, every man-jack of them—good, generous, understanding, wise. They are each tipped with a pure white filter and come in soft pack or Flip-Top box.

But I digress. We were going to take up a topic you are probably unable to cover in your busy academic life. Let us start with the most basic topic of all—anthropology, the study of man himself.

Man is usually defined as a tool-making animal, but I personally do not find this definition entirely satisfactory. Man is not the only species which makes tools. The simians, for example, make monkey wrenches.

Still, when you come to a really complicated tool—like a linotype, for instance—you can be fairly sure it was made by Homo sapiens—or else a very intelligent tiger. The question one should ask, therefore, is not who made the tool, but what did he do with it.

For example, in a recent excavation in the Olduvai Gorge a large assortment of hominoid fossils was found, all dating back to the Middle Pleistocene Age. Buried with the fossils was a number of their artifacts, the most interesting being a black metal box which emitted a steady beeping sound. Now, of course, zoologists will tell you that tree frogs make such boxes which they employ in their mating activities (I can't go into detail about it in this family newspaper) but the eminent anthropological team, Mr. and Mrs. Walther Sigafoos (both he and she are named Walther) were convinced that this particular box was made not by tree frogs but by Neanderthal men. To prove their point, they switched on the box and out came television, which, as everyone knows, was the forerunner of fire.

If there is anything more you need to know about anthropology, just climb up on my lap as soon as my son leaves.

© 1963 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes who sponsor this column, often with trepidation, are not anthropologists. They are tobacconists—good ones, I think—and I think you'll think so too when you sample their wares—available wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states.

A REVIEW

Area Colleges Honor University

CENTENNIAL SERENADE

On Tuesday, April 16, the orchestras and choruses of Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and Smith College presented a salute to the University of Massachusetts on its Centennial Year. It was also a tribute to the artists of Massachusetts who have contributed much to the cultural heritage of the Nation. A crowd in the six hundreds was present.

There were some eleven works presented by such composers as Piston, London, and Loeffler. But the obvious highlight to the evening's festivities was the Now Let Us Praise Famous Men composed for the occasion by Doric Alviani, Head of the Music Department at the University, conducted by the composer. The combined groups from the three colleges serenading the University were joined by the University Chorale in the work by Alviani, and the estimated vocal strength was 325.

The entire concert was broadcast by WMUA with the full cooperation of the Educational Radio Network. Motion pictures of the event with sound tracks were also made during the serenade.

While the Smith College effort was perhaps the best received by the audience, the Alviani work must have been the big challenge to the combined groups. There was little time to work with the groups together although we understand Alviani made the effort to conduct the groups separately.

In the introductory remarks by Dr. Alviani, it was pointed out that it had taken 100 years to get the four colleges in the area together. After the presentation of the pieces, orchestral and choral in nature, we hoped that it would not take another 100 years to accomplish the same feat.

Colorful Humorist Hal Holbrook Captivates Crowd At Smith College

Hal Holbrook as the great American humorist, Mark Twain, entertained the four-college community Friday evening at Greene Hall, Smith College, with his much-acclaimed presentation of "Mark Twain Tonight."

Mr. Holbrook was the author of Tom Sawyer from his bushy white wig to his Twainian twang; he talked, smoked cigars, guffawed and generally kept his audience enraptured for two and a half hours of monologue—selections from Twain's Innocents Abroad, Roughing It and other works.

The humor and philosophy of the country's beloved writer were presented as only Twain or Holbrook could present them. Holbrook's inflection, timing for audience response, delivery were marvelous.

He was the cynical humorist that said, "I used to tell lies but I gave it up . . . the field was overrun with amateurs." Holbrook was the Twain that wrote and spoke a beautiful emotive treatise on slavery called Huckleberry Finn. His more serious selection, Huck and Jim, was one of the evening's highlights.

On the lighter side, he told of Grandfather's old ram, the dangers of abstinence, the time in a strange hotel he hunted long and late for the W.C. He told how he went west and became a newspaper reporter—"Hated to do it but I didn't want honest employment."

Holbrook provided his audience with a delightful evening of memorable entertainment, a show well worth seeing.

Trackmen Stun Holy Cross, 73-62; Crush Wildcats, 85-47

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity track team opened up its season on the right foot last week, as it defeated Holy Cross and New Hampshire. The season officially opened for Coach Footrick's boys last Wednesday, when UMass hosted Holy Cross, and were not very hospitable as they beat the Crusaders going away, 73-62.

Ward Sets Record

Co-captain Bob Brouillet led a sweep of both the mile and the 2-mile runs (9:42). Jim Wrynn and Tom Panke took second and third, respectively, in both races. Fred Lewis turned in his usual sterling performance, as he won both the 100 yard sprint (10:1) and the broad jump (22'3½"), along with a third in the high jump.

Dick Ward set a new varsity hammer record with a toss of 173'6½". Dick's best performance came in the shotput, as he won a great duel with Hanner as Dick's winning toss of 47'9" beat Hanner by only a few inches.

Craig Erikson ran a strong 51.6 to take second to HC's Maloney in the 440. This was particularly encouraging since the Redmen are in dire need of a strong quarter miler. Ken O'Brien continued to be hexed by the Holy Cross middle distance men in the 880. O'Bie held the lead up until the last 100 yards, only to have Bob Noering edge by and win by only .4 of a second. Noering's time was 1:58.6.

With the low hurdles, the javelin and the high jump left, the Redmen had an 11-point lead. This did not seem too secure though, as the Crusaders had already taken first and second in the high hurles, and indoors they had swept both hurdle events. John Harrington turned in a great performance, though, and took second to Kevin O'Brien, who scored 16 points for Holy Cross. John's second place practically clinched the meet for UMass, and when Dick Connors won the javelin, the Redmen had the meet sewn up.

Wildcats Whipped

Saturday the Redmen traveled to New Hampshire, and although it wasn't planned, several trackster-turned in surprising performances. The Redmen won easily 85-47, as Dick Ward and Bob Brouillet kept up their winning ways. Brouillet again won both the mile and 2-mile events. Ward won the shotput, hammer, and high jump. Dick turned in one of the best performances of the day as he threw the hammer 173' into a wind that reached speeds of 40 mph.

Co-captain Loren Flagg won the 100 in a time of 10.0. "Lopy" also took a second in the 220. Craig Erikson marked himself as a man to watch for the rest of the season. Prior to this season Craig had been primarily a dash man. It now seems he has finally found his event. Craig took no less than .8 of a second off the time he ran against Holy Cross, and forced Ken O'Brien to go all the way, as O'Bie defeated Craig by only a few inches. O'Bie's time was 50.5, and Craig's was 50.8.

Dave Sadowsky and Armand Millette turned in 2 surprising performances. Dave won his specialty, the pole vault, and Armand was third in the 880. Both boys then changed to events they'd never tried before. Sadowsky took a second in the high hurdles, and Armand, with a leap of 7', took second in the pole vault. New Hampshire didn't have any men in either event.

The Redmen's next meet will be at home on May 1, against UConn at 3:00 p.m. on Alumni Field.

UPI—Along the sports trail we learn:

It's nearly certain that the return Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title fight will be staged on Thursday, June 27, regardless of the site, which will be announced soon . . .

The limit of golf clubs for tournament play probably will be raised from 14 to 16 next month at the meeting of officials from the United States Golf Association and British brass at Turnberry, Scotland. The conference is slated for May 18 and 19.

Polo Hits Heights

An all-time high of 750 registered polo players in the United states and Canada is disclosed by the United States Polo Association. In connection with the polo boom, the association is arranging for seven or eight schools to be held this year in various centers, including Charlottesville, Va., and Norman, Okla. . . .

The weekly television fights will be shifted from Saturday nights to Friday nights, starting Friday, Sept. 20, when Madison Square Garden's new contract with the ABC network and sponsors goes into effect . . .

Winter sports devotees can understand why "Ski Industries America" reports that the sales of ski merchandise last year was 30 per cent greater than in 1961.

Nicklaus, Palmer Favored

Nevada odds-makers quote Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer as co-favorites at 4-1 to win the Tournament of Champions at the Desert Inn, Las Vegas, Nev., May 2-3. Pamer is the defending titlist in a golf tourney where Nicklaus is making his first appearance . . .

The United States meets Iran as its first Davis Cup tennis opponent this year in early June. Although the star-spangled team has the choice of ground, it probably will accept the Shah of Iran's invitation to play the round at Teheran. That would prevent early cup play from conflicting with our busy summer tennis schedule. And it also would permit U.S. Davis Cuppers to go on tothe Wimbledon tourney at minimum transportation costs.

The long-standing football rivalry between Bowdoin College and the University of Maine has been ended for undisclosed reasons. The Bowdoin decision, announced Tuesday night, ends a rivalry that began in 1893. It will continue through the 1964 season under terms of existing contracts. It was believed that Maine's steady growth as a football power entered into the decision. The statement, signed by both President James S. Coles of Bowdoin and President Lloyd H. Elliott of Maine, said the decision was made "regretfully but in the best interests of all concerned."

The best indication for the reason behind the Bowdoin decision was contained in a statement by Bowdoin Athletic Director Mal Morrell in which he said "much of the time Maine's teams have been considerably stronger than Bowdoin's . . ."

Pia Posts Seventh Straight With Brilliant Two-Hitter

Split Series With Maine; Krukonis Slams Homer

by ALAN RICE '66

UMass 8; Maine 2

Lew Pia proved Saturday that history repeats itself. The ace of the UMass pitching staff hurled the Redmen to an 8-2 win over Maine after they were dumped 4-2 by the Black Bears on Friday. Early last week, Pia put the Redmen on the winning track the same way with a one-hitter over Springfield after Earl Lorden's boys were whitewashed in the opener against AIC.

The big right hander had a no-hitter on tap until the lead-off man in the ninth singled for Maine. In the series opener the day before, the Black Bears had a considerably shorter wait for their first hit off Dick Wilson. The second man up in the game boomed a double to left center and twelve more safe hits followed off Wilson and reliever Rod Corey.

Pete Larkin scored a run in the opening frame after reaching on a two base throwing miscue. Larkin scored on Tony Williams' single that gave Pia a one run lead that he held for six innings with no trouble. His margin over Maine ballooned in the seventh to eight runs when a Dave Krukonis home run and run singles knocked out Maine starter Bob MacDonald in accounting for seevn more scores on the board.

The blast to straightway left field by Krukonis, the right handed hitting senior catcher from Bridgewater, led off the inning. Pia helped himself by beating out a tapper to short and Bob Hughes punched a single into center over a drawn in infield. Larkin slashed a single down the line past third base, sending in Pia. A grounder to third by Williams moved both runners up, and Hughes crossed the plate on a passed ball. Larkin's single came off Black Bear reliever Dave Haskell who issued walks to John Awdycki and Corky Schmoyer. Ken Clark responded to the bases loaded situation with a clutch single driving in the fifth and sixth runs of the inning. Haskell got Steve Wojnar on a pop to second, but Krukonis rapped out his second safety of the stanza, a single into right field that knocked home Schmoyer from third and Clark who had stolen second. Haskell ended the barage by getting Pia on a fly to Larry Coughlin in center.

Before the roof fell in on MacDonald, he had been stingy to the Massachusetts hitters. The first run was unearned as a reresult of the error. A Wojnar single in the second and a sacrifice bunt gave Mass a man at second in the second inning, and Tony Williams reached third in the following frame on his second hit of the day and a steal of second in which his jump on MacDonald was so big, that backstop Vic Mercer fired fifteen feet over second base in trying to nail Williams who easily legged it to third. Both runners were left in scoring position. A pair of walks and a second error by third basemen Mike DeSisto provided the Redmen with a two outs bases loaded threat in the fourth. Hugh grounded out to kill the possible rally.

Two hits, a sacrifice fly, and an infield out hung up a pair for Maine in the final inning off Pia, who fanned six in winning his second of the year. The Black Bears' bats never thratened in the game off Big Lew, maybe because they were emptied of hits the day before.

Maine 4; UMass 2

The Maine bats accounted for a run in the first inning of the Friday game, and runs in the third, fourth, and ninth innings. A double by Larry Coughlin who collected three hits for the day, and a single gave the Bears an early single run lead which they added to when Coughlin opened the third with a single to left center. A single by Dave Gaw, a fly to right, and a fluke play that ended up as a double steal scored Coughlin. Wilson tried to pick Gaw off first and while a rundown ensued, Coughlin took off from third. A throw by Schmoyer was wide of the plate, forcing Krukonis to leap into the path of ther runner. Coughlin scored after the collison and Gaw moved around to third base.

Mike DeSisto powered a three bagger to the deepest part of left field as leadoff man in the fourth and a fly to center by Mercer brought him in. Con Niebet batted in the final Maine run of the game in the last frame with a single that pushed Vic Nelson across the plate.

Massachusetts was collared by right hander Bill Thomas all the way. They got seven hits, four of which came in the eighth and ninth. The Redmen were hitting the ball hard all day, but twelve flys to the outfield were pulled in. The balls that split the gap for the Maine hitters were routine outs for UMass. Their only scoring came in the eight on singles by Rod Corey and Neil Harris and a walk, and a two base blow in the ninth by Schmoyer that scored Tony Williams from first.

The "Redman" beams with pride as he points to Marvelous Lew Pia, who has pitched two excellent games in a row, the latest against UMaine; a brilliant two-hitter.

WANTED: METAWAMPE!

Any interested Freshman or Sophomore man is invited to apply and audition for the position of the University's symbol and spirit, Metawampe. This job will consist of working closely with the Redman Marching Band and the cheerleaders to help provide spirit at many of the football games. This year the role of Metawampe and the drum-major of the Redmen Marching band has been separated so that more time and effort can be put into both of these posts. All those interested may contact either George Gaughan at PSK or Dave Siek in 334 Brett or via the Band Managers Box inside Old Chapel.

VARSITY BASEBALL

The next varsity baseball game for Massachusetts will be Tuesday afternoon at Storrs, Connecticut with the UConn Huskies. The game will be broadcast by WTTT at 3 p.m. Wednesday the Redmen play at Amherst College and Thursday they are back at Alumni Field for a game with Trinity.

Kosakowski Scores Redmen Tennis Team

by DAVE PODBROS '65

One of the biggest disappointments in the 1963 tennis season occurred Saturday as UMass lost at home to a Springfield College team that came to win and did. Coach Steve Kosakowski characterized the play of the UMass netmen as "the biggest choke I've seen since I've been coaching tennis."

Roger Twitchell, in spot number one, was the only winner in the singles and he and Bob Neal also won the first doubles. They, according to Kosakowski, were the only two players that looked anywhere comparable to the supposed outstanding caliber of the year's team. The other win was by Billy Martin and Bob Greenberg in the second doubles.

The poor showing by his team in the 3-6 loss to Springfield "was not so much a lack of ability," said Kosakowski, "but a lack of guts, and it takes guts besides ability to win the Yankee Conference or any match."

After three matches for the season the record stands at two wins and one loss. The wins were over Fairfield and Brandeis Universities. In the Brandeis match Twitchell also looked good as did sophomore Mike Rose, who was absent for the Springfield match.

Dean William Field Announces Need For Off-Campus Housing Next Year

Increased numbers of students, both graduate and undergraduate, will be seeking off-campus housing in Amherst and surrounding towns during the 1963-64 academic year and in future years, says Dr. William F. Field, Dean of Students.

Dean Field explained that more students will have to find housing in apartments and private homes because of the general delay in the completion of campus residence halls and the expansion of the graduate school. Graduate students are not housed in campus residence halls.

A great many graduate students, both men and women, and an increasing number of male undergraduate students, will be looking for apartments and rooms in Amherst, Hadley, Northampton, Sunderland, Deerfield, and other nearby towns.

The University Housing Office stands ready to answer all inquiries from householders about regulations and standards relating to students in off-campus housing. Information is also available about the rental listing service of the Housing Office.

According to Dean Field, undergraduate students who will be arranging their housing for next semester may make use of the services of the Housing Office in finding available housing.

How Ford economy won for Tiny Lund at Daytona

The Daytona 500 is one of America's toughest stock car events. It measures the toughness, stability, over-all performance and economy characteristics of the cars that take up its challenge—in a way that compresses years of driving punishment into 500 blazing miles. This year mechanical failures claimed over 50 per cent of the cars that entered. That's why Tiny Lund's victory in a Ford (with four other Fords right behind him) is a remarkable testimony to sheer engineering excellence.

Lund attributed his victory in part to the "missing pit stop." He made one less pit stop for fuel than his competition—proving that Ford economy can pay off in some fairly unlikely situations!

Economy and the winner of the Daytona 500 might sound like odd bedfellows at first. Yet economy is basic in every car we make . . . yes, even the Thunderbird is an economy car in its own way. Here's what we mean . . .

Economy is the measure of service and satisfaction the customer receives in relation to the price he pays for it. It does not mean, however, austerity . . . you have taught us this. Americans want—and we try hard to give them—cars that are comfortable to ride in, fun to drive, and powerful enough to get out of their own way. Not many Americans want to settle for basic transportation. You see this in our sales figures—more than half of our 1963 sales are coming from the top of each model line. We're selling convertibles, hardtops, the jazzy cars . . . the bucket-seat, high-performance, luxury editions are going like hot cakes.

Yet for all the fun that people are demanding in their cars, they still are very conscious of the element of thrift—of avoiding unnecessary expense. This is the kind of economy we build into every car from the compact Falcon to the luxurious Thunderbird.

There's a special economy, for instance, in Ford's freedom from service. Every car and virtually every wagon can travel 36,000 miles before it needs a major chassis lubrication. Other routine service has been reduced, too—because these Fords are simply built better—and of better materials—than ever before.

In its own elegant way, even the Thunderbird gives you economy. It will travel 100,000 miles or 3 years before you have to lubricate the chassis. Thunderbirds have a way of becoming classics—as a look at their remarkably high resale value will quickly tell you. This, too, is economy.

Once, long ago—before the arrival of the Income Tax—a wealthy lady was asked to comment on the solid gold plumbing of her latest villa at Newport. "So thrifty, my dear," said the dowager . . . "it will never, ever rust."

Economy then, is many things to many people. Whatever economy means to you, you're pretty sure to find it in a Ford.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Lederle Invites All Students To Attend Charter Day

Program Council Plans For Big HER Weekend

The Student Union Program Council announced today that it is their intention to make this year's H.E.R. Weekend "equal to Homecoming, Winter Carnival, or Greek Week in scope."

Highlighting the weekend will be Oscar Brand, well known folk singer and humorist. Brand, noted for his bawdy campus songs, will perform on the south terrace of the S.U. on Friday, May 3. The performance will be free of charge. During intermission, the King and his Court will be chosen to reign over the entire weekend.

Saturday afternoon at 1:30, a rope pull will take place across the pond. The opposing teams will be made up of freshman and sophomores. This will be the first recorded rope pull at the University with girls participating.

Voting on the King nominations will take place today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. From the 40 nominees, 10 will be selected for final selection.

Saturday night, the H.E.R. Weekend Dance will take place in the ballroom of the Union. This will be the only event to which admission will be charged. The price will be $1.50 per couple.

The final event of the weekend will be the Intercollegiate Song Festival. This will bring together groups from across the state in competition, in a fitting culmination to the weekend.

IFC Sing Slated Sunday In Ballroom

The traditional Interfraternity Sing will be presented Sunday, April 28 at 3:00 p.m. in the SU Ballroom.

Last year's winner, TKE, will be defending its championship against some fine competition. Each fraternity will voice one traditional song.

UM President Has Hopes For Record Size Audiences

"Next Monday is the high-point of our Centennial year," says President John W. Lederle.

"It is an opportune time for all students to pay tribute to the 100 years of hard work, dedicated teaching, and cultural enrichment that have gone into building this University.

"On behalf of the University and the Board of Trustees, I cordially invite all students to join with national and state officials, the faculty, alumni and friends of the University in observing Charter Day ceremonies."

The President said that he hoped students would break all attendance records with their turn-out for both the morning Convocation and the afternoon symposium.

Students To Participate

According to Mike Rosenthal, President of Adelphia, all members of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, all honor students, and members of the Class of 1963 Executive Council have been invited to join with faculty and honored guests in the formal academic procession at the morning convocation.

President Lederle also said that keynote speaker Glenn T. Seaborg and panel participants George Meany, Charles Avila and James K. Pollock will receive special honorary degrees on Charter Day.

The four men will receive honorary Doctor of Laws degrees at the morning convocation, to be held at 11 a.m. in the Women's Physical Education Building.

Symposium At Bowker

In the afternoon, Meany, Avila and Pollock will take part in a symposium exploring the response of public higher education to the needs of labor, government and industry.

Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the University's Graduate School, will moderate the symposium discussion, to be held in Bowker Auditorium at 2:30 p.m.

Dr. Seaborg, Nobel prizewinner, will speak on "Public Higher Education and the National Good" at the morning convocation. Presiding over Charter Day ceremonies will be Dr. John W. Lederle, president of the University.

Governor Endicott Peabody will lead a delegation of legislators and Commonwealth officials at the major Centennial event. The Governor will deliver the main address at the luncheon, to be held in the Student Union ballroom at 12:30 p.m.

Annual Polling Scheduled Tomorrow

UMass voters go to the polls tomorrow to elect class officers, Senator-At-Large, and representatives to the SUG Board.

In the various senatorial races, a large number of present senators are observed in the running. The Class of '64 has a slate featuring 5 present senators, including the present treasurer. The class of '65 has 3 Senators, with the class of '66 having one.

Observers feel that the freshman race will prove most interesting. A field of ten candidates are in the running for three positions. It was this class which saw the heaviest turnout in the primary, and Elections Committee members feel that they will again have the greatest number of voters.

Voting will begin at 8 a.m. in the lobby and will extend until 5 p.m.

Romulo Discusses The Asian Image

by JOAN ST. LAURENT

General Carlos P. Romulo delivered a thought provoking message on "The New Asia" in a speech here recently.

General Romulo called his lecture a "special message to the American people" about an Asia that he himself did not know until he returned there a year ago from 17 years absence.

The Asian image in the minds of the Western peoples contradicts reality, he explained. Americans still tend to think of Asia as in the Stone Age with mystics, savages and dense jungles, he said.

However, General Romulo said, Asia is behind the West in industrialization. The East reacted belatedly to the industrial revolution going on in the West.

The mass media of the U.S. reports Asia as tending more towards the Soviet Union. This Anti-Americanism is not against Americans he explained, but against America who is trying to force them to change into something they don't want.

Asian intellectuals are seeking to establish their own nationalism; they don't want American culture. Says General Romulo, "They want to learn, not to imitate."

"I feel it is my duty as your friend to show and tell you what the Asian image is of you, he said. This forging ahead of Asian countries will result in an inevitable and greater destiny.

Board Picks Judiciary Members

by DAVE CLANCY

The Judiciary selection board met last Saturday and Sunday to choose representatives from the class of 1965 and 1966.

On Saturday, the board selected Wade Houk of the class of 1965 to fill one of the two positions open for sophomores.

At this time, the board did not feel able to select a second sophomore representative, so the position remains open. Selections will be held again on Friday evening, April 26 at 6:30 p.m. in the Dukes room.

Applications are available at the Student Union lobby counter and due on Friday, April 26 by 6:00 p.m. at the lobby counter.

Centennial Weekend Proclaimed

Governor Endicott Peabody signs proclamation making next week University of Massachusetts Centennial Week as Rep. David Bartley of Holyoke (left), Associate Alumni President Robert Gordon and Dr. John W. Lederle look on.

Carolyn Hester To Perform At UMass Sunday Afternoon

Folksinger Carolyn Hester will appear at UMass this Sunday afternoon in the third program sponsored this year by the Pioneer Valley Folklore Society.

The PVFS is a four-college student organization with members at Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Amherst and the University.

Miss Hester is recently returned from Great Britain, where she was the only American folksinger invited to the Edinburgh Festival and also made several appearances on BBC Television.

She sang in many major "folk clubs" in Great Britain and has given several concerts in the United Kingdom and in Canada.

In this country, she has appeared in concert at many major universities, including Yale, Harvard, the University of Texas and the University of Virginia.

Tickets for the performance, at 2:30 in Bowker Auditorium, are on sale at the SU window counter and will be available at the door.

The Society earlier this year presented folk musician Pete Seeger in concert and UMass graduate and New York singer Buffy St. Marie in a benefit performance for the "Abbey Fund."

Members of the PVFS are presently working on plans for the Third Annual Pioneer Valley Folk Festival to be held in May.

(UPI) Sudbury, Ont.—Liberal leader Lester B. Pearson, charging that Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's attitude towards the United States might produce disunity in the Western alliance: "Let us not forget that the danger of aggression is not from across our southern border. It's from behind the iron curtain."

Communism

In a quiet way history will be made at the University of Massachusetts tonight at 8 p.m. in the Education Building auditorium. For the first time in its one hundred years of life the University will feel the rumblings of an alleged communist, as he debates his position in the United States. Here will be a man who wishes to bring change. Perhaps he wishes to change our governmental structures. Some feel this man is potentially dangerous: a threat to our way of life. Our government felt that he was dangerous enough to put him away for three years; for there is something about Communism which generates a fear in us as Americans.

We must look at John Stuart Mills, who in his essay, "On Liberty," says that if everyone on the earth is of one opinion, and there is one man who is of a different opinion, that one man must be heard, for he may be right. If he isn't right he shows up what is right by his being wrong. Perhaps it is a lack of confidence in what we believe that compells us to try to do away with that with which we disagree.

Tonight, when we listen to what this man has to say, let us do so not with a rigidly hateful mind. Let us instead, weigh the right against the wrong. GM

Special Forces

"Taking a page from Communist tactics . . . . Spreading propaganda and terrorism . . . . These young specialists are linguists, politically indoctrinated, and are armed with funds for bribing support. They are prepared to kill and terrorize on their own to defeat the enemy."

Who are these indoctrinated young men that are willing to terrorize and kill? They are the United States Special Force Commandos stationed in South Vietnam. The new "Shock" troops which our country is training to combat the "hot, brush wars" throughout the world. In September, 1962, our University established in its ROTC program a branch of the Special Forces. Since then there have been no complaints or a protest by either faculty or students against the training and indoctrination of UMass students, for the purpose of becoming professional terrorists. Therefore, if the entire student body and administration of this home of higher learning finds nothing wrong with being a sponsor of a school for terrorists, let the administration take the necessary steps to enable all concerned to take pride in our special force cadets. How can this be accomplished?

For the past few years the university administration has tried to bring the most qualified instructors to our University in order to provide our students with the best possible education. Therefore in order to allow the "students" enrolled in the Special Forces program, the best possible education, let it be suggested to the administration to hire former German S.S. officers who in my opinion would be the best qualified instructors in the field of terrorism. Why should the U. of Mass. be second in the field of education? EBC

by Neal Findelman

There has got to be something wrong with anyone who smiles that much. It seems impossible that anyone should be such a "good guy" and not even wear a white hat. He even smiles during coffee breaks, and considering the coffee they serve in the Hatch that is no easy accomplishment.

There's one thing you've got to hand to the guy. He's the best extemperaneous speaker around. I remember having coffee with him once in the above mentioned Hatch, and in five minutes he wrote notes for a half hour speech to an Honor Society. I might add that it was one of the best speeches I've ever heard on campus. Not that it said anything earthshaking or startling, but that he was so informal in saying what he did say. It's a pleasure to listen to a good informal speaker who doesn't have his nose buried in the text of a ghost-written speech.

When you come right down to it, part of his appeal to the students is that he is so informal. I can picture him as a typical rowdy, beer-brewing, all night dancing undergraduate. Not that he acts that way now, you understand, but you don't have to go back too many years to picture him as a student.

He is one of the many administrators on campus who keeps weird office hours. It's not too uncommon to see a light on in his office at eleven p.m. Now anyone who pretends to be working at that time of night must be bucking for a promotion. Either that, or he's trying to make up time he spent on coffee breaks during the day.

There are very few members of the faculty or administration who keep as close a finger on the pulse of the campus as he does. It's rather frightening to think that someone of his stature knows what is going on in the student body. It's almost impossible to write a column such as this without him knowing about it which is why I'm writing this Cacodyl in the one place I know he'll never find me—his office during coffee break time.

Caesura

In the past, the Literary Magazine, now Caesura, seemingly catered to the tastes of only "the chosen few." New staff policies now tend to a wider range in student works, and have made the magazine more widely read and successful. A change in printing procedures, art, and make-up have brought the magazine praise from many sources. Indeed, the only thing not changed, is the constant repetition of just a few names under the heading of "contributors."

Editorial procedures in judging material assures the author that decisions will be made solely on the merits of his work. The authorship of each work under consideration for Caesura remains undisclosed until a final decision is made. Thus the repetition of names results only from consistent submission of material in quantity, for each issue, by these people.

At the moment, the editors of Caesura have told the Collegian that the influx of material for the third issue is far less than that of the two previous issues. Though the quality of selected material should not suffer from this lack, variety will. The repetition of names may be even more prominent. All students are urged to write and submit material for the various student publications. Caesura, striving for greater success as representative of our campus art and literary efforts, once more asks the student body for its support. Deadline for material is April 24th.

ASTERISK —

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

On Monday night, Mr. Carlos Romulo addressed 75 students of the University of Massachusetts. He was a few minutes late because his flight from New York had been canceled and because when he finally reached the campus nobody could tell him where the Student Union auditorium was. Apparently, those he asked did not know or care who was speaking that night.

At any rate, those who have heard Mr. Romulo elsewhere should have been quit surprised, if not frightened, by what he said. Initially he told us what we knew. He criticized the Western press for misrepresenting the situation in Asia. He criticized those Americans who "frequently think only in terms of the Cold War." This is old hat so far as it goes.

Then (and this is when things began to happen) he asserted that democratic development in Asia need not necessitate pro-American attitudes or regimes. He said that America must regard contemporary Asian political movements as parts of normal development and growth. Admittedly these are generalizations and in themselves mean relatively little. But the implications of his remarks were quite clear. In short, it is what he DIDN'T say which takes on great significance.

His allusion to past American insistance on right-wing regimes brings Laos to mind. Initially of course, it was the United States which, through the support of such a regime, planted the seeds which have yielded a bitter harvest. Subsequently, it should be said, our policy has tended toward the support of what we call a "truly neutralist" regime. But events of the past few weeks point out that this policy switch may have been dangerously belated. It would be negligent here not to mention the Cuban situation because of the interesting parallel. Our continued support of Batista, whether direct or otherwise, is now seen to be a principal factor in the prevailing attitude of the Cuban people toward the United States, although it should be pointed out that Cuban anti-Americanism is by no means a contemporary development.

Unfortunately when asked about the situation in South Vietnam, Mr. Romulo did not follow through in his logic. After implying that the United States need not support oppressive regimes, he nonetheless affirms the present U.S. policy in South Vietnam, a policy which in addition to supporting an admittedly unpopular regime has alienated a large body of non-communist South Vietnamese. It seems that while on the one hand he castigates the United States, on the other he affirms the very policies which he has criticized. This is the old story of having the cake and eating it too.

In another place, his logic simply did not follow. Whereas initially he tells us that Asia is rising rapidly, perhaps dangerously so, he asserts that China should not be in the United Nations. When asked why, in his speech, hs did not mention China (he used Japan as the example of Asian development) he replies that he does not know very much about that country! One might then have asked him if China's entry into the world body would lessen our knowledge of that country.

Thus, while telling us that we know very little of Asia and while warning us that Asia is on the rise, he does not admit to the fact that a China in the United Nations is more susceptible to some degree of control or understanding.

However, despite my disagreement with Mr. Romulo over certain, if not most, issues, his speech represented a remarkable growth. His speech was to be on the "new philosophy of communism." He is an old and rather efficient hand at this. But as he said: "I did not come to tell you what you want to hear . . . I have come to provoke thought." Thus, he changed the subject of his lecture.

It is indeed unfortunate that so few students heard him speak. This is to be ascribed neither to apathy nor to lack of intellectual atmosphere. It is to be ascribed to nothing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

In your editorial concerning the poor attendance at the Centennial Serenade, you pointed at apathy as the cause. Well, I didn't go, and my excuse was that I just didn't know about it. I didn't see any posters or other type of publicity. I understand there was an article in the Collegian, but I didn't see any posters at all. I think part of the reason for poor attendance was due to poor publicity, not apathy.

Work Well Done

To the Editor:

Recently members of Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma turned out in force to aid the Centennial Office with the Charter Day mailing. Without their cooperation, the mailing of nearly 15,000 letters would have been seriously delayed.

I would like to take this opportunity to express our thanks publicly to the students of these two organizations for their most welcome support of their Centennial.

Sincerely yours,
John W. Ryan
Secretary of the University

Mismanagement

To the Editor:
Re: Class Hour Change

In the past months, we have been reading of the inefficiency and mismanagement in many areas of this university—Now it looks as though another equally inefficient move has been made, as indicated by the April 10th. edition of this paper.

We've been sounding off about quality in students, staff, and plant, and here are our biggest areas for improvement. A major problem in the past has been the lack of organization and thought —The Faculty Senate has exhibited this clearly in this recent action of class hour change. If we had done things right in the past, buildings could have been properly located; walk patterns could have been properly designed; students could have left on time for classes; and most important of all, "profs" could have, and still can, organize classes to run adequately and completely in 45 minutes, starting on the hour and ending at quarter to the hour, with ample time between classes.

Now, unless somebody reconsiders, we are destined to add another complex, inefficient "solution" to our already mushrooming problems of complexity, inefficiency, and mismanagement.

Engineering Honor Society Initiates New Members Into UMass Chapter

The spring initiation of the Massachusetts Zeta Chapter of Tau Beta Pi was held April 6 in secret ceremonies in the Council Chambers of the S.U. Edward J. Rising, B.M.E., M.M.E., Ph.D. of the Industrial Engineering Department, along with one senior and fifteen juniors, was welcomed into the national engineering honor society.

The new members are Robert M. Gorman, senior, and Wayne A. Allen, Richard W. Beane, Paul A. Beck, Daniel J. Bodendorf, Donald A. Burgess, Anthony W. Curto, Peter F. Damiano, Charles B. Harrison, Charles H. Horstmann, Robert D. Huot, James L. Konsevich, Paul V. Labine, Edward J. Strack, Paul L. Tesar, Perry T. Thompson, all juniors.

The candidates, chosen by secret ballot, were selected from the top one eighth of the junior and the top one fifth of the senior classes in engineering.

Although excellence in scholarship was required, such qualities as exemplary character, breadth of interest—both inside and outside of engineering—adaptability, and unselfish activity were emphasized.

Climaxing the initiation ceremonies was a banquet held at the Wyckoff Country Club in Holyoke. The banquet was attended by all student members and their dates, along with many faculty members. A dance followed the banquet.

The evening was highlighted by the presentation of an award to Daniel Bodendorf for the winning pledge essay.

Redmen Lacrosse Squad Swamps Bowdoin, Nichols

by WALT GREEN '66

The Bisons from Nichols College traveled here to UMass last Wednesday only to find a 9 to 1 defeat in their season debut. Then the Redmen traveled to Bowdoin and brought home a 13 to 3 win for their first game with the boys from Maine, remaining undefeated in the home season schedule.

The game with Nichols started off slow as both teams controlled the ball equally well. Play started to get rough, and at 6:53 in the first quarter a Nichols' Joe McDonnel, was penalized for one minute. The Redmen didn't let this one man advantage go by unnoticed, and eight seconds later they scored the first goal of the game, on a fine unassisted play by senior John Prior. UMass continued to control the ball and scored again six minutes later, this time by high scorer Don Trembley on an excellent set-up by attackman Ron Chiras.

The second quarter started off about like the first, but at 7:49 Co-Capt. Frank Gilliatt broke loose and scored the third UMass goal, unassisted. At 10:00, defenseman Hal Ryder was penalized for pushing, and Nichols took advantage with a score at 10:14, their only goal of the afternoon. The Redmen scored once again at 12:30, and the half ended with the score 4-1, UMass.

The boys didn't waste any time in the 3rd period as Dutch Dierterie passed off to Steve Harrington, and at 0:56, Steve scored with a fine side arm shot. Again at 8:15 UMass scored on an unassisted play by senior Joe Moro, and again unassisted by Dick Brown at 13:57. At 14:45 Steve Vengrow accounted for one more on a pass from Steve Harrington, to end the quarter. Paul Majeski and Steve Vengrow scored the final two goals in the fourth quarter to end the game with a 9-1 win by the University of Massachusetts.

At Bowdoin last Saturday the story was much the same. The first quarter saw four UMass goals; one each by junior Fran Casey and number 50, Don Tremblay of Lawrence, and two goals by senior Jerry Clinton. The second period was somewhat more fruitful with five goals; two by Ron Chiras, two by Don Tremblay, and another by Jerry Clinton. In the third period there were goals by Don Tremblay, Steve Harrington, and Ron Chiras. Frank Gilliatt scored the final UMass goal in the fourth period at 7:40.

The game at Bowdoin was as coach Garber expected, somewhat rough and tumble. "Don't let the score fool you," he said, "they were a pretty fair team, but we were on the goal and were in a little better condition." "This was our first game with Bowdoin, and we started off on the right foot." Coach Garber explained, "Their goalie was weak on high shots, so we naturally fired most of our shots around his ears, which worked quite well."

Fran Casey, who scored the first goal, suffered a severe sprain and will probably be out for the rest of this week, but may be back later. Credit must be given to Dick Baird who was in the goal for the Redmen. His diving saves and alert stick handling were outstanding, as was the entire UMass defense.

"The offensive team seems to have acquired quite a bit of experience, ball control, and stick handling ability and they certainly are "on the goal", says Coach Garber.

The heart of the season starts this Wednesday with M.I.T., which employs a zone defense that can often confuse a team, but the Redmen will no doubt be able to figure it out. M.I.T. also sports two of New England's finest players, Ron Matson and Jack Drice.

If you enjoy the rough and tumble of football, the speed of track, and the precision of basketball, then you'll enjoy lacrosse, "the fastest game on two feet."

Hawks Kerner Raps NBA's Draft System

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Ben Kerner, owner of the St. Louis Hawks, took a swipe at the National Basketball Association NBA territorial draft rule, saying "This is the worst rule we have in effect and we should do everything possible to abolish it."

Kerner Monday night referred to the rule allowing a team to select a player on the first round draft who has attended a college or university within a 50-mile radius of the team's city with no other club having a crack at him. Kerner said the rule was put in the books 17 years ago when the league was formed with the purpose of boosting attendance in the cities where a specific player "had built a reputation."

The Hawk boss said "This outdated rule defeats that purpose and it has allowed those clubs with collegiate cage powers in their territory to get stronger without giving the weaker teams

Grid Greens

by JIM TRELEASE '63

The educated Henry Adams from out Boston way matter-of-factly said that "a teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." The other bright day four teachers gathered their pupils under the spring sun at Alumni Field in hopes of affecting the fall of 1963 which seems an eternity away.

It was "green" day. Every other day is "red-blue" for veterans. But this was "green," for youth, the frosh, the inexperienced, sprinkled here and there with a veteran letterman. Head Coach Vic Fusia was instructing his young quarterbacks in the art of cadence and roll out. Of the three quarterbacks on hand for the lesson, only Jack Schroeder was a veteran. It was hard to see Schroeder as the thin six-foot-three inch straw-like figure he was last year as an understudy to Jerry Whelchel. Fifteen pounds of winter now made Quiet Jack imposing. "He's got one of the finest arms in the country," Fusia says more often these days. Schroeder called his signals, took the snap from center, and rolled to his right, cocking his arm as he went. The kid looked good. Quiet Jack may be rolling right out of Whelchel's shadow.

Fusia blew his whistle. Next period. New drill. Now it was Back Coach Jack Delaney working with his backyard speedsters. Gathered around Delaney, their shoulders and heads padded with equipment, the players looked like boulders . . . and Delaney like a mongoose running between them. We smiled at remembering the nickname Delaney wears among the players—"the mongoose."

As he taught, Delaney raced animatedly from position to position, gesturing, crouching, showing, prodding. We started to sweat from watching him.

Delaney: "Hold it! Why did you look at Schroeder when you took the ball, Bobby?"

Back: "I wasn't sure of it."

Delaney: (turning to QB Schroeder) "Jack, do you know your job?"

Schroeder: "Sure do, coach."

Delaney: "Right! Men, don't you ever hesitate with our quarterbacks. They're the best you'll ever play with. They know they're job. Bobby, run the play again and let Jack worry about getting the ball to you." They worked it again. "Beautiful! Beautiful! Perfect. Don't ever change that, Bobby. Perfect," cooed Delaney, sounding like Phil Silvers. But Bobby loved it.

Another whistle. New session. Line Coach Ted Schmitt pulls the hulking, young linemen around him. They take offensive positions: centers, guards, tackles. Schmitt calls for a defensive line. Now this Schmitt is a pretty tricky guy. He sometimes looks like a bulldog, yet seldom growls. He says extremely serious things, but seldom means them; except when they pertain to football. Schmitt tapped the wide-eyed freshman on the shoulder. "Where's the ball." The kid answered blankly, "I don't have it." The coach stared. "Young man, don't you know that it's a cardinal rule for a center to have a football with him at all times. Now go over there and get one and don't ever be without it again." Everyone smiled; no one laughed. Just smiles. They still weren't sure if Schmitt was serious.

New period. Fusia and End Coach Fred Glatz work with the ends. Between the two of them, they tutor each man in fundamentals that must be learned in the spring. There will be no time in the fall. The ends dive for Schroeder's passes with the enthusiasm of rookies. That's what most of them were that day: the "green" squad.

On the sidelines in shorts, Whelchel worked a football through the air. Tomorrow would be his day.

On the field, the "greens" were having a real day of it. The first warm sun of spring was bringing out the blossoms of a new year and Fusia glanced sidelong from his charges to the landscape, perhaps in hopes of an early frost.

Redmen Meet Lord Jeffs Today At 3 PM

The UMass baseball team got rained out of its game at Storrs yesterday, but hopes are that the Redmen will be able to up their record to 3-2 at the expense of the Lord Jeffs of Amherst College this afternoon at the Amherst Field. Dick Wilson was scheduled to go against the Huskies, but after a wait of an hour and a half in the Cage, word came up from Connecticut that the game would be played on May 13. That should make for an interesting week in May for Earl Lorden's boys since they have a Friday-Saturday series at the University of Vermont, a day off Sunday, the game at Storrs Monday, and a game at Tufts on Tuesday.

The opposition for today has been the surprise of Western Mass baseball. Amherst College had beaten Brown, Tufts, Yale and Bowdoin before losing 8-6 to Wesleyan Saturday afternoon. The supposedly leading hitter is batting at a .181 clip and the top pitcher hurt his arm on the Southern trip. Dave Scribner started and won against Yale last week. Scribner worked six and two third innings before giving way to Pete Haggerty, a lefty who was expected to be the Jeffs big winner. Haggerty got Scribner out of a jam in the Yale game, his first of the season, and pitched a strong inning in the eighth, but he was clubbed for a homer in the ninth to cut the Amherst margin to only one run, 9-8.

Haggerty made his first start against Wesleyan and gave up seven runs though only three were earned. Amherst committed eight errors in the game and allowed a 6-0 lead to waste

Uncle Sam's Boys Doing Well In Pan-Am Games

SAO PAULO, Brazil UPI — The United States, with five gold medals already won after only two days of competition in the fourth Pan-American Games, was expected to add four more yesterday when its record-setting swimmers competed in four finals.

Yank swimmers broke three more records and tied another Monday in trial heats, making it a total of six records set in two days.

Thus, when Steve Clark of Los Altos, Calif., Charles Bittick of Long Beach, Calif., Chet Jastremski of Toledo, Ohio, and Kathy Ellis of Indianapolis, Ind., splash into the Pacaembu Olympic pool tonight, they will be favored to win their events and give the United States four more gold medals and perhaps even new records.

Clark, Bittick and Jastremski set records for the 100 meter freestyle, 100 meter backstroke and 200 meter breaststroke, respectively, in trial heats Sunday and Miss Ellis, who equalled the games record for the women's 100 meter freestyle Monday, has a better than even chance against Canada's Mary Stewart in the women's 100 meter butterfly.

U.S. Plays Venezuela

The United States baseball team, humiliated by Cuba, 13-1, on Sunday, plays Venezuela today while the women's volleyball team takes on Mexico. Action also is scheduled in pistol shooting, fencing, tennis, yachting, equestrian, and cycling.

The United States picked up two gold medals Monday, when its men's shooting team scored a near perfect 2,349 out of a possible 2,400. And Anthony Garcy of York, Pa., won the lightweight weight-lifting title with a total hoist of 847 pounds.

The Yanks won their first baseball game, beating Mexico, 5-3, but suffered a major jolt when Frank Froehling III of San Antonio, Tex., America's second ranking tennis player, was upset by Juan Arrendondo of Mexico, 6-3, 8-6, 6-2.

However, swimmers Carl Robie of Drexel Hill, Pa., and Terry Lee Stickles and Arthur Schollander, both of Santa Clara, Calif., came through with record-breaking performances to more than make up for Froehling's stunning upset. Roy Saari of El Segundo, Calif., and Roby Whipple of Los Altos, Calif., also came through with top-flight performances to make it another banner day for Uncle Sam's swimmers.

Fine Swim Show

Robie, Luiz Nicolao, the world record holder for the 100 meter butterfly, and Canada's Daniel Sherry put on a fine show in the men's 200-meter butterfly with Robie winning in the games record time of 2:14.5. That eclipsed the old record of 2:18.8 held by David Gillanders, another Yank. Nicolao finished in 2:17.4 and Sherry in 2:17.6.

Miss Stickles won her heat in the women's 100 meter freestyle in the record time of 1:03.3 That beat the mark of 1:03.8 set by Chris Von Saltza and tied earlier Monday by Miss Ellis.

Schollander set the third record when he won the men's 400 meter freestyle in 4:29.4 to wipe out the old record of 4:31.4 held by George Breen. Both Miss Von Saltza and Breen are Americans. Saari qualified for the men's 400-meter freestyle by winning his heat in 4:38.3 and Miss Whipple advanced to the women's 200-meter breaststroke final by winning her trial heat in 3:00.6. Other Yank swimmers qualifying for finals were Fred Schmidt of the University of Indiana and Alice Driscoll of Louisville. Schmidt won his heat in the 200-meter butterfly in 2:16.7 and Miss Driscoll took her heat in the 200 meter breaststroke in 2:58.2.

away. Wesleyan scored three in the seventh off Haggerty and then knocked him out in the ninth with one run in and two men on base. Scribner came in relief and the junior right hander served up a gopher to Bill Needham, the Cardinals' left fielder. The game went up in smoke 8-6. The errors, strangely enough for an undefeated team, were a common occurence in each of the winning games as well as the Wesleyan debacle. The Jeffs were guilty of 18 miscues in their first three games.

The hitting has been the big part of the team. Coach Paul Eckley has four been with top notch batting averages. Infielders Ken Garni and Tom Diehl are hitting .523 and .444 respectively. John North, also a football star for the Jeffs, sports a .391 mark with John Warnock at .350. First baseman Gregg Brumm was expected to carry the big stick, but he has been a disappointment at the dish in the first five games. The hitting of the rest of the team has more than carried the load though.

Massachusetts will probably have Wilson on the mound today with Le Pia going tomorrow at Alumni Field when Trinity College comes up from Hartford. Rod Corey may also see some action today depending upon how Wilson's arm has responded to treatments for a pulled cartilage in his elbow. Game time is 3 p.m.

a chance to get better."

Kerner pointed out the rule failed to help attendance in the two cities that used it the most in previous years.

"Minneapolis had three territorial selections—Whitey Skoog, Dick Garmaker, and Vern Mikkelson—and was forced to move to Los Angeles as attendance dipped," Kerner stated.

He pointed to Philadelphia's move to San Francisco despite the fact that four of their territorial choices—Paul Arizin, Wilt Chamberlain, Tom Gola and Guy Rodgers—were top-rated All-Americans in college.

"We're in a situation now where three teams—Boston, Cincinnati and New York—have a preponderance of college basketball powerhouses in their immediate area and could get immeasurably stronger without going through the true nature and intent of our draft," he said.

Kerner referred to the University of Cincinnati as a "virtual feeding ground" for the Cincinnati Royals. He said the University of Cincinnati has won the NCAA title for two of the past three years and will be in contention next year, along with other Royal area clubs—Xavier and Dayton.

He pointed out the Boston area includes Holy Cross and Providence, and with Bob Cousy coaching Boston College next year, "that school is certain to become a basketball power."

Kerner amplified the situation by showing that New York has 10 top-flight basketball schools in their territory. He said it was almost a certainty that they will take Barry Kramer of NYU as a territorial pick in the 1964 draft.

Kerner asked "what chance do clubs like Syracuse, Detroit and ours have when year in and year out, schools in these areas have some of the top collegiate players in the country?"

Little Giants Look Good For 1963

by ALAN RICE '66

The best way to start off a season is to win your opening game, and that is just what Western Mass' only pro baseball team did. The Springfield Giants won their lidlifter this season, and how they won it! A no-hitter is just about the most thorough way to win a game, and Bob Bishop, twenty year old right hander in his second year of pro ball, throttled the Reading Red Sox last Friday night at Pynchon Park in Springfield.

Unfortunately most of the residents of the Eastern half of Massachusetts have never even heard of the Springfield Giants let alone Bob Bishop. The Eastern League farm club of the San Francisco Giants is consistently a winner in its league and has supplied a lot of good material to the Bay City boys in the past few years. A look at Al Dark's roster shows Juan Marichal, the Alou Boys, Al Stanek, and John Pregenzer, and Gerry Thomas and Jim Ray Hart with one foot in San Francisco. The 1963 Giants under the direction of Buddy Kerr, former infielder with the Braves and New York Giants in the late '40's, and a San Francisco scout last year, no doubt will keep up the tradition they have established in the past few seasons. If the rest of the season is like the first week, then there will not be any question out on the coast of where their ball players are going to come from.

Don Carlson followed up Bishop's masterpiece with a three hitter Saturday night, and the Red Sox took the Giants 17 innings Sunday afternoon before Bob Lawrence, a future candidate for Boston's first base job, belted out a two run triple to give Reading a 5-3 victory. Frank Linzy whipped a five hitter at the Sox Monday night in winning a ten inning affair. The score reads three wins out of four after the opening series.

The pitching rotation is set now with Bishop, Carlson, Tom Arruda, Linzy, Paul Colacecchi, and Francisco Rivas as an added starter. Bishop is a fastballer who has a good curve for a youngster. It was his blazer that got him through the first six innings of his no-hitter against the Red Sox farm that has a lot of heavy hitters in the lineup. He used his curve in the last three innings. Carlson is another hurler who can steam the ball, and he has the advantage of knowing where it is going. Tom Arruda got the starting nod from Kerr in the third game and looked good in six and two third innings, but errors had him in trouble. Carl Sheien, up from Fresno in the California League, pitched five hitless innings. Linzy put on a good show in beating Ed Connelly, a wild six left hander from Pittsfield, in the series wrap-up. Linzy whiffed 11 and walked only four. Colacecchi compiled an 8-3 mark for the Giants in 1962 and was promoted to Tacoma, but was shipped back when San Francisco overloaded the Tacoma roster with its own cuts.

The infield is headed by Hal Lanier, an ultra-high priced bonus baby from Florida and son of Max Lanier who wound up a long pitching career with the Giants and Cardinals in 1952. Tony Eichelberger, the regular Springfield shortstop last year after he signed out of the University of Illinois, is back for another season. Frank Corej won the hot corner fight in spring training and is presently hitting .333 after four games. He accounted for two hits opening night and scored the first of two Giant runs. Corej was in Class D last year, but was promoted up from the Fresno club on his good work at Casa Grande, Arizona during the spring games. He beat out Ron Bode who is now a reserve right fielder and Tom Yost, a left hander who hit .267 as an outfielder at Waterloo last year. Ron Phifer gets the nod over Al Erickson at first base. Phifer opened the season batting third but was dropped to the sixth position because of his lack of power. Erickson did some catching in the Spring while Denny Sommers, the regular back stop last year and this year, was working out at third. Erickson doubled home Rod Bode with the run that won the game for Linzy Monday, so it could be the Springfield fans will be seeing more of him.

Last night Colacecchi was scheduled to go at Elmira against the Orioles farm hands, but the game was rained out. The York White Roses, Charleston, and Binghamton round out the six team Eastern League in its 41st year.

UM Registrars Pioneer Computers

Two members of the Registrar's Office at the University, speaking at the 49th annual meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers last week in New York City, described their research results in the use of electronic computers in college admissions work.

As a result of the pioneering work of the University in the use of data processing equipment in college admissions, Associate Registrar Robert H. Glover and Assistant Registrar William C. Starweather were invited to present a panel on "Advanced Electronic Computers."

According to Mr. Starkweather, "the panel described the nature of specific computer programs from the viewpoint of the admissions office, stressing the advantage of using computors for particular jobs."

Mr. Glover explained his research in predicting college grade averages for students based on entrance qualifications. As a result of Glover's research, the University now uses a predicted average for each applicant as an aid to the admissions selection process.

Mr. Glover warned that a statistical approach to admissions need not eliminate personal evaluation. Actually the computer can process measurable routine data more rapidly and with greater accuracy than the admissions affice. This leaves the admissions officer more time for personal evaluation in making the final admissions decision.

Mr. Glover said: "The statistically derived predicted average is used only as a preselector, or as a basis upon which applications are grouped to be evaluated in entirety, starting with the highest predicted grouping and proceeding to the lowest. This method is followed until all applications are read and all entrance vacancies are filled."

Mr. Starweather talked on the specific IBM 1401 programs that he has written and developed for use by the University Admissions Office. These programs not only use the prediction system, but also provide a continuing tabulation and control of the Admissions process as it develops throughout the year.

Glover and Starkweather demonstrated the integrated admissions process system using the complete IBM 1401 data processing equipment.

Dolls Displayed In SU Lounge

Miss Anna H. McDonnell at the present time has a fine collection of dolls from all over the world on display in the cabinets located in the lobby of the Student Union.

Miss McDonnell, Head of Mathematics Department, Northampton High School, has many hobbies, but her chief hobby is Doll collecting.

On a Mediterranean Cruise in 1933, her first foreign dolls were purchased for her two nieces. A trip around the World in 1936 added some from India on a trip to the Taj Mahal, several from Peiping and the Great Wall of China. At present, there are over 500 dolls in Miss McDonnell's collection, including dolls made of china, bisque, shell, wood, paper mache, clay, stocking vegetable fibers, wool, yarn, beads, and other combinations of materials. Devil dancers from Ceylon, a Chinese wedding from Shanghai, China, and countless others from many far off places makes an interesting group.

Miss McDonnell is a graduate of Smith College, has a Master's Degree in Science from the University of Massachusetts and was the first woman Registered Pharmacist in Northampton in 1932.

She has visited many countries in five trips to Europe, one around South America, and trips to Asia and Africa.

House Approval Gained For Abolishing Death Penalty

BOSTON UPI—Gov. Endicott Peabody and Speaker John F. Thompson combined forces today to gain near-final House approval of a bill to abolish capital punishment after 8½ hours of debate.

The Senate-passed bill finally was approved at 4:05 a.m. Nine roll calls were taken on the measure during the heated session and nine amendments to the bill were defeated.

House approval of the abolition bill marked a major legislative victory for the governor, who remained at the State House through the lengthy debate, entertaining a steady stream of representatives in his corner office.

The bill still needs final approval, enactment, from both branches before it reaches the governor's desk. It was expected that there would be another battle in the House but that enactment would be achieved fairly easily in the Senate.

The initial vote of the debate proved to be the key one of the session and surprised most observers who felt the bill was doomed to defeat in the lower branch. On a 120-108 roll call the House refused to reject the measure, despite the recommendation of its Ways & Means Committee that it do so.

This vote did not advance the legislation, but it marked the first time in history that the Massachusetts House had acted favorably on an abolition bill.

The Speaker, who retained his powerful post only after a bitter battle with Peabody early this year, used his gavel to advantage in the many voice, standing and roll call votes that punctuated the emotional debate. He even took the floor for the first time this year to voice strong support for abolition, thus relinquishing the previously neutral stand he had taken on the issue.

Thompson obviously had decided that he would use all his power to get the bill through. Towards the end of the session, when some tempers were beginning to fray, he signaled the end of roll calls when the abolitionists had taken the lead.

Smiling in triumph after the final vote, Gov. Peabody said, "This is a tremendous victory for Massachusetts with the very able and immense leadership of Speaker Thompson who worked tirelessly together with his leaders, to obtain the votes necessary to win."

The governor also praised Senate President John E. Powers, D-Boston, "who changed his position of many years to support his governor in the principle of abolition of capital punishment."

The victory also was consi-

Monday will be the University of Massachusetts' Centennial Charter Day. There can be few on the University campus who are not cognizant of this fact. The Centennial Office, The University News Office, The Collegian, WMUA, The Centennial Committee and many others have done their assigned tasks, and more.

It is now up to the students. It is now the time for the students of this University to act. The stage is set, the activities have been planned, classes have been suspended, all that is needed are the students. If the students fail to attend, if the TV cameras pan a half empty audience, if the invited guests and faculty constitute a majority of the audience it will be the greatest and most bitter testimony to the supposed apathy that seemingly pervades this campus.

If, on the other hand, the students of this institution turn out in force and attend the various segments of the Charter Day program, then much that we have been accused of; apathy, disinterest, lack of desire, will be dealt a strong and vicious blow.

It is up to us. If we can not act for ourselves, then we do not deserve to have others act for us.

Student Senate Passes Next Year's Student Budget Act

by ETHEL KAPLAN

The Student Senate Wednesday night passed the student Budget Act for the academic year 1963-1964. A majority of discussion centered on the WMUA budget, and allocations to the Flying Redmen and $2000 for uniforms for the UMass Concert Band for the 1963-1964 season.

A controversy arose over the allocation to the Redmen. The argument presented by Sen. George Jones (Married Dorms) was that the Redmen was an academic activity, not an extra-curricular activity. Sen. Jones then claimed that it was an academic activity because the Air Force ROTC allowed them to practice at 11:00 a.m. on Tuesday mornings.

Sen. Paul Donahue told the Senate that Sen. Jones failed to mention that the Flying Redmen also practiced at many other hours when they were not under ROTC jurisdiction.

A motion was made and carried by a 27 to 8 vote to give the Redmen the appropriation.

Sen. Jon Fife (Van Meter '64) left the Senate meeting to get the adding machine to add up the WMUA Budget. After the budget was totalled, it was passed.

The problem was that the completed budget was printed the same day and there had been no time to proofread it.

Sen. Jon Fife presented the increase of $600 in the Band budget to be used to buy new uniforms for the UMass Concert Band. He presented it on what he termed an "emotional ground" that the UMass Concert Band was seen in more places in academic situations than the Precisionettes.

A binding clause was added to the budget allowing money for uniforms for the Precisionettes for the 1964-1965 academic year.

During the meeting, the Fine Arts Council Budget, the RSO Budget, and the Student Senate General Fund account were passed.

The Faculty Senate has voted that there will be no classes on Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a.m. Classes were going to be sched-

WMUA To Air Convocation

WMUA will broadcast all day Monday, April 29, with many of the Charter Day activities. At 11:00, the speech given by Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg will be broadcast. At 2:30 p.m. the Symposium on "Public Higher Education and the National Need" will be broadcast.

MEN'S JUDICIARY

Final selections for Men's Judiciary will take place Friday, April 26 in the S.U. All nomination papers must be in before this date.

SECRETARY WANTED

The Collegian will begin interviewing for a NON-student secretary for the 1963-64 academic year. All interested applicants should come to the Collegian office, on the second floor of the Student Union, to fill out an application with Mrs. Fuller. This is an excellent job for a student's wife.

SENATE ACTS

The following act was passed by the Student Senate at its regular Wednesday night meeting:

S86 Whereas, the University of Massachusetts will celebrate its centennial anniversary on April 29, 1963 and;

Whereas the Student Senate of the University of Massachusetts firmly believes in the ideals behind Charter Day;

Be it enacted that the Student Senate strongly supports Charter Day and urges that the total student body fully participates in the activities of this celebration.

INQUIRY INTO FREEDOM

Wednesday eevning a panel discussion was held in the auditorium of the University of Massachusetts Education Building.

Participating on the panel with three members of the University faculty and one professor from Smith College, Mr. Arnold Johnson, an avowed Communist.

The importance of the discussion lies not primarily in what was said, but in that these men of differing opinions had the opportunity to address themselves to an energetically interested audience.

The Administration of the University deserves the utmost of praise for not opposing the right of these men to express themselves, and thus avoiding the ugly and needless incidents that have plagued other campuses.

Also deservant of praise are the over three-hundred University students who crowded into the Auditorium and listened with truly admirabe courtesy to the speakers. And even more gratifying was the keen and incisive questioning of both the students and faculty.

Finally, the Young Independent/Synthesis organization warrants the thanks of the entire University community for sponsoring the program. We hope that they will continue in their fine work.

It will be scintillating and informative discussions such as this that will help provide the necessary intellectual background to becoming a great University.

Piano ... Four Hands

On Wednesday evening, April 24, a relatively small crowd of 100 looked on in favor to a concert of music for the piano—four hands. The soloists were Henry Lea of the German Department and Elliott Schwartz of the Music Department.

While concerts by duo-pianists are not a completely unknown commodity here on campus the aura of having two people at one piano seemed to be quite a novelty. Cinq Pieces Faciles by Igor Stravinsky exemplified to the greatest extent what could be done with four hands on one keyboard.

The featured work was the F Minor Fantasy, Op. 103 by Schubert. In form it was similar to a sonata in one movement with four internal sections played without pause.

But it seemed that it was in the Jeux D'Enfants, Op. 22 by Bizet that the two pianists felt the greatest harmony. The collection of six short pieces was climaxed by La Bal, a piece which described a bouncing ball.

We look forward to similar collaborations.

To The Class of '64

Once again the administration at this quantitatively oriented campus has refused a practical approach to student special functions.

When I asked permission for a Junior class mix for the early spring, I was given a firm denial on the grounds that the administration—indeed the trustees—could never permit a social function to be held at a place where alcoholic beverages were allowed. Thus, long standing tradition went out the window with their reasoning that implied "no mix guarantees prohibition".

Consequently, we planned an event away from the campus in the form of a barbecue at a Palmer resort and received administration approval of this. In the past few days all this has been shattered. The administration now feels—as events approach reality—that it would be in the best academic interests to cancel it. The reason: scheduling day is for scheduling only and therefore no social events can be called during that interim. The excuse, to say the least, is superfluous for we all know that it does not require a full day to schedule classes with the present system; indeed, with little inconvenience, Juniors could just as well register in the morning.

The second excuse was that the day was a regular academic one at the University, and the time when not used for scheduling, should be applied toward these ends. The Seniors, nevertheless, have permission for a comparable event, yet aren't they also students bound by the same regulations?

We realize this is not an attempt on the part of campus officials to stifle off-campus festivities because with notables in the foreground such as vacation scheduling, library discipline, dormitory placement, and the bringing back of tradition this Centennial year, it is obvious that the administration holds nothing but respect for the student will. IT MIGHT EVER!

The Class of '64 has gone through extensive preparation for this event, which from the start had been approved by the administration. Their renegation on their approval is irritating. It is obvious that this campus is going places, and in ten years the proposed 20 story dormitories should rate among its noblest academic achievements. When it reaches that illustrious pinnacle, unfortunately, I, among many, will not be here.

Respectfully,
James Medeiros
President '64

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, April 17, I had the great displeasure of reading in the Collegian two articles that would make Hearst and his school of yellow journalism ashamed. I am referring to the editorial on the appointment of a senator and "the Cacodyl."

In the former, not only did the writer lack conviction enough to state the name of the person who was appointed, —he did not check the Senate records for facts, but based his editorial only on personal opinion and emotions. His two major complaints were lack of committee participation and irregular attendance at Senate meetings by the appointee.

As chairman of her major committee, I can testify that her work has been more than adequate. If the writer checked the Senate attendance record, he would find that this Senator has missed only two meetings, one of which was an excused absence.

In his column, "The Cacodyl," Neal Andelman showed a misconception of the importance of rules of order in conducting a Senate meeting, and of what the Senate accomplishes for the student body by appropriating the S.A.T.F. (Student Activities Tax Fund).

A question for Mr. Andelman: IF using "Robert's Rules Of Order" is so bad, why is "Robert's Rules" used in all local, state, and national governmental bodies?

Concerning time spent by the Senate on the S.A.T.F. allocation: Mr. Andelman has failed to recognize the initiatives behind these bills. Sponsorship of the Centennial Parade and Concert, sending the Musigals to the Inter-Collegiate Sing competition at Wyoming College, the establishment of such programs as U.N. Week and the much-praised (by Mr. Andelman) Distinguished Visitor's Program all originated as financial motions in the Student Senate. Mr. Andelman has apparently forgotten the initiative shown by the Senate in supporting installation of a U.P.I. teletype for the Collegian.

If the Collegian is going to print articles of condemnation, they should check the facts, figures and results before—not after—the paper is printed.

To the Editor:

I trust that the campus community has been sufficiently warned of the "Special Forces Terrorists." E.B.C. has convinced me that service to my country and training in the military profession is clearly to be avoided. His apparent wealth of information on the subject has destroyed my interest in eventually becoming a member of Special Forces after receiving my R.O.T.C. commission next spring. The Special Forces men who risk their lives organizing resistance to Communist infiltration and the Special Forces medical teams who help foreign communities combat disease and filth are obviously a detriment to this country and should be stamped out. I thank you, E.B.C., for showing such courage and intelligence. You are a fine example of a patriotic American, and I hope that you will someday receive your just reward.

Stimulating Interaction

by SANDRA BURLINGAME

A senior girl and a sophomore boy, when asked if either of them had recently initiated or taken part in an intense, thought-provoking discussion, had to answer "No." This is an all-too-frequent response from students at the University, for although there is much of what can be called "deep" discussion in the dormitories, most of a student's time, when not used for study, is spent in relaxing the mind as well as the body.

A certain amount of rest from brain exercise is healthy, of course, but far too much "relaxing" is done on this campus. The university atmosphere should be stimulating, giving use to ideas which can help the student relate himself and his beliefs to a not-so-relaxed world situation.

Take a look at the Hatch. Every student spends some time "hatching" at one point in his university career, and a few even make their home there. Does any verbal stimulation spring from this hub of student activity? If so, it is much too rare. Maybe the jukebox and the crowd help to relax students after a hard day of classes, and an interesting discussion or tossing out of ideas would be too much work for the student's already "overworked" mind. But isn't there a danger that too little real discussion can lead to too little thinking? And isn't this the true problem to be faced at the University? Isn't the student becoming just too busy to think?

A university should be a place where learning is fostered and where the interplay of ideas leads to development of a student's reasoning faculty. Do these conditions exist at the University of Massachusetts.

The formal learning process is supposedly carried on through a program consisting of the interaction of professors, tetxbooks, and exams. After memorizing myriads of details the student, in theory, will grasp certain general ideas.

It is the informal learning which comes from the exchange of ideas in a discussion that is the most important path to expressing oneself as a person and putting accumulated ideas to work. Are we to lose this precious part of learning through continual disuse?

Mortar Board Comments

It was not too long ago that the University of Massachusetts constituted a cultural "wasteland" which would easily rival anything envisaged by either T. S. Eliot or the F.C.C.'s Newton Minow. In the past few years, however, the campus has seen the growth of such significant groups as the Academic Theater, the Fine Arts Council, and the Distinguished Visitors Program. The development of each of these groups has, of course, been accompanied by certain predictable growing pains. But, no one can deny that these, and other similar groups, have contributed significantly to an expanding program of cultural excitement and activity within the University community.

One cannot help wondering, however, if this expanding program has been matched by a similar development on the part of the student body. Certainly physical expansion has taken place; but even this might be disputed by the attendance figures at events held during the past week. The 3-College Serenade, a salute to the University given by our three neighboring colleges, played to an audience of less than 300. The Handel and Haydn Society and the Carlos Romulo lecture were presented before audiences of a similar size. The most disturbing feature of this, however, rests in the fact that within these already minuscule audiences there could probably be found no more than 50 to 75 students.

There are, of course, varieties of excuses which have been offered to explain this situation. "It is too late in the year . . . Too much is going on . . . Not enough publicity." Even all of these excuses taken together, however, somehow seem inadequate to explain a student audience of only 50 people attending a significant cultural event held in a university student community of over 7200. Each of these programs was presented free of charge. The Handel and Haydn Society had previously appeared before a jammed, ticket-buying audience in Boston's Symphony Hall. Carlos Romulo, a statesman, warrior, orator, educator and Pulitzer prize winning journalist, threw away a prepared text to present a major address on "The New Asia" to a mere handful of students. As we have pointed out a variety of excuses have been offered to explain this situation. And though no one answer can be offered, it does seem that the entire problem underlines an even more basic difficulty.

Each of us is aware that the University is presently at a stage of crisis as it attempts to advance from the leevl of a relatively small, good school to that of a large, superior institution. Such an advance necessarily involves a process of educational re-evaluation—a process typified in the unending "quantity vs. quality" debate. We might suggest that the student body must also undergo a similar educational re-evaluation. For it is now up to the student of the University to determine whether or not his concept of an educated person can encompass mine whether or not his concept of an educated person can encompass something beyond the traditional acceptance of one who has merely accumulated the 120 credits necessary to graduate. An education of true "quality" is one which must of necessity extend beyond the formal bounds of the classroom and accumulated credits. Grades are important, but there is certainly no student, regardless of average, who finds himself completely without leisure. It is the manner in which this time is utilized which will determine whether or not he emerges from the University as a truly educated person or one who has merely acquired a sufficient number of credits.

The picture, however, is not entirely black. The injection of a rare controversial figure in the person of the Communist Arnold Johnson did draw a large crowd to the auditorium of the Education Building. But novelty soon wears off. A more basic change is needed if the University is to grow in depth as well as in mere number. Perhaps a significant step could be taken this Monday if the entire student body were to band together in the celebration of the University Charter Day. At 11:00 Dr. Glenn Seaborg will speak at the Women's Physical Education Building, and his topic will be "Public Higher Education and the National Good." At 2:30 p.m., a distinguished panel will appear at Bowker Auditorium to discuss "Public Higher Education and the National Need." How many will use their free class time to hear the thoughts of a Nobel Prize winner? How many will spend the time in the Hatch?

What's In A Word?

A recent self-administered "I.Q. test" which appeared in many major chain newspapers did a strange thing: it based many of the questions merely on knowledge of the meanings of words. Obviously, this would seem to correlate "word power" with intelligence. Unjustifiable though this may be, there is still a lot of good argument in favor of an extensive vocabulary.

Below you can test you own "word power." A college student ought to know at least seven of the eleven words.

At times, the list will be a random one. Today it is made up of various guages. What do they measure?

"Mixed Marriage Difficult At Best," Says Father Power

"Mixed Marriages" was the topic of a talk last Tuesday night by Father David J. Power, Catholic Chaplain at UMass.

Father Power stressed the point that in order to discuss the topic, objectivity is needed.

Statistics substantiate the fact that mixed marriages do not usually succeed, he said. Those marriages which do succeed are exceptions, and even these exceptions are subject to strain, he added. Marriage authorities, psychologists, and religious leaders all agree that an interfaith marriage is difficult at best, and may result in the breakup of the home and loss of faith of both parents and children, Father Power said.

Father Power went on to say that the chances of happiness are minimized in a mixed marriage, because to have a union of mind, heart and will, the couple must have similar interests—of which religion is the most important.

"With God as our guide, we should be living our religion every day of our lives," he added.

"Tact, thoughtfulness, objectivity, and especially perseverance are needed in an interfaith marriage," he emphasized.

Father Power concluded by saying that there exists a great need for agreement on the fundamental of life: religion—and that that is the reason interfaith marriages are not readily encouraged.

State Aid To Schools Passes Early Tests In Legislature

Substantial increases in the mandatory minimum state-aid payments for approved school building projects would be provided under a bill advanced to a third reading in the House.

The lower branch advanced the bill after reconsidering, on voice vote and without debate, its earlier action in rejecting the bill, as recommended by the House ways and means committee, and then refusing to reject it.

The bill would boost the mandatory minimum total construction grant from the state for approved school building projects in cities, towns and counties by one/third. For regional schools, the mandatory minimum payment would be increased 14 percent in the case of approved projects.

At present the mandatory minimum state-aid payments for approved school building projects in cities, towns and counties is 30 percent and the maximum is 50 percent. The minimum for regional schools is 35 percent and the maximum is 65 percent. The bill would boost the minimum to 40 percent for cities, towns, counties, and regional school districts. The maximum payments would remain the same.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

Early in April, the members of Sigma Sigma Sigma were pleased to rewelcome their National President, Mrs. Curtis C. Dixon.

The sisters wish to thank the brothers of Beta Kappa Phi for their enjoyable exchange supper and the splash party after at the pool.

Later that week, on April 19, Founders' Day was celebrated. An informal tea was held in the afternoon which was attended by the mothers. Also on the agenda of events was the sorority's first Pledge Formal which took place at the Wayside Inn in West Springfield Saturday night. The exchange of paddles and pillows made by the girls highlighted the evening.

Sunday saw the sisters cooking hotdogs, toasting marshmallows and playing softball at Look Park as part of Pledge Formal weekend.

The Tri Sigmas wish to announce the initiation of two advisers to the sorority, Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Wyman, and the pledging of four new girls: Carol Walkowitz, '66; Nancy Elwell, '66; Gela Tibbetts, '66; and Pat Tobin, '65.

Majeski Chosen Top Athlete, SAE Plans Spring Events

The brothers of Sigma Alpha Epsilon are happy to announce the pledging of Louis Pirazzo, John Cooke, and Daniel Hoague. We hope they will enjoy their association with us.

We would like to announce also that Paul Majeski and Tom Kirby have received fellowships to the University of Massachusetts and the University of Maryland, respectively. Paul was also the recipient of the "Best Student Athlete of Western Mass." award. Congratulations Paul!

Our building fund contest has come to its successful completion and the winner of the 19 inch portable TV was Marshall Shepardson, of Plainville, Mass. The money collected in our contest is already being put to good use. The renovations include extensive room repair, surfacing our driveway and parking lot, and new tiling in the house. We would like to thank all participants whose contributions made our contest a success.

The plans for our annual parents and neighbors day are well under way. April 28th is the day and we hope our friends will enjoy themselves.

Our annual pledge formal and banquet will be held May 17 & 18. This year it is being held at the Lord Jeff. The Knurd should finish the weekend off in fine style.

We were happy to have with us last week our visitation officer, Bill Flournoy.

'Lil Redmen Down Huskies 5-2; Tedeman, Yando Star

by NEIL BAKER '66
Sports Editor

Played under conditions more suitable to hockey, the freshman baseball team rallied in the eighth inning to pull out a 5-2 verdict over the visiting Connecticut frosh.

Way down yonder in the Stockbridge cow pastures (where even the cows knew it was too cold for our national past-time), Coach Bergquist's yearlings took advantage of the many breaks that came their way. The Little Redmen drew first blood in the opening stanza, when with one down, Bob Scott spilt the right and center fielders, good for two bases. One out later, third baseman Bill Cleary orbited a blast over the left fielder's head to drive in Scott. Center fielder Ben Dubek followed with a roller down the third base line that stayed fair by the slightest of margins. Dubek then stole second, but both men were left stranded when Jim Koidis flied to left field.

The Huskies knotted the score their next time at bat, with a walk, stolen base, and a line single that almost tore off the third base sack.

The men from Connecticut went out in front in the fifth on two freak plays. Bob Littlefield blooped a double into left field, after three Redmen defenders were unable to haul down the elusive ball. On the next play, Pete Everson bounced to Dick Premerlani at second base, but Premerlani couldn't find the range, and the ball bounced off his glove and into right field, Littlefield scoring.

The Massmen tied it up right away in the bottom of the inning, without benefit of a hit. Pitcher John Tedeman reached on a fielding error by the third baseman. Shortstop Frank Buckler then tried a sacrifice bunt that the pitcher fielded and tried in vain to nab the lead runner heading towards second. After Scott struck out, Carl Abbey sent a bouncer between first and second that the first sacker booted while trying to pick up the ball. Tedeman raced around from second with the tying run.

There were now runners on first and second, but the inning ended on two routine infield plays. In the whole inning, the ball did not leave the infield.

Finally, in the eighth the dam broke. Cleary dragged a single down the third-base line, but was momentarily picked off by UConn's pitcher, Bob Horozy. Dubek walked, then Koidis struck out. But Ron Wysk, batting for Premerlani, lifted a fly ball into left field that was dropped, as Dubek advanced to third, Wysk racing around to second. There was nothing flukey about Ray Yando's single to center field that drove in the winning markers, as Yando scooted into second on the throw to the plate. Tedeman iced the decision with a Texas League base hit over the second baseman's head that drove in Wysk. Buckler grounded out to end the inning.

Connecticut had plenty of chances against Tedeman, which in the early innings was as wild as it was cold. In the first five innings, he walked three, hit a batter, and threw a wild pitch. But he was just as effective, giving up only three hits and striking out six. Settling down after the fifth, he allowed only one man to reach second, and ended up with eleven strike outs.

Varsity Tennis Squad Belts New Hampshire

by DAVE PODRAS '65

The UMass varsity netmen traveled to New Hampshire, Wednesday, and came back victorious in six singles and three doubles matches, their meet's entire schedule.

In spot number one, Roger Twitchell as usual, easily defeated his opponent, 6-1, 6-1. In the second spot Tom Simons also won easily, 6-0, 6-0. Mike Rose, in the third spot continued the team's winning ways taking his match 6-1, 6-1. Bob Neal, Steve Riemer, and Herb Moscowitz in forth, fifth, and sixth spots won their matches, 6-1, 6-1, 6-0, 6-3; 6-1, 6-1; respectively.

In the doubles, Bob Neal teamed up with Roger Twitchell to win the first doubles 6-4, 6-1. The combination of Tom Simons and Mike Rose won the second doubles 6-4 and 6-1, and in the third doubles, Steve Riemer and Billy Martin, after losing the first set 2-6, came back to win the next two, 6-3, 7-5.

Today, the netmen travel to Springfield to oppose A.I.C., and Saturday they go to Boston for a match with M.I.T. The Tech match could prove to be one of the best in this year's tennis season. M.I.T. has a strong team in all spots, especially in the top position. Twitchell will be facing one of New England's most outstanding players and probably the toughest he has faced in his varsity career.

Golfers Bomb Holy Cross, Vermont, 7-0

The Varsity Golf team evened their record at 2-2 with a dual meet victory over Holy Cross College and Vermont. The fairwaymen rolled over the Crusders, 6-1, and shut out the Vermont Catamounts 7-0. Previous losses were to Rhode Island 4-3, and Amherst College, 5-2.

Next meet is against A.I.C.

1. My theory on looking for a job is—Play it big! Shoot for the top! Go straight to the prez for your interview.

I don't know any presidents.

2. Use your head, man. Have your dad set up appointments with some of the big shots he knows.

He's a veterinarian.

3. Beautiful! All you have to do is find a president who likes dogs. You'll have him eating out of your hand in no time.

4. Frankly, I don't know what else to tell you. You've got a problem.

It's not as bad as it seems. My idea is to find out the name of the employment manager at the company I'm interested in. Write him a letter telling him my qualifications. Spell out my interests, marks. Simple as that.

5. A letter to the employment manager! Ho ho ho! You've a lot to learn.

Pia Blanks Amherst 2-0; Wilson Bests Trinity 5-2

Simone's Clutch Hitting Earns Starting Position

by AL RICE '66

Clutch hitting and top flight pitching by Lew Pia and Dick Wilson added two more victories to the Redmen's record this week with a 2-0 decision over Amherst College Wednesday and a 5-2 verdict over Trinity College yesterday afternoon at Alumni Field. The big hitting attack came against Trinity in support of Wilson, who scattered six Bantam hits. The UMass bats connected for only seven hits at Amherst, but Pia picked up his third win of the season with a two hitter, his second of the season, as he kept the Jeffs bottled up the whole game.

Massachusetts could get only two runs off Ernie Lanning of Amherst, and the first run came on something less than sheer power. John Awdycki opened the second inning with a line single to center, and Jih Schmoyer followed it up with a two bagger to deep right field, Awdycki stopping at third. Lanning then hit a wild streak that cost him the game. He issued a free pass to Steve Wojnar, his only walk of the game, and then hit Dave Krukonis with a pitch to force in the go-ahead run for the Lordenmen.

With Pia on the hill, one run was enough. The big righty gave up a single to John Warnock in the opening canto and lost Ken Garni on a three-two count in the third. A Jack Beacco single and three walks late in the game were all the runners Amherst could muster. Warnock stole second after his first inning base hit to become the first Jeff runner to get in scoring position. A stolen base and a sacrifice put men on second in two other innings, but that was the extent of the trouble that Pia was in.

It was just as well for Mass that he was having another good day, because the Redmen were not given any more breaks like that of the second inning. Tony Williams was left on first after reaching safety in the third, and two runners were stranded in the seventh and ninth. The second and last Mass score came in the fourth when Lew Pia scored on a double play ball that Amherst third baseman Ken Garni threw into center field. Pete Larkin, the runner being tried for, reached third on the play, but was picked off by Lanning a few minutes later.

In yesterday's game, Wilson wasn't as selfish with the base hits as Pia was, but he kept Trinity at bay in every inning but the third and sixth. A pair of double plays helped Wilson early in the game. Bruce MacDougald singled to start things off in the second, and even with a hit and run on, the Mass infield pulled off the first twin killing. Another double play cut down Wes Feshler in the fourth, when Wilson threw only three pitches. The first tally by the Bantams came on a fielder's choice, a stolen base, and a single to left by Tom Halloran. MacDougald reached safety on a boot by Larkin in the sixth stanza. A grounder to the mount moved him to second, and Dick Towle knocked in the run with a double down the third base line.

The big Massachusetts inning came in the fourth when three unearned markers crossed the plate. The big blow of the frame was a two run single by Tony Simone who replaced Ken Clark in the lineup. The move made Lorden look good, because in addition to the run producing hit, the junior outfielder from Lee also picked up two more singles and scored one run. An error, hit batter, sacrifice, and walk accounted for the bases filled situation when Simone went to the plate. He lined one of Ed Lazzerini's serves into left field driving home Schmoyer and Wojnar. The ball went past Dave Raymond and Dave Krukonis came around from first to score.

Three straight singles opening the fifth scored a run and gave signs of a big inning, but Lazzerini got Hughes, Wojnar, and Krukonis on outfield flys. Williams was the lone Mass man to cross the plate. Simone scored the final run in the eighth when he singled, was sacrificed to second, and scored on John Awdycki's third single of the day.

Lacrosse Team Scores With Three In 2nd Half; Win 5-4

by WALT GREEN '66

This past Wednesday, the Varsity Lacrosse Team played one of the most exciting games to be seen here in recent years. MIT, seeking their first win of the season, provided the opposition. But don't let this record fool you. MIT has two of the finest individual players in New England in Ron Matson and Jack Drice.

Jerry Clinton, with some fine faking and stick handling, fired home the first goal of the game on a superb unassisted play. The Redmen attack shot many times throughout the rest of the first period of play but they could not seem to find the range and when they did the goalie made the save. The M.I.T. defense was tough and the Redmen seemed to be a little confused. Several times M.I.T. left UMass men unguarded but the boys could not capitalize. In the first period UMass spent two and one half minutes in the penalty box giving M.I.T. a one man advantage on three different occasions, but the tough defense prevented any M.I.T. goals.

Something unique happened in the second quarter. UMass sustained six penalties, which in itself is not unusual for the type of lacrosse that was being played, but all of these penalties were the same call; "on the head." These penalties accounted for two of the M.I.T. goals of the afternoon. The first came at 5:06 when M.I.T. had a one man advantage. Then later the Redmen accumalated three penalties within 20 sec. This gave M.I.T. a three man advantage, and despite the efforts of the defense and the "middies" and M.I.T. scored again at 12:05, and again on an unassisted play by Ron Matson at 13:51. This accounted for Tech's scoring. The Redmen scored again on a "picture" play. The "middies" passed the ball around trying to work a man free, although the M.I.T. defense worked hard to get the ball, these passes were much too accurate to be stolen. All of a sudden, senior John Prior broke loose and fired a perfect pass to Ron Chiras, who scored.

Nevertheless, the half ended with MIT one goal to the better.

The second half saw three UMass goals and only one for the the men from Cambridge. At 4:28 Don Tremblay worked his way free from behind the MIT goal and fired a perfect shot into the corner of the net. Don, incidently, played a fine game for the Redmen offensively. His ball control and faking were excellent as were his set-ups. At 11:37 Steve Harrington took a pass from high scorer Ron Chiras and scored the second UMas goal of the period. But at 13:37, Matson again broke away and scored for MIT to even the score at four-all.

The fourth period was one that saw exceptional defensive play by both teams, and it wasn't until 13:02 that senior Ron Chiras scored the winning goal on a perfect pass from Co-Capt. Frank Gilliatt, to keep the Redmen undefeated.

It was a hard fought victory for the Redmen and a sweet one indeed as they start the heart of the season. The boys will be traveling to Medford to meet the "Jumbos" of Tufts University. The overall record with Tufts is four wins and three losses. Tufts has a fine player in Bob Day. In the words of Coach Garber, "We'll be double teaming that boy; he's dangerous."

On Wednesday the Redmen will be playing perhaps their toughest game of the season, when they meet the "Jeffs" of Amherst College here. Coach Garber has comented that Amherst has the best team in the league as far as statistics go, but remember this game isn't going to be played on paper but rather on the field of the Fighting Redmen, the "team with Heart." If you haven't gone to a lacrosse game yet, be sure to be on had for this one with Amherst on Wed. May 1. The time is three p.m.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

UNIVERSITY REACHES ITS 100th YEAR OF PROGRESS

Farsighted Educators Turn Farmland Into University

The University of Massachusetts is 100 years old.

Bay State's major educational complex, nestled in the Connecticut River valley at Amherst, has alternately struggled and flourished under three corporate names, 15 school presidents, and 38 Massachusetts governors since its founding on April 29, 1863.

The 56 hesitant young men of the first undergraduate class were probably somewhat dubious when they first saw the four buildings of the campus in 1867. They would probably be staggered by the present flurry of construction designed to accommodate 20,000 students by 1975.

Colorful personalities have found their way into the pages of the University's history. Some educators and administrators, such as early presidents Henry Flagg French and Colonel William S. Clark; pioneering trustees such as Marshall P. Wilder; dedicated teachers and subsequent presidents, such as Levi Stockbridge and Henry Hill Goodell, have been immortalized in buildings erected in their honor.

Similar memorials have been erected to honor early research scientists Charles Goessmann and Charles H. Fernald, loyal alumni William H. Bowker and Joseph Hills.

There were many reasons for the successful establishment and early growth of Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Town Raised $50 Thousand

The townspeople of Amherst raised $50,000 to help establish the school's Western Massachusetts location, the Hills family of Amherst and Nathan Durfee of Fall River contributed thousands of dollars to get the college on its way, researchers came up with important discoveries, and the state legislature fiinanced the school during its early, critical years.

The first students, too, contributed to the college's success. While the school was definitely included toward "basic" work—including three hours of manual labor per day—contact with such teachers as Prof. Goessmann had amazing results.

Louis Agassiz, America's foremost naturalist, termed the infant college program "a great success."

A great figure in the school's history was its first president, Henry Flagg French. French's father was attorney general of New Hampshire, his son an internationally-renowned sculptor—he created the Minute Man, John Harvard and the seated Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. Pres. French graduated from Dartmouth and Harvard Law School and served for nine years as assistant secretary of the U.S. Treasury.

French Provides Impetus

French provided the impetus to get the college started. He developed a plan of study, a plan of organization, and a building plan.

When the board of trustees quarreled with French's planning and abandoned his ideas, the energetic young president of the college reciprocated by handing in his resignation—18 pages of it.

His influence did not leave the school, however.

In his 1866 report to the governor, French recorded his legacy, a statement that set forth his own ideals, the ideals of the landgrant college movement, and the ideals, perhaps, of America itself:

"Equality in education," said French, "in wealth, in power, so far as God has permitted, is the keystone in the arch of liberty which our fathers erected."

William S. Clark, the school's third president, played a major role during the college's formative years.

A colorful ex-Union Army cavalryman, Clark was a graduate of Amherst College and had advanced schooling in Germany.

During his tenure he hired a group of crack scientific researchers, including Goessmann. The researchers' work and teaching ability got results, and the young school began to attract considerable favorable attention.

Clark started a tradition that has lasted nearly a century when he took a leave of absence, went to Japan, and helped to establish that nation's first agricultural college, now Hokkaido University.

Many things have changed since the first trustees wiped the dust of the Connecticut Valley from their eyes and looked west from Amherst's Pleasant Street at the promising but uncleared slopes of wooded farmland, back in 1863. And these changes will continue, more rapidly, in coming years.

One thing is clear. The people of the Commonwealth, the 15,000 alumni, the current student body, and those who will seek low-cost, quality education at the University of Massachusetts owe a debt of gratitude to those many educational pioneers of 100 years ago.

UM Set For G.E. College Bowl In Nov.

Official word has just been received by the University of Massachusetts that a team of handpicked scholars will have the opportunity of representating UMass on the nationally televised General Electric College Bowl program next November 24.

The College Bowl program, which appears on CBS-TV every Sunday at 5:30 p.m., is designed not only to entertain the viewing public but to increase general interest in higher education throughout the country.

The producers of the program are forwarding to campus a kit which will include information as to how and when the selections of the students will be made.

The invitation came as a culmination of two years of hard work on the part of many, and is just one phase in the gaining of national recognition for the University.

President Of Hokkaido University Here To Take Part In Ceremonies

International ties of academic friendship were renewed this past week when Dr. Harusada Suginome, president of Hokkaido University in Japan, came to the University of Massachusetts to join in Centennial Charter Day ceremonies.

Dr. Suginome arrived on Thursday accompanied by his wife and Dr. and Mrs. Seijin Nagao. Dr. Nagao is the Dean of the faculty of agriculture at Hokkaido University.

Dr. Suginome, now serving his third tern as President of Hokkaido University, is an outstanding organic chemist. In the fall of 1956 Pres. Suginome received an honorary Doctor of Laws degreen from U.M.

Dr. Suginome is the second University President from Asia ti visit U.M. during the past week in connection with Centennial events. General Carlos Romulo, President of the University of the Philippines, spoke at the University of Massachusetts last Monday.

The tradition of friendship and cooperation between Hokkaido University and the University of Massachusetts dates back 87 years. In 1876, U.M.'s second president, William S. Clark, went to Sapporo, Japan, to help the Japanese people in the development of a new university—Hokkaido.

More recently, under sponsorship of the International Cooperation Agency (ICA), faculty members from the two universities have participated in a technical agriculture exchange program. Under this program, professors exchanged teaching and research roles with their foreign counterparts. Although the government-sponsored program was concluded in 1961, the two universities have continued the exchange on an informal basis.

Part of the visit of the eminent Japanese educators will be devoted to meetings with UMass officials in an effort to broaden the scope of the exchange program into other academic areas—particularly the humanities. The visitors were honored guests at a special reception held on Sunday, April 28.

Both President Suginome and Dean Nagao have been in the United States before. Both speak fluent English. The Japanese dignitaries came to the University on Thursday, April 25, and will remain until May 3. They will participate in all of today's Charter Day Ceremonies.

Student Senators Entertain Members Of General Court

by ELWIN McNAMARA

The governor of the Commonwealth and approximately 25 members of the General Court, present for Charter Day ceremonies, will participate in the first Student Senate Legislator's Day, according to Maida Hurwitz, head of a special committee handling arrangements for the occasion.

The activities of the occasion will follow those of Charter Day, commencing with a dinner at about 4 p.m. This will be open solely to Senators and those legislators participating in Legislator's Day.

Following the dinner, all will adjourn to the Commonwealth Room, where topics of relevence to the University, present and future, will be discussed.

Senator Hurwitz announced that proposed topics include discussions of the increase of students on the University, the student-faculty ration, larger classes, and many other topics which would be mutual interest to legislators and Student Senators.

President Donald Cournoyer had stated that at the meeting, Senators will attempt to achieve a free and informal discussion of all topics.

The event will end in a coffee hour wherein students and their representitives may booth become more aware of University problems.

Senators and all other interested students have been invited by former governor Michael DiSalle to participate in a question and answer period. Present will be governor Peabody, who will answer question posed by the audience. While this is not a formal part of Legislator's Day, it is hoped that Senators will attend to make their views known to the governor.

"Toward Higher Learning More Widely Disseminated"

CHARTER DAY

I saw a man pursuing the horizon;
Round and round they sped.
I was disturbed at this;
I accosted the man.
"It is futile," I said,
"You can never —"
"You lie," he cried,
And ran on.

Stephen Crane

Today we are one hundred years old. This thought is hopeful, and yet it is frightening; there are ambivalent feelings about a birthday. In one way it's exciting and gratifying to see how far we have come. Then, in another way, to become aware of what is before inspires fear of futility. Little did they who founded Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1863 know that the school would eventually be preparing people to cope with an Atomic Age; an era in which man straddles the fence of total destruction; an age in which technologically we have progressed to a never before known level of life. Our school has grown from this agricultural source to an institute of general education because there were those who saw a need; a need for mature, educated people. There have been those willing to pursue their horizons.

The work of the first one hundred years is done. Now we look towards the next one hundred years. It is for us to pursue our horizons. The horizons of "higher learning, more widely disseminated". The horizon of unlimited intellectual development. The horizon of developing sensitive human beings, whose realities will be fuller because they spent four years at the University of Mass.

Thus, as we celebrate our one hundredth year, as the Centennial celebrations result after long planning, it is important to reflect upon the last century. But it is also important to view our horizons, our dreams. And as we, and others after us, look upon our ideals, as we try to materialize our dreams, if some one says "It is futile" as someone will, deep in our minds will be the retort, "You lie."

EXPANSION

A Charter Day paper demands something of a benevolent editorial page, or at least a shmaltzy editorial or two. As the swarms of students gather near the speakers platform, in our women's physical education building, we can't help thinking that it was only sixteen years ago, May 7th, that President Baker watched his school become the University of Massachusetts. We were just beginning the big construction push then—just getting into the mud and troubles of expansion. Now we are used to the constant change, though our heads still swim when we try to picture that new building over-looking the campus pond, or the twenty-two story dormitories already in the planning.

The students now attending the University realize there place as children of change, martyrs in mud—Guinea pigs in an IBM laboratory. They are not really dismayed by problems that multiply proportionally with each increase in enrollment. The University is one hundred years old. The next one hundred years promises all in the past and more! We read our red-bound history of UMass and know that we will someday reach that goal so carefully worded on all our Centennial publications: "TOWARD HIGHER LEARNING, MORE WIDELY DISSEMINATED."

The Negro In America

On Wednesday evening, May 1, at 8:00 p.m., Dr. William Stuart Nelson will speak in Bartlett Hall Auditorium. Dr. Nelson, President of Howard University and a friend of Martin Luther King will speak against a background of increasing violence. He will speak at a time of phenominal growth on the part of the Black Muslum movement. This man, a philosopher of the non-violent movement, speaks just a few days in the wake of a brutal murder in Alabama. He speaks in an atmosphere wherein Negro hate of the white man becames rationalized in the brilliant words of James Baldwin. His talk follows the "candid assertion" of Norman Pothoritz that Negro prejudice, for even the mot liberal white, is most difficult to intellectualize into oblivion.

In these troubled times, Dr. Nelson will speak to us of Gandhi, of Buddha, of Jesus, of Thoreau. While Negroes, frustrated with the progress of the N.A.A.C.P., flock by the hundreds to black nationalist, segregationist organizations, Dr. Nelson will attempt to insert a voice of moderation and sanity within the contemporary situation of inter-racial chaos.

These weeks and months may well prove to be the turning point in the history of the civil rights movement within the United States. Those who will be fortunate to hear Dr. Nelson will share in this history. This will be an extremely significant event that all should attend. —M.P.

ADELPHIA

It has come to the attention of the members of Adelphia, the Senior Mens' Honor Society, that there is a need for a better understanding of the qualifications for membership and goals of the organization.

The purpose of Adelphia is to recognize in an outstanding manner those individuals who have conferred honor on their alma mater by distinguished leadership, college activities, scholarship and exemplarary character, and to bring these individuals into a closer union so as to foster a common spirit of devotion and contribution to the University community.

During the past year, the active members of Adelphia have promoted the aims and ideals of the society by sponsoring the following events:

(1) High School Honor Students Day
(2) High School Slides Program
(3) Freshmen talks
(4) Student Leadership Program
(5) Rallies and Homecoming

In addition, Adelphia was frequently called upon to represent the University on numerous occasions, such as: Legislators' Day, Centennial Convocation, and Foreign Students' Reception. Adelphia has also served as a medium of promoting better student-faculty relations.

Membership in Adelphia is one of the highest honors that the students of the University of Massachusetts can confer upon male students, faculty, and members of the administration. The qualifications for membership is comprised of three prinicpal characteristics:

(1) Demonstration of scholastic achievement— the Junior members must have a cumulative average that plcaes them in the top third of their class.
(2) Attainment of high quality leadership in college activities, a willingness to accept responsibility, devotion and service to the University.
(3) Outstanding individual, with a high moral character and a strong sense of civic responsibility.

Since its founding in 1915, Adelphia has continued to recognize prominent members of the University community. This year is no exception. Tomorrow evening at Student Leaders' Night, twenty men will be tapped for membership in Adelphia.

Adelphia cordially invites you to join with it in honoring these distinguished individuals. —Adelphia

A Review

Modern Dance Concert

Form, movement, music rhythm marked an hour and fifteen minutes of creativity and interpretation. The audience sat, listened, and felt the feelings that the dancers were communicating. There is something unusual to be caught up in the movement of a finger or a nod of a head.

Generally the concert was a vivid art portrayal generating a tinge of the professional. What was there about this performance that caused the interest and exuberance of the audience? The answer lies in the variety and scope of the emotions which prodded the sentiments of those in the audience, in turn involving everyone there. The program began with "Sur Les Pointes" by Shostakovitch with choreography by Cherie Gilman whose fine dancing added to the whole show. piece of flowing symmetry. One of the highlights of the evening was the variety and creativity of the costumes. They ranged from block tights to frilly transparent skirts. The colors brought the stage to life, with bright oranges to sombre blacks.

If the first number was reserved, things exploded with with the coquettish "Comming-Meeting-Parting" by Copland, with choreography by Cherie Gilman whose fine dancing added to the show. This dance portrayed the lively happenings when boys see and meet girls. Certainly the crisp dancing of Ellie Harrington, was enhanced by her enthusiasm for dancing. Ellie danced in several numbers and did choreographed in two. Her Unsquare Dance was wonderfully choreographed. There were as many people jumping in their seats as there were on the stage.

Rachmaninoff's Yearning the longing and sadness of a human spirit was well received by the audience. The dance was set in a deep blue background. The lighting throughout the show was well done.

The highlight of the evening was The Hollow Men, an excerpt from the poem by T. S. Eliot. It was choreographed by Jan Clement and read by Tom Kerrigan. This number was sombre. The costumes were black tights with ripped pieces of gray attached. The movements were definite and descriptive and as the girls moved across the stage their eyes blackend, their skin lightened, presented a despair. The "world ends, not with a bang, but with a wim . . per"—will not leave the mind of those, viewing it, for sometime.

It is very difficult to narrow this great performance to a short review. All the dancing and dancers were excellent, and the girls deserve a great deal of credit for doing this for the University community. Miss Georgia Reid and Miss Shirley Roby should be especially acknowledged for their energetic guidance.

Dance is one, the more lively of the arts. Its expression offers meaning and excitement for those watching. We look foreward to a greater prominence of dance on Campus.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

During the last few programs of the Concert Association I have noticed that the audience has applauded after short sections of a piece. This has distracted the performers and once the whole program. If the programs given out had indicated when the audience should applaud as is done at some other schools, it might give the preformers a better impression of the sophistication of the student body and add to the integrity of the program as a whole.

John G. Young

To the Editor:
Re: Irresponsibility

It is because of the irresponsibility of letters such as Mr. Longey's in Wednesday's Collegian that no serious consideration can be given to "Letters to the Editor." He confidently states that "'profs' could have, and still can, organize classes to run adequately and completely in 45 minutes, starting on the hour and ending at quarter to the hour, with ample time between classes."

If any serious thought had gone into that letter, I feel the Faculty Senate Minutes of January 10, 1963 should have been consulted. In discussing the problem of breaks between classes, "Mr. Venman [Assistant to the Provost] said that the idea of having 45-minute classes would have to be discarded for reasons of accredidation."

From experience, I have found that to attend a class at 3:00 p.m. in the Education Building and one at 4:00 p.m. in Bartlett, (both courses offered only at those times) is a physical impossibility. If a 45-minute period was adopted, two alternatives were open. One would be to start clases at least two weeks earlier in the Fall, or else eliminate or shorten one of the vacations. The former would be a financial burden on students who work, the latter would certainly meet with general disfavor on the part of the students. Other suggestions, considering the present physical layout of the University, had to be discarded.

If you, Mr. Longey, want a Commonwealth Avenue campus with no green except between the trolley tracks, all future buildings could be erected in a one acre area on top of each other. Imagine a Land Architecture Major criticizing the beautiful campus greenery. What would the University be without the Pond? The Master Planning Committee is taking into account the inevitable problems associated with our "growing pains."

In the future, I hope that irate students will investigate their problems fully before resorting to using words like "inefficiency, and mismanagement" and other such alarmist tactics. Responsibility is in order here.

Student Leaders Honored

The annual Student Leaders' Night will be held this Tuesday, April 30, at 7:00 p.m. in the Cage.

As in the past, organizational scholarships will be presented, and members of Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities will be announced. The campus honorary organizations will tap their new members at this time.

In addition to the traditional awards this year will be the Metawampee Award, presented to an outstanding professor on campus.

In an effort to revive an old tradition, senior women are invited to don their caps and gowns to form a procession to the evening's festivities. They are also urged to participate with the Junior women in a candle-floating ceremony at the campus pond at the end of the evening's program.

Weather forecast for today: warm and sunny until ten o'clock, then watch out for a heavy snow storm. Today is Charter Day in our Commonwealth and on important occasions such as this we roll out the red carpet for distinguished visitors and then stand back to listen to the praise being heaped about our heads and shoulders. Granted that many of the kind words and clichés lack the strong conviction of truth, but it's a welcome change of pace.

Many of the constructive actions of University citizens are often obscured by the flood of ridiculous or detrimental activities. When guest speakers heap generalized praise upon us, we should consider that our positive, unheralded actions are receiving some reward. For this reason I maintain that the "snow job" nature of the praise should be overlooked.

Not too many people on this campus know what Charter Day signifies. Aside from signifying no classes from 10:30 to 1:00, Charter Day is the Birthday of the University. Just 100 years ago, on April 29, 1963, Gov. John A. Andrew signed the charter which created Massachusetts Agricultural College. Not that it is particularly relevant, but April 29 is also the birthday of Emperor Hirihito. The Emperor had nothing to do with the founding of M.A.C., or for that matter he had nothing to do with the founding of our sister University in Japan (Hokkaido).

Speaking of our sister University (that was a pretty obscure tie-in), I would take this moment to extend a welcome from the student body to Dr. Suginome, President of Hokkaido, who is present on campus to help us celebrate Charter Day.

All things considered, now is the proper time to wish UMass a happy birthday. Happy birthday, UMass! Of Course after 100 years the Old Girl is starting to show a few wrinkles, but all in all the older buildings on campus are holding up quite well. It's the newer buildings that are starting to fall apart. In a way it's unfortunate that buildings such as South College (which rates just behind the Northampton City Hall and Amherst City Hall as the ugliest buildings in the Pioneer Valley) are in such good condition. A wrecking crane could do wonders to improve the looks of South College.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 1

Summer vacation is just around the corner, and naturally all of you are going to Europe. Perhaps I can offer a handy tip or two. (I must confess that I myself have never been to Europe, but I do have a French poodle and a German shepherd, so I am not entirely unqualified.)

First let me say that no trip to Europe is complete without a visit to England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Lichtenstein, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Russia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania, Crete, Sardinia, Sicily, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Lapland, and Andorra.

Let us take up these countries in order. First, England.

The old ones are thrown away

The capital of England is London—or Liverpool, as it is sometimes called. There are many interesting things to see in London—chiefly the changing of the guards. The guards are changed daily. The old ones are thrown away.

Another "must" while in London is a visit to the palace of the Duke of Marlborough. Marlborough is spelled Marlborough, but pronounced Marlboro. English spelling is very quaint, but terribly disorganized. The late George Bernard Shaw, author of Little Women, fought all his life to simplify English spelling. They tell a story about Shaw once asking a friend, "What does g-h-o-t-i spell?"

The friend pondered a bit and replied, "Goatee."

Shaw sniggered. "Pshaw," said Shaw. "G-h-o-t-i does not spell goatee. It spells fish."

"How is that?" said the friend.

Shaw answered, "Gh as in enough, o as in women, ti as in motion. Put them all together, you get fish."

This was very clever of Shaw when you consider that he was a vegetarian. And a good thing he was. As Disraeli once remarked to Guy Fawkes, "If Shaw were not a vegetarian, no lamb chop in London would be safe."

But I digress. We were speaking of the palace of the Duke of Marlborough—or Marlboro, as it is called in the United States. It is called Marlboro by every smoker who enjoys a fine, rich breed of tobaccos, who appreciates a pure white filter, who likes a soft pack that is really soft, a Flip-Top box that really flips. Be sure you are well supplied with Marlboros when you make your trip abroad. After a long, tiring day of sightseeing there is nothing so welcome as a good flavorful Marlboro and a footbath with hot Epsom salts.

Epsom salts can be obtained in England at Epsom Downs. Kensington salts can be obtained at Kensington Gardens, Albert salts can be obtained at Albert Hall, Hyde salts can be obtained at Hyde Park, and the crown jewels can be obtained at the Tower of London.

The guards at the Tower of London are called Beefeaters because they are always beefing about what they get to eat. This is also known as "cricket" or "petrol."

Well, I guess that about covers England. In next week's column we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—France.

©1963 Max Shulman

Wherever you may roam in Europe and in all fifty states of the Union, you'll find Marlboro ever-present and ever-pleasant—filter, flavor, pack or box.

This Year's Centennial Concert To Feature The Kingston Trio

In celebration of the University's 100th anniversary, one of the most popular and successful singing groups in the world, the Kingston Trio, will highlight the Centennial Concert on Sunday May 12, the Centennial Concert Committee has announced.

Formed in 1957, the Trio rose rapidly during the next two years, becoming well-known especially in the college circuit for their dynamic and original style. Long-playing albums and single hits like "Tom Dooley" and "Tijuana Jail" spelled success in the recording field.

Still on top, the Kingston Trio has retained two of its original members, Bob Shane and Nick Reynolds. John Stewart replaced the third in 1961.

Bob and Nick graduated from Menlo College in California, John from Mt. San Antonio, also in California. All three are married and live with their families near San Francisco.

Starting at 7:30 p.m. the famous folk-singers will perform under spotlights in Curry Hicks Gymnasium.

The Centennial Concert is being supported by student funds and an admission charge. Both the Student Senate and the Class of 1963 have contributed $2000. Tickets for this event, at $1.50 each, will go on sale May 1.

Members of the Centennial Concert Committee include: General Chairman Howie Wainstein, Steve Gray, Kim Wallace, Beth Peterson, Chuck Devoe, and Bill Nichols.

UM Athletics Keep Pace With A Growing University

New Boyden Building Finest Of Its Kind

The belief that intramural and intercollegiate athletics are and should be an intgral part of a student's college edueation has for years been the underlying philosophy at the State University of the Commonwealth. In conjunction with this thinking during the past decade the number of sports in which the University of Massachusetts has competed on the intercollegiate level has of necessity increased. Increased interests of students in playing sports, larger enrollments, and the desire to become a playing member of the Yankee Conference are just a few of the factors that have led to a well balanced program that includes varsity and freshman competition in seventeen sports.

As the student body continues to mushroom and grow, it is going to be necessary to expand this well rounded program even further. Plans are now under way to include junior varsity competition and teams in as many activities as possible consistent with additional indoor and outdoor facilities, that are available to take care of the increasing student population.

WARREN G. McGUIRK

Almost ninety-two years ago, or on July 21, 1871 to be exact, the crew squad of infant Massachusetts Agricultural College startled the international sports world when it defeated Harvard and Brown to win the American College Regatta. Since that memorable occasion, Massachusetts teams have often distinguished themselves with outstanding performances and achievements as the school has grown from Massachusetts Agricultural College to Massachusetts State College and now to the University of Massachusetts.

With almost one hundred years of intercollegiate competition now history as far as the State University is concerned, perhaps it would be interesting to look into a crystal ball to try and forsee what is ahead in the next decade for intercollegiate and intramural athletics on the Amherst campus.

For almost fifteen years, Warren P. McGuirk has been Director of Athletics at the University and although the athletic program has gained stature and broadened tremendously during his tenure, the lack of adequate facilities to conduct a program representative of the State University still is cause for much concern.

"For years we have been operating with athletic facilities that were designed to accommodate a male student enrollment of about 500," McGuirk recently commended," and yet back in 1947 there were almost 1500 male undergraduates enrolled at the University."

There is no doubt that the main emphasis on the University building program during the past decade should have been on classroom, dining, infirmary, laboratory and dormitory facilities and yet it is unfortunate that there has not been some additions to the men's physical education and athletic facilities prior to this time.

THE FRANK E. BOYDEN BUILDING

Named in honor of one of our country's foremost educators, Mr. Frank E. Boyden, this new building will house in addition to a mammoth gymnasium, lecture classrooms, corrective and adaptive physical educational laboratories, and improved facilities for participants in required and intramural athletics.

Just about a year ago, ground was broken on the Frank E. Boyden Men's Physical Education Building which is scheduled to be completed late this summer. The addition of this facility to the School of Physical Education will do much to alleviate some of the inadequacies of the present facilitis although intramurals and the required physical education program are the two areas which will benefit most.

The Frank E. Boyden Building promises to be one of the finest facilities of its kind in the country and has been designed for the particular needs of the State University of the Commonwealth. The top floor of the three story building will house the main gymnasium which will provide multiple instructional areas such as six regular basketball courts, or twelve volleyball courts, or twenty-four badminton courts.

Areas on the second floor will include five lecture classrooms, laboratories for courses in anatomy, kinesiology, physiology and tests and measurements as well as an adapted physical education laboratory for remedial and corrective instructional programs, under medical supervision, for physically handicapped students.

In addition to administrative and staff offices for the School of Physical Education other areas in the building are planned for a wrestling room, locker rooms for students, faculty, and staff, a swimming pool, an auxiliary gymnasium for gymnastics, equipment issue and storage area, physical therapy laboratory, weight training and conditioning laboratory, laundry room, and a maintenance storage area and repair shop.

The current master plan for the development of the University during the next decade calls for the relocation of the current football field from the center of campus to the southwest corner of University land. If unforseen complications do not cause further delays, the 1964 football season will find the Redmen football squad dedicating a facility that will accommodate in the vicinity of twenty-thousand spectators. The football area on Alumni Field now seats almost eleven thousand people and on two occasion last fall, Coach Vic Fusia's squad played to standing room crowds.

Curry Hicks Cage, which was built in the early thirties, is the present site of all home indoor athletic events. Since this facility will seat less than half of the current student enrollment, it is quite evident that a combination field house and assembly hall will have to be built in the near future if the entire University family is to have the opportunity to participate in aesthetic programs as well as intercollegiate activities. In addition to outdoor play areas and fields for intramural as well as intercollegiate use, a hockey arena as well as a building for team dressing facilities are also in the long range planning stage by University officials.

As far as the actual intercollegiate program is concerned, McGuirk has indicated there will not be any radical change in the scheduling pattern that the University has been following for the past five to ten years.

The core of the schedule is made up of Yankee Conference member schools and an effort is made to play in the Boston area each year in football particularly. An effort is made to keep one or two games in each schedule available for different opponents so that some variety may be introduced into the playing schedules from time to time and a real effort is made to effect a balance between off-campus and on-campus contests and games.

About five years ago, the University administration announeed that it was making an effort to develop the intercollegiate athletic program at the University to a point where it was representative of the best efforts of the University with aims and ideals of achievement comparable to those expected of the academic departments. In n nutshell, it was indicated that Massachusetts wanted to attain respectability within the Yankee Conference and also compete with some of the major Eastern independent and Ivy League teams in as many sports as possible.

In the relatively short time of five years, Redmen teams have gone a long way to achieving "respectibility in the Yankee Conference". As a matter of fact, during the last two years, Massachusetts has won more conference championships than any other school in the league.

"Actually, our program at the State University is a lot more than just winning and losing games", McGuirk indicated recently. "We are making a real effort to include as many of our students as possible in our program while they are on campus. If a youngster does not wish to participate in an intercollegiate activity we make every effort to have him take part in the intramural program."

"The intercollegiate program at the University of Massachusetts is the most comprehensive of any of the land grant schools in New England." "It is our intention to keep athletics in their proper perspective on the Massachusetts campus, but since we feel very strongly that a student must be developed mentally, physically, and spiritually during his higher education experience we are hoping that with additional facilities, our program will compare favorably with any State University in the country."

Constructive Criticism--A Concerned Student Body

PUBLISH OR PERISH

"Who wants good teaching?" Administration, faculty, and students alike all have the same answer — WE DO. With this in mind, the Collegian offers suggestions on this important question.

In the words of Dr. James S. Proctor, "You can't pour everyone into the same mold." We believe that every teacher is an individual. He is different from any of his colleagues, and as such he should be judged on an individual basis, and not by standards for the entire faculty.

Therefore, we propose that each department allow for a few such people to remain within the University complex. They are teaching specialists, and deserve the same respect, rank and salary as their researching colleagues.

There are many departments on campus—English in particular —where this could apply. We feel that some teachers are "naturals." They inspire the students in their classes, and most important, they enjoy teaching. Allowing these individuals to spend their time in teaching would definitely be a step in the right direction.

We propose that each department (where this is applicable) create a chair of research. The individuals filling such chairs would teach courses in research and research methods as well as work with others on research projects. This means that students and faculty could seek both the advice and aid of a trained researcher whenever they run into problems.

The suggestions presented above fill a basic gap in present procedures. They provide for either extreme in teaching — the "pure" teacher and the researcher.

The University could continue to expand its reseach program and still maintain the highest possible quality of teachers.

REFLECTION

The University's goals entail size and performance. The performance has been relatively good in the past. The drive is now towards size. The problem of keeping the good performance becomes more difficult. When an institution assumes a fast rate of growth, it tends to channel most of its resources and energy into this growth. Because of this, other aspects are ignored. These aspects cause the "growing pains" of the University of Mass. Since today is commemorating this growth we would like to raise these problems which we feel have been mishandled.

The first issue appeared last April when students became aware that faculty members were being let go because they were not publishing. Questioning this criteria for judging one's teaching ability, the Collegian took issue.

The second issue was brought to light this spring when a professor decided to leave the University because he felt that undergraduate education is not getting the attention it deserved.

Lastly there is a letter sent to President Lederle by the Student Senate expressing concern over the housing problem. This letter was sent to the Administration two years ago, yet it is still pertinent.

QUALITY vs. QUANTITY

One of the most overt growing pains of this University is the rapidly increasing number of students to be found in most undergraduate courses. Instead of creating more sections of a course, so as to keep the student teacher ratio in the classroom (which is the only significant student teacher ratio) at a stable level, the number of sections have increased slowly while student population rises rapidly. The obvious result is that the classroom ratio of teachers to students is rising.

If we are feeling growing pains from overcrowded classes with 7,000 students on campus then we will be in agony when the student population reaches 20,000.

A policy setting maximum class size with limits for specific courses must be set now. Not five years form now when discussion courses reach the level of 100 people and small seminars are comprised of 50 students.

Statements such as "the overall faculty student ratio has remained constant over the past ten years" are meaningless. The overall ratio may remain constant, but undergraduate courses are getting larger. Gimics such as large lecture sections coupled with one smaller discussion section are not the answer to the problem.
half. Three discussion sections are needed, not two large lectures and one discussion.

We request that a limit on specific courses be established by the administration with the advice of the faculty. We must make provisions for qualitative growth. If the University is growing so fast that we can not provide for the student body during the next twelve crucial years, then let us slow down.

The goal is 20,000 by 1975. It is only a plan, it does not have to be met. To force the growth is to place quantity over quality.

Student Senate Acts

The Housing Problem

Ed. note: Housing has been plaguing this campus for the past few years. The student Senate became aware of this several years ago. The problem has not been resolved. Next year the school will admit 2300 students and adequate housing hasn't been provided for them as yet. There will be tripling of rooms. We do not want to call anyone names, but why has this condition persistently plagued the campus with nothing being done to alleviate it. When students are accepted to the University their trust shouldn't be violated. Studying becomes difficult, living terrible. Some thing should be done.

Dear President Lederle,

The following motion was passed by the Student Senate on April 26th, 1961:

"Moved that the Student Senate, on behalf of the student body, express its extreme disapproval of the increase in next year's enrollment without adequate dormitory facilities."

In passing this motion, the Senate fully understands the situation which confronted the Administration. The Senate realizes that the cloud of suspicion which fell on the UMass Building Association made it necessary to organize the UMass Building Authority. If all had gone as planned, a dormitory would now be in the process of completion to accomodate the expected increase in enrollment. Since new dormitory construction was necessarily delayed, we realize that the Administration was faced with two possible choices:

1) Either reduce the planned student enrollment for next year,

2) Or increase the enrollment as planned, even though adequate dormitory facilities would not be available. In making its final decision to follow the latter course, the Senate feels that the Administration is not acting in the best intercsts of the student body, nor in the best interests of the University. Perhaps the Administration has failed to realize the real effect that their decision will have, not only on the students presently enrolled, but also on those who will arrive next year.

If the increase in enrollment would result only in inconvenience to the students, there would be no need to question it. However, the increase does mean crowded dorms. Since most studying is done in the dorms, this means crowded study facilities. This is not inconveniencing the student body; it is an actual sacrifice of the students' opportunity to achieve academic excellence.

A crowded physical education building is mostly a matter of inconvenience, but crowded study facilities are not. The library, Machmer Hall, and the like can never replace the dormitory room as a place for study when so many students are involved.

We are sure that all students at the University feel privileged to attend their state university. By the same token, wo do not want to deny to any other qualified and deserving student in the state this same opportunity. Certainly however, each student applying at the University is doing so with the understanding that he will have the same opportunity here, as he would expect to have at a private school. Are not these new applicants being deceived? Will they know they will be subjected to crowded study facilities? Will not the crowded study facilities substitute for the applicants expected full opportunity, a limited one?

The Administration seems to assume that the students applying at UMASS do not have opportunities elsewhere. Although many students come here because they can not afford the more expensive colleges and universities, some would be willing to make the financial sacrifice and go to the more expensive schools, rather than risk the chance that they might receive a lower quality opportunity for higher education. Certainly. they should be fully aware of what opportunity they really have at UMass so that they will make the appropriate choice.

If, at the time of application, many students had been aware of the conditions to which they would be subjected they would have made other choices. With no new dormitory construction expected in the near future, the crowded conditions will last for at least three more semesters. The present sophomore class has already experienced one semester of crowded conditions; three more, added to that one, will result in half of their academic careers spent under overcrowded conditions. That's far from being temporary! A student spents four years here once, and only once. Is it fair to demand this sacrifice?

We all want to see the University of Massachusetts grow into a great university, but not at the expense of the academic achievements of its students. Why must a state university offer to the student with limited financial resources, only the choice of a limited opporunity for a higher education, or none at all? That we are a state university certainly can not be an acceptable excuse when we have answered these questions. What kind of an opportunity are we giving our students?

As a state university, the chief function of the UMass is to provide for the qualifying and deserving students in the state, á high quality opportunity for education comparable to that they would receive at a private institution. If increasing the enrollment means lowering the quality of educational opportunity, then the increase in enrollment is defeating the purpose for which the University exists. It would be much better to provide a high quality opportunity for education to as many deserving students as possible, rather than to provide mediocre opportunities for many more.

Having considered these facts, in the spirit of constructive criticism, the Senate asks the Administration to re-examine its decision keeping in mind the goals of this University.

The University Power Plant — Heart of the Campus

by DAVID AXELROD '65

With the exception of shrill blasts from its whistle, or an occasional ominous black cloud of smoke belching from its chimneys, the University's power plant goes relatively unnoticed. However, it is this plant that supplies the campus, one or two private homes, and Phi Sigma Kappa, with electricity, hot water, heat, and of all things, the correct time! Speaking with Mr. Lionel G. David, Chief Engineer at the plant, the Collegian was told of the multiple services and large growth of this extremely important system.

Twenty years ago, when Mr. David first arrived at the plant, there was only one building, housing both maintenance and power departments. The structure, built in 1926, then operaeed with an instantaneous capacity of 300 kilowatts per hour. In 1951, a second building was constructed, 85 feet high with an 85 foot smoke stack set on its roof. To keep pace with the rapidly expanding campus, a a third building was completed in 1958, retiring the oldest section to office and storage. This newest addition, with its 170 foot stack, brought the plant to its present high capacities. A total of seven boilers and three turbo-generators now consume as much as 65 tons of coal on a winter day, to allow an instantaneous value of 4,50 kilowatts per hour and an overall 60,000 kilowatt hours per day. These figures vary with the season and, of course, during vacations, but the average summer day might use forty tons of coal—no small amount.

MR. LIONEL G. DAVID

Even with its tremendous growth expansion, the present plant has fallen short of meeting full campus needs. The University now must purchase a certain amount of power from private lines. Figuring the increase in power needs proportionally with the increase in students, another new building of nearly the same size as the present structure, will be needed in the next four or five years. Present research on the new building's construction may bring a change to oil, and even use of the water flowing from the campus pond. The stream in the gully is now channeled through a five foot in diameter pipe, unused, past the plant, which runs solely with city water.

Plant operations are around the clock, with a crew of 22 workers. All duties must be carefully coordinated to assure a smooth-running campus. There are the usual tasks of handling the coal by an efficient system, from truck, up a long enclosed conveyor to crusher, into the plant ready for periodic stokings of the furnaces; the continuous removal of cinder (put to use so often on our campus); and the constant checks for proper distribution of power through the complex circuits. Then, there are the less thought-of chores: regulating our street lights (a source of constant troubles); catching "flywash" to keep the air pure; and simply keeping the birds out of all the nooks, doors and windows of the structure!

The plant, with special attention from Mr. David, regulates all "minute-impulse" clocks on campus, as well as the Old Chapel time piece. An ingenious system sends out an activating impulse to click each minute on our clocks. A final 59th impulse each hour will bring all clocks backward or forward to the same correct time all over campus. The central clock, located in the 1951 building, gains less than 60 seconds in six months. This system has made Old Chapel's clock one of the most accurate steeple clocks in the four-college area.

One of the more than twenty workers at the University Power Plant who helps to keep UMass running smoothly.

Thus, that large brick "thing" next to Machmer—our power plant—is really the heart of this busy campus. We find its pulse at every turn—from our clocks to the cinder under foot; and Mr. David can agree, we are sure, as long as the pulse is steady, our not noticing the plant is his silent reward.

Troubles Plague Colorado U. As Politics Proves Too Much

Resignations by three top administrators at the University of Colorado here have produced a tense and uneasy situation in which it is feared that the school may lose its high academic standing.

The resignations, including university president Quigg Newton, grew out of a long-standing fight between Newton and Charles Bromley, Denver lawyer, a member of the university board of regents.

The university was also swept into the November election campaign, with conservations and rightists attacking the liberal administration of the university. During the fall term, Newton fired the editor of the student newspaper, Gary Althen, following a statewide political furor that arose after Althen permittted the publication of an article referring to Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) as, among other things, "no better than a common criminal."

Despite Newton's action, another vociferous critic of the policies of the university administration was elected to the board of regents in a general Republician sweep of the state. Colorado is one of the few states in the nation where candidates for the board of regents are elected on partisan platforms.

The three administrators who left were Newton, who will become head of the Commonwealth Fund in New York; Dr. Oswald Tippo, who resigned as university provost to take a post as executive vice president of New York University; and Dr. Robert Glaser, university vice president for medical affairs, who will become Professor of Social Medicine at Harvard University.

It is also estimated that a significant number of Colorado faculty members, including some in high administrative positions, will take jobs in other institution.

In his six years as president of the University of Colorado, Newton has introduced many far-reaching changes in the school in his drive to make it a "great" university. He has won the firm support of the majority of the students and faculty of the school, but his battles with the state political structure and conservative factions have been never ending.

Much of the criticizm leveled at Newton, especially from the few disgruntled faculty members has centered around the fact that Newton's background is essentially political, not academic. He is a native of Denver, a graduate of Yale and Yale Law, and has been Democratic Mayor of Denver, as well as an outspoken political liberal.

Newton took these fears into account by hiring Tippo, a respected educator to fill the newly created post of provost, to oversee academic progress in the school. But the major difficulty in Newton's drive to reform the university is and has been something that he has no control over: the Colorado constitution provides that the university be administered by a board of regents elected on a political basis, Republicans vs. Democrats.

"You tend to get on your politicians whose whole background and experience is political," Newton once lamented. And the system inevitably tends to embroil the university in state politics.

Colorado's new Republican Governor Love has announced plans to attempt to do something about the system of administration of the states higher education system. The other Colorado institution are for the most part administered by appointive, apolitical boards, there is no central state control over the system at all.

Mr. Newton and Mr. Bromley have collided on a number of Newton's proposed reforms for the administration of the school. Bromley objected strongly to the introduction of a merit pay system some time ago, and has attacked Newton's attempts to weed out some faculty members to replace them with younger and more capable men. Feelings became so heated that at one point, Newton said of Bromley, "I regard his behavior as a regent as simply intolerable, simply intolerable."

But above all else, it is currently being realized in Colorado that the problems of the university stem almost entirely from the political nature of the board of regents. Newton was selected to head the schol in the first place by a board composed of liberal Democrats, and came under fire from conservative Republicans.

Symposium Explores Need For Education

by JOAN ST. LAURENT

Speaking on the topic "Public Education and the National Need" were panel members George Meany, President of the AFL-CIO; James Pollock of the University of Michigan; Charles Avila, President of Boston Edison Co.; and moderator Edward Moore, Dean of the Graduate School at the University.

Meany spoke on the response of public higher education by labor. He called for a massive assault on "the inequality of education." He claimed that the primary need is for the children of the lower class working people to receive an education, equal to that enjoyed by the children of the more affluent business people.

Labor, Meany stated, expects that public education be available to the children of working people and be of service to the consumer.

James Pollock spoke on education's response to government. A recent study, he explained, revealed the fact that more than a billion dollars is being spent by the government on public higher education. He continued, however, stating that the universities' contribution is overlooked. Colleges are continually supplying all levels of government with trained, capable leaders. Education's response to government has been indispnsible.

Charles Avila explained the needs of industry. A state university has special responsibility to foster the economic well-being of its state. "Education's main task should center on what people are and what they do." He stated that today's curriculum is too permissive in what it demands.

Avila closed the symposium by stating that "The aim of education is not to adjust, but to disturb and to produce students who are not willing to accept the world as it is."

Governor Peabody Lectures To UMass Government Class

Problems of Massachusetts government were brought sharply into focus yesterday by Governor Endicott Peabody. Speaking before a class conducted by former governor Michael DiSalle of Ohio, Distinguished Visiting Professor at the University, Peabody discussed some of the Commonwealth's main problems including the "weakness of authority" of the office of governor.

Peabody went on to state that while checks on the executive may not have hindered government thirty years ago, its effects today are "disastrous". He attributed the fact that since World War II, no governor has ever served more than two terms to this lack of power and prestige.

Turning to the topic of the death penalty, Peabody stated flatly that he will not permit anyone to be executed while he serves as governor. "It is," he claimed, "the function of the state to save lives, not take them." He further stated that the efforts of the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association to block abolition are wrong. He felt that they came from a desire to "protect the troops", which was unfounded in statistics.

In response to questions from the audience Peabody discussed other facets of state government.

The Conflict of Interest law—"The towns have not fully examined this. It is not as serious as people think. However, if it proves harmful, it can be amended."

Sweepstakes — "The New Hampshire Sweepstakes will hurt Massachusetts. Many residents will purchase tickets, thus providing impetus for a lottery in this state. It would result in very bad publicity for Massachusetts."

The New Income Tax—"It is the only effective way for cities and towns to get revenue. If they want relief this is the only practical way."

Compensation to strikers—"I favor unemployment compensation to strikers after a period of weeks."

Capacity Audience Hears Keynoter Seaborg Speak

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg told a capacity audience that the United States is involved in a major scientific revolution. He spoke at Charter Day ceremonies, commemorating the 100th anniversary of the University.

The morning convocation opened a day of celebration in honor of our first 100 years.

Governor Endicott Peabody led a large party from the State House to pay tribute to the State university. Prominent members of the legislature attending were Senate President John Powers and House Speaker John Thompson.

Dr. Harusada Suginome, president of Hokkaido University in Japan travelled 10,000 miles to be present at the centennial of Hokkaido's sister university.

In a surprise ceremony, Dr. Suginome presented a "Meiyo Hakushi" degree to President Lederle, the first such degree awarded by a Japanese university off its campus.

In the main address, Seaborg said that he was pleased "to hear that the University of Massachusetts is looking foreward to a tripling of its student body" by 1975. He said that the maintenance of quality education in the face of such growth is a great problem. Seaborg declared that there must be "increasing awareness by the nation as a whole that the states must receive help from the federal government."

He concluded by saying that "the most important response to these challenges of education in our times is harder work."

New Student Leaders Tapped At Exciting Tues. Ceremonies

by Ann Miller '64

Student Leaders Night comes but once a year—and brother what a night it is!

About 1500 students packed the Cage last night to watch the surprise induction of next year's Adelphians, Mortarboards, Maroon Keys, Scrolls and Revelers by the societies' present members. Announced during the program were the names of winners of Campus Chest, Maroon Key and Centennial scholarships.

New on the program this year was presentation of the Metawampee Award by the Student Centennial Committee. The sterling silver trophy of the University's Indian symbol is given to a teacher or administrator who has shown his dedication and service to the student body of the University by his outstanding advisory or educational asasistance to them.

The award went to Mr. Albert Madeira of the University's English Department.

Was he surprised!

Climaxing and highlighting the evening was the tapping of next year's members of the campus honor and honorary societies.

Tapped for Adelphia, the senior men's honor society, were: Juniors Joe Bradley, Manny Smith, Jim Medeiros, Bruce Albro, Dave Truesdale, Bob Brauer and Dave Clancy; Seniors John Gounaris, Skip Oakes, Barry Weiner, Bob Chenery, George Scott, Howard Stone, Howard Wainstein and Neal Andelman; and Honorary members Ed Buck, Dean George Marston, Rep. Sumner Kaplan, Sidney Scheoffler and Louis Greenbaum.

Tapped for Mortar Board (senior women's honor society) were: Elaine Needham, Eleanor Stang, Edith Leahy, Bev Botel-

The cast is as follows: Dean Strident—Joel Perkowitz, Fargo Wolfpits—Jerry Kramer, Gloria —Kathy Connolly, College boy—Bill Avery, Cynthia — Carol Esonis, Dunbar Peccory—Al Forman, Herschel—Bill Hale, Prof. Koob—Joe Collins, robot—Sandy Wolfe, boys—Jeff Howe, Dick Phillips, Brian Graves, girls—Patricia Valiton, Carol Madison and Sally Palmer.

SECRETARY WANTED

The Collegian will begin interviewing for a NON-student secretary for the 1963-64 academic year. All interested applicants should come to the Collegian office, on the second floor of the Student Union, to fill out an application with Mrs. Fuller. This is an excellent job for a student's wife.

Two Wounded By Shotgun During Pledge Raid

A pledge and a brother of Phi Sigma Delta fraternity were injured early yesterday morning in a pledge raid accident on their North Pleasant street house.

Neil Baker, a freshmen pledge, and Sports Editor of the Collegian, and Jim Wantman, a brother, were wounded by accident by a shot gun blast of birdshot by Richard Dimock, vice president of the house.

According to the reports of his brothers, Dimock had meant to fire ordinary table salt at the pledges but due to a mistake in the firing process the accident occured.

Neither of the boys was seriously injured, though Wantman suffered wounds in the head and one pellet lodged directly between his eyes.

Both boys were treated as outpatients at 4:30 a.m. and released from the infirmary.

Dr. Gage termed the boys wounds as only "apparently superficial" and the unfortunate outcome of an irresponsible action.

Dimock, a junior, was arrested by the Amherst police and taken to Northampton District Court where he was charged with assault and battery with a deadly weapon. He was released on $2,000 bail early Tuesday afternoon, after a unanimous vote of his brothers appropriated the necessary money.

When reached at his office, Dean of Men Robert Hopkins refused to comment on the possible ramifications of the accident and stated that he "needs a breather" is "to close to the situation now" to say anything.

The effect on the fraternity system in general, and pledging practices, in particular, has not yet been determined. However, the Inter-Fraternity Council is meeting this evening and it is expected that the event will come under discussion.

COLLEGIAN

Questioning The System

The unfortunate incident which happened early yesterday morning during a pledge raid (see page 1) should not be construed as a formal indictment of that particular fraternity or of the University fraternity system in general.

It is quite probable that such an occurrence will never happen again, but nevertheless a number of pertinent questions concerning the fraternity system have been raised, and an answer to these questions must be found.

The first and most obvious, is what was a gun and ammunition doing in a student's hands when University regulations explicitly forbid this.

The second question is by what authority do pledges and brothers of one fraternity have the right to disturb the community in the early hours of the morning. Even if there had not been the sound of the weapon there probably would have been a firecracker or two and almost certainly a large amount of noise.

The third, the most complex and serious question of all, is whether the fraternities themselves, individually or through the Interfraternity Council, will begin self-policing or will they force the administration to do it for them.

If fraternities are what they say they are; i.e. a group of mature individuals living together in a fraternal atmosphere, then there should be no need for the administration to step in and exert closer control over them.

It is up to the IFC to either realistically change this definition of a fraternity, and thus incur closer regulation by the University, or implement their present definition and make the fraternity system into what it claims to be.

The IFC is meeting this evening, it is time for it to decide whether they are capable of cleaning their own house(s) or whether they will step aside and let somebody else do it for them.

A SPECIAL TRYOUT

The old order changeth, yielding place to new;
—Tennyson

Today sees the end of an era. On this Wednesday evening, Donald C. Cournoyer will enter the Council Chambers for the final time as president of the Student Senate. It is fitting that on such a day we pay tribute to him.

Since the first day of his election, Don has had but one purpose in mind: the building of the Senate into a body of which we all can be proud. His devotion to this ideal we feel approaches the courageous. His presidency began in a Senate that had a reputation for do-nothingness and absenteeism; a Senate with low prestige and lower morale. Starting right off, he gathered around himself people who could and would work for the aim to which he pledged himself, his personal magnetism building in them a fierce loyalty both to him and to the Senate as a whole. He stated in the beginning that "the Senate will roll, or heads will roll. Heads did roll, but so did the Senate, and in achieving this, Don brought the Senate back to respectability, his dynamic personality forging a new and vigorous Senate.

We shall long remember Don, especially his fairness even to those who opposed him throughout the year. He stands as an example—to the Senate, and to the student body as a whole—of a near perfect leader.

We would, therefore cite For Outstanding Service To The Student Body And The University Donald C. Cournoyer—Mr. Senate.

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW WITH PAUL THEROUX

The room is dimly lit. The air is pungent, heavy. On the wall pictures of Rodgers and Hammerstein, Gilbert and Sullivan, Hitler and Goebbels. Mr. Theroux, author of the new musical, "The Kidney-Shaped Heart," sits with a pink parasol in one hand and a cigarette. Near him is a stack of tobacco and some cigarette papers.

Q. Hi.
A. (languidly) Hi.
Q. I notice you roll your own.
A. I have to. It's marijuana.
Q. I came to ask you about your play.
A. Look, if you're from the Legion of Decency ...
Q. I'm not. I'm a reporter. I've got a job to do.
A. I'm a junkie.
Q. Mr. Theroux (assumes a pontifical tone), there are rumors that your play is obscene.
A. They can be substantiated very easily.
Q. There is also a rumor that lately you have been writing like Thomas Wolfe.
A. That is also true. I write standing up, as I'm sure you ...
Q. (interrupts) About the play. As I may have implied there seem to be many rumors about its content, the nature of ...
A. Of course I know there are a lot of rumors. I started them.
Q. I see. But getting back to the play, would you mind describing some of the characters. I hear they are pretty diverse.
A. Perverse would be a better word, if you want to know the truth.
Q. I see. As I understand it, Mr. Theroux, this year's Campus Varieties will be held off-campus May 3 and 4 at Amherst Regional High School. Is there any reason for this?
A. Not really. Although I must admit that there was some fear on the part of the administration that there would be picketting by the ROTC.
Q. Is this your first endeavor in the field of playwrighting?
A. No. Last year my play "The Catarrh is Strummed," was voted worst play of the year, while my story, "An Acute Case of Nausea," pulled a close second.
Q. Mr. Theroux, would you say that you are the type of person that likes to hear a good laugh now and then, that likes to see happy people, and that likes to chuckle a little now and then in privacy ...
A. Happiness is an oblique form of cancer.
Q. What about the University?
A. The University is an island, a womb, a hiatus. It is insulated, isolated and dehumanized. There is only a tiny slosh of activity. You will notice how cleverly I portray all of this in the various undertones, overtones, and undertows to my new musical comedy "The Kidney-Shaped ..."
Q. Who do you expect to attend this play, if that is what you ...
A. It's very simple. Sadists. I know at least a hundr ...
Q. In many of your statements you've said that you dislike the President of the United ...
A. I never used the word dislike. I said I abhor him and his whole ...
Q. Is there anyone else you would care to condemn at this moment?
A. Minority groups.
Q. Is there any justification for the length of this play?
A. Yes. It's a Passion Play.
Q. As a final question I would like to ask who you think is the greatest, most talented unknown writer in the country today?
A. Its' funny that you should ask me that ...

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To: James G. Medeiros, President, Class of 1964
Dear President Medeiros,

I would like to publicly extend my apology to you as President of the Class of 1964, and to members of the committees who have been inconvenienced or embarrassed by the necessary cancellation of plans for the Junior Class Picnic to be scheduled on Counseling Day. It seems only fair, however, that I should identify myself as the administrative person to whom you made critical reference in your letter to the Collegian on Friday, April 26th.

Through no fault of yours, I failed to understand clearly the nature of the request which you were making of me and as the course of our conversation proceeded from the rules surrounding Senior activities for Counseling Day and Senior Week, to those of the Junior class, I failed to make the necessary transition in my own thinking. It is not, unfortunately, possible for me to correct this confusion by granting the permission which you have requested in that the prohibition concerning all class activities on Counseling Day is a clear one established by the University and not within my jurisdiction to modify without my reference to the committee establishing the regulation. A review of the responsibilities of the members of the Junior class for counseling and pre-registration in the various departments indicates that the plans already made are such that it would not be possible to concentrate these for Juniors entirely in the morning period as you had suggested. It will, additionally, be necessary for all undergraduate students who are expecting to return in September, 1963, to be re-photographed for I.D. card purposes on this Counseling Day.

While I am unable to repair whatever damages may have been done in terms of lost time for members of the class, I will certainly endeavor in every way possible to aid in correcting with any contracting agencies any situation which is capable of being corrected, and to reduce, insofar as possible, any loss of money which the class may incur as a result of this confusion.

Sincerely yours,
William F. Field

Letter To The Editor:
Re: Modern Dance Concert Review:

Although the reviewer of the Modern Dance Concert stated in his review of April 29, 1963 that, "It is every difficult to narrow this great performance to a short review," I feel that he has overlooked many fine aspects of the Concert. I refer to the outstanding performance of Miss Liberman whose talent was perhaps unequaled. I also have reference to the error in the critique concerning the first dance, which was choreographed by Kathy Knowles and not Sherry Gilman. "Claws and Paws" was also superbly enacted. In the future, I hope that it will be the policy of the Collegian to author more competent reviews on its editorial page.

CAMPUS VARIETIES

This weekend will entail an achievement. An achievement which involved toil, ulcers, headaches, but most of all satisfaction. It all began when the Revelers decided to recontinue the annual Campus Varieties. In the past they had asked students to write the comedy since all the acting, directing, and producing is done by students, all of it. Paul Theroux whose interview appears on this page agreed to write the comedy.

The show "The Kidney-Shaped Heart" will be presented this Friday and Saturday nights at Amherst Regional High School. But what lies behind this production?

(1) Because of the growing administrative University Theatre, when the Revelers sought technicians they were frustrated. The theatre not only had a monopoly on technicians but they also had control of Bowker Auditorium. The Revelers had nowhere to turn on campus. They had to go off Campus.

(2) The Revelers were promised the full window in the Bookstore but they were told a few weeks ago that some one had forgotten about them. Now they are sharing it three ways.

(3) Both nights were supposedly open on HER weekend. But it seems now that Oscar Brand has been scheduled for Friday night when he was previously scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

One can sense a lack of concern for this only student run drama production. A hesitancy in helping these students who have been trying to bring to the University campus a diversity in Drama. The University is growing. In this process of growth it wants a Drama Department which is as it should be. No one can deny the fine performances that the University Theatre has put on.

Nevertheless as the campus grows, so will the need for groups of all creative natures. Why should the students be hampered in trying to add to the University? The more students that come to the campus, the more it will have to put on for them.

Then, as the student body grows many students will come to the campus seeking expression of their feelings. Having an opportunity to act in a play is very suitable. Why limit the number of drama groups?

Here is a performance written by the student, directed by students, produced by students, acted by students. Here is another outlet for creativity. Is this to be stifled? We think that it should not be hindered, stifled or done away with.

In spite of these obstacles the Revelers have encountered, the show will go on. It has persisted only through the efforts of dedicated students. We look forward to the performance this weekend.

Senate Passes Final 1963-64 Budgets Act

Last week, on April 24, the Student Senate passed the 1963-1964 Budgets act in its final form. The Budget itself runs to almost forty-six pages and covers the expenditure of approximately $152,000. Those organizations given the largest appropriations are the Index, the Fine Arts Council, and the Collegian. Fifteen other organizations comprise the remainder of the Act.

There have been a number of new additions to this Act. The most outstanding is the capital equipment fund enabling WMUA to install an almost completely new studio. Other features include the financial reorganization of loans, standard binding clauses concerning outside costs, and cuts in student activities tax, class tax, and senior tax.

The Budgets Committee devotes a staggering amount of time to the preparation of this Act. Composed of the chairman, five other Senate members, Senate Treasurer, and three non-Senate members, this committee devotes at least 600 hours to work in session and an equal amount of time to the private work of each individual preparing his assigned budget. Add to this the 300 hours of work by the chairman himself and one can see the care that goes into the formation of the Budgets Act.

Chairman Ross Jones has commended those members of his committee, both Senate and non-Senate, who have done such a fine job. He assigns success to a certain "tough - mindedness" about about the entire committee toward the work and he hopes that it will continue in the future to be as successful.

UMASS BOMBS TERRIERS: LARKIN, WOJNAR STAR

by ALAN RICE '66

The clutch hitting of Steve Wojnar and Pete Larkin accounted for five runs batted in Saturday in the Redmen's 9-4 rout of Boston University. Mass scored four runs in support of right hander Rod Corey in the first inning as a gift from the Terriers. Two walks, a hit batsman, a wild pitch, with a throwing error in for good measure were more than enough to give the UMass nine a quick advantage. A three base hit by Wojnar, the only lefty in the Mass starting lineup, knocked in one more tally in the third, and Pete Larkin's bases loaded double later in the game fattened the advantage over the Bostonians.

BU looked almost as sad at the plate as they did in the field, but Corey was wild enough to provide walkers in five different innings. The only long balls hit off the native of Grafton were a triple into deep right field by Dick Silva and a long fly that Wojnar pulled down in right.

Tony Simone began the first inning parade by walking on a three-two pitch and stealing second. He made it safely to third with a flying leap of a slide on a wild pitch by BU starter Pete Nish. With one out Williams walked and John Awdycki lined a single into right scoring Simone. Corky Schmoyer was hit with Nish's first serve to fill the bases, and Bob Hughes followed with a broken bat blooper to first. Rick Petrone made the play easily on Hughes, but he had a little more trouble trying for Williams at the plate. Tony scored when Petrone's throw sailed over catcher Al Comeau and to the backstop. Awdycki also came in and Schmoyer moved from first to third. After Comeau retrieved the ball, he made a wild heave to third trying for Corky, but there was no further advance. Wojnar batted Schmoyer across one out later with a single.

The second frame started out like it was going to mean even more problems for Nish, but his teammates pulled him out of it with a double play. Corey and Simone each reached on singles to right, and Larkin got a safe bunt. The ball went to the third base side of the mound, and Nish tried to make a play on Corey but was left holding the ball when he found nobody covering the hot corner sack. George Finnegan bailed Nish out of the jam when he fielded Tony Williams' bouncer near third and cut down Corey with a throw to the plate. Comeau relayed to first to get Williams, completing the twin killng. Johin Awdycki was thrown out by the shortstop to complete the three hit, no run inning.

After walking Larkin in the fourth, Nish toughened up and got the side on two flies and a bounder to third. The same old control problems came back in the following frame, though, and the Terrier righty did not last through the fifth. He got two outs before the bomb fell. Dave Krukonis walked on four pitches, Corey was beaned and took first, and Simone took ball four on a full count pitch. Larkin sent Nish on his way with a two base blast clearng the sacks and upping the UMass run total to nine. Mel Cornell came in to get Williams on a fly to left, and he set the side down in order in the sixth and seventh frames.

Ken Clark, who was sent in by Coach Lorden in the top of the eighth to replace Simone in left field, led off that inning with a one base hit to left center to become the first runner off the BU reliefer. Clark was safe at second when second baseman Steve Gordan missed the bag as pivot man on an attempted double play. Larkin reached first, but Clark was thrown out at third trying to stretch his luck. A double play killed off the scoring chance, however.

3 Mass Double Plays

Boston University reached Corey for the first time in the third when Silva tripled and scored on a line single to right. Two walks, two singles, a passed ball, and an error completed the BU run parade in the fifth. Corey surrendered hits in only two other innings, the first and ninth, when he was tagged for two. Three double plays kept him out of what could be worse trouble. Larkin, Williams, and Corey each started a twin kill with Schmoyer as the middle man in each one.

Yesterday's game was rained out and will be replayed this afternoon at Storrs, Connecticut instead of at Alumni Field as was scheduled. The May 13 make-up with UConn has been switched to UMass. Tomorrow Rhode Island will make its yearly appearance at the UMass field. Game time is 3 P.M.

Despite the 20 hits in the last two games, the Redmen pitching totals far outshine the hitting marks. Williams leads the stickers with .296 and Awdycki and Krukonis follow up with .250. After that the figures are low. Krukonis still has the only homer, his blast coming in the second Maine game. Williams and Wojnar each have triples, and

by JIM TRELEASE '63

If American settlers were awed by the sight of huge Paul Bunyan brandishing his axe out of the North, University of Massachusetts opponents were no less awed in 1958 when Lew Pia emerged from the northern Berkshires brandishing a superb high school pitching record, and, at 230 pounds, looking like Jackie Gleason in knickers.

Now, after three years of varsity action, the record books indicate the awe has not faded. The dexterous Pia has never lost a college game. His career record stands at 8-0; he has never given up more than six hits in one of those eight wins; and in his last three appearances Pia threw a one-hitter at Springfield College, and a pair of two-hitters to Maine and Amherst. But just as reluctant to fade is the debate that has defiantly followed Pia all his life: ability vs. luck.

More than half the story of Lew Pia is defiance. To begin with, he walks defiantly. Whether it's from the mound to the bench or between his college class, Pia strides with head back as though he just struck out the side at a major league All-Star game. Coupled with this gait is an apparent coolness between Pia and his teammates. Regarded as a "loner", Pia's off the field associations are seldom with diamonders. When he handed in his uniform in the middle of last season after compiling a 3-0 record in seven games, rumors sprang to life that his excuse of scholastic problems was a cover-up for a flaring war with team personnel. But when he decided to return to pitching in 1963, a private players' ballot opened the welcome door. The vote, however, may not have been for Lew so much as for his arm. And that's the way Pia likes it.

Lew Pia must also defy some law of nature by carrying 230 pounds to the mound.

"Lew is so big that batters are afraid even before he throws," explains team Captain Tony Williams, "and then he gives 'em that big wind-up." UMass pitcher Walt Crotty finds Lew's size an advantage in another respect: "It discourages the batter from leaning over the plate. He is definitely a low and outside pitcher. But his size discourages the batter from digging in or hanging over the plate. Consequently, he stands up straight and when the pitch is low and outside he must lunge down and across for it." As a final note on Pia's girth, when asked if Lew is the slowest man on his team, UMass Coach Earl Lorden replies, "No. That devil isn't the slowest . . . but I'd be hardpressed to find someone he could beat. From the twinkle in Lorden's eye one surmises that he wouldn't care if Pia looked like Haystack Calhoun as long as he kept throwing two-hitters.

As much of a factor in winning as Pia's portly proportions may be, there remains the evidence that his silent teammates consistently support his twirling with defensive gems in the field. The sure-handedness of Redmen infielders ranked them ninth in the nation on defense last season and this season they have committed even fewer errors.

To those who know him, Earl Lorden is a good natured, soft-spoken man who looks more like an English country squire than a baseball coach. But when college diamond coaches gather round their pot stoves each winter, they frequently ponder the rumor that Lorden cuts off a pitcher's finger for every digit in his earned-run-average. Be that true or false, Lew Pia's palms read five and five and his ERA this season reads 0.67.

This attitude about opponents crossing home plate has long characterized UMass teams. With a 1.85 ERA in 1961, Lorden's mound corps ranked second nationally.

According to some, the Pia of 1963 is faster and has a new knuckleball. According to his coach, "Pia wins because he's a smart pitcher. He never gives a guy the same pitch twice." According to others, "Once the opposition gets a look at him their second time around, he's through." To some, Lew Pia could become a great pitcher; to others, he has courted too long the diamond mistress called Luck.

After Pia's initial varsity season in 1961 (inaugurated by a two-hitter over Amherst, a few major league scouting hawks displayed interest in him. Last season a few more birds joined the roost until Pia experienced disastrous losing efforts in summer league play. And the roost turned bare quicker than you could say Jayne Mansfield. Only a miracle finale to his college career would earn another look from the majors. One-hitter; two-hitter; two-hitter. And the birds again are on the wing for those northern perches in Amherst. Since the Redbirds from St. Louis signed Fran Reil in 1939, the major leagues have signed six UMass pitchers, with Ralph Lumenti and Gerry Glynn picking up bonuses of more than $30 thousand apiece.

Meanwhile, Pia keeps counting his fingers. No one but "loner" Lew knows if he crosses them.

Lacrossmen Out Last Tufts, 13-9; Meet Amherst Today

Dieterle, Kezer, Sidelined For First Place Battle

by WALT GREEN '66

The University of Massachusetts lacrosse team brought home their seventh straight win of the season from Tufts Saturday with a come from behind 13-9 win. The game at Medford was perhaps the roughest contest that the Redmen have played this year.

High scorer from Tufts, Bobby Day, opened up the game with a goal at 3:46 in the first period, one of three acquired in that period as opposed to one by the Redmen. With Tufts leading one to nothing, Steve Harrington, came charging out from behind the Jumboes' goal, and on a great jump shot fired home the first and only Redman goal of the period. Tufts got their second goal at 11:01 on a play in front of the UMass goal, and their third goal came only nine seconds later on a play direct from the face off. So the period ended with the Redmen down three to one.

In the second period of play the UMass ten matched the Jumboes with three goals apiece. The Redmen wasted no time as Frank Infusino scored unassistedly at 0:20 on a single handed play directly from the face-off. Then Tufts scored at 2:11, but the boys came back with a fine set-up play by Gordy Webb and Steve Harrington less than a minute later, Webb scoring and the assist going to Harrington. Jim Mahoney scored again for UMass at 7:46 on an unassisted play, evening the score at four all. Tufts scored two fast goals within a minute to end the second period with the score: Tufts six and the Redmen four.

Steve Harrington fired home his second goal of the afternoon on a fine steal and pass by Frank Infusino to open the second half. Then at 4:14, Ron Chiras side armed one right on the mark to once again even the score, this time at six all. But Tufts wasn't standing still, and Judd and Millard scored two more Tufts goals at 5:18 and 8:00 respectively. Then the Redmen broke loose with three goals in the last five minutes of the third period with assists in all three cases by Co. Capt. Frank Gilliatt. The first of the three goals was by Steve Harrington, his third of the afternoon, and the other two were by senior John Prior. The third period ended with the Redmen in the lead.

The determined strength of the UMass ten seemed to be too much for the boys from Medford as the Redmen scored four goals as opposed to one for Tufts in the fourth period. The first was at 0:54 in the last period by high scorer Steve Harrington, the second at 4:10 by Ron Chiras, his second of the day, the third was by "middie" Joe Moro, and the last by Gilliatt—all of these goals were unassisted. The lone Tufts goal was at 8:18 but posed no threat since Mass was leading eleven to eight at the time. The final score UMass 13 and Tufts 9.

In the penalty department the Redmen acquired seven for a total of seven and one half minutes in the box and the Jumboes had thirteen for a total of thirteen and one half minutes in the box.

The win was a hard fought one for the Redmen who displayed their spirit by coming from behind so many times throughout the game.

In the words of Coach Garber, "We were just tickled to death to win this one, now we're looking forward to Amherst on Wednesday."

For the third straight year the University of Massachusetts and Amherst College lacrosse teams collide in a battle for first place in the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse League when the Redmen host the Lord Jeffs Wednesday at 3 p.m.

In 1961 UMass topped Amherst, 10-5, and went on to win the league title. Last spring both squads brought undefeated season's records into the battle and after a torrid 5-5 halftime tie Amherst broke loose to win 10-5 and capture the crown. The Redmen currently have a five-game winning streak and an overall mark of 7-1. In league play UMass is 5-0. Amherst stands 7-0 overall and boasts a 16-game winning streak.

Redmen Coach Dick Garber is pleased that the team has maintained its winning ways despite a long string of injuries. At least five Redmen will miss Wednesday's important game. Co-Capt. and defensive standout Dutch Dieterle (So. Attleboro) is out with a sprained ankle, and midfielders Ken Kezer (Waltham), Tom Brophy (Pittsfield), Fran Casey (Framingham) and Charles Glew (Framingham) are still on the sidelines with injuries.

Varsity Lacrosse stars who will lead the Redmen against the Lord Jeffs from Amherst are: Back row: John Kallio and Steve Harrington. Front: Ron Chiras and Frank Gilliatt.

Garber indicated his high-scoring attack unit of senior Don Tremblay (Lawrence), junior Steve Harrington (Milford) and senior Ron Chiras (Worcester) will start intact. Harrington, who scored four times at Tufts, leads with 15 goals and five assists. Tremblay has 12 goals and four assists and Chiras has nine goals and two assists.

The probable starting lineups:

Massachusetts (7-1)		Amherst College (7-0)
Dick Baird (Bedford)	Goalie	Jay Lord
Paul Majeski (Westfield)	Defense	Jim Bird
Jon Kallio (Westboro)	Defense	Moose Brainard
Tom Kirby (No. Adams)	Defense	Dave Savidge
Jerry Clinton (Cambridge)	Midfield	Rick Stauffer
Joe Moro (Milford)	Midfield	Dick Davidson
Frank Infusino (Hull)	Midfield	Steve Bryant
Steve Harrington (Milford)	Attack	Bob Probst
Ron Chiras (Worcester)	Attack	Howie Jones
Don Tremblay (Lawrence)	Attack	Steve Ellen

Larkin and Awdycki both own a pair of two baggers. Lew Pia has three wins and three complete games in the same number or starts. His ERA stands at 1.00 and he has given up only five hits in 27 innings. Wilson has a 2.21 ERA with 21 whiffs, four more than Pia. Corey has one win in one start and a six inning relief stint.

IFC BOWLING

Tau Epsilon Phi won the Inter-Fraternity Council bowling championships recently by beating Alpha Epsilon Pi in a game scored by total pinfall. TEP had a total of 1210 and AEPi had a score of 1146. High man in the game was Kenneth Wax of TEP with 321. Bob Ginsberg finished on top for the AEPi team with a 308 mark.

University Theatre's Final Production To Be "Murder In The Cathedral"

University Theatre's final performance this year is a first!

The academic theatre's staging of T.S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral, at Bowker Auditorium May 10 and 11, will be the first production of the drama in Pioneer Valley.

The poetic tragedy was written in 1935 by the famed poet-playwright for Britain's Canterbury Festival of that year. Set in 12th century Canterbury, the play revolves around the theme of conflict between Church and State and the murder of the Archbishop Thomas Beckett.

Actor Tom Kerrigan said this production "could be the best yet!"

It is, theatre area head Orville K. Larson said, "basically scenery, actors, words."

"It is a poetic drama—the scenery reflects this," said Larson, set designer for the show.

The scenery consists of nine arches, larger ones in front and others angled behind, with five stained glass windows expressive of a church-like atmosphere. The windows, though almost simple in appearance, are time-consuming in construction.

Work on Murder's sets and lighting is being done by students in University theatre courses and by others interested in theatre.

Among the students doing carpentry for the show will be Phil Weinman, Kate Wilson, Robert Kovolucci and Marcia Elasowich.

Working lights for the show will be Nurit Strauss, Deena Ferrigno, Norm Deane, Lang Reynolds and Charlotte Werlin.

Tickets will be available next week at the S.U. Ticket counter from 11 to 1 and from 2 to 4 daily; they will also be sold at the door.

Fife Defeats Clancy To Become Senate President

Redmen Win Again

Slightly disarrayed but jubilant, members of the Flying Redmen drill team hoist Team Commander Pete Cabana on their shoulders after their victory Saturday.

The U of Mass Champion Drill team, The Flying Redmen, captured their ninth victory in the recent drill competition held at Westover Air Force Base. The team, under the command of Cadet Lt. Col. Peter A. Cabana, was able to defeat Trinity College in an extremely close battle.

The morning elimination which ran from 8 a.m. to 12 noon found all but four of the teams eliminated. The teams that the Flying Redmen had to beat to maintain the trophy and hence retire it to the Cadet Headquarters were Tufts University, Manhattan College, and Trinity College.

As the teams went on the floor it soon became clear that Trinity was the top team and the one that the University would have to defeat. The Flying Redmen were last on the floor and after they completed their routine the scores were computed by the 8th Air Force NCO Academy who were the judges for the event. The final score saw UMass just able to defeat Trinity and win the competition.

The reviewing officer for the Drill Meet was Brig. General Alvin C. Gillem. General Gillem also presented the Team Commanders with the trophies for the job they had done.

The 8th Air Force Band provided the music for the colorful event.

Cadet Col. Philip T. LaRoche Cadet Colonal at the University was in charge of the review.

All Students To Be Photo'd For New ID's

As of September, 1963, the University of Massachusetts students will be issued new identification cards. This card will improve the service rendered to the student by the University. The card will be wallet size with a black-and-white picture of the student and identification information. With the proper equipment, the card can be used in credit machine identification.

Labuzoski, Hall, Jones Victorious

Jon Fife emerged victorious in Wednesday night's battle for the presidency of the Student Senate. Joan Labuzoski and Wendy Hall received unanimous votes for Vice President and Secretary, respectively, and Ross Jones was victor in a three cornered race for Treasurer.

In his nomination speech, Fife stated that he had considered the obligations of the office and was ready to assume them. He told the senators present that he will attempt "to not only bring the campus to the Senate, but also bring the Senate to the campus." Fife claimed that communication was one of the greatest problems faced by the Senate, and that if elected he would strive to correct this.

In his nomination speech, Fife's opponent Dave Clancy stressed his experience in the Senate, claiming that "ability and experience" was necessary for a successful president. He stated that "Senate experience is a good thing . . . one can't help but grow from it."

After much debate over the candidates' qualifications former president Don Cournoyer took the floor. "I remain uncommitted," he stated, "I feel that a successor to my position should be chosen by this body without any pressure from me. The only reason that the Senate ran so well in the past year, was to keep above campus politics. When you pick your president, you must feel him qualified to be president."

Shortly thereafter, the Senators were polled, the count taken, and Jon Fife became the president of the Student Senate.

Joan Labuzoski walked into the Vice-Presidential spot as did Wendy Hall into the Secretary's position. Both were elected by acclamation.

The race for Treasurer started out in a three cornered battle between Dick Boyden, Ross Jones, and Jim Watson. However, in the ensuing discussion, there ceased to be any contest evident, and Jones became Treasurer on the first ballot.

Peabody Encouraged Despite House Death Penalty Vote

by Peter S. Richards (UPI)

Gov. Endicott Peabody said today he was "encouraged" by the progress made over last year by the controversial bill abolishing the death penalty.

"We came close to touching the stars and I hope we have pointed the way to the rest of the country and to ourselves," the governor told his news conference.

Peabody was trying to throw off the effects of a severe cold and a resounding personal defeat suffered when the Democrat-dominated House denied approval to the death penalty abolition measure.

The emotion-charged bill, which had received near final approval in both branches, was torpedoed in a 124-108 roll call vote late Wednesday night when a half-dozen representatives finally were recorded or switched their votes against abolition.

"A week ago today I praised the House of Representatives for their action in approving the bill to abolish capital punishment. I commended them for enhancing the reputation of the Commonwealth as a leader in progressive, humane and sensible legislation.

"Today I would like to reiterate that praise for the members of the House who dedicated themselves on two long nights to the debate of this important problem. I am encouraged by the progress made over last year," the governor said.

He also complimented House Speaker John F. Thompson, D-Ludlow, for returning to the State House to lead the fight for the bill despite personal discomfort, and said that his position remained the same.

"We will not abandon our

SU Planning Committee Proposes Expansion

The Planning Committee for the Student Union has just released the details for expansion of the University of Massachusetts Student Union.

For three years a student-faculty committee, appointed by the President of the University, has considered the future needs of the Student Union based on the anticipated growth of enrollment. It is the feeling of this committee that the Student Union must be approximately doubled in size to approach the services that will be needed for the expanded enrollment.

The program just released calls for a new student activities area which would consist of the Student Senate, student publications, conference rooms, dark rooms, unassigned offices, organizational file room and work space, and student activities offices. This area will be able to be blocked off from the central building with its own outside access.

In another portion of the building it is possible that a full scale crafts and hobby shop, complete with student work room, will be made available. The present Hatch area will remain in its present location with the Food Service being removed to a new cafeteria. In addition, a second Coffee Shop will be made available with more catered dining room space and an all-purpose room which can be used for Food Service, informal dancing, jukebox, etc. The plans call for the Bookstore to be removed from its present location and greatly expanded to care for the ever increasing academic needs of the students. The Barber Shop will be enlarged and moved to a new location.

A complete new area for music listening, complete with listening booths, piano practice rooms and music group practice rooms are being planned. This area will be completed with a new browsing library which will provide a pleasant location for informal quiet reading. The present Games Area will remain in the basic location but with the billiard room and table tennis being doubled in size. The present program calls for a remote studio for WMUA. An interesting note in the new cafeteria will be the availability of small committee rooms which student and faculty organizations may reserve for noon time meetings. The Bookstore, student publications and student activities space, which would be vacated in the present building, would be reassigned to some administrative offices, meeting rooms, conference rooms and Games Area.

The Planning Committee feels that all urgency is needed in the completion of this addition. The Committee has gone on record as recommending complete air conditioning for the new addition and at least zones of the present building.

Former President Cournoyer has announced that the Student Senate, in cooperation with the Student Union Planning Committee, will hold open meetings where the need for Union Expansion and the program as detailed by the Planning Committee will be discussed. These meetings will be chaired by Miss Joan Werner, Student Senator, and will provide an opportunity for any student to ask questions, make suggestions or express opinion on the proposed addition. President Cournoyer has notified all campus organizations of the meeting and has requested each organization to send at least one representative to the meeting. All other interested

JUDGMENT

Phi Sigma Delta will soon appear before the Inter-Fraternity Council, which will pass judgment on the house regarding certain recent events.

The rules were violated by the fraternity, and it should be duly evaluated for its misdemeanors. However, Phi Sigma Delta should be punished only for its own wrongdoings and not for the failings, real or supposed, of the entire fraternity system. In other words, let us hope that the IFC will not see fit to use this one fraternity as a scapegoat.

Such action, while it might serve as a deterrent for a short time, would be grossly unjust.

Instead of punishing, the IFC should take this opportunity to institute preventive measures that would make such future occurrences impossible. The IFC must generate within the fraternities a feeling of responsibility which will make every fraternity accountable to the IFC and the University community for its actions.

Cacodyl

by NEAL ANDELMAN

Ed. Note: This, the latest of the Cacodyl columns, was written before Wednesday night's Senate Election. However, we feel it is still pertinent and useful.

Well good for you, Senator Fife. It's encouraging to see that at least one of the Senators had enough pride in that organization to defend it against slanderous attacks of yellow journalism. It is unfortunate for the Senate that your lines of defense were so shoddy, however due to the proximity of the Senate elections for President I feel that to attack a likely candidate such as you, Senator Fife, would be to interfere with elections, and I wouldn't want to do that. Besides, if the Senate Exec Committee has banned WMUA from covering the elections on live radio I am sure that they wouldn't want any interference from the press.

I would, in all humility, offer a few suggestions to the next president of the Senate. I offer these suggestions with the basic concept in mind that right now the Senate isn't doing very much aside from distributing some $150,000.

First I would suggest that the Student Senate, as the representative body of the students, take a more active role in deciding and disputing with administrative policy. Specific examples in this area are such policies as: scholarships, class size and distribution requirements. Scholarships, as a general field of inquiry, might include such specifics as Who is eligible for scholarships? Why are all the vending machines on campus (both men's and women's dorms) controlled by the men's physical education department with funds collected going towards men's scholarships? What is the ratio of academic to athletic scholarships? If these questions are not in the province of the Student Senate, then there is no point to the Senate's existence.

Certainly the Senators must be interested in these problems, so I would ask why no discussion of these important questions has been heard on the Senate floor?

Individual Senators speaking with individual members of the administration often will not accomplish more than satisfying their own curiosity. I would contend, however, that the Senators owe a greater responsibility to their constituency than that. A motion passed by the Student Senate regarding University policy can not be easily disregarded. The Student Senate has great power which is not being used.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Re: PFL on Modern Dance Concert Review

Perhaps, PFL, you have a perfect right to criticize the Collegian for a lack of accuracy in its review; but please, when you write, try to be accurate yourself. I am referring to your misspelling names. The choreographer of "Sur Les Pointes" was Cathy Noel. Cherie Gilman choreographed "Coming—Meeting—Parting". Both were excellent as was the whole concert.

Ignorance

To the Editor:

Re: Ignorance

Mr. DelVecchio, I'll only defend myself once. Irresponsibility is not as readily applied to mistakes in a letter to the editor as to comments made in complete ignorance of the main content of such a letter. You sir, have completely, and ignorantly, missed the point being made by this irrate student.

As correct as your statement may be concerning no accredidation of a 45 minute class period, you have missed my point of emphasizing organization and efficiency. My purpose sir, was not to submit a workable, alternate plan (I never said I had one), but to throw stones at the miserable one, acted on by the Faculty Senate.

My last, and most irrate comment in defense, is that you, Mr. DelVecchio, are the one, guilty of irresponsibility. First, by stating that the irresponsibility of letters constitutes not giving serious consideration to "Letters to the Editor," and second, by so ignorantly misunderstanding my comments on location of buildings, and layout of walks. You sir, in your comments, so obviously showed your ignorance of my educated design statements, and in your irresponsibility made no effort to enlighten yourself on: the implications of such statements; on my design philosophies; and most probably, on Landscape Architecture—what it is, what it does, and what it is going to do in the future of this campus, this nation, and the world.

If you sir, can indicate to me, a complete understanding of Landscape Architecture (which will take me a lifetime), I would be glad to listen, and so would the Department, and if you can interpret my philosophies accurately, I will be very much impressed. To add one further comment for future discussion from you or any other reader—this "campus greenry" you speak of, the campus pond, do not in themselves make this campus beautiful, and we in the Department of Landscape Architecture can, and wish to illustrate this, if the students and the administration are in disagreement.

To the Editor:

Re: Mr. Young

It is truly a shame that not more of your kind bothers to come backstage after concerts presented by the Concert Association to meet the artists. Without exception, each group of artists have praised the enthusiasm of the Amherst audiences.

The instance of having the audience distracting the whole program is especially noteworthy as the audience out of sheer pleasure disobeyed the format of the programs to interrupt Dr. Gilday and the Handel and Haydn Choral Society before the scheduled intermission. The Choral Society was testing (in some aspects) the audience to see if it would applaud when the Symhony Hall audience would. The Amherst audience, true to form with typical craving for classical music, broke the program exactly where the Symphony Hall audience did.

Can you think of a better impression of the sophistication of the student body or a greater manifestation of the integrity to the program as a whole?

KILL TENDERLY

by PAUL FRANK LEVY

"Rejoice not over thy greatest enemy being dead, but remember that we all die." (The Apocrypha, VIII, 7.)

The capital punishment controversy was resolved last Wednesday evening when the Massachusetts House in a 124-108 roll-call vote killed a bill which would have abolished capital punishment. Under the solicitations of Police Chiefs, the wavering support of the House finally supported the retention of Capital Punishment for Massachusetts.

One need not tax his mind to negate the need of capital punishment. The death penalty is positively injurious in its direct and indirect influences on society.

1. Laws at variance with public sentiment are confessedly inoperative and in proportion to the extent of that variance is the uncertainty of their execution. The action of juries, when death is at stake, is irregular—oscillating from mercy to the extreme opposite—an excessive leniency which grants unjust and unwise impunity to guilt followed by an excessive severity, which is hasty and rash in inflicting irredemable punishment upon innocence. Under the proposed reform, the action of the law would be more certain and uniform.

2. It is a great mistake to suppose that the fear of a possible chance of death—inevitable to all men—has often much effect in deterring men from an act to which they are impelled by any powerful passion or motive. There is nothing that men are constantly hazarding more thoughtlessly than their lives.

3. It is not necessary to kill a man who murders for the protection of society against the possible repetition of that act. Capital punishment multiplies the very crime it vainly seeks to prevent. It is founded on and sustained by a radical vicious principle, vengence, which itself is condemned by man's reason and philosophy of religion.

4. Lafayette declared, "I shall ask for the abolition of Capital Punishment until I have the infallibility of human judgment demonstrated to me." Lafayette refers to the numerous cases which appear in court in which the uncertainty of guilt is present. Present-day terminology of perjury and circumstantial evidence are all to well known and once again the irredemable nature of capital punishment is all too final. The abolition of capital punishment and the substitution of imprisonment, prevention, and reformation for life are necessary in the name of Judea-Christian ethics, civilization, reason, mercy, justice, expediency, and experience. In the words of Freidrick Nietsche, "One has never watched life very observantly if one has never seen the hand that—kills tenderly."

To the Editor:
Re: SPECIAL FORCES — THE FACTS

The recent (April 24) Collegian editorial entitled "Special Forces" treated its readers to a typical example of fact distortion, a technique extensively used in propaganda media. The article was so distant from the truth that it precludes a rebuttal. The purpose of this article is to simply present the facts concerning Special Forces for the edification of those members of the campus community who may not be aware of the mission of Special Forces and the nature of the training they receive.

The requirement for Special Forces is summarized in the letter, addressed to "The United States Army," by John F. Kennedy:

Another military dimension—"guerrilla warfare"—has necessarily been added to the American profession of arms. The literal translation of guerrilla warfare—"a little war"—is hardly applicable to this ancient, but at the same time, modern threat. I note that the Army has several terms which describe the various facets of the current struggle: wars of subversion, covert aggression, and, in broad professional terms, special warfare or unconventional warfare.

The mission of the Special Forces is "to teach (indigenous) counter guerrilla forces all the multiple skills these highly trained men have absorbed." An incidental but important function which has evolved from the activities of Special Forces teams in Southeast Asia is the introduction of modern medical practice in remote areas.

Here at the University the training program of the Bay State Special Forces has been developed by the student staff. Ninety percent of the instruction, including such subjects as judo, marksmanship, and mountaineering, is given by students. More than half of these student instructors are not enrolled in the ROTC program.

The 35 cadets in the unit, chosen from over 250 applicants represent a heterogeneous section of the campus society. Participants include both independents and members of about half of the Greek fraternities on campus. Majors from most schools of the University are included and their academic success ranges from those perennially on the Dean's List to those to whom each grading period is a crisis.

In Viet-Nam, these groups are assisting local forces in combating a tough, fanatical, and oft-times invisible foe. Eighty of these men have made the supreme sacrifice to help protect the as yet unutilized, perhaps unrealized, freedoms of a people with whom they have no cultural ties—other than the brotherhood of free man. The methods of the Viet-Cong—a branch of the omni-present International Communist movement—are so widely known and well documented that any listing of these would be redundant. An impartial examination of the situation in Southeast Asia would reveal a somewhat different locus of terrorism, torture, parasitism, and exploitation than that suggested in the recent Collegian editorial.

SWAP Plans Conference

MOUNT SNOW, WEST DOVER, VT.

Mt. Snow, the beautiful resort area in West Dover, Vt., will be the location of the Student Workshop on Activities' Problems Conference to be held on October 11 and 12, 1963.

The area was chosen because of its relative proximity to campus, its size and the excellent facilities.

On October 11, representatives from many organizations on campus will journey by bus to Mt. Snow where they will stay in the new Snow Lake Lodge. They will be accompanied by sixty administrators and faculty members, thereby facilitating informal interaction between the three groups. Here they will discuss many problems pertinent to the University, and freely ask questions of each other.

The planning committee is now in the process of contacting organizations for the names of their representatives. These delegates should be in an executive capacity within their organization and should be aware of their group's problems and campus problems in general.

Friday night, the conference will provide three keynote speakers who will present different views on the general theme "adopting the extracurriculum to an Expanding University." These three speakers will represent an off-campus, an administrative, and a faculty view. The names of these three speakers will be announced shortly.

Operetta Guild And Workshop Will Present The Music Man In Oct.

The Operetta Guild and the Opera Workshop, in association with the Department of Music, officially announce next fall's musical production: Meredith Willson's The Music Man, to be presented Oct. 31, Nov. 1, 2, and 3 in Bowker Theatre.

The Music Man claims the vitality and charm that marched it right into the hearts of Americans everywhere—in Broadway audiences, in movie theatres, on summer circuits, and in homes by record players.

Herbert Mongue, Business Manager of the Operetta Guild, comments, "The Music Man has it, from the first brassy note of the overture to the pulsating applause that accompanies the final curtain calls."

It is the story of Professor Harold Hill. When this con man extraordinary hit River City, Iowa, the staid old town began jumping and never stopped! Like a Pied Piper, Harold led the dazzled River Citizens on—into backing his dream of a miraculous band—and even into paying for it! Trouble was, Harold had no intention of producing any band—ever! The only one undazzled was Marian, the town librarian. She could see through him—she would expose him as a fraud, a phony, a fast-talking, slick cheat. But then Harold—and a big, shiny Iowa moon—got to her. And a girl can only do so much...

The story is delightful, the music unforgettable. From the rollicking "Ya Got Trouble" and "The Sadder But Wiser Girl" to the enchanting "Goodnight My Someone" and "Till There Was You" are more than a dozen songs filled with the spirit of Meredith Willson. His career is one of the outstanding success stories in the entertainment world today. He left his home town of Mason City, Iowa, in 1920, to pursue a musical career in New York, but he never really left Iowa behind him. He conducted, composed, performed, his childhood memories still alive—until finally in 1957 they took the shape of the Broadway musical comedy, The Music Man, starring Robert Preston.

Faculty Pair Wins U Bridge Tournament

The invitational and open Bridge Tournament of the University of Massachusetts was played on the afternoon of Saturday, April 27th, with twenty pair or ten tables in competition. An invitation was extended to bridge friends who have supported duplicate bridge at the University and to the faculty. A faculty pair from Engineering did accept and in spite of the fact that duplicate bridge is comparatively new for them, they carried off all honors. They were John Mohn and Daniel Sobala, who played East-West and came out with an 80% score (70% is considered amazing).

Pairs also had the privilege of indicating a dormitory, house or student organization to play for and if they won, that organization would be inscribed on the permanent trophy. The top student pair, however, were playing as independents so no such inscription will be made this year. The high scorers were:—

NORTH-SOUTH

1. S. Bowman & M. Stein 117½ pts.
2. R. Burt & C. Miller 106
3. J. Saltman & M. Rosen 105
4. J. Fitzgerald & J. Crawford 100½

EAST-WEST

1. L. Littlefield & R. Harvey 102½
2. S. Maskell & W. Boyle 95½
3. R. McLaughlin & S. Lipman 92½

40. A. Maltz & D. Ackerman 91½

The Thursday Game starting at 7:00 prompt and finishing about 10:00 will continue, the last game being Thursday, May 23rd.

Probably the most talked about board was one where all the players made a grand slam but only two pair were able to bid even a small slam. Here it is. Neither side is vulnerable and West is the dealer.

North S A, 3
H, A, J, 10, 5, 3
D, A, K, 5
C A, 9, 7

S Q, 8 — S K, J, 10, 7 2
H 8, 7, 6, 4 — H 9, 2
D Q, J, 9, 8, 2 — D 10, 7, 6, 4
C 10, 6 — C Q, 3

—	—	—	pass
1H (1)	pass	(2) 2C	pass
3NT (3)	pass	4C (4)	pass
5NT (5)	pass	6NT (6)	pass

(1) The hand is too strong for a 1NT and too weak for a 3NT. so open 1H and hope. (2) This hand is defensive and should not bid (but those that did threw a smoke screen against the slam. (3) Now the problem, you must show the true picture of the hand, 20 to 21 high card points, by jumping in NT and partner should not take it as a sign off. (4) The single diamond is a danger signal, he hasn't heard how good his partner's hearts are and his six card club suit is rebiddable, so I'd rebid my clubs and toss it back to partner. (5) Those who bid game in clubs needed a bit more faith in their partner. Six clubs is understandable but hearts or NT counts more at duplicate. There is no need to use Blackwood. I am looking at all the aces, so I bid 5NT saying to partner, "I control all suits, remember my heart bid, how good are your clubs, you decide." Now south's two kings become very significant and I'd bid 6NT (which was twice bid).

SORORITY NEWS

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

You may have seen more IGU pins than usual around campus lately. This is due to the initiation of our first pledge class. The initiates are: Bette Angell, Susan Bonelli, Judy Carr, Sandy Commons, Gerry Deriso, Evelyn Hanson, Joan Holland, Priscilla Hull, Helen Radowicz, and Brenda Youngston. We are proud to have them as sisters.

Iota Gam would like to sincerely thank Alpha Sig for the exchange supper. Everyone enjoyed it very much.

On April 28, 1963, Iota Gamma Upsilon held its first Parents' Tea in Memorial Hall. President Pat Genetti welcomed the parents and told them about what has gone on in our short history of one year. It was quite a success and we plan to make it an annual affair.

Congratulations to Pris Hull on receiving a PanHellenic Scholarship.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

An extensive and active pledge program has again been completed at Delta Nu Chapter. The final week of pledging, which is called Inspiration Week, came to a close with the annual Initiation Banquet held at Wiggin's Tavern Monday evening.

And now, Kappa Kappa Gamma is proud to present its new members who were initiated Saturday, April 27. They are: Judith Barry, Robin Judy Brown, Margery Frances Carlson, Mary Ann Carme, Claudia Anne Doerr, Janet Elizabeth Ford, Judith Dame Furnans, Susan Katherine Hajjar, Barbara Hursh, Michele Joan Holovak, Carol Lee Jarvela, Sharon Lee Kalfon, Janice Kwapien, Faith Leavett, Sally Minick, Mary Patricia McShane, Nancy Ann Oikelmus, Carol Ann Ricci, Ann Shulte, Patricia Diane Seibert, Elizabeth Van Gelder, Susan West, and Barbara Zaleski.

PI BETA PHI

The Pi Phi's are very busy this week planning for all the events to be crammed into the few remaining weeks of school. Our social chairman, Jan Rose, has planned a picnic at Look Park as part of HER week-end activities. Also coming up are Senior Banquet and a Mother's Day banquet.

We were very pleased to learn that two sisters, Joan Congdon and Terry Wright, will participate in the student exchange program. Both are planning to go to New Mexico.

The sisters and pledges of Pi Phi are very proud and happy to congratulate Bev Brent, Reveler; Marion Smith, Scroll; Pat Stankiewicz and Linda Schechterle, Mortar Boards; Trish Chase, Carol McDonough, Barb Viera and Bobbie Hanna, Who's Who; and Pat Simmonds, Counselor.

We also wish to extend our sincerest congratulations to all those who were honored at Student Leaders' Night.

SIGMA KAPPA

On April 22, Sigma Kappa had its steak and bean supper. This is a scholarship program initiated in 1962 to produce an incentive toward higher marks.

Those sisters who have achieved two points above their accumulative average the previous semester have the honor of eating steak, while the less fortunate sisters eat beans.

Mary Pat Carrol, scholarship chairman, added a new touch to the supper by passing out scrolls to those who had raised their cums.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

SDT held its annual mother-daughter banquet on Wednesday, April 24. This year it was modified into a less formal spaghetti dinner at the house. Each mother and daughter came dressed as twins and everyone enjoyed the party.

Our pledge class was initiated last Monday. They are: 1965, Patricia Flannagan and Janet Goldman; 1966, Leslie Arnold, Barbara Berkovitz, Susan Berkowitz, Louise Brown, Liz Cotton, Roberta Bernstein, Gail Fishman, Bev Finklestein, Joyce Gillman, Ann Kaplan, Karen Liner, Leslie Lazin, Lauren Mokaba, Gail Moseon, Linda Peterson, Rita Schwartz, Roberta Smith, Linda Schlesinger, Susan Tye, Betty Veneri.

We are proud of our sisters who were chosen as Student Leaders Wednesday evening. Tapped for Revelers were Harriet Finegold, Janet Goldman, and Judy Zenus; tapped for Scrolls were Leslie Arnold, Linda Peterson, and Betty Veneri; and tapped as Mortar Boards were Merry Arnold and Judy Rosenthal.

Congratulations also to our dorm counselors, Sandra Morse, Gail Freelander, and Jerry Searlman.

16 Frosh Girls Initiated By Alpha Lambda Delt

On Sunday, April 21, thirty-two proud parents watched their daughters become members of Alpha Lambda Delta, national scholastic honor society for freshmen women.

Resolution Honors UMass

Resolutions commemorating one hundred years of progress and development of the University were filed in the House of Representatives today by the Republican floor leader, Rep. Sidney Q. Curtiss of Sheffield.

The resolution filed by Curtiss outlined the history of the University from the granting of the charter one hundred years ago on April 29, 1863 to the Massachusetts Agricultural College and pointed to the increase in enrollment from the thirty four boys who commenced study there on October 2, 1867 until the change of name to Massachusetts State College in 1931.

Pointing out that "Progress in the expanded field in all levels of education resulted in a change of name again in 1947 to the present designation of the University of Massachusetts," the Curtiss resolutions commended the "corps of dedicated educators and student enrollment of highest calibre that has brought this institution of learning to the forefront in the nation."

Trackmen Overrun UConn, 81-53; Seven Records Fall

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity track team extended its unbeaten streak to three as the Redmen trampled the visiting UConn Huskies at Alumni Field by a score of 81-53.

Whenever these two teams get together, records seem destined to fall. In the indoor meet last winter, no less than seven records fell. Wednesday saw the fall of seven more.

Dick Ward had one of his most frustrating days ever. Dick ran into trouble in the sixteen pound hammer throw, and he had to make a safe toss of 169' 3" to qualify for the finals. In the finals, his foul trouble continued, and Sumoski of the Huskies set a Connecticut and meet record when he won with a toss of 170' 4". Ward then turned around and set a UMas record in the discuss with a toss of 141' 2". Continuing his onslaught on the record book, he set another Reman record in the shot put with a toss of 50' 7", only to be beaten by Sumoski again by nine inches for a meet record. Ward also won the high jump.

Not everyone was as frustrated as Dick, though. Ken O'Brien ran one of the fastest races of his life when he defeated Paul Oberg in the half-mile with a time of 1:53.6 for a meet record. Oberg led throughout the first quarter mile, and with 220 yards to go, he had a seven yard advantage. Ken slowly cut this down, until both runners were dead even coming off the last turn. O'Bie finally pulled ahead to win by a scant foot.

Craig Erikson continued to show great promise as he set a meet record in the 440 with a time of 51 seconds. Erikson also had to come from behind to win. Redman Bill Forand turned in a 51.5 to take third place.

Fred Lewis had another fine day as he won the 100 yard dash in ten seconds flat, which tied meet and Alumni field records, the broad jump (22' 3½"), and took third in the 220. Co-captain Loren Flagg took second in the 220 and third in the 100. Bob Brouillet remained undefeated in the mile (4:23.4) and the two-mile (9:51.3).

Dave Sadowsky won the pole vault with a leap of 12'6", good enough to tie the varsity and meet records. The Huskies took five firsts in the meet, as Sumoski accounted for two and Mel Parsons three.

Quad Meet Saturday

The Redmen put their record on the line in a quadrangular meet Saturday with Tufts, Bates and Northeastern. UMass will be out to avenge a Northeastern defeat during the indoor season. This will be the last home meet of the season.

Pia's Streak Ends At Eight; Huskies Shut Out Mass 5-0

by ALAN RICE

The streak of eight straight wins came to an end for Lew Pia Wednesday when Connecticut reached him for two hits and two walks good enough for three runs in the third inning. A first inning score and a homer by Doug King gave UConn a five run total behind the five hit shutout hurling of righthander Ed Jones who picked up his fifth win of the season and his third straight whitewash.

Two singles opened up the Connecticut first inning and the first run came on a long fly to right by Mike Haiday that scored Billy Robidoux. The ax fell on Pia in the third. Jones walked on four pitches and Robidoux who was on base every time up, reached safely on an error. The third sacker dropped a bunt in from of the mound, and Pia was charged with an error when his throw to first was a little behind Corky Schmoyer and bounced off the heel of his glove. Dorrie Jackson walked to fill the sacks. Pia threw two strikes past Doug King and it looked like he was over the hump, but King lined the third pitch into center that drove in two. Haiday finished Lew's stay on the hill with a base hit to right, knocking in King who took second on the throw to the plate and then went on to third when the throw bounced to the backstop. With one out Rod Corey came in and got Pete Mottla, another of the five sophomore Huskie starters, to force Haiday at second. A single by Rick Meisner passed Schmoyer at second provided no scoring, and the inning ended when Doug Gaffney went down swinging.

Corey gave up only three more hits the rest of the way. One was a long belt by King over the right field wall 340 feet from the plate. The homer upset Corey somewhat, and he took his anger out on the next three batters who each went out on strikes. Rod got the Huskies in order in the sixth, but they loaded the bases against him in the next inning without scoring. Robidoux tapped the ball between third and the mound and Corey had trouble picking the ball up. When he did, his throw sailed over John Awdycki's head. Robidoux wound up on second. Corey hit Jackson in the leg with a pitch and both runners were sacrificed along. Frank Bioni, hitting for Mottla, drew a walk on four pitches, but Corey got out of the mess when Steve Wojnar collared Meisner's drive to right.

Awdycki started off the Mass second inning with a single, and he moved to third on a sacrifice and an infield out. The Redmen didn't get a man as far as second again until the sixth. Tony Williams picked up two of the Mass one baggers, but he was forced at second both times on. Schmoyer grounded to second forcing Captain Tony in the fourth and Awdycki did the same in the sixth. Williams' hit in that frame came with two outs after Pete Larkin had drilled a single to center. Corey connected with a base hit in the eighth as the onl runner in the last three frames off Jones.

The Connecticut hurler did not have overbearing stuff, but his control was pinpoint. Not only did he not walk a man, but he was behind on only a half dozen batters the whole game and most of them were only one and nothing counts. It was the third win against only one loss in the Yankee Conference for UConn and Jones has all three victories. His overall record is 5-0, and his scoreless string in up to 32 innings without a run.

An early morning threat of rain cancelled yesterday's scheduled contest with Rhode Island at Alumni Field. The game will be made up May 20. Tomorrow the team faces New Hampshire at Durham. Dick Wilson will try to even the UMass conference mark at 2-2.

This Week In Redmen Sports

The University Athletic department has a full schedule on tap tomorrow. Baseball: varsity at New Hampshire, freshmen against Trinity, 2:30. Lacrosse at Holy Cross. Track: varsity and freshmen against Bates, Tufts, and Northeastern, 2:00. Tennis: varsity and freshmen against Connecticut, 2:00. Golf: varsity at R.P.I., freshmen at Williston Academy. Monday the baseball team travels to Williams and the golf team hosts New Hampshire at 10:30. Steve Kosakowski's Yankee Conference Championship tennis team meets Tufts here Tuesday at 3:00. Camp LeJeune provides the Alumni Field opposition for the varsity baseball team Wednesday while the freshmen nine is at Holy Cross. The lacrosse team and both varsity and freshmen golf teams are on the road that afternoon.

A Family Affair

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Those big, handsome chestnut three-year-olds have been swapping family albums and folklore over straw this week at Churchill Downs in Louisville and the coincidental resemblences took on all the marks of an old script from One Man's Family.

Louisville may be the racing capitol for Thoroughbreds but this year's Kentucky Derby owes its prestige to the city of Lexington, 85 miles away, and the year 1933. That year a 26-year-old Mormon cowboy and his kid brother ran off to Lexington with $600, lost all their clothes on the way south, bought eight Thoroughbreds, and arrived home so poor that their starving fillies and mares had eaten the roof off their trailer.

Thirteen years later, that cowboy, Rex Ellsworth, decided to strengthen his growing breeding stables with the purchase of a mare from the bloodlines in Europe—the Aga Khan's. Borrowing $160,000 Ellswoth took off to Europe and, upon arrival, promptly fell in love with a beautiful stud named Nasrullah. Aly Khan promptly said, "No deal!" Ellsworth's second choice was Khaled and he sold for all the borrowed 160,000 dollars. Exactly twenty years after that impoverished beginning in Lexington, Ellsworth witnessed the birth of a Khaled son with the ugly monicker of Swap.

While Ellsworth was building a racing kingdom in California, a Carolina horseman named Captain Harry F. Guggenheim talked Aly Khan into selling Ellsworth's love, Nasrullah. It is of minor note here to mention that the Captain also owned a baseball team in those days that ranked with the all-time worst—the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In 1955, Swaps brought Ellsworth his first Kentucky Derby win. Two years later, the Mormon sold a crippled Swaps for stud at $2 million. Swaps' new owners sent him to pasture in Lexington and in 1960 he sired a son, No Roberry, for Greentree Stables. Greentre's joint owners, brother and sister John Hay Whitney and Mrs. Joan Shipman Payson, flipped a coin to determine who would personally own the colt. The lady lost. Perhaps it was an indication of things to come for Joan Payson. One year later she bought a baseball team and two years later the team lost more games than any team in history and convincingly looked worse than the old Pirates. They were, of course, the N.Y. Mets.

In 1960, the year Swaps produced No Roberry, Guggenheim's Pirates won the World Championship and Nasrullah sired a son named Never Bend.

And finally, in 1960, the Ellsworth stables nonchallantly marked the birth of 135 foals, one of which drew immediate attention because of the clownish white spots across his hind quarters. He looked like he'd just sat down on a box of vanilla taffey; so they called him Candy Spots.

There will be no swapping of family lore this Saturday when Candy Spots, Never Bend, and No Roberry lead the entrants to the post at Churchill Downs while the orchestra strikes up "My Old Kentucky Home." With $125,000 at stake, the three are expected to perform with business-like precision before the mint-julip sipping 100,000 spectators.

No Roberry, who recently ran the fastest mile ever run by a three-year-old in New York State, is expected to take an early lead under jockey Johnny Rotz. Pressing in the mind of this undefeated bay's followers are: 1) No Roberry, by tradition, is a delinquent individual who hates the rail and who does more erratic wandering over a track than Caroline ever could in the White House; 2) No Roberry rebels at punishment from the whip; and 3) as winner of the Derby test Wood Memorial two weeks ago, No Roberry must break a 17 year jinx over Wood winners at Derbytown.

Following closely behind No Robbery at the start should be Never Bend, under temperamental Manuel Ycaza. In last year's Arlington-Washington Futurity, Candy Spots edged out Never Bend while Ycaza futilely screamed foul on one of Ellsworth's jockeys. In the 89 year history of the classic War for the Roses, only one horse has entered with fewer than ten starts to his credit and still won the Derby—Swaps. Though the only one of the big three with defeat (2) to his name, Never Bend has started 14 times; Candy Spots six times; and No Robbery five times. Experience is Never Bend's and so are $502,485 worth of earnings, tops among all entrants. But a Derby victory has never been Ycaza's in four starts (last year with favored Ridan). The fiery Panamanian has more racing suspensions than Ellsworth's colt has spots and appears to coincide with trouble.

The undefeated Candy Spots, a 6-5 book favorite, enters the Derby representing the world's largest active racing stable (Ellsworth's) and will perform under the hands of the world's greatest active jockey, Willie Shoemaker. A slow starter, Candy Spots is expected to finish strong and amuse himself by watching No Robbery and Never Bend fight each other the first half. At first glance, Candy Spots would be a "shoe-in" for the wreath of roses except for the fact that he is undefeated and someone once noticed that he has large ankles. Ordinarily this combination would prove insignificant. However, a wonderful horse named Native Dancer entered the 1953 Derby also with large ankles and an undefeated record. That Saturday afternoon an unknown colt named Dark Star stole the Dancer's thunder, roses, and $90,000 for his owner Captain Harry Guggenheim. There is nothing "unknown" about the good Captain's entree in 1963.

You can't find a room in Louisville this weekend for a single night's stay; you must take it for three nights and the cheapest prices have risen from $9 to $120. This weekend, the ten minute taxi ride from Louisville center to the twin spires of Churchill Downs costs $20. The Kentucky Colonels expect to see one of the greatest Derbies of all time this Saturday.

Chances are their winner will be Candy Spots or Never Bend or No Robbery and, to quote the playwright of Kings on the sport of Kings, he'll finish "Between two horses, which doth bear him best."

Lacrossemen Down Jeffs 8-6; Take Over First Place

Tremblay Scores Three, Mass Takes Eight In Row

by WALT GREEN '66

The University of Massachusetts lacrosse team remained in first place in the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse League with a very impressive win over Amherst College here Wednesday by a score of eight to six. Amherst, perhaps the favorite, could not outsmart the sharp UMass defenses as they thought they might, nor could they initiate their powerful second half offense. This was the greatest victory for the Redmen so far this season and perhaps the greatest in the past two years since the Redmen beat Amherst for the title in 1961. Both teams were really "up" for this one, as they both were putting unblemished league records on the line.

No time was wasted as attackman Steve Harrington dodged and faked all the way in for the goal on a hard thrown bounce shot from in front of the goal, at 1:09. At 4:26, Jones scored for Amherst on a fine pass from a fellow attackman, but the Redmen dominated the rest of the first period, though and the second of the three first period goals by the Redmen came at 10:18. Frank Gilliatt took the ball and went all the way for a goal, that the Amherst goalie never saw. With only nine seconds left in the period, senior Don Tremblay took the ball off side from behind the Amherst goal. He faked, dodged, and rolled around the corner of the net and fired home the third and final UMass goal of the period.

The scoring for the second period was reversed. The Redmen scored only one goal and this time it was Amherst who scored the three. Don Tremblay came from behind and fired home the goal right into the corner of the net at 7:16. The Lord Jeffs took advantage of a penalty at 8:53 and Co-Capt. Davidson scored on a side arm shot from Probst. Then again at 11:00 "Speedy" Stauffer scored on a clear shot from in front of the goal and Probst scored the third goal of the period, again while Mass was one man down.

The Redmen came back fired up and intent on a win and they shut out the Jeffs while scoring two goals themselves. The first Redmen goal of the period came at 6:20 when senior John Prior scored the equalizer. The second goal was by Frank Infusino, was really deserved one. It came at 8:20 from right out in front. A perfect shot right by the goalie. And thus the third quarter closed with the Redmen one up six to five.

Don Tremblay moves with ball past fallen Amherst defenders seconds before scoring his third goal of the 8-6 victory.

At 2:16, as the fourth quarter opened, Don Tremblay spotted John Prior in the clear out front and a perfect pass saw John whip it right in for the seventh Redmen goal. Then Amherst caught the Redmen by surprise, and only fourteen seconds later "Speedy" Stauffer popped on in from the corner with a goal. The Redmen defences were tough and the offense fast and so the boys from UMass controlled the ball as best they could, nevertheless Amherst did gain possession and threaten seriously, but only to be stifled by the Redmen defense. As the final few minutes ticked away, Amherst tried frantically to get the ball, but the UMass "middies" were too fast. Then Tremblay did it again! He got possession, faked out two Amherst defenders and fired home the insurance goal for the Redmen, at 14:40. Frank Infusino came up with the final face-off and ran out the final few seconds. The gun went off and the game was theirs. Coach Dick Garber leaped into the air and shouted, "One heck of a lacrosse game."

The whole team functioned very well exhibiting all the spirit, and drive that has accompanied the tradition of the Redmen. Don Tremblay played a tremendous game with three goals and on assist. He constantly out witted the Amherst defense and figured in a great number of UMass scoring attempts. FGrank Gilliatt scored only one goal but nevertheless he played one of his best games of the season. He got beautiful "shovel" and side arm shots but could ripple the net but once. On backing up and recovering the ball he was excellent. Junior, Steve Harrington, who scored the first goal of the game seemed to be held in check by the Amherst defenses as they often double teamed him after that quick first period goal. Senior John Prior played his usual great game. Seemingly outside and away from the play he scored twice by breaking toward the goal, taking the pass from behind the net, and then drilling it straight in.

At midfield there was Frank Infusino displaying outstanding feats of energy and lacrosse know how. Not only did he come up with nearly all the face-offs but he also stole the ball on countless occasions and aptly cleared it across the line. Jerry Clinton also played well evading the defense and figuring in many UMass attacks.

Even more more effective than the offense was the Redmen defense. The Lord Jeffs had considerable trouble getting by Paul Majeski, Tom Kirby, and Jon Kallio. At least half of the Amherst attacks were broken up by this defense. Jon Kallio has been playing fine lacrosse and earned himself a starting birth. The combination of Kirby and Majeski are self explanatory. Dick Baird whose been in the goal for the Redmen most of the season also did a good job and seems to be getting back in the "groove."

All in all Garber's men have done excellent in spite of all the injuries that have been incurred. The team is in fine shape to meet Holy Cross away this Saturday and should come back with a win if they display the same spirit shown so far this season. Coach Garber certainly has done an excellent job at filling the holes left by injured stars. "This was the one to win," he said, "and now we are on our way to Worcester to see if we can duplicate it. The "Cross" is almost as powerful as Amherst but I'm confident the Redmen can win."

Amherst College finds Paul Majeski as tough to stop carrying a lacrosse ball as he was last fall with a football. "Ski" has been a standout on defense all season.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

UMass Trains Congolese In Tax Administration

The University of Massachusetts, through its Bureau of Government Research, is cooperating with the U.S. State Department's Agency for International Development (AID) program by training seven leading Congolese fiscal experts in tax administration.

Bureau director William G. O'Hare, Jr., and Dr. John W. Ryan, secretary of the University, are coordinating the program, now in its fifth week.

In addition to the Bureau's staff of Edwin A. Gere, Jr., Robert A. Shanley and Margaret N. Medders, Western Massachusetts civic officials are helping to instruct the Congolese finance officers.

So far, the group has heard lectures on public finance from Bay State officials, visited Western Massachusetts cities to observe procedures in local taxation, and covered auditing and accounting of public funds.

During a week-long visit to Boston, the Congolese heard addresses from Governor Endicott Peabody, Senate President John E. Powers, Secretary of State Kevin H. White and Attorney General Edward Brooke.

The David Taylor Model Basin – a complex of four laboratories occupying 186 acres in a desirable suburb of Washington, D. C. – is an advanced facility for fundamental and applied research into SUBMARINE, SURFACE SHIP, AIRCRAFT and MISSILE design concepts; applied mathematics and operations research; and the design and development of related instrumentation. Each of these laboratories – HYDROMECHANICS, AERODYNAMICS, STRUCTURAL MECHANICS and APPLIED MATHEMATICS – is supported by some of the most advanced (and oftentimes only) facilities of their kind. There are large Towing Basins – one more than half-a-mile long for prolonged towing, another for testing hydrofoil and hydroskimmers at high speeds, and still another for generating violent environmental conditions . . . high-speed computer systems . . . means for conducting R & D on submarine structures at great depths . . . a wide range of vibration generators for ship structures . . . several wind tunnels ranging from subsonic to hypersonic velocities . . . and especially-equipped sea-going laboratories for full scale study in the field of weapons effects, vibrations, acoustics, flow, etc.

Thus, The Model Basin offers outstanding career development opportunities in each of these four laboratory areas. Planned professional development programs provide financial assistance and every encouragement to obtain advanced degrees. Several local colleges and universities are close by, and participate in these programs . . . with many classes conducted right at The Model Basin.

All career positions include the many real benefits of Career Civil Service . . . 3 weeks paid vacation (4 weeks after three years), 8 paid holidays and 13 days sick leave each year, partly-paid group life and medical insurance, and unusually favorable retirement policies.

Debate Team Places High In New York

Last weekend the Debating Society ended its most active year by placing high in the N.Y.U. Spring Forensic Festival. The University was represented by Steve Jenkins and Mike Farrell on the negative, and John Morton and Mike Feer debating affirmative. The results of the tournament were excellent, with the affirmative winning two and dropping two, while the negative won three out of four rounds. The combined record was five wins and three loses, tied the university for tenth place out of forty-one competing schools.

In the individual speaking contests the results were ever better. John Morton placed eighth out of fifty-nine entries in the persuasive speaking contest. In the after-dinner speaking contests the results were even better as Steve Jenkins was ranked sixth out of fifty-nine speakers.

On April 20th the university scored another victory when Mike Farrell took second place negative honors at the Mt. Holyoke Debate Tourney.

faith in the fundamental need for abolition of capital punishment in this Commonwealth," Peabody said. Peabody said he felt there was "a chance" that the House would reconsider its action and said Wednesday night's showdown represented "a very good effort on the part of everyone involved . . . we've come closer than ever before."

Defeat of the bill, never before give even initial approval, was considered a stunning setback for the prestige of the governor and speaker Thompson, both of whom had put the full force of their offices behind abolition and had remained in the State House through the fight despite personal illness.

Redmen Marching Band Makes New Plans Next Year

With the making of new plans for next year's Redmen Marching Band Season, an old tradition is broken. Metawampee will no longer lead the band, but will rally among the students. As the legendery hero of the University of Massachusetts, Metwampee will be the symbol of the Redmen spirit at all football games. It has not yet been decided who Metawampee will be. The choice will be up to the Revelers and the Redmen Band Staff.

Bruce Cutter '66 has been selected as drum major of the Redmen Band. The other new staff members have been selected and are busy with plans for next year. They are:

Largest Parade In UM's History To Honor Centennial

by DAVE HARACZ '65

T. S. Eliot claims that the world ends "not with a bang but a whimper," but not so the UMass Centennial Year. By far the most spectacular of the year's centennial events will be the Centennial Parade, which will wind its way from the Amherst College campus to the University campus this Sunday.

The "bang" in the Centennial Parade will be provided by at least 20 bands, among which will be some seven or eight professional drum and bugle corps, the Monarch Drum and Bugle Corps of Pittsfield and the Simplex Minute Men being representative, and the 60 member Fitchburg High School Marching Band which last year participated in the Rose Bowl Parade. Other bands marching will be St. Mary's Band of Westfield, the Amherst Regional High School Band, and the Turners Falls High School Band.

Another feature of the parade will be a bevy of queens from the University and surrounding areas. A partial list includes four UMass queens (Homecoming, Military Ball, Winter Carnival, and Greek Ball), Miss Bonnie Page, queen of the 1962 Amherst Community Fair, and three Miss Springfield's.

The University military department will be represented by a color guard of four mounted ROTC students in period uniforms leading a contingent of 60 Special Forces cadets. Also marching will be the Flying Redmen, UMass champion drill team just back from capturing their ninth victory in competition at Westover Air Force Base.

Also marching from the University will be the members of Adelphia, Maroon Keys, Scrolls, Revelers, and Precisionettes. The Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council each plan to enter floats.

The Amherst division is expected to contain 60 units, among which will be the Amherst Odd Fellows and a special group of four units entered by the Amherst Fire Department. Each of the four units will consist of a piece of firefighting equipment representative of that used in battling four fires at the University in the past hundred years.

The parade will assemble in the vicinity of Pratt Field on the Amherst College campus in four divisions, the first including such notables as the governor's representatives, University President Lederle and college presidents, Representative James Nolan of the Hampshire District, State Senator Bisbee, and others. The second division will consist of units from Amherst and Amherst College, the third of units from outlying towns and colleges, and the fourth of units from the University itself.

REACT (Radio Emergency Associated Citizens Team) will assist floats in getting to the assembly area as easily as possible, and workers from Alpha Phi Omega, the men's service fraternity, will assist in the lining up of units in their places in the line of march. Along the route, 15 members of REACT with walkie talkies will direct the units and, through their headquarters at Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity on North Pleasant St., inform the reviewing stand of any changes in the order of units.

Beginning at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, the parade will move from the Amherst College campus through Amherst center, down North Pleasant St. to the University campus. There it will turn onto Ellis Drive and pass the reviewing stand in front of Memorial Hall before dispersing in the parking lot behind Goessman Laboratory.

Bill Smidt, Centennial Parade Chairman, describes the long-planned parade as the biggest in University history and says its purpose is to "publicise throughout Massachusetts the high de-

President Of UNH To Speak At Honor's Day Convocation

The University of Massachusetts will honor its outstanding scholars at a special convocation to be held at 11 a.m. on Thursday, May 9, in the Student Union ballroom.

Main speaker at the event will be Dr. John W. McConnell, president of the University of New Hampshire. All students are invited to attend this all-important honors program.

An annual event, this year's Honors Day Convocation is part of the year-long Centennial observance. The Convocation provides special recognition for students whose scholastic attainments qualify them for membership in various national honor societies as well as for awards made the University.

The program in the S.U. Ballroom will be preceded by an academic procession from South College to the Union. The procession will be led by President Lederle and the main speaker, Dr. McConnell. Master of ceremonies at the Honors Day Convocation will be Provost Gilbert L. Woodside. Dr. Louis Greenbaum, Director of Honors, will call the roll of students admitted to honor societies.

A highlight of the convocation will be the naming of the Phi Beta Kappa Scholar. Although the University does not have a regular Phi Beta Kappa chapter, it is permitted to name one senior in the arts and sciences curriculum as top-ranking scholar at each commencement.

Phi Kappa Phi Scholars will also be named for each class at the University. Phi Kappa Phi is a national scholastic honor society which recognizes major achievement in any field. In addition to the initiates who will be tapped for the society, four or more scholars will receive special recognition as the highest ranking students in their respective classes.

Other societies recognizing outstanding students in particular fields are Tau Beta Pi, engineering; Omicron Nu, home economics; Alpha Zeta, agriculture; and Beta Gamma Sigma, business administration. In addition, Sigma Xi, national science honor society, will admit faculty members and students into the society.

Freshmen with distinguished scholastic records will be admitted for membership in Phi Eta Sigma (for men) and Alpha

US Asks Russia For Private Disarmament Talks

GENEVA UPI — The United States called on the Soviet Union Saturday to join in private discussion outside the 17-nation disarmament conference of measures to avoid the risk of war.

U.S. Ambassador Charles C. Stelle told the conference more could be accomplished in this field through direct U.S.-Soviet talks than in propaganda—filled statements at the conference.

Stelle also demanded the Russians negotiate properly and stop using the conference for a "rising chant of abuse" against the West.

Soviet negotiator Semyon K. Tsarapkin gave little hope for acceptance of Stelle's suggestions. He said he would "continue to spare no effort to unmask the Western powers."

"When we compare what is being said by the West here with events outside the conference, it is clear that the West is interested in war preparation and not in disarmament," he said.

He called the establishment of a hot line between Russia and Moscow, and a U.S. proposal for an exchange of military missions, "trifles which cannot halt the world in its present dangerous course."

The conference has been stymied for weeks, and Stelle's proposal today was an attempt to get some movement.

WMUA Presents Special News Program Tonight

WMUA will present "News Media: Competition or Complements?" on its Monday night program Topics. Williams To Lecture On T.S. Elliot

"Thomas a Beckett: Royal Power vs. Papal Power" will be the topic of a lecture Thursday by Professor Schafer Williams of the University's Department of History.

The talk, given in conjunction with the University Theatre's weekend production of T. S. Eliot's Murder In The Cathedral, will be at 4 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The theme of Murder revolves around the conflict between Church and State and the implication of the murder of the Archbishop Thomas a Beckett. The play is set in 12th century Canterbury, England.

Professor Williams, in his third year as Professor of History at UMass, has published a variety of articles on the history of medieval canon law.

He has received his A.B. in Philosophy and Classics at Harvard, his M.A. in Political Science from Harvard, and his S.T.B. from Harvard Divinity School.

Professor Williams has a Ph.D. from the University of California at Berkeley and has done graduate study with the law faculty at the University of Paris.

In writing Murder, Eliot retreated to the style of Periclean Greece to reach the heights of poetic drama. The model for the play is found in the early plays of the Greek playwright Aeschylus.

Like early Greek drama, Murder In the Cathedral employs a chorus, liturgical material and a traditional story—the murder and martyrdom of Thomas a Beckett.

Tickets for Murder, to be performed at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings, May 10 and 11, will be on sale this week at the S.U. ticket counter from 11 to 1 and from 2 to 4 daily and will be available at the door.

Two English Professors Receive Fulbright Grants

Two members of the English department at the University, Professor Sidney Kaplan and Assistant Professor Marc Ratner, have been awarded Fulbright grants to teach in Europe next year.

Dr. Kaplan, co-editor of the Massachusetts Review, will lecture on American literature at the University of Thessalonike in Greece.

Dr. Ratner will lecture on the American short story and novella and conduct seminars on specific American writers at the Amerika Institut of Goethe Universitat in Frankfurt, Germany.

Dr. Kaplan has been on the University faculty since 1946. He graduated from the City College of New York, received his master's degree at Boston University and his Ph.D. from Harvard University.

He is a member of the American Studies Association and the Melville Society. Editor of works by Melville and Poe, Dr. Kaplan has also contributed articles on American literature and history to major scholarly journals.

Dr. Ratner graduated from Fordham University, received his master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania and his Ph.D. from New York University.

Before coming to the University in 1960, he taught at New York University and the University of Colorado.

A member of the Modern Language Association and the Scandinavian Studies Association, Dr. Ratner has written articles for "American Literature," the "New England Quarterly" and other journals.

Optimistic Trend

It is heartening to notice an optimistic trend in the Senior Men's Honor Society. The combined average of the seven newly tapped juniors is a 2.83. It was only last year that Adelphia admitted to its society those students in the top one third of their class.

In the University emphasis must be placed on an individual's academic discipline and achievement. Certainly academic achievement is not the final answer. However it is indicative of a person's ability to apply himself to an aspect of his life's work. No matter how much value we place on extracurricular events, we must come to the conclusion that we have come to the University to become rational educated human beings. To transmit and further knowledge is the primary purpose of the University. Certainly a man's intellectual value is as important as his social value.

However, to judge a person's intellectualosity by his academic cume certainly isn't complete. Perhaps his intellectual interests and desires are more suitable criteria. Does he have an inquiring mind? Does he wish not only to learn the material in his books but to gain insights with the people with which he associates? These questions are all important in judging whether a man can guide or lead, with which in turn Adelphia is concerned.

We look forward to an emphasis on academic interest not only in Adelphia but perhaps in other honorary societies such as the Maroon Key. As freshmen become involved in University life, a respect for the intellectual can be encouraged in this way. —G.M.

RIDE THE PALE HORSES

by JOHN B. CHILDS

The troop of pale horses led by the master of the black reaper the riders' eyes guided by his black banner Death is in the scabbards and death is on the helms of those who ride the pale horses.
—Ballad of the Pale Horses

We can say much of human life with statistics. The patterns of man's movements may be charted with figures and formula. So it is that many listen and agree with those who point out that figures show no deterent quality in the death penalty. But statistics fly as dust before the wind and others cite figures to show there does exist a deterent quality . . . and in the swirling of formula and figure the flesh and the blood of man is often neglected.

Representative Toomey (D-Cambridge) has stated of the proposal to abolish the death penalty, "This is a bill that strikes at the protection of the men and women and children of the Commonwealth . . . this is an invitation to murder." Representative Toomey rises in indignation against the takers of human life, it is right that he should do so.

Yet what is this we see? Representative Toomey so indignant over the destruction of life suddenly becames the very advocate of that destruction. The preacher of hatred against the taking of life advocates the taking of life to support his sermon. This basic inconsistency rots away at the foundations of the death penalty. Those who advocate the death penalty thus stand astride two grim horns of a morbid dilemma.

Those who ride the pale horses; those who would take human life be they "murderers" or "executioners" are all guided by the black banner and led by the master of the black reaper. He is not a pleasant master to follow . . . however, the 124 legislators of Massachusetts who voted against the abolition of the death penalty now ride the pale horses.

STUDENT SENATE

To the Editor:

It appears that The Student Senate is not in pain—unfortunately.

The Senate confuses its role in RSO financing when it tries to finance only what it (the Senate) can control. The control lies within the organization and its Senate approved constitution. Activities such as concerts and competitions should be sponsored by the respective organizations and financed by the Senate if they merit it. The Senate shouldn't try to live on the success of such organizations as The Musigals or the Distinguished Visitors Program even if they are financed by the Senate. Students aren't blind to the Senate's ways. This is one reason the students place so little effort in Senate activities.

The mention of Senate support for the Collegian UPI service implies the control of the Senate over the Collegian. Neal Andelman, along with other members of the Collegian, initiated the idea for UPI service and got support for its trial while at SWAP. This certainly isn't Senate initiative. Our past Senate president has twice asked "Is the Collegian printing the right kind of news?" First he asked the senate last year during the period that budgets were up for approval and a second time while he was at SWAP. They decided the Collegian was doing the best it could.

Don Cournoyer offered to have a Senate committee help establish a news gathering service which would serve WMUA and the Collegian and which would be kept active by the members of this committee. His offer was gladly accepted by WMUA and the Collegian. Where are the results? Has the Senate followed through with this important plan of last September? The Collegian and WMUA are still in the old news rut. A year has passed and the Senate plods along. It is too bad they will leave the same old problems for next year's Senate.

Mr. Andelman, it appears, has not ". . . forgotten the initiative shown by the Senate . . ." He is rather well informed about the Senate and should continue pushing for a Senate house cleaning.

CODICIL

To the Editor:

I take exception to Neal Andelman's view of the Student Senate which appeared in the April 17 issue of the Collegian. I cannot believe that Mr. Andelman does not know better than to denounce the non-tax functions of the Senate. The committees and various legislative bills are necessary and important functions of a legislative body. Or would he have Congress spend all its time allocating money?

As an example: If the women on the campus were aware of the relationship between the Women's Affairs Committee and Dean Curtis, I feel sure that they would be in the Senate office expressing their views seven days a week. For many of these committes have the "ear" of the powers that be.

In my all-to-brief tenure in the Senate I was impressed by and proud of my position. Perhaps there are a few who did not feel this way. This I don't know. But I do know that the better than $100,000 which the Senate apportions from the activities tax is vigorously "argued over." How can one quarrel with this? Yes, there is turmoil and shouting and debate, but it is a part of the legislative function. If there was no argument, there would be no need for a Senate.

But, as Mr. Andelman pointed out, the argument can get out of hand. Often the Senate becomes wrapped in its rules, and thus bound, it deteriorates into 40-odd young people playing with tradition and order. Usually 20 disrupting the order and 20 trying to make order. There is no need for this.

Perhaps a committee could be formed to establish "floor standards" in the Senate. But this is really not necessary. If the same courtesy and comaraderie which manifests itself off the floor could be carried into the Senate chambers, there would be no need for standards.

Alexander Pope described the other difficulty in his Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, "Prologue to the Satires." It was and perhaps is my own contribution:

"By flatterers besieged,
And so obliging that he ne'er oblig'd;
Like Cato, give his senate laws,
And sit attentive to his own applause."

From what I have read, the Senate has been doing a fine job this year. Congratulations to them, and to Mr. Andelman for his fine editorials and ability to finally goad me into writing a letter to the Collegian.

Sincerely,
Michael M. Hench '64

CAMPUS VARIETIES

To the Editor:

Regarding an article on page two concerning Campus Varieties that appeared in the Collegian Wednesday, May 1. We would like to correct something that is very definitely in error concerning your charges against H.E.R. Weekend.

First, H.E.R. Weekend is a Student Union weekend. We do not try to compete with anyone, we merely put on activities for the Student Body to enjoy.

Second, Oscar Brand was never scheduled to appear Saturday afternoon. It was planned over two months ago to go on Friday night. In the past there has been a movie that night. We decided to try something different this year.

Third, when the window in the Book Store was reserved, the manager wrote it down in his date book. No other reservation had been noted at this time.

On this campus of over 7000 students, there is enough need for two events to be held on the same night. We think we have cause to be disturbed at these accusations. The H.E.R. Weekend Committee hopes that Campus Varieties had every success at their performances, but we are not going to apologize for scheduling any event.

The Student Union Program Council

To the Editor:

When Revelers decided to continue the traditional Campus Varieties this year, they obviously did not anticipate the problems that would confront them in putting together a production.

Among those was the lack of personnel whe were capable of handling the technical aspects of a production. It had seemed that Revelers, when first planning their production, had failed to realize that during the 1962-63 academic year six other major productions had already been planned, and that as a result they would most definitely have difficulty in securing technicians for a seventh. Had this been done in advance, or if Revelers had been able to supply their own technicians, which they should have done as a producing organization, one problem would have been solved.

Another major problem was the inability of Revelers to meet its original dates. The organization had been given Bowker Auditorium for the nights of February 15 and 16, with two weeks prior to this for rehearsals in the auditorium. Finding themselves unable to meet their own deadline, they had to postpone their production. It was decided to present their Campus Varieties at the Amherst Regional High School due to the inavailibility of Bowker Auditorium. I sincerely hope that Revelers did not expect other organizations to give up their original dates and plans so that Revelers could produce their "student" production "on" campus.

I hope that in the future Revelers, when planning a production, will realize all that is envolved in producing a play and will be able to handle these situations as a producing organization. And if in the future Revelers find themselves unable or incapable of producing a show, perhaps they should attempt something less time-consuming and bothersome. —S.F.

To the Editor:

Through the Collegian I should like to express a grateful thank you to all that made this year's Campus Chest Scholarships available to us students. Not only is such aid a financial boost, but also it is much in the way of unspoken encouragement to continue the study effort. t is a good feeling to be so honored.

Therefore, to everyone who gave, not knowing quite where, or to whom their donation might go, I sure say a warm thanks.

The Kidney-Shaped Heart

JUDITH DICKSTEIN REVIEWING

The time has finally come to dispel that old adage about the impossibility of making a silk purse out of a sow's ear. Even taking it literally, the transformation could be accomplished if enough people—with advanced enough technology, adequate equipment, and unlimited funds—worked at it long enough. But woe to the man who undertakes the project without one—much less several—of these conditions fulfilled! If he himself fostered the ill-fated essay, we could call him a fool; but if he was called upon to attempt a miracle, if he found himself obliged to fight a losing battle, then he deserves credit for his courage and recognition of whatever he managed to accomplish despite the odds.

This hypothetical man is not one person, but a composite of every individual who had a hand in producing the resuscitated version of Campus Varieties, The Kidney-Shaped Heart: everyone from the unwilling kid recruited to spend a few minutes digging up an elusive prop to the author and the director, who devoted untold time and effort to bringing the production to its ultimate proportions.

The trials of the play and its production crew are only too reminiscent of the sufferings of Job. Dearth followed dearth, and adversity was heaped upon adversity. It is all-too-common knowledge that the shift to Off-Campus Varieties was but one of the harsh conditions the Revelers had to face; they had to scrape up a cast, scour the campus for a capable—or even willing—stage crew, and work as outcasts immersed in apathy—at best—, and greeted with an apalling lack of cooperation . . . to put it euphemistically.

From this, what was the student body expecting? And what did

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 2

Last week we discussed England, the first stop on the tour of Europe that every American college student is going to make this summer. Today we will take up your next stop—France, or the Pearl of the Pacific, as it is generally called.

To get from England to France, one greases one's body and swims the English Channel. Similarly, to get from France to Spain, one greases one's body and slides down the Pyrenees. And, of course, to get from France to Switzerland, one greases one's body and wriggles through the Simplon Tunnel. Thus, as you can see, the most important single item to take to Europe is a valise full of grease.

No, I am wrong. The most important thing to take to Europe is a valise full of Marlboro Cigarettes—or at least as many as the customs regulations will allow. And if by chance you should run out of Marlboros in Europe, do not despair. That familiar red and white Marlboro package is as omnipresent in Europe as it is in all fifty of the United States. And it is the same superb cigarette you find at home—the same pure white filter, the same zestful, mellow blend of tobaccos preceding the filter. This gem of the tobacconist's art, this prodigy of cigarette engineering, was achieved by Marlboro's well-known research team—Fred Softpack and Walter Fliptop—and I, for one, am grateful.

He introduced shortness to France

But I digress. We were speaking of France—or the Serpent of the Nile, as it is popularly termed.

Let us first briefly sum up the history of France. The nation was discovered in 1066 by Madame Guillotine. There followed a series of costly wars with Schleswig-Holstein, the Cleveland Indians, and Jean Jacques Rousseau. Stability finally came to this troubled land with the coronation of Marshal Foch, who married Lorraine Alsace and had three children: Flopsy, Mopsy, and Charlemagne. This later became known as the Petit Trianon.

Marshal Foch—or the Boy Orator of the Platte, as he was affectionately called—was succeeded by Napoleon, who introduced shortness to France. Until Napoleon the French were the tallest nation in Europe. After Napoleon most Frenchmen were able to walk comfortably under card tables. This later became known as the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

Napoleon, after his defeat by Credit Mobilier, was exiled to Elba, where he made the famous statement, "Able was I ere I saw Elba." This sentence reads the same whether you spell it forward or backward. You can also spell Marlboro backward—Oroblram. Do not, however, try to smoke Marlboro backward because that undoes all the pleasure of the finest cigarette made.

After Napoleon's death the French people fell into a great fit of melancholy, known as the Louisiana Purchase. For over a century everyone sat around moping and refusing his food. This torpor was not lifted until Eiffel built his famous tower, which made everybody giggle so hard that today France is the gayest country in Europe.

Each night the colorful natives gather at sidewalk cafes and shout "Oo-la-la!" as Maurice Chevalier promenades down the Champs Elysees swinging his malacca cane. Then, tired but happy, everyone goes to the Louvre for bowls of onion soup.

The principal industry of France is cashing travellers checks.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about France. Next week we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—Spain.

Computer Indicates New Trend

by JOHN B. CHILDS

In Orwell's 1984 it is said of this future state, "The ideal set up by the Party was something huge, horrible, and glittering, a world of steel and concrete, of monstrous machines . . . " In one way or another more than one of the latter-day prophets has warned of this future world where man is subordinated to gleaming machines that digest the minds of men and become the conquerors of men from that very digestion.

Indeed there is something about the concept of computers that raises fears in the minds of many. Such was the case when the use of computer scheduling was begun at the University under the guidance of H. Hills Skillings, University Scheduling Officer and Assistant Professor of Mathematics. Many complained that they did not want a machine "telling us where to go". The impersonality of a machine which implies a disregard for the individual bothered many students as it bothers many people.

The scheduling computer which raised such fears is in reality two computers. One, the "workhorse" is an IBM 1401 located downstairs in South College. It is this machine which processes data. This data is then sent to Boston where 7090 "the brains" of the operation works on it. The data is then returned to Amherst for re-processing.

"But why," some ask, "why the computer at all?" The population of the University is increasing tremendously. The impact of this on hand scheduling methods was extremely hard. Something was needed, not to replace the human and his inadequacies but to augment him and his capabilities. As Professor Swillings says in his pamphlet, Why Computer Scheduling?, "The ultimate objective of computer scheduling is to produce combinations of teachers, students, times and rooms which provide the best education for the maximum number of students . . . " This cannot be done by people alone.

By the same token however, if it cannot be done by people alone it certainly cannot be done by only the machines. What strikes one upon investigating computer scheduling here at the University is that despite the warnings of the prophets this is a human operation. The people who run University scheduling, to be sure, make mistakes—even with the computers. They are not perfect. If they are not perfect, however, they are continually striving to meet the needs of the people, of the individuals of the University.

As Professor Skillings points out, the combination of teachers, students, times and rooms ". . . must be accomplished with full regard for the needs of both faculty and students." It is significant to the philosophy behind the computer scheduling at the University that ". . . concentration is being given to develop a system that will deal with the individual as a human and not as a mere item on the assembly line."

If the trend is toward the enslavement of people by machines, it may be that we see in these above statements a countertrend.

Tracksters Defeat Northeastern, Bates And Tufts

Nine Records Fall As Ward And Brouillet Lead Redmen

by GENE COLBURN '64

This seems to be the year for rewriting the record books. The varsity track team emerged victorious in a quadrangular meet held at Alumni Field Saturday with a score of 60 points, followed by Northeastern University —46, Bates—38 and Tufts —20. There were no less than 9 records broken.

Dick Ward had another frustrating day with the sixteen pound hammer. Still plagued by foul trouble, Dick's best toss was only ¾ of an inch short of the winning throw, 175' 11" by Corsetti of Northeastern, which was a meet record. In the discus, Dick broke the record he set against Connecticut with a toss of a 147'6½" to set new UMass and meet records. Ward continued his great display of versatility when he won the high jump with a leap of 6'3", which was good enough for a new Alumni Field and meet record. Dick was also second in the shotput.

In the shotput, Wallin of Northeastern showed why he is one of the best shotputters in the East with a toss of 57 feet, ¾ inches, which easily shattered the Alumni Field and meet records. Dave Sadowsky reached 13 feet in the pole vault. The vault was good enough for first place and set new UMass and meet records.

Ivan Cohen of Tufts wiped out the meet record for the 440 with a time of 49.7. Craig Erikson, Basil Robinson, and Bill Forand turned in great efforts for the Redmen with times that were the best ever. Craig came still closer to his goal of 50 flat with a time of 50.6 seconds, good enough for second place. Robinson took fourth with a time of 51.2. This time is particularly good where Robinson ran in the second heat and had no-one to push him. Forand ran 51.3, .2 of a second off his time against Connecticut.

The 880 was one of the best races of the day, as Ken O'Brien was just beaten in the last ten yards by Tupper of NU. Tupper's time 1:55.7 set a new meet record. O'Brien was 1:55.9. Larry Smith won the one hundred in ten flat to tie the Alumni field record in the closest race of the day. All four finishers were within .1 of a second of each other.

Captain Bob Brouillet turned a fine double as he remained undefeated in the mile and two-mile runs. Digger broke the standing UMass record in the mile as he ran 4:22. Fred Lewis won the broad jump and tied for third in the hundred with co-captain Loren Flagg, who also took third in the 220. Lewis hurt himself starting in the one hundred and it is not known how badly it will affect him during the rest of the season.

The season's record for the Redmen now stands 4-0 with two meets left—Brandeis and Springfield.

Bob Brouillet leads the pack in the two-mile run. In addition to winning this race, "Digger" set a new UMass record for the mile.

UM Netmen Beat UConn And URI Fon Two YanCon Wins

by DAVE PODBROS '65

Sparked by improved playing from almost all the members of the varsity tennis team, the netmen won two Yankee Conference matches on Friday and Saturday.

On Friday the team traveled to Rhode Island where they swept all the matches, coming back with a 9 to 0 win. In the singles Mike Rose and Bob Neal were the only players that had any trouble winning. Rose went three sets in the third position, but finally won 5-7, 8-6, 6-1, and Neal in spot four was forced to play two long sets. He too, however, finally won, ending with a 8-6, 12-10 score. In contrast, easily winning each of their respective matches were Roger Twitchell in spot one, capt. Tom Simons in two, Dick Leete in five, Dick Leete in five, and Billy Martin in six.

The doubles were a similar story. Twitchell and Neal teamed up for number one doubles, Bob Greenberg and Martin played number too, and Leete and Simons played number three and each were victorious, 8-6, 6-3; 6-2, 6-1; and 6-, 6-0; respectively.

Saturday, a beautiful spring day, the netman played Connecticut to an 8 to 1 UMass win. The combination of Roger Twitchell and Bob Neal in the first doubles was the only loss for UMass, this they lost in a three set match 6-4, 1-6, and 6-1.

The other eight matches for UMass were all wins. Twitchell in spot one played a three setter, winning 6-3, 4-6, 6-1; Simons won 6-4, 6-4 in spot two; Mike Rose won in spot three 6-2; 6-1; Neal in four went three sets to win 5-7, 6-0, and 6-2; Dick Leete on five won 6-0, 6-3; and Martin in the sixth spot won 6-2, 6-2. Billy Martin and Bob Greenberg won in the second doubels 8-6, 6-1 and Tom Simons and Dick Leete won the third doubles 6-3, 6-1.

The season record for the netmen now stands at five wins and three losses, with three of the five victories being at the expense of Yankee Conference rivals. The losses were to Holy Cross, M.I.T. and Springfield.

The Litterbug - Lost Soul

by Phyllis Battelle
United Press International

NEW YORK—You see the man toss the crumpled cigarette pack onto the curb. Maybe it doesn't bother you much. Just another guy, you think, who was brought up wrong. He just didn't learn to be neat.

An expert sees him differently: The man who casually throws paper on the street may have had an immaculate upbringing. He may be the best-groomed man in the neighborhood, too. His trouble is, not a lack of neatness, but a lack of individuality.

He is anonymous. Society has made him forget who he is. He is lost.

"The growing anonymity of the individual" in our society "encourages littering." Rapid cultural and social changes over the past two generations have complicated modern life to the point where the individual "often feels lost and powerless." He has "an anonymity which leads the individual to ask, 'Who am I?' "

This was the message of a vice president for a motivational research company, in addressing the "Keep America Beautiful" volunteers.

So the man or woman who litters the streets of the land may be a lost soul, who thinks of himself as an insignificant cog in the great big industrial machine. This feeling alienates him from the other anonymous people who pass by him, and loosens his sense of social responsibility.

He treats the community through which he passes, facelessly, as a resentful rentor treats somebody else's home. It's not really his; why should be bother keeping it neat. He's just the poor sucker who's paying the rent or, in this case, taxes.

If we're to "Keep American Beautiful," more citizens have got to get a new-long-term-lease on civic life.

The anonmity of the individual is responsible for other problems too.

According to Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., if men are less masculine today, it is their life of conformity—of being swallowed up in the suburban mouse-race—that contributes to the problem. If a man is immersed and civic duties of a suburban life, he gradually loses his identity as a thinking person. Gradually, he doesn't know quite who he is.

And if he doesn't know who he is, how can he be sure what sex he is?

Wildcats Down Redmen 4-3 In Ten Inning Contest

by AL RICE '66

Walks, errors, and umpires, the reasons coaches do not sleep nights, provided a week of sleepless nights for Earl Lorden and the Redmen Saturday at the University of New Hampshire. The Wildcats scored a run in the last of the tenth to beat the UMass nine 4-3 for the first time in the past fifteen meetings.

Dick Wilson threw nine innings of three-hit ball for Mass, but his luck was bad and the breaks fell against him. Mass went behind in the third when UNH tallied its first run. Pitcher Jack Strobel drew a walk and scored on a double to left center by Pete Merrill that Bob Hughes had trouble coming up with.

Wilson had an easy time in the fourth getting the Wildcats in order. In the top of the fifth Tony Simone belted a two out homer over the left field fence. From his swing, it looked like the ball would have a hard time making the outfield, but the apple kept traveling until it bounced off the top of the wire fence. The lead did not hold however, and the third miscue of the day helped New Hampshire to regain the lead. With two out the third batter of the inning hit a grounder to Pete Larkin at short and it looked like the second one-two-three frame for Wilson, but Larkin was in a special hurry to nail the batter because it was his brother Paul, a sophomore right fielder at UNH, and his throw sailed over first. A clutch single by Ed Lamb easily scored Larkin from second.

UMass was still far from being out of the picture. The Redmen followed with two more scores on three hits in the top of the seventh to take a 3-2 margin. Karl Kamena noticed a slight flaw in his batting stance after grounding to second in the fifth. He made a change in the seventh and it resulted in a base hit to left field leading off the inning. Dick Wilson laid down a perfect bunt down the first base line that moved the runner up, and Kamena scored on a double by Pete Larkin. Larkin took third on an outfield error and Tony Williams picked up the second run batted in of the inning with a single through shortstop. John Awdyski forced Williams to end the scoring.

New Hampshire pinch hit for Strobel and it proved to be a wise move. The hitter took a called third strike, but Strobel was tired and probably the Redmen would have reached him for more runs in the eighth. The replacement, Ed Klimsewski, allowed only a walk to Neil Harris in the eighth and a walk to Wilson in the following stanza. Three walks and a questionable call at first marked the doom for Massachusetts in the bottom of the eighth. Two walks and a sacrifice bunt gave UNH two runners and one out. A force at third killed the lead runner and gave the Wildcats two outs, but they still got the tying run home. Ken Wade reached via four balls, and Pete Van Buskirk hit a tapper to Awdycki at first. The ball was fumbled, but it appeared that Awdycki recovered in time to make the play to Wilson on the runner. The umpire didn't see it that way though, and it enabled Dick Ahrendt to score. Wilson caught Cliff Chadwick off base and threw to Kemena for the out, but the damage was done.

It was purely a case of Wilson wearing out in the tenth when the Wildcats scored the winning marker. Larkin lead off with a fly that Hughes caught, but Lamb drew a pass and Ahrendt singled him over to third. At that point, Lorden made his play, which was somewhat of a shocker. Jim Ritchie, a sophomore righty who had not made an appearance this year, was brought on. He gave up an intentional walk to Chadwick, and then was faced with a situation that would be nearly impossible for any pitcher no matter how much his experience was. The batter was Ken Wade and he had the take sign on everything. Ritchie went behind in the count two and nothing. He put two strikes in and then another ball to make it a full count. One more ball and it was all over. Ritchie put it in the strike zone, but Wade got a piece of the ball and hit it far enough to left to score the run with a sacrifice fly.

The game was hard for the Redmen to take because they had a lot of chances to blow it wide open. The first two up in the first reached base, but Williams went down on three pitches and Awdycki forced Larkin at second. Two singles and a stolen base accounted for two runners in scoring position in the fourth, but once again the UNH hurler got out of trouble. Larkin followed Simone's homer with a single and he stole second, but one out later it was all over.

Kidney-Shaped Heart ...

The play itself, despite flaws of plot, was dotted delightfully with wit, perceptive and quotable aphorisms, and subtly needling Theroux-isms which set the audience rippling with gleeful chuckles. "Time," quoth one character, "is a ballpoint pen . . . going dry." Al Forman, who did a creditable job as Dunbar, protests frantically at having to remain alone with "a nearly-naked nude woman" and the audience chortled again to be told that "He's not over-sexed . . . but then again, he's not under sexed . . . Let's just say he's sexed." Deans and Yahoo editors laughed despite themselves when one actor warns, "Hey! Watch your language! There are housemothers out there . . ."

Carol Esonis as Cynthia could actually sing, and Bill Hale as Hershel evoked spontaneous applause as well as mirth in his portrayal of a lovable faggot. The male lead—Fargo—and Prof. Koob, at least, were well-cast, in contrast with an all-too-youthful, undignified Dean.

A converted 3-piece rock-and-roll (ah!) band masqueraded very successfully as the "orchestra," playing tunes mostly by Linda Fisher; the best of them were downright excellent and very catchy (the overture and the title-song). Of the worst music, and of the lyrics to all but one song, —the less said, the better.

The "drops and props" committee did a fine job, as did most of the back-stage crew. Gloria, Rosalie, and the other (nameless) students frequently managed to over-act enough to be funny, and when voices failed to carry to the audience (poor acoustics?)—particularly as in song lyrics—nothing significant was being missed by those who did not hear.

Did The Kidney-Shaped Heart "lay an egg?" Did it ever get off the ground?

If you saw the play, don't be so quick to answer.

This year's Off-Campus Varieties was a kiwi, an apteryx: it had the wings—the effort and a measure of quality—but it was unfortunately in its nature to never fly, to never get off the ground. It was brave to try.

A kiwi can never be an eagle, and an ill-wrought, unenthusiastic production can never be an enormous success. If The Kidney-Shaped Heart was nothing more than a kiwi, you'll have to confess that it was a damned good one.

To expect more of it than that is to expect too much.

End Of An Era

END OF AN ERA—"You too can join the ranks of unemployed" this Morgan colt seems to be saying to the tank being loaded on the trailer truck. During World War II, the Army did away with all cavalry units, and the University of Massachusetts "relieved its Morgan horses from active duty" and replaced them with an armored unit. As the University starts its second century, the armored ROTC unit has been discontinued, and in the future, Army ROTC students will receive general military service training. The last of the tanks left the University campus on Thursday.

Planning Board To Discuss S.U. Expansion comp.

The Planning Committee for the Student Union invited all organizations to send a representative to an open meeting to be held at 4 p.m. today in the Council Chambers. All persons having questions about the future of the Union will have ample opportunity to have them answered at this meeting.

For three years, a student-faculty committee has considered the future needs of the Union based on anticipated enrollment. It is the feeling of this committee that the Union must be approximately doubled in size to approach the services that will be demanded by the increased enrollment.

Preliminary sketches of the addition, developed for use by the committee are on display in the lobby.

It has been estimated that the cost of the new building will approach the $3 million figure. This will cause a substantial increase in the activities tax, amounting to $5 per semester, an increase of approximately 50%.

Communist Speakers Ban Is Defeated In Michigan

A proposal to ban Communist speakers from state-supported colleges and universities was defeated in Michigan's House of Representatives by a 75-7 vote.

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN, Wayne State University, Detroit, said the bill called for a Communist-ban issue to be placed on the April ballot as a proposed amendment to the State Constitution.

The amendment's sponsor, Rep. Richard Guzowski, said the defeat was tantamount to "welcoming the Communist party to Michigan."

Rep. Maxcine Young of the Second District, of which the University is a part said it implied that the governing boards of state schools were incapable of handling the situation.

"Rep. Guzowski is completely wrong," she said. "Our educators are doing their job. Why not let them do it?"

Joel Sharkey, chairman of the University's Student - Faculty Council, said: "The position of the S-FC is quite clear. The restriction of research material or resource personnel in examining our society and our world is a gross violation of academic freedom."

New Student I.D.'s Are Tamperproof

A new system of identification cards will be seen on the UMass campus next fall. Assistant to the Dean of Men, Neale Roth described the new ID as "credit-card" sized, embossed, and laminated, the construction of which will produce a virtually tamperproof card.

The card will be used for all check cashing, for admission to campus events, and also for the checking out of library books. Future plans call for eventual use of the card as a meal ticket, replacing those presently used.

Students who have not had their photographs taken for the new card should go to 105 Machmer at any of the following hours:

Monday—3-5; Tuesday—9-10; Wednesday—10-11; Thursday — 9-10; and Friday—10-11.

If a student is unable to be present at the above hours, he is asked to leave a note at 105 Machmer, stating when he will be available.

Sigma Xi Presents Honors Day Lecturer Thurs. Nite

Dr. Charles V. Pryles, Research Director and Chief Pediatric Consultant at the Wrentham State School for Retarded Children, will deliver the Sigma Xi Honors Day lecture on Thursday, May 9.

Dr. Pryles will speak in Morrill Auditorium at 8 p.m. All interested persons are invited to attend the lecture, which is part of the University's Centennial observance. Sigma Xi is the national scientific honor society.

Dr. Pryles' lecture, highlight of the University's Sigma Xi program, will deal with recent investigations in genetic and metabolic disorders in children such as mongolism, PKU (phenylketonuria), and galactosema. Recent studies of other factors that affect the prenatal, natal, and postnatal periods of life and which may be related to mental retardation will also be discussed.

A graduate of Emory University with a degree in chemistry and biology, Dr. Pryles received his medical degree from the University of Georgia School of Medicine.

Dr. Pryles is an assistant professor of pediatrics at the Boston University School of Medicine and assistant director of pediatric service at Boston City Hospital.

Survey To Study How Grad Students Finance Education

The University of Massachusetts has been selected to take part in a National Science Foundation survey to determine how graduate students are financing their education. The results of the study, to be based on completed questionnaires of 25,000 graduate students in 37 fields at 130 institutions, will be used in determining federal policy toward graduate scholarships, fellowships, and other forms of financial aid.

According to the director of the study, Peter F. Drossi of the National Opinion Research Corporation at the University of Chicago, the NSF has authorized the study because of a growing concern over how the nation is losing the services of many talented people because of insufficent funds to attend colleges and universities.

Within the next two weeks, students in twenty graduate departments of the University will receive questionnaires inquiring into the sources and amounts of stipends received, academic workload and degree programs, earnings from outside employment, and career plans.

The survey is being conducted by Mrs. Alice H. Allen, Survey Representative for the University of Massachusetts, under the auspices of the University's Office of Institutional Studies.

Governor Disalle To Speak On Death Penalty

Michael DiSalle, Distinguished Visiting Lecturer at the University will speak on "Should States Levy the Death Penalty?" today at 4 p.m.

An outspoken opponent of capital punishment, DiSalle recently testified before a combined committee investigating abolition in Massachusetts.

DiSalle has stated that it is usually the indigent, the friendless, and the mentally deficient who are put to death. Never in his knowledge has any person been sent to the death house, who has had an adequate defense.

DiSalle's lecture is sponsored by the Department of Government.

Greeks In State Of Change

That most venerable and most debated institution, the American college fraternity, is entering a significant period of change, the Associated Press has decided.

Noting widespread debate on the merits of the Greek system throughout the U.S. educational community this year, the AP polled 150 campuses across the nation to discover what changes have been wrought in the fraternity system as a result of the controversies of the past few years.

The debate, of course, has raged for decades. The Greek will tell you that the fraternity is the invaluable inculcator of self-reliance, the social graces, group democracy, and scholarship in the otherwise hapless student masses. And the non-Greek will tell you that fraternities are the last refuge of bigots, snobs, and rich men's sons who need a crutch to get them through school.

At a time when the nation sees itself as hard-pressed for creative minds from the universities, some critics picture the fraternities and sororities as a vast anti-intellectual desert, where the "bonds of brotherhood too often tie knots of conformity and the climb to the social graces too often stumbles into a trap of hooch"—as an AP writer put it.

The one issue that all fraternities and sororities must eventually face up to, of course, is the discrimination question. In an age where more and more of the country's youth are finding themselves inpatient with racial bigotry, the Greeks find that they are losing many potentially outstanding members because of their inability to integrate.

Attitudes among university administrators toward the fraternity system are widely varied. At Oregon State, they are "welcome, not just tolerated." But Boston University Dean Stanton R. Curtis says "time is running out, I fear," citing fraternities' "fiscal mismanagement, low academic achievement, and failure to choose a representative membership."

One of the biggest arguments is over the selective nature of Greek pledging systems. Few argue with the right to free association of individuals, but many assert that most fraternities still insist on their right to pick and choose their members as they please. The AP poll showed a definite trend toward increasing liberalization of selection policies.

Redmen Band Members Excused From Phys. Ed.

A cooperative effort between the University Bands and the Physical Education department of the University has resulted in a freeing of band members from part of their physical education requirement.

According to Dean Warren P. McGuirk of the School of Physical Education, all members of the Redmen Marching Band will be released from taking required phys. ed. in the first half semester of their freshman and sophomore years.

It is hoped that this ruling, long in coming, will stimulate a greater interest in the marching band, and that it will afford band members a longer practice time. It was noted that most other Yankee Conference schools free band members from all required physical education.

Dedication

It is a pleasure to write about a pleasurable guy. It is a pleasure to cite the dedication of a teacher to his students. It is more of a pleasure to honor a scholar. The University is going to be lacking next year; for this scholar won't be here. As a matter of fact he will be in France soaking up culture.

Dr. Louis Greenbaum has been the Director of the Honors Program for the past three years, and the job he has done has been phenominal. He has built up the organization to the position it now maintains. It has been expanded from one class so that it now incorporates all classes. Quickly it is beginning to find its place on campus—a prestigious place. The number of seniors doing Senior Honor work has mushroomed in the past three years.

Much has been done, and behind most of the action has been a man who has never allowed his ideals and goals to fall from sight. He has been called idealistic, yet his unaltering faith in the ability of the students at the University of Massachusetts has never diminished. He has worked for the best, in hopes that the near best should result.

We thank this man for his dedications, we honor him for his ideals. We praise his devotion to the students at the University of Mass. Since he is a modest person, we simply thank him for what he has done for us and the University.

Honors Colloquium

Much has been said about the Honors program and the Honors Colloquium. And there will be more; for they are important. It must be said. It must be said, now. The Honor's Colloquium has been let down. It has been slighted in two ways. To begin with, let us ask why the Colloquium hasn't been given more importance; by making it worth three credits and by giving grades to those involved in it. If it does represent the essence of educational experience and growth, if it is considered valuable to the University, why hasn't it's importance been demonstrated?

The answers to the above questions are that there aren't enough faculty members who can be allotted to such small groups. If it were worth 3 credits, it would consume faculty time drastically. The retort then, is why not more faculty members?

It boils down to the fact that the University just doesn't have the money to hire the staff. Then who is responsible? The Legislature? If it is the legislature, let us make the plea to them! The facts are that more money is needed to hire faculty to give the many students the education they wish. The minimum wage for the faculty at the University is the sixth lowest in the country. The University of Alaska pays its faculty members more than our faculty members are paid.

The second group that has let it down is the students in it. Many put their honors work off to last. If they don't finish it they can always "b - - - s - - -," which they do. The Colloquium has so much potential, but many times there are too few attending, or those that are attending haven' done there reading. Perhaps if the students had more say about the topic of discussion there would be more increased interest. Yet in some groups they have complete freedom of what to discuss. If the Colloquia are lacking, the ultimate recponsibility rests with the students. The faculty members are there, the room is provided, all that is needed is intellectual activity on the part of the students involved.

Intellectualism At The University

by PAUL F. LEVY

"The skill of the academically gifted constitute the most precious resource our nation possesses and the greatest assurance of America's continued national strength, prosperity, and freedom." (Registrar's release.)

Each student accepted by the University is believed capable of high intellectual goals. Ideally, this is the reason for his acceptance. Admittedly, there are, at the University, students of exceptional intellectual capacities, who attain excellence in scholarship. How many students need the motivational push to attain the final metamorphic stage in intellectualism? Intellectualism is a response to environmental and psychological determinents. Can a University which places great emphasis on a social base expect anything other than a social atmosphere. It was indeed fine to witness a Student Leaders Night where social prominence in the student community was rewarded. The high standards of Mortar Board and Adelphia in scholarship was a ray of light in the melieux of darkness. But, why not extend the accolade of a leaders night to include recognition of students who excel in scholarship?

Why not extend the opportunities of an honors colloquia to all Freshmen who are accepted on the premise of their capabilities? This might serve as a catalyst in the germination of the intellect. The honors colloquia themselves could ameliorate their structure in the realm of professor-student relationships. Many honors students express dissatisfaction in discussing topics which are of less interest to them relative to their educational interests. This feeling is demonstrated in colloquia attendance and participation. A more complete utilization of synonymous interests between professors and students would be a step towards a more vital program and a greater intellectual spirit.

One might point to the Distinguished Visitors Program, unique at the University in the intellectual talent it offers the students and in that it is run by students themselves. One might also point to University Theatre, highly original from an intellectual standpoint. These are all positive features at the University. The purpose of this editorial is not to tear down UMass, whose ability is probably no less than other Universities. It is just to level a verbal attack at those who are intellectually lazy, and yet at those who are equally capable. It is an attempt to show that the administration too might alleviate this problem with a creative program for the benefit of all students.

ALL WET

To the Editor:

It is common knowledge on campus that our concert hall leaves something to be desired. When the University was fortunate enough to hear a concert by the Handel and Haydn Society, the campus was once again humiliated by the deplorable condition of the Cage. In addition to the uncomfortable seating, poor acoustics, and notbale presence of horses, chalk bins and parallel bars; the roof leaks!

Just as the soprano began to sing her solo, a not five feet in front of us. We feel sure, knowing brief shower sent a stream of water to the floor, the general condition of the Cage, that this was not the only leak. How embarrassing it would be if it had rained on the orchestra, the choral group or, Heaven forbid, on the soprano.

We realize that the cost involved in temporarily making the Cage into a decent concert hall is prohibiting. However, we feel that the University should at least see to it that our guests will be assured of a hall in which they will not drown before their performance is over.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Miss Burlingame's article (April 26) was distressing—not because her complaints are groundless, but because solutions to what she deplores are going on right under her nose. As a resident of Plymouth House, surely she cannot be insensible to three important and dynamic groups which meet weekly in the office of Mrs. de Kerpely! The French Corridor has distinguished itself by sponsoring cultural activities within and without the organization. The Philosophy Club, generated solely by student interest, has met to discuss subjects ranging from Satre to Corinthians: 13. Professors of Philosophy and theologians have been participating guests in this group, and attendance is spiralling.

Lastly, and especially vital, is the Literary Society, established long before the Abby fire. Even that crisis could not thwart the group; a session was conducted at the Infirmary in Mrs. de Kerpely's quarters. As any member will attest, the appeal of an informal gathering of serious aspiring writers, interested in others' criticism and developing their own capabilities as such, has given the society a strong autonomy. It is purely voluntary, unhampered by any feeling of constraint to speak out or to be "organized" as a formal club might be. Thus, free discourse and criticism, reading aloud with the knowledge that we all learn from one another, have knit these people into a unique body dedicated to the shaping of literary perception and appreciation. It has continuity, and it will last into future years because of the precedent it has given in an ideal setting for learning about the creative process and problems in writing. The common experiences of authorship—stylistic dilemmas, technical pitfalls—are all shared and explored profitably in a congenial climate. It is congenial because it is both disciplined and spontaneous, both critical and aesthetically rewarding, both intense and casual. The desire to articulate freely, to communicate personnal problems in writing, has provided a major impetus to the group. Mrs. de Kerpely, as an experienced, astute, and honest editorial voice, has served to inspire these growing writers.

Indeed, Miss Burlingame, the lethargy which you deplore may well be partly due to the reluctance of other dormitory students to initiate similar groups. Hitherto, two groups at Plymouth have been unrecognized because they are not of the R.S.O. variety. The Philosophy meetings, bcause of widening interest, may well develop into a formal organization. But the Literary Society will and should never become an R.S.O., simply because such a form is incompatible with its nature. Creativity cannot be instutionalized. May it console Miss Burlingame and others to know that learning does occur outside Bartlett Hall. Perhaps it should be noted, too, that genuine cultural interest and activity is not always inclined to announce itself as an R.S.O.

Powers Major Contributor To New University Theatre

by MARCIA BLASOWICH

A major contributor to the University's new experiment in academic theatre has been Frank Powers who has played the lead role in every University Theatre production this year. This weekend he portrays Thomas Beckett in T. E. Eliot's Murder In The Cathedral.

The exhuberant and talented Mr. Powers hails from Richmond Virginia. At first he said he had some qualms about "Yankees" being "starched shirts" but soon found them genial and warm-hearted. Frank, who considers himself well-northernized, even prides himself on having lost his southern accent. Though not detectable in his dramatic speech, one still suspects a "southern gentleman".

As a senior at UMass, Frank is kept busy not only by University Theatre but also by the R.O.T.C. department, where he holds the office of Cadet Colonel.

He said he considers Murder in the Cathedral to be the most impressive and exciting production of the season," not only because of the spectacular set design and costumes but also because of the modern style of the piece.

Frank holds many opinions about the theatre. He speaks from experience when he says student productions are "largely a waste of time because it is rare to find students who have had enough experience to justify the amount of effort involved in putting on a good production".

"While self-expression is advantageous to the self, the actors' role is to perform the play as the author meant it to be presented. Subjecting the audience to the actor's own feelings is the worst offense that can be dealt to an audience.

"Acting requires discipline and to use it as a means of spouting personal ideas often runs the risk of degenerating this art form into the 'mumble school of acting.' Group therapy is better left in the psychology laboratory," he said.

The Honors Program — Pursuit Of Academic Excellence

Ed. Note: This page is in Commemoration of Honors Day. The Convocation honoring the university's outstanding scholars will be held on Thursday, May 9, in the Student Union Ballroom. The main speaker at the event will be Dr. John W. McConnell, President of the University of New Hamsphire.

Programs for Superior Students, a recently published pamphlet put out by the University to inform incoming freshmen and present students provides a sourcebook for any interested in advanced academic discipline.

The University of Massachusetts since its establishment in 1863 has tried to maintain the highest ideals in educating young people, and creating an atmosphere of academic excellence for the pursuit of knowledge. It has not only tried to make its program as expansive as possible but it has also attempted to challenge those of exceptional ability. It has kept to the traditions of democratic education and has tried to afford the opportunity for advanced work to all students who have shown the ability and initiative.

For qualified undergraduates there are many programs in which they can become involved.

As described in The Programs for Superior Students, "The Honors program is administered by the University Honors Council composed of distinguished scholars and teachers from all fields, many of whom have had teaching experience in the University's Honors Program. The council is charged with the responsibility of defining and maintaining policies of excellence in the various academic programs available to qualified students. The Director of the Honors Program is given authority to recruit and to administer the overall Honors system, and in the realization of its aims works closely with the Honors Council." In this light Dr. Louis Greenbaum the first Director should be commended for his outstanding dedication and energetic ability.

Programs for superior students begin with the junior year of high school and continue right through the senior year of undergraduate study. Exceptional students are allowed to enter the University after their junior year of high school. Also for entering freshmen advanced placement can be afforded to students who have taken college level courses as part of College Entrance Examination Board Advanced Placement Program or by taking achievement examinations during summer orientation.

Once martriculated in the University there is much opportunity for doing independent reading and study. Any student can do up to a year's work, 30 credits by independent reading and an examination. This offers much opportunity for individual initiative and expression. Many students aren't aware that this is available to them, along with other programs.

The most exciting part of the Honors Program is the Honors Colloquium. It relates to the deepest aspect of the educational process, reflection. In small groups of eight to ten people who have demonstrated scholarly ability and two professors who have shown unusual interest in educating young people share ideas in a free intellectually stimulating situation. To quote The Programs for Superior Students "Participants are faced with broad questions of central concern and encounter exciting books and germinal ideas in all fields and ages of human experience. They gain an extension of viewpoints in fields other than their own, and the breadth of their acquired learning provides a meaningful intellectual environment for their own areas of concentration. Particular emphasis is placed on the student's personal encounter with knowledge, the strength of his investigations followed to their utimate meaning, THE ABILITY TO ARTICULATE CONVICTIONS EFFECTIVELY IN SPEECH AND WRITING AND TO DEFEND THEM IN THE EXACTING CLIMATE OF CLASS SCRUTINY AND DISCUSSION." This offers the highest in educational inquiry. Any student who feels his education is lacking should think in terms of the potential the HONORS COLLOQUIUM has. The University has come a long way in achieving this attempt at the essence of the educational process.

Probably the most taxing, but the most challenging and rewarding of the honors program offered as the Senior Honors. Members of the Senior class who are recommended by their departments follow an independent study of some topic working with a professor who is involved in the field. It is three credits a semester, and culminates with a thesis which has to be defended orally to the University Community. This dates back to Dante and Luther and the historical traditions of universities. This is by far the most exacting of educational discipline and represents the expanding in a specific area the knowledge of man.

Other aspects of the honor program are the waiving of requirements and prerequisites for higher courses, if a student can demonstrate proof of proficiency in the subject matter of courses to be waived; also if a junior has a "3.0 he may apply for a Dean's permission to pursue a special course of study during the senior year determined by the future academic plans and the needs of the student. It provides release from formal college requirements of the senior year." There are also special department reading courses by which a student of appropriate standing can obtain academic credit, being involved in supervised research and reading; and also undergraduates if they seek permission of department chairmen and Deans can be admitted into the graduate program.

Varsity Shades Williams; Frosh Remain Undefeated

Harris Ignites Ninth Inning Uprising For 3-2 Victory

by AL RICE '66

Williams College had the Redmen baseball club only one pitch away from their third straight loss when Neil Harris lined a long single into right-center field that started a ninth inning outburst giving UMass and Lew Pia a 3-2 win. Mass had gone seven innings and had gotten only two hits off Williams' junkballer John Milholland. They crashed loose for a triple and double in the eighth, but two fouled up plays by Mass got the Ephs out of trouble.

Tony Williams grounded to second to open the last inning and John Awdycki registered the second out with a bounder to short. Harris, who picked up the first Mass hit of the day with a second inning single, took the first pitch for a strike around the knees. Milholland got a gift on the next serve when a pitch over the shoulders was called strike two. Harris fouled off the next pitch and then started Mass on the way with his single. Steve Hyde booted the ball in left field and Harris kept going to second. Earl Lorden sent Steve Wojnar who he had benched before the game for weak hitting in to bat for Ken Clark. The lefty responded to the call with a long off-field two bagger easily scoring Harris with the tying score. Corky Schmoyer, another slump-ridden hitter, also picked a right time to crash loose. Schmoyer, lined a solid single to center that put Massachusetts in the lead.

Pia took command in the bottom of the ninth to keep the Ephs from retaking the lead. The first two men grounded to the infield, but catcher Harry Lum drew a walk. Ben Gregory ended the game with a line shot right at Tony Williams at third. Drott in the second with the score that broke a 1-1 tie and gave Williams the lead. Drott opened the frame as a pinch hitter with a long two bagger to left. He went to third on Mul-Holland's sacrifice and, after Rick Berry struck out, Lum walked to put men on first and third. Wagner reached Pia for a single and went to second on the throw in. George Mayer, the leading hitter in the Williams lineup, was given an intentional pass and the strategy worked because Hyde killed the rally with a liner to Simone in left.

Massachusetts collected the first score of the day in the second when John Awdycki reached on a two base error and came across on Harris' single. Lew Pia led off the third with a long single to center, but Mass went through the next four stanzas with nothing resembling a base hit. A two bagger by Hyde in the fourth frame with two men away started Williams to their tying marker. Bob Leary singled him home after a walk. A single and a sacrifice put Eph runners on second in the fifth and sixth, but Pia had little trouble in either of the two innings. In all the Williams squad left ten men on base. Only twice could they dig up the clutch hit they needed, or they would easily have blown the game open in the early innings.

Awdycki's second inning run came with none out, and the Redmen had a chance to increase the lead right there, but Schmoyer and Karl Kamena grounded out, leaving Clark stuck on second. Their next scoring opportunity did not come until the eighth when Lew Pia drove a long blast into left that went for three bases. With UMass one run behind and the game nearly over, Lorden called for a suicide squeeze, and that was just what it was because Pete Larkin missed an outside pitch and Pia was a dead duck. Larkin then lined a double to center, but even that did no good because on the first pitch to Tony Williams, Milholland went into a full windup and Larkin took off for third but he didn't make it. The score for the inning read no runs, two hits, five total bases, and nobody left on.

The ninth inning spurt saved the bacon, though, and it increased the Redmen's record to 6-4 and Pia's to 4-1. Williams picked up their sixth loss in seven games.

The UMass freshmen also made the trip to Williamstown, and they were just as successful and a little more convincing in their 6-3 victory. Williams shelled starter Ken Rowe for three runs in the first two innings, and Coach Dick Bergquist brought on Bill Smith in the second. Smith not only shut the door on the Ephs, but he locked and sealed it as well. The righty did not allow a man on base until he surrendered a last inning single. He struck out six of the 22 men he faced.

The Little Redmen overcame the Williams lead with a five run surge in the fifth. Vic Zumbruski started the fire with a three bagger and Ray Yando drove him in with a single and then stole second. Smith aided his own cause with a run producing single, and a walk to Frank Buckler and a Dennis Della Piana single kept the scoring going. Bill Cleary and Tom Iarrobino followed up with singles that drove in the fourth and fifth scores. Mass almost added one more in the seventh. Cleary, who, played a superb defensive game at third, walked and stole second and Iarrobino cracked a single, but it wasn't quite long enough to score the runner. Bob Scott tallied the final run in the ninth. Scott doubled and came home when Della Piana also knocked out a two base hit. The win ended the Williams unbeaten string, but UMass still hasn't lost. Their tie with Springfield sets the record at 5-0-1.

Majeski Honored At Awards Dinner

SAO PAULO, Brazil UPI — Kenneth L. Tug Wilson, president of the United States Olympic Committee, said today that only about 25 per cent of the U.S. athletes who helped win a near-record 109 gold medals in the Pan-American Games will compete in the 1964 Olympics.

While not wishing to downgrade the athletes who performed here, Wilson said that in view of what was shown in the Pan-American Games he was willing to predict that Uncle Sam's team in the next Olympic games "will be the strongest ever."

Top Athletes Absent

"Under the circumstances our showing here was better than it was four yeas ago," Wilson pointed out. "You have to remember that for the Chicago games we had all our top athletes available."

Many U.S. stars could not make it here for the Sao Paulo games because of studies and business commitments.

"I am not downgrading this year's team," Wilson stressed. "But let's face it, a lot of our best athletes could not make it here."

Surprise In Gymnastics

There were legitimate reasons for Wilson's optimism, for the United States did surprise in men's and women's gymnastics, a sport in which the Russians have been far superior.

Winning of all eight gold medals at stake in wrestling was still another surprise as was the basketball victory scored by the women's team.

Fairwaymen Anihilate RPI, 6-1

The varsity golf team continued to play good "warm-weather" golf as they smothered Rensselaer Polytech 6-1 at Troy, New York. Captain Charlie Noble was medelest (low score) with a 74. He was followed by soph George Defalco, who had a 75, and Tom Kinne with a 76. Overall, six of the seven Redmen shot in the 70's, quite a feat for a college team.

This match brought the team's record to 5-3. Summary: Nobel defeated Hall, 4 and 3; Roche def. Kowalski, 5 and 3; Kinne (UM(def. Sloan, 5 and 4; Defalco (UM) def. Martin, 6 and 4; Dahlberg def. O'Donnell (UM), 3 and 2; Phita (UM) def. Pulkka, 3 and 2; Glass (UM) def. Niemi, 6 and 5.

The lawn of the Student Union provided the setting for the Freshman Picnic held yesterday. The Freshmen finished off the afternoon dancing to the music of the Starfires.

1. I'll tell you what you have to look for in a job. You have to look for fringe benefits. That's the big thing today.

Yes—the big thing.

2. You have to consider your needs. You're going to get married some day, aren't you? Then you need life and accident insurance.

Go on—go on—

3. You're going to have kids—so you'll want maternity benefits.

I'd like lots of children.

4. And what about medical bills? That's something every big family has to think about. You need a good major medical plan that covers almost everything.

You're right—you're right!

5. And you're not going to want to work all your life, are you? You're going to want to take it easy—you know, travel around, live it up. So you need a retirement plan that guarantees you plenty of dough.

I can see it now.

6. That's why I say you have to look at the fringe benefits when you look for a job.

But don't you also have to look for interesting work, good income, the chance for advancement?

7. You sure do. That's why I'm going to work for Equitable. You get all those job advantages—and all the fringe benefits, too.

I admire your thinking.

cal Sigma Nu chapter voted to break its national ties because of the national's discrimnatory clause. Chapter president Thomas Grey explained "it is becoming increasingly difficult to find a good pledge class which is willing to accept membership in an organization which denies admittance on purely racial grounds."

Sometimes troubles with the national work the other way around. A sorority at Beloit, Delta Gamma, was dumped by its national after pledging a Negro girl. A fraternity at Willamette reportedly gave up the idea of pledging a Negro because it was a foregone conclusion that the national would not permit it.

And thus, it would seem, while the Greek system may be underpressure, the decline and fall of the empire is still a long way off. But one thing confuses observers of the nation's nearly seven million Greeks—they seem to have surprisingly little to say about anything as a group. It has been noticed on campus after campus that though Greeks may run campus politics, there is seldom such a thing as a "Greek" position—the students usually are in the game only to be in the game. They are after position and prestige, not dedicated to the resolution of issues.

There is a sizeable mystique about a system that continues to attract millions of new members—yet has no coherent philosophy or apparent purpose. But it appears that it will be with us for some time.

Rally For Negroes To Be Held At SU

Following is the text of the pamphlet released by the Faculty-Student Group for Equal Justice in relation to the proposed mass demonstration:

"On Saturday, May 11, at 12 noon, the students and faculty of the four-college area are urged to meet in protest of injustices now taking place in Birmingham, Alabama. This is a call for you to demonstrate your sympathy with the Negro community of Birmingham who are courageously asserting their rights as Americans. This is a call for you to assemble in protest in front of the Student Union of the University of Mass.

For generations the Negro citizens of Birmingham have been outraged and humiliated by inhumane laws and customs. They have been discriminated against in securing jobs and housing; they have been barred from eating where they wish; illegal and barbaric measures have been and are being used against them by the officials of the City of Birmingham. High pressure hoses and vicious dogs have been used to stop Negro protest. Thousands have been jailed, many physically assaulted, some even wounded in this struggle for freedom.

The City Government of Birmingham is guilty of illegal, immoral, and unconstitutional treatment of a large portion of its citizens. According to Section 242 of the United States Code, it is a punishable offense for anyone—

"under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom to willfully subject any inhabitant of any state, territory, or district to the deprivation of any rights, privileges or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

If we do not protest in some way, do we not then share the guilt of the city government and police of Birmingham?

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored peoples has just called upon the nation to urge the Government of the United States to protect the rights of ALL the citizens of Birmingham. On Saturday, over 100 cities throughout the country will be sites of protest. The events in Alabama weigh heavily upon the conscience of free men everywhere. However, an informed academic community bears a special obligation. A show of support for human dignity and equal justice must be demonstrated."

Sparks Fly At Student Senate's Last Meeting

Sparks flew and tempers flared at Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting. The agenda had what seems to be the most controversial bills since the 2.0 bill was last seen.

The three, introduced by former president Don Cournoyer, were greeted with mixed emotions. Two of the bills would strengthen greatly the power of the committees in the Senate. They would provide that "All motions emanating from standing committees with a ⅔ vote of the committee, a quorum being present, shall require a ⅔ vote by the Senate to overrule the committee's rquest." A similar motion would give the execu the committee's request." A simi-

In introducing his motions, Cournoyer stated that they would not take power from the Senate, but would rather delegate some power to the committee. It would, he stated give more incentive to non senators on the committees, because they would have a voice. Concluding, he told the Senate that they had the power to over-rule a bill.

George Jones rose to dispute Cournoyer. He stated that while the people on committees might have a better knowledge of the facts, they represented only a small portion of the Senate.

Further debate centered around the question as to whether or not the bills would cause a small minority to rule the Senate. In accordance with the By-

500 Tickets For Concert Still Left For Saturday

The Kingston Trio returns to the United States Sunday after a successful European tour. Their first engagement "back home" will be here at the University on Sunday, May 12th. The Trio will participate in the Centennial Parade and will appear in concert at 7:30 p.m. in Curry Hicks Men's Physical Education Building. There are still about 500 tickets left for sale at the Student Union Ticket Window, which is open daily from 9 to 4.

The Centennial Concert was financed by the Student Senate and the Class of '63, and the receipts will be given toward scholarships for deserving UMass students.

The Trio's continued popularity has given rise to many folk-singing groups, but the Trio itself still remains the leader. Demand for the group is still steadily growing, and their recordings are always among the best-sellers. They have appeared in virtually every entertainment center in the United States and Europe.

Women Senators' Duties Reduced

On the lighter side of Wednesday evening's Senate meeting was a comment by commutor Senator Bill Donovan during the debate concerning a motion that would reduce the number of women Senators on the Women's Affair Committee; because of the already burdensome and many duties that the female Senators have to fulfill. Senator Donovan suggested that the wording of the motion be changed from "women senators and their multiplying obligations" to women senators and their multiple obligations."

This was done by the Senate to avoid any embarrassing implications of the term "multiplying obligations" for the women senators.

Parade To Feature Campus Queens

A crowd of 40,000 people from all parts of Massachusetts and New England is expected to be on hand this Sunday for the University of Massachusetts Centennial Parade which will begin promptly at 1:30 p.m. Many mothers of students will enjoy Mother's Day on our campus as they view the largest parade in University history.

The parade will assemble in the vicinity of the Amherst College campus and Pratt Field and proceed through Amherst Center on North Pleasant St. toward our campus. It will bear left on Ellis Drive and eventually disband in the Engineering parking lot behind Goessmann.

According to parade chairman Bill Smidt '63, over 100 units will take part in paying tribute to the UMass Centennial. These will be in the form of bands, floats, queens' courts, drum and bugle corps, community organizations, antique bicycles, marching units, military units, clowns, drill teams, and antique autos.

Everyone is reminded to bring 50c for the tassels.

Birmingham And Conscience

We view with shame and dismay the recent events in Birmingham, Alabama. In that southern city, Americans, seeking to secure their rights under our Constitution, have been set upon by police dogs and routed by high pressure water hoses.

On Wednesday, the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, head of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, had to be taken to the hospital, having been injured by a high pressure stream of water. After Mr. Shuttlesworth was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, Eugene Connor, Commissioner of Public Safety, Health, Education, and Welfare arrived on the scene. He said:

"I waited a week to see Shuttlesworth get hit with a hose. I'm sorry I missed it."

And after a newsman informed Commissioner Connor that Mr. Shuttlesworth had been taken to the hospital in an ambulance, he retorted:

"I wish they'd carried him away in a hearse."

Although we can never believe that these are the precise sympathies of the white population of Birmingham, the fact remains that there exists a small, vocal, and politically powerful minority which reflects Connor's attitude. Insulated as we are from the terrible strife in that southern city, we must assume that a great segment of the white population harbors a significant feeling of guilt. These people, afraid to speak out for fear of reprisal, economic or physical, must be helped. They must be told that they are not isolated from the conscience of all free men.

This is not to say that we condone their passive support of repressions, for in the words of Thoreau:

"Those who, while they disapprove of the character and measures of a government, yield to it their allegiance and support are undoubtedly its most conscientious supporters, and so frequently the most serious obstacles to reform."

However, to say that many citizens of that southern city do, in fact, feel a sense of guilt is to explore but a part of the problem. In addition, we must deal with the Connor and Wallace elements. Unfortunately, while there exists such people as these, the road to reform becomes narrowed to so great an extent that only a show of force on the part of the federal government is deemed a solution.

Although history has shown that force is but a feeble instrument against a belief nourished by tradition, there comes a time when it is only force which can prevail. Hence, we view with great apprehension our President's unwillingness to act. Although we understand the President's concern with the political disadvantages accruing from strong action on the part of the federal government, we must never allow ourselves to subordinate conscience to political considerations. Although we understand the President's seeming pre-occupation with our "image" abroad, we refuse to follow his pointing finger to Africa or Asia. The finger points to Birmingham. Indeed, if the situation worsens, the finger must become the first. —M.P.

the CACODYL

by Neal Andelman

In case any of you have gotten the impression from past Cacodyl's that I have not been overly impressed with this year's Senate, let me hasten to assure you that your assumption is absolutely true. We must, however, strike the rather inglorious (if not downright inactive) past history of the Student Senate from our minds and look at what they are doing now, and what they will be doing in the very near future.

Wednesday night's Senate meeting was a rather interesting one. Of primary importance to the student body was a bill introduced by Senator Cournoyer (you may remember that Don Cournoyer used to be a big man in the Senate). The bill requests that the President and the Board of Trustees reconsider the budget act ('64-'65) "in order to look into the possibility of procuring a greater appropriation for the faculty pay raises and increase of staff." So what! (I heard someone say.) Well, my friend, I'm glad you said that, because now I can tell you all of the deep, inner meaning of this bill. First, I am sure that you are all aware of the fact that the President of this University must either sign legislation passed by the Senate or veto said legislation by refusing to sign it.

Now this puts the Senate in a rather good position, because the President must either sign the bill or explain to the Senate why he has not. In other words, the administration is either going to explain things to the students or take some action on the bill.

Pretty clever, eh wot! And now that you all have gleaned some idea from this little discussion of the power that the Student Senate possesses, (but seldom uses) please allow me to offer a few other suggestions that any clever member of the Senate may draft into a motion and make himself into a campus hero.

In a past Cacodyl I mentioned the problem of scholarships on campus. Let us not forget that the School of Men's Physical Education has control of the vending machines all over campus (both men's and women's dorms.) Now perhaps an explanation might be due the students (in the person of the Senate) as to why money from women's vending machines goes into men's athletic scholarships. In fact, how about a big fat investigation of scholarship policies in general.

The library has always been a sleeping dog issue (one that you kick every once in a while when there doesn't seem to be anyone or anything else to talk about.) Perhaps the Senate should take upon itself the initiative for discovering why so many books remain uncatalogued and why the library hours are the way they are. (Please do not bother to write me that the Faculty Senate is investigating this problem. The Faculty Senate has been investigating this problem for quite a while and there are still a lot of uncatalogued books.) Also, it might be worthy of mention that the increase in Library hours this year was the direct result of student pressure, and not Faculty Senate pressure.

Granted that Cournoyer's motion may lead to an increase of faculty in the near future which will go a long way towards reducing class size in some fields, but certainly the Student Senate can do more in this area. Isn't it about time that the administration began to let the students know what plans were being made about class size for the next few years? A request from the Senate would force an explanation from the administration. Once the bill has been passed it can not be ignored by the President, and hence the Board of Trustees.

Do all of these ideas stir your interest? I'm sure that they do and that you have many more ideas for the Senate. Tell you what I'm going to do, my friend, I'm going to inform you that your Senator is simply itching to hear from you. Believe it or not your Senator is a politician, so if he won't listen to you tell him that you will not vote for him next year and then slug him (if you're bigger than he is.)

A Dangerous Trend

During the past decade American foreign policy has turned away from being an expression of the basic values of the American people and has become a mere policy of opposing the expansion of the Communist sphere of influence.

At present, our government is worried and deeply concerned with the welfare of the Cuban people under Castro's Communist dictatorship. They should be commended for this concern, but why were they not concerned with the welfare of the Cuban people six years ago when they were supporting Batista?

In South Vietnam our country is spending over one hundred million dollars a year to fight Communism by supporting a regime that is ruled by an absolute dictator and his family. In this bastion of democracy the press is censored, American newsmen have been ousted, and non-Communists who may encourage freedom are jailed. American military officers have complained several times that the peasants show no desire to defend the Diem regime against Communist guerrillas. How then can we defend our way of life to a peasant living in Communist controlled North Vietnam, for if he escapes to South Vietnam he will find himself in a dictatorship similar to the one he left with the difference being that it is not ruled from Moscow. Is there no conflict?

In the future, if we Americans are to be patriotic in the traditional manner of backing our country whether it be right or wrong, we must learn to forget the ideal of freedom for all, and concern ourselves more with the ideal of becoming anti-Communists.

To the Editor:
Re:

A small episode at the Freshman Picnic.

Who are the self-righteous moralists on this campus? Step forward; we would like to commend you on a job well done. We know that you, and only you, are able to distinguish between "immorality" and decency is dancing. It was very commendable of you to cause certain couples to be whisked off the terrace because they were dancing "indecently." What stone age are you living in, anyway? What sort of double moral standard do you support?

If you are going to state that this dance is immoral, how can you condone the "mass grass" at the pond or at the President's Gardens? How can you condone the couples lining the steps, the centers, and the lounges of the women's dorms? This is acceptable according to your double standard. Why not revert completely to the Puritan age? Ban bermudas, sleeveless blouses, and sun bathing. A ridiculous argument? Perhaps, but who has the right to draw the line between decency and indecency?

All of today's dances are suggestive from the twist down to various interpretations of the "chicken scratch." Just as "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder," immorality is in the mind of the beholder.

Letter To The Editor:
Re: Genevieve Reall

Although it was indeed encouraging to hear from Genny Reall that there are several groups on campus, such as the Literary Society and the Philosophy Club, which are interested in the furtherance of discussion, it must be stated that awareness of the presence of a small number of dedicated students does not preclude the fact that there is a conspicuous absence of a preponderance of perceptive thought on the part of the majority of students. How many groups like the Philosophy Club exist? The more that can be formed and maintained, the greater the chance for this University to expand intellectually. But until the groups mentioned by Miss Reall become examples of the general trend on campus, instead of the exception, there will still be a need for the extention of mental creativity at the University.

Executive Positions For Grads in WAC

The most difficult thing for a college graduate to find is a salaried position that lives up to her high expectations.

Young women, graduating from college today, are somewhat amazed to find that while they are in demand, they are in demand on very special terms. Special skills, not usually learned in a liberal arts college, are easier to market than traits of leadership, the flair for adventure, and the energy to seize a challenging responsibility. The prerequisite of practical experience keeps may college graduates from ever entering completely satisfying fields of employment.

For women who qualify, there is a position of an officer in the United States Army, Women's Army Corps.

As a WAC officer she will work in a co-educational environment, she will travel the world, she will fill a variety of responsible executive positions, she will be promoted and receive pay and allowances on exactly the same basis as her male colleagues.

She may be married when she accepts her commission, or she may marry at any time thereafter and remain in service.

She must be between 21 and 31, and a college graduate to qualify basically. For more information write: WAC Selection Officer, First U.S. Army Recruiting District, 39 Whitehall Street, New York 4, N.Y.

Teasing Still Supports Hair Styles in Oklahoma

O'Collegian, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, took a survey and decided most students on campus are in favor of girls' hair styles, including that special curl, flare or teasing.

Most of the girls said they are in favor of the "bad habit" of backcombing or ratting, even though they wish it were not in style because of the trouble this teasing causes.

Some coeds believed the teasing was going out. At least, they had stopped it, and instead had time to catch a few extra minutes of sleep in the morning.

Hair dressers at the Union Beauty shop say that most of the hair styled there still is done with ratted hair. The "flip" and bouffant page-boy look were the styles most asked for by the girls, a lot of whom have standing weekly appointments to get that "natural look."

A senior boy noted that it's important for girls to have "enough hair to be abie to tell them from the boys."

A junior, felt that hair and hair styles are the most noticeable and most attractive thing about a girl.

Summing up a majority opinion, it was stressed: "Sharp girls always look good in their hair styles, and it's really what's under the hair style that counts."

College girls seem to know what they want. We get a lot of ideas about ring styling from American campuses. If there is such a thing as a consensus, it would sound like this: conservative styling, with a difference.

That's what we've designed into Tropic Star...the newest of the beautiful Artcarved diamond engagement rings. Like all Artcarved rings, it's styled for lasting beauty...guaranteed in writing for permanent value. Is Artcarved's beautiful new Tropic Star for you? See for yourself. ®TRADEMARK

Lutherans Plan Unusual Service

Immanuel Lutheran Church, worshipping in IOOF Hall, 17 Kellogg Ave., Amherst, plans an unusual worship service, Sunday, May 12, 11:00 A.M. Each portion of the Service will be introduced by a commentary explaining its meaning to the congregation. The "Narrative Communion" as it is called seeks to acquaint those unfamiliar with the Service with the meaning of the Lutheran Rite. The Rev. Richard E. Koenig will be the calebrant, and Mr. Fred Tesch, Amherst College '66, the narrator.

"The Lutheran liturgy has grown out of the tradition of the Western Church. It seeks to preserve the Church's link with the past while serving the needs of contemporary Christians," Pastor Koenig stated.

The narrative will take the place of the sermon. All are welcome to attend the service.

A Review

SPRING CONCERT

by LANGDON LOMBARD

In reporting a happening, it is unfair to gloss over the total experience of the event by an outstanding incident of merit, we suppose. And yet we are taught that the more an animal is deprived of a reward, the more desirable it becomes.

Tuesday night, May 7, Bartlett Auditorium when the University Chorale presented "A Short Spring Concert," was a time and place when such happened.

The reason for this was the appeal for the three Negro Spirituals presented in the fifth and final section. The soprano in the three spirituals, Ruth Kelly wiped away whatever unpleasant memories that the audience had about the Japhthah of Carissimi and the Three Choruses from the Magnificat in D Minor of Bach.

It could be suggested to the powers controlling the programs to be presented by the Chorale that in the future that these songs with which the group had more intimate contact be had in greater quantity.

UMass Forestry Club Places High at Orono

In its first year of competition at the Woodsmen's Weekend, the University of Massachusetts Forestry Club placed sixth in a field of thirteen teams representing nine colleges. Paul Smith College's "A" team of Paul Smith, New York took first place honors with 1,259 points out of a total of 1,500 possible. Nichols College's "A" team, Colby College's team, and Paul Smith's "B" team took 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th places respectively. Other competing teams were from Dartmouth, West Point, Middlebury, University of Maine, and the University of Connecticut.

The UMass team scored 926 points, taking 1st place in the log rolling, 2d place in tree felling, and 3rd place in fire building. Members of the UMass team were; Bruce Spencer, Dave Townley, Mike Sikora, Bill Thayer, Dick Bates, Bruce Cutter, Dave Carr, and coach Tom Foster.

Next year's Army will host the annual event at West Point. The UMass team hopes to be much more competitive next year with the knowledge of the skills, techniques, and equipment required for the various events. The Forestry Club also plans to hold their 2nd annual Logger's Jamboree on campus next fall, and will invite teams from the Universities of New Hampshire and Connecticut to compete.

State Senate Debates Dormitory Authority Bill

The Senate today will resume debate on a bill to create an authority to build dormitories at the ten state colleges which will determine whether the authority will be under the control of the state department of education or the state board of education.

Senator Kevin B. Harrington (D-Salem), who favors the state board, charged that the department is "empire-building" in seeking control over the authority. This was countered by the GOP floor leader, Senator Philip A. Graham of Hamilton, who declared that the colleges were engaged in "empire-building" by trying to expand "into ten universities."

Under the orginal bill, filed by Senator William D. Fleming (D-Worcester), chairman of the Senate ways and means committee, there would be nine members of the authority appointed by the Governor and approved by the Executive Council. Proposed projects would have to get approval of the department before going to the state board and then to the authority.

Senator Harrington offered amendments which would require that three members be state college presidents, three others be members of the state board, and three others, one of whom would be a state college graduate but not a president, be appointed by the Governor without Council consent.

Also his amendments would give the state board and not the department final approval of projects; include student union buildings; increase the bond-issuing power from $5 to $10 millions; and bar the use of state funds in the construction of the buildings. Rents from the buildings pay off the interest and principal of the bond issues.

The Salem lawmaker, who is chairman of the special commission which is making an overall study of education in Massachusetts, introduced a new idea during debate as he attacked the department of education commissioner, Owen B. Kiernan. "I respect the commissioner but I don't think he should have the ten state colleges under him," he said. "That a new idea and the issue here is different." From inception the colleges have been in the education department and under the commissioner.

Senator Graham said that educational costs have increased without any thought as to the ultimate cost." He cited legislative approval of a state medical school, doubling of the student population at the University of Massachusetts and expansion of the state colleges, from teacher training schools to multi-purpose colleges.

Senator Harrington asserted that Sen. Graham was interested more in the cost than in providing low-cost quality education for Massachusetts youths. He admitted that the university plans envision a student population of 35,000 eventually and further expansion of the state colleges. Further debate was postponed until today to give Senators time to study the proposed changes in the bill.

Broadway Stage Hit "Mary, Mary" To Be Produced in Northampton

The Broadway comedy stage hit, "Mary, Mary" will be the main attraction on the stage of the Academy of Music in Northampton on Sunday, May 12th. Two shows are the prospect for the day, a matinee at 3 P.M. and an evening performance at 8 P.M.

The comedy, which is still playing for packed houses on Broadway, where it opened almost two years ago, is the fourth event on the curret theatre series brought to these parts jointly by the Academy of Music and Smith College.

Starring in the play, written by the woman acknowledged to be the wittiest writer for modern theatre tastes, Jean Kerr, is a phalanx of film, stage and television luminaries, headed by Jeffrey Lynn, Patricia Smith and John Lasell. The company of players, headed by that triumvirate, are now finishing up a year of appearances across the country in the comedy. The week after its viewing on the Academy of Music stage, it will head for the city of Philadelphia for an extended run.

Author Kerr, whose published exploits include such fare as "Please Dont Eat the Daisies" and "The Snake Has All The Lines," is on her way to being turned into a millionaire by "Mary, Mary," At last report, the royalties being paid to her from the four companies of the show now on view around the country are running better than $10,000 weekly.

Because the show is being brought to the Academy of Music stage on a Sunday, it was decided to give both an afternoon and evening show, to permit visitors from distant points to travel to Northampton early in the day.

The list of events on the theatre-college calendar is being presented under the direction of Richard Weaver. On Broadway Mr. Weaver has been associated with major hits, including "The Music Man," "Bells Are Ringing" and "Fanny." Next season he plans to present some of the major hits of the current season on the series program, including "A Man For All Seasons" and "Take Her, She's Mine."

First Inning Rally Gives Redmen Win Over Marines

by AL RICE '66

The Redmen rapped out five straight hits to start of the game with Camp Lejeune Wednesday which were good enough for four runs. It was a good thing for UMass that they did, because the Marines allowed only two hits and no runs the rest of the way while picking away at the Mass lead with three runs before losing to Earl Lorden's charges 4-3.

Four singles and a bunt off Lejeune starter Bill Herrington coupled with his two base throwing error started the Redmen off on the right foot, but lefty John Hackney came in with none out and allowed only a sacrifice fly and a sixth inning single to Corky Schmoyer before leaving for a pinch hitter in the top of the seventh. Mike Hamilton went the last two innings for Camp Lejeune putting two Redmen runners on base in the eighth.

The scoring volley was started off with consecutive singles to center by Tony Simone and Pete Larkin. Tony Williams advanced both men with a bunt that Herrington chased down, and the pitcher fired into right field with Simone easily scoring and Larkin making it in from second. Williams kept going around to third while Bill Westendick took out after the ball. John Awdycki followed up with a line shot past the shortstop into center and went to second on Steve Wojnar's base hit. Bob Hughes received a walk from Hackney atfer Wojnar keyoed the starter. Schmoyer picked up a run batted in with a long poke to left that was caught, letting Awdycki score from third with the fourth run of the inning, and what proved to be the last anything resembling a Redman run the rest of the day.

Rod Corey started on the hill for Massachusetts and got the Marines in order in the first frame, thanks to a fine play by Williams on a slow roller by the leadoff batter. Lejeune got to Corey for a run in the second on a long blow by Chuck Telechea, switch hitting shortstop, that carried in to the trees in right field. Wojnar retrieved the ball, but his throw to relayman Schmoyer was wide of the mark letting Telechea score on what would have been a triple. Wojnar made up for the poor throw with a brilliant running catch of Dave Hinz' blast in the seventh Wojnar took off from his right field spot and ran the ball down directly in front of the main gate at Alumni Field near the football ticket booth. The belt came off Mike Johnson who took over the mound chores from Rick Farrell in the seventh, and it scored pinch hitter Joe Dunn from second after he had been hit by a pitch. Had Wojnar not caught the ball, it would most likely have gone for a four bagger and tied the game.

The second Lejeune run came off Corey in third by way of two errors. Schmoyer booted Hinz' ball between first and second after Dick Simpson had reached on a fielder's choice. Simpson lit out for third on the initial play, and the throw in from right field trying for Hinz at second was dropped by Pete Larkin. Seeing this, Simpson headed for home but the throw in was too high for Dave Krukonis to handle.

Farrell took over the middle three innings and received credit for the win. He allowed a walk in each of his three frames and was tagged for a single in the sixth. In that inning he was the victim of a strange play called by the base umpire. Westendick had led off the inning with an infield single and moved to second on a throwing miscue. Telechea attempted a sacrifice bunt that Farrell picked up near the first base line, a few feet away from the bag. The ump called the play interference on Farrell and awarded first base to Telechea. A more legitimate sacrifice by Lefty McClellan pushed both runners around to second and third, but Farrell got catcher Tom O'Leary to ground into his second double play of the day.

Camp Lejeune had an opportunity to tie the game in the eighth off Johnson when Westendick single to center and Billy Garrett reached on an infield hit, but John Awdycki cut Westendick down at the plate trying to score on the hit to first.

The Bearcats Vendetta

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Ten years ago, the state of Ohio proudly claimed the University of Cincinnati as possessing one of the mid-west's finest football reputations. Over the years, the Bearcats boasted coaches like Gilman, Dietzel, Blackburn, Shalosky, and UM's Jack Delaney. They have produced more than a dozen professional players, including Max Messner, Jim Leo, Ken Byers, Gene Gossage, Joe Morrison, and Gene Johnson.

As far as allegiance and affection were concerned, there was only one sport at Cincy and it was wrapped in pigskin. In downtown Cincinnati, a wealthy and generous alumni athletic association functioned. Under the title of the UNOCIN Club. The club's donations more than matched the University's athletic scholarship and as the years passed its power strongly influenced the coaching staff. It also instilled in them a respect for wealthy alumni.

Then, in 1956, along came a soft-shouldered, bug-eyed negro kid from Indiana's Crispus Attucks High School. As it became clear that here was the greatest basketball player ever born, —"poof"—out went the air from the football and —"swoosh"—on went the macadam hardtop to convert the beautiful multi-sport Cincinnati field house to a one-sport basketball court.

Today, Oscar Robertson is gone but the appetite for basetball remains. Many UNOCIN members have switched their allegiance and funds to the basketball Century club. For seven years, Cincinnati has had the shadow of a roundball hanging imposingly over it and in the ensuing darkness of the last two years, the grid teams have compiled a 5-15 won-lost record.

A few months ago, as Coach Ed Jucker's Bearcats lost their National Championship basketball crown to Loyola of Chicago's Ramblers, Cincinnati's 34-year-old football coach, Chuck Studley, and his staff sat wondering in Louisville's Freedom Hall. Wondering if a loss would swing some of the ex-UNOCIN members' enthusiasm back to football, Chuck Studley probably betrayed little disappointment at the game's outcome that Saturday night.

A Big Ten prodigy from Illinois, Studley served his apprenticeship in the Big Ten. In 1960, the University of Massachusetts signed Studley to a one year written contract, and agreed upon a two year verbal contract.

In one year, Studley brought UMass its first Yankee Conference Championship, an upset victory over Harvard, and some of the worst student-athletes any campus ever saw. The absence of juniors on Fusia's 1962 squad was due to Studley's poor academic and character selections. Less than one dozen Studley recruits remain at UMass today.

With one winning year under his belt as a head coach, the ambitious Studley decided he was ready for the "Big Time." Walking out graciously on a verbal contract in Amherst, Studley and his staff jumped into the Missouri Valley conference at Cincinnati the year after Oscar Robertson departed.

With a glib tongue and sparkling personality, Studley immediately charmed the money belts off The Bearcat Club . . . for a month or two. Then Cincinnati won its first national basketball title. Six months later Studley was initiated into "Big Time" football with two wins and seven losses. The UNOCIN Club was again counting the days till basketball season.

A year later, Ed Jucker won another national basketball title for Cincy and Chuck Studley won three football games and lost seven. The most insulting fact of it all was that five of the seven defeats were by one point. Suddenly the few grid enthusiasts left in the UNOCIN Club began to simmer and thunder. Perhaps this young man wasn't as well-seasoned as they thought in 1961. The student newspaper, the News Record, expressed concern and discontent with the grid situation.

As spring practice ended last week, it must have occurred to the crew-cutted Studley that the subtlety of the vendetta between football and basketball at Cincy was over. The time had arrived for a declaration of war; survival of the fittest. The trouble was that the decision comes out of desperation, as a last stand, with his back to the wall and with a look in his eye not too unlike that in the eye of a Floyd Patterson: determined in the face of impending disaster.

There is little doubt that it is now or never for Studley. His young staff has balked at the pressure from alumni, students, and The UNOCIN Club. Post-game complaining phone calls badgered the staff last year until several coaches grew restless for pastures with easier touchdowns. Oh, for the peace and quiet of Amherst. At the end of last season, Studley's offensive and defensive backfield coaches pulled out to coach high school ball.

With the words, "It's faster to fly than walk," Studley last week previewed his desperation: a new pro offense operated from a wing-T with use of a wide end. On the eve of his third season, and the last leg of a three year contract, Studley appears to have found the quarterback he's been missing for two seasons. He is soph Roger Walz, a ground-air QB who led the second team to victory in the annual spring scrimmage. Brewster Academy product Tom "Buckets" Manning, also a soph, is expected to back up Walz. They have crossed the goalposts in Cincinnati for good luck in hopes that Walz and Manning stay and elude the Studley attrition jinx.

Songwriters Vernon Duke and Ira Gershwin penned a song whose lyrics went:

"All the papers, where I led the news with my capers, now will spread the news: superman turned out to be flash-in-the-pan. In Cincinnati or in Rangoon . . . their whims are more than just charted, but I can't get started with you."

Chuck Studley is still trying to get started in Cincy. There is no longer time to "walk"; he must "fly" to cover lost ground. It remains to be seen what the ambitious young man from the Big Ten will be singing come contract time in late 1963.

Lacrossemen Take Seventh Straight Over Holy Cross

by WALT GREEN '66

The University of Massachusetts Varsity Lacrosse team kept their winning streak going with a 9 to 3 victory over the Crusaders of Holy Cross at Holy Cross Stadium last Saturday. The weather was perfect as the Redmen set out to defend their undefeated league record. The Crusaders had a strong team and naturally UMass was the team to beat, but the Crusaders had considerable trouble.

Junior attackman, Steve Harrington, started off the game with a goal at 3:27 in the first period with a fine side-arm shot from the outside. This was the only UMass goal of the period and the Crusaders matched it at 11:03 on a straight shot by Hennesey with the assist going to Dower. Both teams looked a bit sloppy in the first period, perhaps the heat and lack of air in the stadium affected the men. The Redmen seemed to be a little sluggish and low in spirit but they soon returned to th form displayed during the Amherst game. The "Middies" had some trouble getting the ball behind the Holy Cross Cage to Don Tremblay, to set-up the plays.

The second period was the strongest offensively for the Redmen as they scored three goals.

A fast break was initiated by the Redmen and the pass went to Don Tremblay. Don faked out two defenders and then jumped high in the air and fired the ball into the corner of the goal, his favorite spot. The "Cross" thought they had stifled another UMass attack, the Crusader goalie passed off the ball but Frank Gilliatt broke and picked it off, he then fired a perfect pass to Fran Casey and at 7:28 Fran rippled the net. Eighteen seconds later another Redmen goal was scored, the last of the period.

The Crusaders opened up the second half with a quick goal at 0:14. UMass had a one man advantage on three different occassions but couldn't score. Then at 8:37, Co-Capt. Frank Gilliatt broke lose and scored on an overhead shot unassistedly and the Redmen led, 5-2.

Steve Harrington opened up the fourth and final period of play with a goal at 2:05. Steve stole the ball and shot on a vacant net, except for the defenders racing about in front of the goal. The Crusaders tried several last minute desperation plays at the end of the period and finally scored at 14:13 on an overhand shot by Maloney, to end the game. The final score Redmen 6 and the Crusaders 3.

The Redmen spirit was considerably higher in the second half and they were much tougher defensively. Frank Infusino also was rough to beat on the face-off and hard to guard because of his speed. Dick Baird played his regular sound game. He was called on to make a tremendous number of saves at the stadium and he handled them all aptly. Several times his only alternative was to charge out of the net at the attackman and in this way he spoiled many shots.

Twitchell Leads Favored Redmen Into YC Tennis

The Redmen tennis team, headed by its ace, Rodger Twitchell, is a top heavy favorite to retain its Yankee Conference title when the championships are played this weekend at the University of Rhode Island courts in Kingston. In the event of rain, the matches will be moved to the indoor courts at Agawam Hunt, East Providence.

The UConn Huskies are given the best chance of extending the Redmen with Rhode Island, Maine and Vermont given an outside chance of causing trouble.

First round singles will start at 10 o'clock Friday morning and the second round singles will begin at 1:30. The opening round of the doubles matches will follow the completion of the singles competition. The final round of the singles will be Saturday morning at 9:30 and the final round in the doubles is scheduled for 1 o'clock.

With Twitchell expected to dominate the first singles group, the well-balanced Massmen are also expected to give a good account of themselves in the other flights. Others competing in the singles are Capt. Tom Simons, Mike Rose, Bob Neal, Dick Leete and Bill Martin while Bob Greenberg will pair with Martin in one of the doubles combination. Twitchell and Neal make up another combination and Simons and Leete, the third.

Today's Sport Parade

NEW YORK UPI — A half dozen or more of the top major league stars of a year ago will tell you with glum vehemence today that it's only a short step from who's who to who's he.

It's an all-star list that's having the leaping miseries as the season's shakedown cruises ends and the long grind really gets into full swing. Fellows like Pete Runnels, Harmon Killebrew, Ralph Terry, Tommy Davis, Willie Mays, Dou Drysdale and Bob Purkey.

All of them were departmental leaders of one sort or another when all the hits, runs and erros were tallied up last year but as of right now there have been a lot of damaging changes made.

Trade Didn't Help

Runnels won the American League batting crown last season with a fine .326 mark but then the roof fell in. He was traded to Houston, developed a stomach disorder which couldn't have been helped by the switch and currently is gently bruising the ball at an anemic .194 clip.

Killebrew led the AL with 48 home runs the last time out but hurt himself in spring training. Blame housemaid's knee, or water thereabouts, for his current output of one circuit clout. Proving that everybody in Minnesota doesn't laud the rippling waters.

Top man among the Americans in the matter of victories last year was Terry. To polish off his 23 wins he collected the final game of the World Series. Big Ralph may have to buy a ticket to get in this time if he doesn't improve his current 3-3 mark.

His counterpart in the National League, 25-game winner Don Drysdale, isn't even doing that well. The big man of the Dodgers holds a mere 2-3 mark.

Davis Pulls Muscle

Drysdale's teammate, Tommy Davis, copped the NL batting crown with a .346 barrage and such was Tommy's power and such was Tommy's grace that they figured he could do it once again while making third his base. And if that isn't poetry, neither is Tommy's current production. Defensively he made like a five-thumbed Pepper Martin, pulled a hamstring muscle and is limping along at a .250 gait at the plate.

Senate ...

Laws, the bills were tabled for one week, pending action at the next meeting.

It was toward the end of debate on this bill that Paul Donahue rose in protest to recognition of a speaker. President Fife ruled him out of order. Donahue appealed the decision of the chair. He was defeated.

Cournoyer then presented his third bill:

Whereas the University of Massachusetts is entering into its second century of scholastic growth, and its main aim being the fostering of "Higher learning more widely disseminated."

Be it resolved that the Student Senate on behalf of the student body, and in the interest of fostering a greater quality of education at the University, strongly requests that the Board of Trustees and the President of the University reconsider its budget act of fiscal 1965 in order to look into the possibility of procuring a greater appropriation for the faculty pay raises and increase of staff.

He then stated that the President has to sign all bills of the Senate for them to become law. Therefore, the Senate has put him in a position of having to declare himself one way or the other on the bill. If he refuses to sign it, he must give reasons. So, either way, the students will be informed.

Sen. Paul Donahue objected to the bill on the grounds that "We don't know the situation. The bill should be considered further." He was answered by Sen. George Jones who replied that "anyone reading the Collegian, or any other Massachusetts paper will know where the state ranks in aid to education.

The bill was passed on a roll call vote with Donahue dissenting.

A bill to decrease the size of the Women's Affairs Committee was tabled.

Finally, the graduating former officers, Don Cournoyer, Betsy Robicheau, and Dolores Matthews were presentd with copies of Robert's Rules, as a token of the Senate's appreciation for their work in the past year.

UM Geologist Finds Water Source By Scientific Means

Most people have heard about "water witchers" and their attempts to locate suitable water sources, but few are aware of the work of ground-water geologists in locating water supplies.

A University of Massachusetts geologist, Dr. Ward S. Motts, uncovered a community water source recently for the town of Hardwick by employing scientific methods.

Dr. Motts, formerly a ground-water specialist with the U.S. Geological Survey, conducted a brief geologic and hydrologic survey of the Hardwick area, then recommended drilling. When the After D. Motts used aerial photo-drilling, Hardwick had its source of water.

The Hardwick area presented a problem for Dr. Motts, since the region lacks the alluvium and the glacial outwash which in New England normally yield the most water.

Motts met the challenge by locating faults aud fractures in the granite bedrock. These faults and fractures contained ample amounts of water.

The U. of M. professor also located a shatter zone, where three major faults intersected and where the largest amount of water in the area was stored.

Bill To Increase Cigarette Tax Rescued By Powers

By a smart parliamentary maneuver Senate President John E. Powers (D-Boston) rescued from an adverse report from the taxation committee his bill to increase the state cigarette tax by one and one-half cents to raise about $10,000,000 for distribution to cities and town in which are located institutions of higher learning.

Under legislative rules an adverse report on a bill must be sent to the body wherein the petition originated. President Powers and Mayor John F. Collins of Boston sponsored the tax increase and, under the rules, the adverse report was sent to the Senate.

However, the state constitution requires that revenue-raising bills must be referred to the House for initial action. President Powers moved that his bill be referred to the House ways and means committee with the proviso that the committee report its finding to the lower branch, thus overcoming the constitutional hurdle and action at this time in the Senate.

President Powers said the one and one-half cent boost would not raise the Massachusetts cigarette tax above the average of other states. He said he opposed new taxes except for specified purposes and emphasized that the Bay State, alone among states, has not voted new taxes or increased existing levies. Powers, who does not smoke, said the proposed tax "is not too great an imposition in view of the good it will do" to aid communities to pay for municipal services tax exempt educational institutions get free.

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO FALCON

EVERYTHING! AND YET...

Early this year we put a 164-hp V-8 in a new kind of Falcon called the Sprint, and entered the stiffest winter road test we could find . . . the 2,500-mile Monte Carlo Rallye. We didn't know what would happen . . . but happen it did.

First, no one dreamed all the Rallye cars would have to experience the worst winter in decades. Snow, below zero temperatures, and the most demanding terrain in Europe took their toll. Two thirds of the 296 cars that started, failed to reach Monaco.

A lot of experts told us that the Falcon V-8's, untried as they were, could not hope to finish the Rallye with the best of weather. But not only did two Falcon Sprints finish, they placed first and second in their class. But there were more surprises (for everyone) in store. Against all competition, regardless of class, the lead Sprint went on to take first in the final six performance legs.

We honestly didn't know the Falcon Sprint would do this well. But it showed us a Falcon with our new 164-hp V-8 is a car that can perform with the best of them. So a lot has happened to Falcon, and yet . . .

A six-cylinder Falcon has just finished the Mobil Economy Run and finished first in its class. It had to take a lot of punishment, too . . . 2,500 miles from Los Angeles to Detroit over mountains, deserts, and long stretches of superhighways. But the nickel-nursing ways of the all-time Economy Champ took all comers in its class.

So you see something has happened to the Falcon. It can be what you want it to be . . . a V-8 that travels in the same circle as Europe's performance kings . . . or a Six that can travel cross-country on a budget. There's something to put into your compact.

Galbraith Announced As Main Commencement Speaker

LIBRARY
MAY 15 1963
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

The Massachusetts Centennial Year COLLEGIAN

Vol. XCII No. 76 5¢ Per Copy | University of Massachusetts | Monday, May 13, 1963

John Kenneth Galbraith, U.S. Ambassador to India and noted economist and author, will be the principal speaker at this year's commencement exercises it was announced today by President John W. Lederle.

The commencement address, on a topic to be announced later, will be given June 9. The University's graduation exercises will be the final event of the institution's formal centennial observance in which the class of 1963 will participate. The centennial class, numbering more than one thousand candidates for degrees, will be the largest ever graduated by the University.

Ambassador Galbraith, who was professor of economics at Harvard University from 1948 to 1961, was appointed to his present post by President Kennedy and has served since April, 1961.

Galbraith's "The Affluent Society," published in 1958, established him as one of the country's most articulate spokesmen in the field of modern economic thought. The London Times, in its review of the book, said that the author showed himself "as a truly sensitive and civilized man, whose ideas are grounded in the common culture of two continents, and may serve as a link between them; his book is of foremost importance for them both."

Born in Canada, Ambassador Galbraith attended the University of Toronto where he received his bachelor's degree in 1931. He received his M.A. at the University of California in 1933 and his Ph.D. at the same institution in 1934. He later studied at Cambridge University.

Galbraith taught at Harvard University from 1934 to 1939 and then joined the faculty of Princeton University. In 1940 he was named Economic Advisor to the National Advisory Committee and the following year became Assistant Administrator in charge of the Price Division of the Office of Price Administration. He was appointed Deputy Director of the OPA in 1942.

From 1943 to 1948 Galbraith was a member of the Board of Editors of Fortune Magazine.

After serving for a year as Director of the U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey, the Ambassador joined the Department of State as Director of the Office of Economic Security Policy.

A fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Galbraith was a recipient of the Medal for Freedom for his services to the country.

Other prominent Americans who have appeared at the University of Massachusetts during its centennial observance include Sending the Centennial year out with a bang, the Kingston Trio played to a capacity audience of 4100 at the Cage last night..

Jammed with a sellout crowd, the building rang with the sounds of such familiar favorites as "Tom Dooley", "Greenback Dollar", and "When The Saints Go Marching In."

The concert was the climax of a day of celebrating the University's centennial year.

The afternoon saw what amounted to the largest parade ever seen in this area, with over 50 units participating.

UMass Students Protest Birmingham Violence

Editorial Page —

ON LEADERSHIP

The student leaders on this campus are clearly defined individuals. Their red, white, blue and candystripe jackets stick out like sore thumbs at all social functions. They are truly our campus leaders.

But are they? It is one thing to organize a dance, a picnic, or even a graduation ceremony, but it is quite a different thing to truly lead a student body.

Leadership is a nebulous term, and we shall not try to define it here. However, it seems obvious that our so-called student leaders, the people to whom we dedicate one night a year, should be doing a lot more than they are, By this we mean that our "leaders" should expand their scope of operation, and in doing so concern themselves not entirely with the social functions of the University.

Student leaders, if they are that, should hold an integral position in the molding of opinion and the determination of constructive student action on this campus.

What brings this situation most clearly to light are the rare occasions when this community does something greater than stage dances or folk concerts. Such an instance was Saturday's march by over two hundred faculty and students protesting the "inhumane" conditions of the Negroes of Birmingham, Alabama.

In all probability, not everyone of our jacketed or titled "student leaders" agreed in principal or in practice with the protest march. But it is inconceivable that not one of them did so agree. We contend that if such people do so agree it is their duty to fulfill their obligation to the student body; and that is to lead.

The leadership by our "student leaders" should be a continual process. Their individual and collective views should be brought to the campus and should be a primal source in the molding of student opinion.

A Fine Murder

by ANN MILLER

BRAVO! Bravo for University Theatre and the students who worked on UT's weekend production of Murder In The Cathedral. The academic theatre's fourth production in their first year at UMass was impressive.

Acting, direction, sets design, lighting—all very good. There was no miscasting in Murder—a notable flaw in other productions this year. The chanting, especially that by the Chorus of the Women of Canterbury, was well-timed and understandable.

T. S. Eliot's poetic drama, which takes its cue from work of early Greek dramatists, was performed the way it was written. Under the capable direction of Harry Mahnken, the author's religious skepticism, his powerful language and complex implications, hit simply, hard and loud.

Frank Powers, as the Archbishop Thomas Beckett who, it appears, desires religious martyrdom for the glory it will bring him ("The right deed for the wrong reason . . . the greatest treason") was memorable. Thomas Kerrigan and James Wrynn, as Knights and Tempters, showed impressive acting ability.

With a wind-up to the season like this—we look forward to next year's first production.

CHAMBER CONCERT

by LANGDON F. LOMBARD

A Concert of Chamber Music featuring compositions written by students who are Music Majors here at the University was presented Wednesday, May 8 at 8:15 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

When placed before the aura of avant guard music, those with sensitive ears are most likely to run for the local bomb shelter. I am sure that there were a few listeners who wanted such a shelter at this concert.

There were mainly good effects on the whole from the music. The "Pour le Chat" (Music for Everybody) by E. Biladeau was meant to be the least serious piece of the evening with a warning that "the final chord of the work will please no one." It was successful in its less serious intent from the bulk of the other student works on the program.

Perhaps the most effective work was E² (Symphony for Piano and Tape Recorder) by R. Alberici. It was one of the most progressive pieces on the program designed for the "colors" of the orchestra to be played by the tape with the piano as soloist much like a typical Romantic Concerto in form. The sound was quite the opposite.

The three works by J. Maggs and the Suite in Five Movements by H. Allain rang with a more familiar ring—the latter being a twelve-tone row study using strict Schonberg rules.

But whatever effects anyone might have had, good, bad, or indifferent, might we suggest the following thesis: that the music heard at this concert will be the music of the future, that it will grow and prosper and be, perhaps, the only link with the past that future generations will hold with any feeling.

Growing Away

Perennially, the University is faced with the problem of campus housing for its students. The problem is a complex one, in which University-student needs must be reconciled. Last February, plans for six twenty-two story buildings were announced. The high-rise dorms will be equivalent to piling three conventional dorms one on top of the other. University Treasurer, Mr. Johnson, has assured that this dormitory complex will be one of the "greatest developments" in the nation. It must be admitted that from a standpoint of land utilization, this complex is a "great development." But, what are the long-range consequences of these dormitories to the University community and to the individual student.

If one perceives the idea of college education as that of maturation and living, with functional personal relationships, then these dormitories are a farce to the very existence of the University. The idea of a personal education has always been an American ideal. Small dormitories are the bases through which creative ideas and more importantly, productive individual actions may filter. Man learns to live and do through intimate contact with man. Present dormitory conditions barely provide the proper environmental and psychological conditions for prolific growth.

Examination of the current state of mens dormitories bears out this argument. Butterfield dormitory which has the fewest number of men has proven itself in bringing attention to the positive nature of small dormitories. Of the 140 occupants, 120 men recently participated in dormitory elections. Two Adelphians, the Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian, the Make-up editor of the Collegian, many varsity athletes, and participants in WMUA and the Collegian also inhabit Butterfield. This is indeed commendable. To argue that there is not an inverse relationship between living conditions and University accomplishments would be foolhardy.

The problems of expansion, especially in the realm of a State University are voluminous, but so too are the problems which students must face in their individual growth. It will be gratifying to hear a loudspeaker in a 22-story dorm—"Telephone call for student number 1462!" This is a great tribute to the ideal of University growth.

AN UNDERSTANDING

The protest held Saturday afternoon was more than a rally against inequality, it was a call for the maintenance of democracy;—the support of the "American way of life." The "American ideal" is challenged today with equality handed out according to color. Southerners and other prejudiced discrimination mongers see their economic advantages and other exclusive privileges being challenged by some crowd of "impudent Negroes" who would dare to step out of their subservient positions to defy "White Supremacy". These people have allowed the "American ideal" to slip away, through the shades of stubborness and self-interest.

Those 200 protesters who walked, orderly and silently, through the town of Amherst, won't gain national or even city-wide recognition—but what they have accomplished is the adherence to the "American ideal." The professors who helped instill the ideas of democracy in their students and those students who have absorbed these precepts have had a rare chance. They have seen academic knowledge pass into the realm of human action and understanding.

If you will it, it is no dream

For the past few weeks thousands of Negroes have rioted for equal rights in the city of Birmingham, Alabama. These riots were "controlled" by a police department whose arsenal included clubs, riot guns, high pressure hoses, vicious dogs, and an armed vehicle. From the White House during this period was heard a voice which expressed "faith" in the citizens of Alabama to settle their problem, and from Congress, with the exception of Javits, Humphreys, and a few others, nothing was heard.

Then last Friday, the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the leader of the Negro movement for equality in Burmingham announced that an agreement had been reached with a group of White citizens representing the City of Birmingham, Alabama. The White citizens had conceded to the Negroes the demands for which thousands have gone to jail to acquire: downtown shopping areas are to be integrated, better job opportunities will be open to negroes, all citizens arrested in the demonstrations in the past five weeks will be freed, and more importantly, a White-Negro communal council will be established.

This action by a group of White citizens who have attempted to rise above their own personal prejudices and to act as rational human beings in the interests of the entire community is a sign of hope. Furthermore, this solution by arbitrary means, instead of by the use of armed troops, as were used at Little Rock, and at the University of Mississippi seems to be more sensible for it symbolizes a settlement made by the people of Birmingham, Alabama, rather than by the federal government.

The settlement in Birmingham, Alabama, is not the conclusion in the quest for equality by non-White Americans, rather it is only the beginning. There will be countless other cities like Birmingham, with their riots and arrests, but let us hope that these cities will contain citizens which will have the human decency and courage to act in the interests of all human beings.

—LETTERS TO THE EDITOR—

To the University Student Body
% The Editor

I had first planned to write this letter to Mr. Neal Andelman, complementing him on his first constructive article about the Student Senate, and try to answer some of his inquiries about the Senate. But at this time I feel it is more important to address the Student Body and let them know the aims of their Senate and the way they can help in creating a more responsible student government.

Two years ago the Senate fell by the wayside. Due to a lack of leadership and friction within the Senate its production and esteem fell to a minimum, but through the strong, guiding hands of former President Don Cournoyer and former Vice-President Betsy Robicheau the Senate regained its position as the legislative body of the campus—the only student organization which can, with any degree of success, voice the problems of the student body to the administration and see that action is taken.

So, as last year was a building year for the Student Senate, next year is going to be an expanding year; expanding in the scope of the problems to be delt with, expanding in the depth of work to be covered, and emphasizing the importance of the rights of the student body. It is my aim to make the Senate a more effective legislative body. I hope to widen our scope from dealing with mostly financial motions (as important as they are) to dealing with any problem that exists and affects the student body. By creating better cooperation between WMUA and the Collegian we can bring the Senate closer to you, the student body, and let you know not only the results of our efforts but the information we have gathered. It is important to realize that not all things are bad or badly run; it is because the students do not know why or how things like the S.U.G. Board or the scholarship program are run and therefore, through misinformation, many things are criticized when actually they are working with the best interest of the Student Body in mind.

Mr. Andelman has mentioned his concern over the distribution of scholarships, the inadequacies of our library and the large size of the classes. These are not only his concern but are the main concern of the Senate. These are the type of problems the Senate should deal with and it will deal with them. The scope of the Senate is unlimited and therefore it is the responsibility of the Senate to make recommendations to the administration and to try and remedy any problems that concern the Student Body.

The Student Body also has a responsibility to its Student Government. For without the consideration of the Student Body in voting for responsible and capable Senators the Senate can not function properly. Remember this next fall, that without the efforts of qualified students the Senate is powerless to make itself the effective body it should and can be.

Turning On The Twist

To the Editor:

There is something that has aroused the freshman students. Wednesday's Collegian contained a photograph of the "twisting" at the Frosh Picnic. I, as well as many other freshman students, have been embarrassed, ashamed, and humiliated by the Collegian for printing this.

For one thing, the picture did not portray the picnic, that's for sure. Secondly, the two that were twisting weren't freshmen. They are upperclassmen. Our class should not be judged by the acts of those who are not members of it. And, finally, many of the frosh's parents subscribe to the Collegian. I can just imagine my parents seeing that picture!

The picture surely gives the University a bigger and better name, doesn't it? I only wish that the Collegian could allot their space with more consideration for others, especially the Frosh. A fine way of creating good-will for the Collegian!!!

Three Indiana Students Indicted

Three Indiana University students, all members of the Young Socialist Alliance, were indicted last week undr the provisions of a 1951 state anti-subversive act.

The Monroe County Grand Jury, which brought the indictment, charge that the three students assembled on March 25 of this year "for the purpose of advocating or teaching the doctrine that the government of the United States or the State of Indiana should be overthrown by force, violence, or other unlawful means, voluntarily participating therein by their presence, aid or instigation, and as officers of a Trotskyite Communist organization called the Young Socialist Alliance, the youth group of the Socialist Workers' Party."

The students named in the indictment were Ralph Levitt and James Bingham of Indianapolis, and Tom Morgan of Terre Haute, Ind. The three are free on bail. for months, as the American The trial will probably not come Civil Liberties Union and other interested parties plan to enter Amicus Curiae briefs, which may take months to prepare.

The YSA's troubles at Indiana began last October, when a numer of YSA members joined in demonstrations against the blockade of the island of Cuba by the Kennedy Administration. The demonstrators were jostled and threatened by a crowd of thousands. The Monroe County prosecutor, Thomas Hoadley, announced that he planned to investigate the YSA to determine if they had incited a riot. The YSA charged that Hoadley dropped charges against two non-students also involved in the October disturbance. One of the two released is alleged to have hit a policemen, and the other to have slugged a YSA member.

Hoadley publically suggested that the Indiana University administration throw the YSA chapter off campus in a letter to a local paper in February. Joseph Ewers, assistant to Indiana University President Elvis Stahr, said that the Hoadley statement on the YSA was sent to the papers before the university was notified of it.

Samuel E. Braden, a vice-president of the university, issued a statement saying that "it is very difficult to understand why the prosecuting attorney, if he believed he had discovered a violaion of the law, decided not to bring it to the attention of the university, but instead issued a statement to the press."

IU President Stahr requested the State of Indiana Attny. Gen. to issue an interpretation as to whether or not the YSA is in violation of the 1951 statute. The AG has yet to do so, and the university is continuing to recognize the YSA as a legitimate group until proven otherwise.

But the story really broke when YSA national secretary LeRoy McRae spoke in Bloomington at a meeting attended by about 125 persons. It is charged that the specific violation of the state anti-subversive statute occurred at that meeting. The content of McRae's speech centered around the civil rights struggle of the American Negro.

Some months ago the Indiana campus was hit by a narcotics scandal, several students being arrested for illegal possession of narcotics. Prosecutor Hoadley declared that the YSA "might" have been using narcotics to attract new members. A YSA spokesman said that the narcotics charge went before the grand jury, but could not be checked since no list of names of YSA members existed.

The YSA has also charged that Hoadley has said that a Moscow-trained man and wife team was sent to the IU campus to organize the YSA. The YSA has pointed out that no Moscow agent could possibly be sent to organize a Trotskyite group.

Catamounts Take Doubleheader From Redmen; 1-0, 1-0

Pia And Wilson Turn In Two Brilliant Performances

by AL RICE '66

The University of Massachusetts baseball squad took on the University of Vermont in a doubleheader Saturday and had the most amazing pitching performances possible from Dick Wilson and Lew Pia, but somewhere between Amherst and Burlington the UMass bats were completely drained of base hits. The result of the twin bill was a double victory by the Catamounts by 1-0 scores. Dick Cassani, the ace of the Vermont staff hooked up with Wilson in the first game, and he allowed only three singles, none after the fourth. Sophomore Carl Martin handcuffed the Redmen in the second game with a two hitter.

Vermont was stopped just as firmly by the Redmen hurlers, however, and the factor that accounted for the two runs was mostly luck. Dick Wilson had the Catamounts held to one hit for six and two thirds innings before Al Foster reached an an infield hit to second base. Corky Schmoyer made a fine play on the ball, and his throw hit first the same time the runner did but the ump called Foster safe. The next man up lined a clean single to right that should not have presented much of a problem, but the ball bounced past Steve Wojnar and kept on going while Foster scored from first. That was the ball game, because UMass did no more against Cassani after he had the lead than they did while the contest was tied.

The story of the second game was not much different except that no errors were involved. Lew Pia breezed through the first 21 batters with only a walk allowed to Vermont. With two down in the seventh, Joe Pare ruined Lew's bid for a no-hitter with a single to center that looped in front of Bob Hughes and behind Schmoyer too far away for either to get near.

Pia easily got the final out of the inning, and he had no trouble after Bob Johnson opened the eighth with the second Vermont hit. The bomb fell in the last of the eleventh with two out. Pia tired enough to allow two short singles to center. Two walks followed and game number two was history.

It was that simple. Vermont did practically nothing, but Massachusetts did absolutely nothing. Their support of Wilson who pitched the finest game of his career was almost nil, and it wasn't much better for Pia. John Awdycki provided Mass with a runner in the second inning of the opener when he single. He was sacrificed to second got as far as third with two outs, but a grounder to the mound killed the threat. It was the last time any UMass player got his foot on third the rest of the day. The Redmen got singles in each of the next two innings, but they died on base. Dick Wilson tried to help himself out with a line single over second in the third inning, but Cassani whiffed Tony Simone and Pete Larkin. A single and an error put Tony Williams on second with three chances to get him home in the following stanza, but there he remained. The next two men accounted for a pop to second and a bouncer to the mound. Steve Wojnar hit the ball hard but right at Pete MacDonald in center.

After he had hit Joe Pare for the second time in the game in the third, Wilson went through the next 12 men in a row before letting a man on base, but that man was Foster who scored the run. In the same stretch Cassani found the Redmen just as easy to handle as Wilson did to the Catamounts. He walked Schmoyer to lead off the fifth, and then got every man up the rest of the game. In the fifth Krukonis flied to center and Wilson sacrificed him to second but a pop-up by Simone ended things there. After that, it was all over for the Redmen. John Awdycki was robbed in right on a fantastic catch by Jim Brennan of a ball that had home run written all over it, but it was one of only three balls hit to the outfield in the second half of the game.

The second game was a carbon copy. UMass had men on second in each of the first three frames. Larkin was hit by a pitch in the first and stole second and Bob Hughes made it safely on a base hit and steal. A two-base throwing error put Simone on in the third. After that Martin lowered the boom on the next nine men before issuing consecutive walks to Larkin and Williams in the sixth and again in the eighth. The first time came with one out and the next time came with two out. Strikeouts by Awdycki and Hughes left the two on in the sixth, and a close play at second that got Williams thrown out of the game ended things in the eighth. Awdycki hit a hard bounder to short that Dick Dick Boutilier grabbed and threw to second. It appeared to the Redmen and especially Williams that the throw arrived after the runner, but the ump said no.

The UMass team had one last chance in the tenth. Karl Kamena opened the inning with a single and Lew Pia bunted into a force out. Pia was safe at second on an error on an attempted force to keep the fire burning a little longer, but a fly to short center by Rod Corey, who replaced Williams, threw water on the flames. The whole nightmare ended in the last of the eleventh when the Catamounts got to Pia.

U. Of Illinois Censured For Dismissal Of Professor

The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) voted last weekend in its annual convention here to censure the University of Illinois for the manner in which it fired biology Prof. Leo F. Koch after he had written a letter to the student newspaper condoning pre-marital sexual relations for students on biological and psychological grounds.

The AAUP also considered, but rejected, censure proceedings against Northwestern U.

A vote of censure by the AAUP has no legal weight, but it carries considerable moral pressure. A censured institution often finds it difficult to hire top-notch faculty members, and the school loses considerable respect in the academic world.

The action against Illinois was approved overwhelmingly by the convention. Just previously, the association had voted down a motion by Prof. Wm. Wert of Indiana State College that the action be postponed for a year.

No one took the floor in San Francisco to defend Prof. Koch's position in the controversy at Illinois. The issues were only whether Koch's letter constituted grounds for dismissal and whether Koch had been granted due academic process in the dismissal.

The Koch case erupted into controversy on March 18, 1960, upon the publication of a letter to the Daily Illinois written by the professor.

Koch's letter included this paragraph: "With modern contraceptives and medical advice readily available at the nearest drugstore, or at least a family physician, there is no valid reason why sexual intercourse should not be condoned among those sufficiently mature to engage in it without social consequences and without violating their own codes of morality and ethics."

The AAUP held that Illinois President David D. Henry was in error in firing Koch without a formal hearing on the charges against him. The Illinois administration was also criticized for failing to support the unanimous resolution of the university's Senate Committee that Koch should be reprimanded, but not dismissed.

In a statement issued over the weekend, the University of Illinois chapter of the AAUP issued a statement supporting the censure of the school.

"It represents a judgement by the national academic community that the administration of the U of I has not observed the normally recognized principles of academic freedom and tenure as endorsed by the AAUP and 14 other professional educational societies," the statement said.

Youth Conference Backs Kennedy's Education Act

A national youth and student conference on the subject of federal aid to education held in Washington this weekend generally supported President Kennedy's National Educational Improvement Act of 1963.

The conference, sponsored by 22 national youth and student organizations, drew more than 100 delegates from all sections of the country. The assembly of students was addressed by Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel and by Members of Congress interested in the education bill.

The students voted to support all sections of the Kennedy bill (HR 3000), but asserted that in some areas, the bill is inadequate. The group recommended expansion of many of the aid programs when possible. However, the students recognized the difficulty of getting the current smaller proposals through Congress, and did not ask for more federal assistance immediately.

One of the major floor debates came over the issue of the inclusion of an anti-discrimination rider in the federal aid to education bill. Young Democrats and other backers of the Administration's approach to the matter argued that given the mood of the current Congress and the importance of the Southern Democrat vote, the inclusion of an anti - discrimination measure might well insure the defeat of the entire proposal, thus doing no one any good.

Other students, especially those from Southern Negro colleges, argued that no federal aid was desirable if it had to be gotten with the votes of segregationists and would not include an anti-discrimination provision to prevent participating institutions from practicing discrimination. It was also argued that students had a moral responsibility to take a clear stand on the issue of discrimination.

The faction supporting the inclusion of the anti-discrimination rider eventually carried the day, by a sizeable margin.

Lacrosse Team Loses To Strong Brown Bruins 8-5

by WALT GREEN '66

The University of Massachusetts Varsity Lacrosse team sustained its second loss of the season this past Wednesday at the hands of the Brown University Bruins. The team looked quite slow and sluggish and never could seem to get going and score some goals. In the third period Brown really romped ahead with four goals and they also played fine defensively as they shut out the Redmen in this period.

UMass scored first in the first period, but Brown came back and scored two, but then the Redmen tallied once more. The first goal was by Frank Gilliatt and the second by Ron Chiras with the assist going to Steve Harrington. The score at the end of the first frame was two all.

The second period saw the same tying situation with one goal by each club. The Redman goal was made by Frank Gilliatt unassisted once again. The score at the half, Brown three and the Redmen three.

Then came the disaster. Brown scored four goals and shut out the Redmen. It was too overwhelming a score to overcome, although the Redmen fought hard in the fourth period.

Brown opened up the fourth period with a goal at 2:36. But the UMass ten came back as Ron Chiras scored on a pass from Don Tremblay. The second score was made by Tremblay on a pass from Jerry Clinton. Dick Baird, goalie, played perhaps his best game.

Brown spent eight minutes in the penalty box and the Redmen spent six and one half.

Although the Redmen fought hard in the last period it was too late and they bowed to Brown eight to five to add their second loss with nine wins.

Next Saturday the Redmen travel to Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vermont. Middlebury won the championship a few years back which is an indication of their ability.

This coming Wednesday is the big game with New Hampshire. In eight years the Redmen have never been able to defeat the Wildcats. This year they have the team that can win. Support your team this Wednesday as the Redmen meet New Hampshire. Paul Majeski and Tom Kirby have personal grudges against men from Durham as maybe some of us also have. So come out and watch the Redmen win . . . give them your support.

Runners Face Brandeis, Springfield This Week

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity track team will take to the road this week as it winds up its season in quest of the first undefeated season for Coach Footrick. Monday will find the Redmen at Brandeis, which should be merely a workout for the team. The Judges have several outstanding runners, but they lack team depth.

Wednesday will find UMass at Springfield in the all important final dual meet of the season. Not only will the Redmen be trying to close out with a perfect record, but they will also be trying to beat the Maroon for the first time ever in Spring Track. Springfield is undefeated in dual meets so far this year, and was undefeated last year.

Top efforts by everyone will be required if UMass is to win this one. Springfield's Terry Merrit has run 4:15 in the mile this year, and is also capable of a good mile or ½ mile. The Maroon's dashman has run a 9.9 100, and their field events team is strong and well balanced. This meet will be a toss up, but with a little luck the Redmen could come home victorious. The Springfield meet will start at 2:30. The freshmen will close out their season at Springfield, too.

The award-winning designs are in four categories—gardens and outdoor living spaces for individual homes, apartments and groups of town houses, builders' model homes, and subdivisions.

The contest was sponsored by the American Society of Landscape Architects in cooperation with "House and Home," "Time," and "Life" magazines.

Winners were chosen from 317 entries by judges from business firms, magazines, and the ASLA.

The exhibit has been on a national tour since last August.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

by Oscar Fraley
UPI Sports Writer

The U.S. Lawn Tennis Association laid aside its racket and began swinging with brass knuckles today in an attempt to get Uncle Sam's derailed Davis Cup express back on the tracks.

The United States for 17 consecutive years was in the challenge round, meaning the Davis Cup finals, and eight times carried off the big chunk of silver. But the past three years we haven't made it and last year we barely got off the pad, winning only one match.

Blames UCLA, USC

Yet with plenty of talent on hand this time around, Davis Cup captain Bob Kelleher has hauled off and blamed the selfishness of UCLA and the University of Southern California for damaging our prospects.

They, respectively, "own" Charles Pasarell and Dennis Ralston, two of our hotshots. In payment for tennis scholarships, they insist that their lads pay off on the investment by shooting for the intercollegiate crown at Princeton June 15-22.

Kelleher, a California attorney, wants them released to uncle so they can hook up with Chuck McKinley of Trinity and right from the start in our first match against Iran June 14-16 form a triumvirate which might go all the way to the challenge round. The tall, handsome Kelleher didn't pull any punches as he surveyed the situation.

Thinks Universities Wrong

"The universities don't see eye to eye with me," he said bluntly. "I think they're wrong and I wish they could be persuaded to see it our way. There's no question but what the boys would prefer to play in the Davis Cup and the schools should recognize their obligation to the country."

Kelleher lists Uncle Sam as "having a lot of talent" in the college ranks but makes no secret of his desire to corral the "big three" and keep them together for the full shot at Australia.

"As it is," he explained, "they'll be on their own through Wimbledon, through the clay court championships at Chicago and we won't be able to form our team until two weeks prior to our match with Mexico."

The team, it might be added, which knocked us off in the second match we played last year.

Need Quality

Kelleher, running through our hopefuls, named a dozen lads but in this fashion: "Frank Froehling has a long way to go to make our team;" and "Allen Fox doesn't look like a world class player," etc.

"We can't win on quantity," he pointed out. "We have to do it with quality. You do it with one or two players. They're not doing it the organized way but making it difficult for the players and the team. Anyone who does well under these conditions would be plain lucky."

The universities can be expected to counter volubly. It is unlikely that silence will be the reward for what they probably consider to be an out and out case of hijacking. But it is rather interesting to watch the love set throwing the dinnerware.

Saccharine and "quiet please" ain't ever going to beat those Aussies.

Redmen Netsters Win Fifth Straight Crown

The UMass Tennis Team won its fifth consecutive Yankee Conference Championship Friday and Saturday at URI. The team was sparked by Rodger Twitchell and four sophomores—Mike Rose, Billy Martin, Bob Greenberg, and Bob Neal.

Twitchell copped the singles championship to become the first seeded Yancon netsters. Mike Rose and Billy Martin won third and sixth positions respectively.

Neal and Twitchell teamed up to win the doubles championship with Martin and Green following them to become the second seeded duo. This clinched the final championship. Mike Rose staged the comeback of the day after losing his first match love-six and then rebounding to win 6-2, 6-3.

The matches were played in poor conditions and as a whole the team performed admirably.

Survey Reveals Few Negroes Occupying Top Teaching Positions

A recent spot check by the New York Times revealed that a very small number of Negroes are currently teaching as full professors in U.S. colleges and universities.

The Times queried 17 major educational institutions, finding that 11 of them in fact had Negro professors, but only one or two in most cases. A Columbia University spokesman said that it had no top-ranking Negroes on its staff. Neither Yale nor Harvard have Negro professors, and Princeton has only one.

Dr. John Hope Franklin, the Negro historian who last year was elected the first non-white member of Washington's Cosmos Club, will become a full professor at the University of Chicago next year. Dr. Franklin, an authority on the history of slavery and the period of the Reconstruction, is currently chairman of the history department at Brooklyn College. He is on leave as Pitt Professor at Cambridge University in England.

The other universities queried gave varying answers. The list follows: University of Wisconsin —figures not available for lack of records by race. University of Minnesota — one full professor and two assistant professors, and perhaps others below full professor, are Negroes. Notre Dame— One, an assistant professor of finance. Indiana University — Four, all assistant professors in music, astronomy, and military science, and one in Slavic studies at the Kokomo Center.

University of Iowa — 23 academic staff members of all ranks, including technicians, are Negroes. University of Illinois—No figures as to academic employment of Negroes, although of the 17,242 persons employed at all branches, 1,520 are Negro. University of Michigan—No records by race available but a spokesman said that "some" Negro professors were on the campus. University of California at Berkeley—No data but "at least several" a spokesman said.

Stanford — Spokesman said that he did not believe any Negroes were on the professional staff. University of California at Los Angeles—Five or six. University of Southern California — Four. Massachusetts Institute of Technology—One, a civil engineer, an assistant professor.

Princeton—Dr. William Franklin Strother, a Negro psychologist, is on the staff now. Next fall, Dr. W. Arthur Lewis, vice chancellor of the University of the West Indies, will come as a full professor of economics and international affairs. New York University—No precise data, but a spokesman cited "at least two" Dr. Hale Woodruff, professor of art education, and Dr. Eliott Skinner, an associate professor of anthropology.

Harvard—No Negroes in the permanent tenure ranks. Columbia — No Negro full professors. Yale—None of professional rank.

Some authorities have said that Negroes have been unable to rise to high academic rank not only because of problems related to their race but also because many Negro colleges gave them inadequate preparation for graduate work.

Swarthmore Fraternity Cuts Ties With National

SWARTHMORE, Pa. (CPS)— A third fraternity chapter at Swarthmore College, a highly-regarded liberal arts college, has severed its ties with its national organization over alleged racial discrimination in pledging selection.

The Swarthmore chapter of Phi Kappa Psi, in existence for more than 75 years, announced its action this week. The chapter follows those of Kappa Sigma and Phi Delta Theta, which took similar action recently.

The Phi Kappa Psi chapter announced that it had objected for a number of years to the "unit rule" of the national organization, which the chapter said allowed the members of one chapter to object to the pledges of another—ensuring that no chapter could ever pledge a Negro. The chapter said that it also objected to the high cost of national dues.

The Swarthmore fraternity told the Swarthmore Phoenix that it has actively sought abolition of the unit rule provision for a number of years, and decided to sever its ties with the national only after it became evident that it would be impossible to bring about a change in the policies of the national.

Distinguished Jesuit Scholar Lectures Tuesday

A distinguished Jesuit Scholar will lecture at the University tomorrow night.

Father M. C. D'Arcy, S. J., a member of the department of philosophy at Boston College, will speak on "Love and the Self in the Doldrums" on Tuesday, May 14, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The talk, sponsored by the Student Union Arts and Music Committee, is open to the public without charge.

A graduate of Stonyhurst College at Oxford and the Gregorian University in Rome, Father D'Arcy has been a professor at Stonyhurst, Conventual Chaplain to the Knights of Malta and Provincial of the English Jesuit Province. He was Master of Campion Hall at Oxford, and has been a visiting professor at Fordham, Notre Dame, Georgetown and Cornell universities.

Author of six theological works, numerous articles and several books in which he collaborated with other authors, Father D'Arcy is also the author of several scholarly but widely read books. Some of these works include, Thomas Aquinas, The Problem of Evil, the Mind and Heart of Love, Communism and Christianity, The Meeting of Love and Knowledge, and the Matter and Meaning of History.

Father D'Arcy will meet with members of the audience to answer questions after the talk.

A Review

String Orchestra Improves

On Thursday night, May 9 in Bartlett Auditorium it was proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that improvement had been made in the University String Orchestra. Not only was the audience presented with the improved Orchestra, but they had the added attractions of Mrs. D. Feldman, soprano and Mr. B. Turetzky, double bass as the two soloists.

The works presented by the String Orchestra alone were by Purcell, Stradella, Somers, and Tchaikovsky. Turetzky was the soloist in the Double Bass Concerto in F Major by Capuzzi and Mrs. D. Feldman was the soprano soloist in the Motette ("Exsultante Jubliante") of Mozart. Both were a great credit to the outcome of the evening and were well complemented by the String Orchestra.

In the first public performance given by the University String Orchestra there were times when it seemed as if each member in a section must be playing a different note. The concert this time presented no such sounds except in places where the notes were extremely high.

With all the time spent by Mr. B. Lurie, both Musical Director and Conductor, the soloists, and members of the orchestra in their other human capacities, great credit must be given. It is our sincere hope that the job done this year will not melt during the summer and that they will continue to improve and serve the campus.

Cadets March In Last Compulsory Review

The joint Air Force-Army Spring Review will be held tonight at 7 p.m.

The review is the 96th to be held at the UMass. It is also the last compulsory Spring Review. Starting next fall the ROTC will be voluntary.

Highlight of the review will be the Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps from Washington, D.C. This famous corps has performed before such people as President Kennedy and the Royal Family of England.

The Drum and Bugle Corps visited the University last fall, where it performed in front of the S.U. The Corps is made up of over 60 men and is commanded by a Warrant Officer in the regular Air Force. The Drum and Bugle Corps will replace the ROTC Band that has been the tradition in past reviews.

S.U.G. Board Discusses S.U. Addition

At a recent meeting of the SU Governing Board, Miss Mary Alden, new S.U. Program Advisor, was introduced, and recommendations made at the last meeting were accepted unanimously.

To supplement the service provided at big events by A.P.O. and W.S.O., Mr. Scott moved that the S.U. embark upon a limited check room service beginning in the fall with a five cents per check item and with the addition that one segment of the checkroom be left open for those people who do not wish to pay five cents. The motion was referred back to the Committee for further study.

Some of the board members agreed to meet with Springfield College student committees to discuss how this Union is run in comparison to Bevridge Center.

The 1963-64 Program and General Fund Budgets were accepted unanimously.

The Board will request nonresident students be taken into consideration in the final plans for the new S.U. addition.

Professor Langland's New Poetry Collection To Be Published

May publication is expected for The Wheel of Summer, a collection of new poems by Joseph Langland who will read and discuss his work Friday, May 17, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

Dial Press is the publisher for this second volume of poetry by Mr. Langland, who is Professor of English at the University. His first book, The Green Town, was published by Scribners in 1956 in their Poets of Today series and was among the final nominees for the National Book Award in Poetry.

Mr. Langland's poems have appeared in over a score of magazines such as Poetry, Atlantic, The Hudson Review, The Saturday Review, The New Yorker, and The Massachusetts Review.

Sections devoted to his poems appear in New Poems of England and America (Meridian, 1957), in New World Writing, in Poetry Awards 1955, and in several anthologies of modern poetry.

Well-Traveled Poet

Mr. Langland has given readings and lectures on his work at universities throughout the United States and Canada. Recently a nationally televised program, Meet the Professor, featured a visit to his creative writing class at the University. He has recorded at the Library of Congress.

Poets Choice, a very successful anthology, co-edited by Paul Engle, in which 103 noted contemporary poets choose their favorite poem from their own work and give the reason for the choice was published by Dial Press in 1962 and has now been chosen by Time, Inc. for the "Time Reading Program," and will be issued soon as a paperback in that series with an initial printing of 100,000 copies.

Fellowship To Italy

Mr. Langland has held a Faculty Fellowship at Harvard and Columbia, granted by the Fund for the Advancement of Education, and has held an Amy Lowell Travelling Poetry Fellowship to Italy.

Coming to the University in 1959, Mr. Langland has also taught at the University of Wyoming, Dana College, and the State University of Iowa.

Mr. Langland's lecture-reading is sponsored by the English Department. The public is invited.

In Concert Tomorrow

The Hague Philharmonic will present the last in this year's series of concerts tomorrow night. Its one hundred and two musicians under the baton of Willem van Otterloo will perform works by Mozart, Brahms, and Diepenbrock.

Sam Gorvine Given Award For Writings

UMass junior Sam Gorvine has been awarded a fifth place award and a certificate of merit by The Atlantic Monthly for "having achieved distinction in The Atlantic's 42nd Annual Creative Writing Contest for Students".

His story, "Die With Your Pants On", was accorded fifth place in the contest and "Joe" received a certificate of merit.

The prize-winning and place-winning manuscripts were chosen from the 20 top essays, the 20 top stories, and the 20 top poems. Remaining manuscripts in these groups were awarded honorable mention. Those in the next rank were marked merit.

The June Atlantic will announce the names of the winners of the prize, place and honorable mention awards.

A resident of Boston, Gorvine is a 1959 graduate of Boston English High School. An English major, he has had several stories published in Caesura, the campus literary magazine.

Both of Gorvine's prize-winning stories were published earlier this year in Caesura.

Tell The Collegian Where it can go!; Participate in Poll

The students and faculty of this University will finally get the opportunity to tell the Collegian where it should go, or more precisely how it should get there.

On Thursday, May 16 the Collegian will conduct a poll in the Student Union lobby with the topic of the poll being the Collegian itself. The questionnaire which each student and faculty member will have the opportunity to fill out will consist of specific questions dealing with the various departments of the paper and more general questions which may be answered and commented on in length.

The results will be compiled and used to make next year's Collegian more readable, informative and enjoyable for the campus community.

Perspective—

by G. MASSELAM

I'm a little concerned. What am I concerned about? I'm concerned about twenty-three hundred freshmen. The class of '67. Like all freshman classes they will come to the University, fresh from high school, not knowing of the freedom, the control, and the excitement that confronts them as college students. It was frightening my first day at the University having just left my family, not having any close friends as yet. All you experienced seniors who are now ready to tackle your worlds. Do you remember your first day at college? Your desire and need to make friends and to become a part of the University and to stay a part. It doesn't seem that long ago, or perhaps for some it seems an age.

The four-year cycle will soon begin, once again. Integrating freshmen into the University community poses a serious problem for any university. However UMass has developed certain problems of her own? To begin with, it is a growing school and programs and curiculum being in a state of flux creates a feeling of uncertainty for those involved. To see buildings going up, new courses being introduced, speakers, plays, groups developing gives a person, especially one who is new to the campus, a feeling of alienation. Also next year the new freshman will be living in a handicapped housing situation. Again since there are many upperclass students who are not involved themselves, there won't be that many to guide the newcomers.

We are aware of this problem! Yet what do we offer the new freshman? Summer counseling? Talks by the Deans? Tests? These are all necessary, but the question, is, what is it that we are not offering them?

Will they be introduced to various groups and organizations? Will they be shown how to become involved in part of the University life? To think of the girls and the boys sitting in on Saturday night, both wishing they had dates. The girls studying or talking; the boys playing cards or busting window. Not important? Well what about those who would like to join an organization, be it the Forestry Club or the Collegian Staff; those who are a little frightened to come to a meeting because they don't know anyone.

Probably the greatest potential, and yet the biggest hindrance for integration is the male dormitories. Here is a situation where some real involvement of freshmen can take place. Upperclassmen can meet the freshmen and help in this integration problem; or through dorm activities freshmen can feel a part. But yet many freshmen go through the first semester without meeting some upperclassmen on their corridors. Observe how many freshmen are on your dorm committees or athletic groups (unless it is an all freshman dorm). And then we wonder why there are so many freshmen that have to leave school. They are capable, and can do the work. They leave because of a lack of integration.

The fraternities and sororities fill this purpose. Not everyone joins a fraternity or can live in a Butterfield. Thus when Student Leaders' night comes around, it is those in the Greek groups that take home the spoils.

The need is for small groups. Perhaps they can be instituted in the dorms through the guidance center. Juniors or seniors who are interested in counseling groups should be assigned about twenty students (freshmen). These groups can meet once a week and the freshmen can talk about the various problems as they arise. The idea is not to baby the students, but to let them share their ideas, feelings, and problems with others who do the same. The leaders of the groups can help the freshman get involved in activities, or to become a part of the school.

Let us hope something will be done about the 2300 next year!

To the Editor:

Ha. Ha. Ha. Ha. Ha. Ha. Ha. A dangerous trend. It certainly is, the flow of thought of Fred Aaron Lazin, in "A Dangerous Trend," in the May 10 Collegian.

Dangerous in many ways, the foremost being Mr. Lazin's ignorance of the world situation. The United States is not God. We are not "right." Everyone else is not "wrong." Communism and socialism are not "bad." Democracy is not a cure-all. Rather, provincialism and prejudice have to be worked on, to be done away with.

Interestingly enough, as De Toqueville has pointed out in Democracy in America, Russia and America, and for that matter, all men, are moving towards each other, eradicating old fears and injustices, establishing new hopes and aspirations in, truly, an evolution to a higher and richer—life, for all men, in all lands, under all cultures.

Let us, therefore, not be anti-Castro, anti-Communist, anti-John Birch Society, but rather pro-man, pro-life, pro-positive action. Man must expound, must affirm. He cannot negate, cannot deny, cannot hate, if he is to survive.

In the future, if we citizens of this world are to be patriotic in the traditional manner of backing our world, whether it be right or wrong, we must learn to concern ourselves more with the idea of freedom for all, and learn to forget the ideal (?) of becoming anti-Communists.

Respectfully yours,
Michael Dymerski

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GEORGE LINCOLN ROCKWELL

To the Editor:

Many disturbing rumors have come to my attention regarding the inviting of George Lincoln Rockwell, Commander of the American Nazi Party, to speak on our campus.

The actual facts are that Mr. Rockwell was invited to our campus to speak because we thought that such a controversial speaker would be an interesting person to observe. However, after much thought and discussion among our group, we decided to disinvite him. There were several reasons for this. (1) We did not feel that Mr. Rockwell represented a potent political force, and the purpose of our group is to present political realities. (2) We did not feel that his ideas were intellectually meaningful and challenging ones, that it would be enlightening to discuss.

Although it would have been interesting to present Mr. Rockwell as a study in bigotry, we felt there was no other benefit to be derived in having him.

Although I feel that every person has the right to speak, and would deny a platform to none, I do feel that the energy of our group should be devoted to bringing up speakers from which something can be learned. A forum of free speakers does not obligate a group to invite every crackpot that would like to utilize this forum.

On the basis of much discussion, the executive board made a unanimous decision to disinvite Mr. Rockwell. After our decision we had an informal discussion with Dean Field in the hatch, where he expressed his concern over Rockwell. He had been receiving inquiries from Nazis in Springfield, and was concerned about the possibility of a riot. Also, he was afraid that such an unsavory speaker might induce the trustees to revoke the free speaker policy, unusual at a state university, which has so far been unquestioned.

We appreciated Dean Field's concern, and the questions that he raised helped to reinforce our own feelings that Mr. Rockwell should be disinvited. However, our decision had been made before Dean Field stepped into the picture. As far as Dean Field was concerned, we were perfectly free to invite whomever we wished. He just wanted to make sure we knew what we were doing.

We were very hasty in inviting a speaker before seriously considering whether we wished to have him or not. This is to be regretted.

I hope this clears up all the haze surrounding this incident.

GROW UP!

A great deal of immaturity and lack of sophistication has been shown concerning the Frosh picnic. There is no reason for a Freshman, indeed anyone, to be indignant, much less embarrassed, by an erotic display of terpsichore. One is led to believe that it was the ashamed one's first exposure to sex; or maybe the embarrassee had a disappointing phallic stage of development and thinks sex is filthy. Be all what it may, the printing by the Collegian of a photo which doesn't even suggest eroticism should not humiliate any but the most childish.

The focal point of a picture was two upperclassmen's faces. Their "sexy" bodies did not show. It is quite true that said photo is a reminder to those WHO WERE THERE of what was going on, but when a certain freshman's parents who read the Collegian look at the picture, his purity will not be questioned by them for the photo reveals nothing suggestive. I am aware of no one judging his class by those not in it but the same freshman who wrote the indignant letter which appeared in the May 13 issue.

Please remember also that although the picnic food was private, we did not bar anyone from dancing (to begin with). The upperclassmen stole the show and are due credit for what an intelligent, modern (we have come a long way from Freud and Kinsey) person would call a fine show, "naughty" or not.

Fellow Freshmen, let this issue die. I for one, whether I stand alone or not, do not wish the Class of '66 labeled PRUDE.

Furthermore I praise the Collegian for catching the highlight of the picnic, as indeed it was, and also for a fine aerial over-all shot for those who prefer a demure reminder.

Constructive Criticism

To the Editor:

The present trend on campus seems to be toward degrading, and often even satirical criticism of almost anything and everything. Just look at the editorial page and the letters to the editor column of almost every issue. Yet with everyone complaining, (and nothing concrete being done) there seems to be a lack of constructive criticism; all we read are bitter complaints. Isn't it time that some credit be given where it is due? Isn't it time that creative, constructive criticism be written?

Two very important, creditable yet totally unrelated events must be mentioned. No one thinks to thank or honor anyone anymore, so allow me to bestow a bit of congratulations. The UMass Tennis Team just won its fifth consecutive Yankee Conference Championship. This fine achievement is an enviable record and much credit and congratulations must go to the team members and their fine coach. The other notable accomplishment is that of bringing John Kenneth Galbraith to the University as commencement speaker. This eminent man, whose record speaks for itself, has made inumerable contributions to our society. It will be a distinguished honor to welcome him to our campus; thanks must go to the administration and all those responsible.

Operetta Guild Holds Awards Dinner Dance

Redmen Lose To UConn, 3-0; Beat Tufts In 13th, 3-2

by AL RICE '66

The Redmen baseballers discovered what a run was yesterday when Tony Williams scored in the fifth with the first UMass tally in 42 straight innings which included three shutouts and parts of two other games. Victory was even harder to come by, and the game went 13 innings before Williams again proved the hero with a first pitch homer leading off the 13th of a 2-2 tie game with Tufts. The blow gave Mike Johnson his first win in a Redman uniform, and the big guy deserved it more than any other win he has ever had. Johnson went into the game knowing his mates have an average of three hits and no runs in the inning equivalent of four complete games, but he was tough all the way, allowing only two cheap runs in the fourth.

Mass got a pair of hits in the second and one each in the third and fourth that equalled their total of the day before against Connecticut. The only man on the team that carried a respectable bat against UConn was John Awdycki who also had two base knocks off Wally Wadman, Jumbo hurler in all thirteen frames. Awdycki delivered his second single of the day in the sixth atfer Williams had singled and the first sacker scored with the second run of the game. Awdycki's single moved Williams to second, and Captain Tony broke the glacier thick scoring ice moments later when Steve Wojnar connected with the key base hit, a one bagger to right field. Awdycki took second and then crossed the plate on Corky Schmoyer's single one out later. Wojnar and Corky were both left on, but the runs tied the game and it remained 2-2 until the big 440 smash in the thirteenth.

The early scoring by Tufts came after a hit batter and a Vandy French single to right put men on first and third with nobody out. French lit out for second while Steve Karp was at bat, and Karl Kamena rifled a perfect throw down, but unfortunately no one was covering and the ball sailed into center. Dick Sylvester easily scored from third and French took an extra base. Paul Hess dropped a bunt two feet in front of the plate and French, a fast man, just made it in past Kamena who grabbed the ball and still had plenty of time to get Hess at first.

At that point, things were plenty dark for Mass. Awdycki stole second in the bottom of that frame after his first safety and there he remained. Tufts tried more razzle-dazzle in the sixth with Hess at bat, but the second attempt was not quite as successful. A walk to French, the only base on balls Johnson gave up the whole afternoon, and a single by Karp had men on first and second with none out. Hess missed the pitch, and French was a dead pigeon at third.

The play sparked the Redmen in the last of the sixth into tying the game, but it looked for a long while like a tie was the best they could possibly get in the game. Wadman issued one walk in the next six innings, and two Mass men reached on errors for a total of three base runners. Johnson wasn't letting the Jumbos run free, however, as they were successful only in getting a walk and leadoff singles in the ninth and twelth.

After Karp singled in the top of the sixth, Big Mike moved over the next eight men in a row before Karp again came through with a base hit in the ninth. At this point the dark clouds rapidly rolled in, and while UMass batted in the bottom of the ninth rain began falling. Sylvester dropped Karl Kamena's fly but Wadman got Johnson to end the inning. After the out the game was held up for about half an hour, waiting for the rain to clear.

Johnson breezed through the first two extra innings with only a walk, but Wadman did exactly the same to the Redmen. Both squads showed signs of life in the twelfth. A single, sacrifice, and long fly to center put Bob Guidi on third for Tufts with two outs, but Apicella threw out Wadman to kill the threat. Johnson reached on an error in the bottom of the inning but was cut down in a force, ending the frame. The Jumboes went down one-two-three in the top of the thirteenth, and just as it looked like the games would go forever, Williams smashed the first pitch the time the throw came in the game was over.

The game with UConn Monday was not quite as successful for UMass. Rod Corey allowed only one earned run in going the distance and nine hits, most of which caused no trouble, but it was a wasted effort. Ed Jones of the Huskies boosted his season record to seven wins without a loss even though he was not nearly as sharp as the day two weeks ago when the downed the Redmen at Storrs. It wouldn't have mattered Monday if he had thrown the ball with his feet. A of the inning into the deepest part of left center field, and by long triple by Awdycki, and three singles amounted to the total offense of the UMass team.

With two outs in the fourth, Corey walked two and Joe Apicella, filling in for Schmoyer, dropped a fly in short right field. One run came in, and another scored when Lou Aceto followed with a single. The final run in the 3-0 win came one inning later when Corey was touched for a single by Dorrie Jackson after he had two outs and two strikes on the Huskies left fielder. Jackson stole second and crossed the plate on Doug King's one bagger. UConn didn't have another scoring chance the rest of the game, but after Awdycki's triple, Massachusetts could not get anyone on third in the last five frames.

Lacrossemen Edge Middlebury, 5-4

by WALT GREEN '66

This past Saturday the Redman varsity lacrosse team traveled to Vermont to play Middlebury College. Again, as so many times in the past, the Redmen brought home a victory, their eighth league victory of the season with only one loss.

The field at Middlebury was a messy one as the teams started play, with sprinklings of rain and even snow. UMass scored four goals in the first half as opposed to one by Middlebury. This lead proved too great to be overcome, although Middlebury did score two goals in the fourth period. The Redmen scored two in the first and second period and one in the fourth. Middlebury scored one in the second and third and two in the fourth.

DICK BAIRD, netminder for the varsity, has been the deciding factor in many of the lacrosse team's victories this season.

In the first half both teams shot ten times, but the Redmen shots were too accurate. In the penalty department, the Redmen collected eleven as Middlebury committed four.

Three of the Middlebury goals came on extra man plays, two of them when the Redmen were two men short. Middlebury's last goal came with five minutes left to play, but the defense and goalie Dick Baird held off all further attacks.

Today the Redmen will be out to beat New Hampshire. The Wildcats have won every time for the past eight years. If the Redmen beat the Wildcats, they will have won the title for 1963, but a loss will put them in a three way tie with U.N.H. and Amherst. In lacrosse, there is no play-off to determine the winner; a committee decides who the champion will be, therefore this is obviously an important game for the Redmen. Game time is 3:00 p.m. on the lacrosse field.

Varsity Golfers Win Seventh Straight

by DAVE MacIVER, '66

The varsity golf team continued its winning streak as they rolled over Trinity and Lowell Tech, by the identical score of 6-1 in a triangular meet played at The Orchards Country Club in South Hadley. Captain Charley Noble was medalist (low score) with a 74. He was followed closely by John Roch (75) and Tom Kinne and George Defalco (76). The varsity team's record now stands at 9-3 as they have won their 7 matches. There is only one more scheduled match remaining to be played before the Yankee Conference championship which will be played this weekend at Rhode Island. The Yankee Conference champs are determined on the basis of the low total as compiled by a six man team.

The Frosh team followed the winning ways of the varsity as they crushed Worcester Academy 6-1. Howie Atkinson was medalist with an even par 70, which included 6 birdies. Other little Redmen in the 70's were Bob McNeil (75), Dave Wells (78), and Dave MacIver (79). This match brought the teams record to 2-2, with 2 matches to be played.

Students Take Part In Campus Polls

Within the past three weeks more than a thousand students have been personally interviewed in two surveys on campus. These surveys are being conducted by Marketing Research classes, comprised of approximately 50 students under the direction of Professor Robert Drew-Bear to give those participating practical experience in conducting surveys as well as helpful information to the campus community.

The first survey is designed to ascertain the desirability and need of having grinder wagons and/or pizza busses on campus. The results of this survey will assist the administration to device an equitable and just solution to the awkward situation now existing.

The second survey is aimed at discovering student opinions relative to the campus literary magazine Caesura. This survey will be instrumental in deciding in which manner Caesura will be distributed to students next year.

UMass Intramural Athletics: A Year In Review

LCA Holds Slim Lead Over KS

by CHARLES FOHLIN
Intramural Supervisor

This year the leaders of the intramural point standings are LCA with 430 points, KS with 390 points, SPE with 365 points, and Greenough with 355 points. At the end of this semester, the organization with the most points will win The Stephen Davis Memorial Award.

In men's intramural athletics last fall, touch football, tennis, lacrosse, crosscountry, and Sigma Delta Psi were activities offered to the male student body of this campus. In touch football, Kappa Sigma captured the campus championship as well as winning the New Hampshire-University of Mass. intramural crown by defeating Greenough 12-6 and smashing LCA from UNH 39-14.

Paul Norton, head of the Art Department, for the second year in a row, successfully defended his intramural tennis crown last November. Bill Martin a sophomore from TEP and Mr. Norton emerged from a field of 38 participants to meet in the final match. A new sport which was continued for the second straight year was intramural Lacrosse. Only ..four ..teams ..participated last fall with D's A.C. winning the league 5 wins and no losses. Frank Gilliat was top scorer for the season with 13 goals. In intramural crosscountry, ASP was the team winner placing three men in scoring position. The running course was located around the campus pond and the Student Union.

Next year it is hoped that more boys will be interested in this event. This past winter, Basketball, volleyball, and the free throw contest were sponsored by the department of intramurals. Hills South won the intramural campus basketball championship when it defeated the Physical Education Majors by a score of 33-24. SPE was the fraternity league champ, and the P.E. Majors were the independent league winners.

Volleyball

For the second straight year in a row LCA was the campus volleyball champion defeating SPE in the final match. Fifty-two teams and approximately 650 men participated in this year's annual volleyball tournament.

The unusal and annual popular free throw contest was held last December with Richard Ricciardi winning the event with 23 out 25 attempts being made. Forty-five men participated in the contest of skill with many fine scores being recorded.

Ice Hockey

The IFC tried something new this year in sponsoring and running a hockey league. Under the direction of Ronald Pettirossi, the IFC athletic chairmen, two leagues were formed and games were played at the Amherst Arena. Because of limited funds and lack of ice time the hockey league season was not completed.

Wrestling

In the wrestling tournament, the following men won their respective division championships: 125# Kline-TEP, 137# Fiore-Baker, 147# Phillips-PMD, 157# Trembly-PE Club, 167# Dineen-KS, 177# Harris-TC, 191# Deminico-SAE, Unlimited Pulisifier-SAE. The annual swimming tournament found TKE winning out of 8 fraternities entered. TKE won with 27 points with SPE and LCA following closely with 25 and 23 points respectfully.

The intramural softball league winners are just about determined, with the final championship games starting Thursday, May 16.

LCA INTRAMURAL VOLLEYBALL WINNERS—1963

JUSTIN L. COBB
Director of Intramurals

Cobb Marks Expanding Programs

The Intramural Department is enthusiastically looking forward to the expansion in student services that will be made possible upon occupation of the Frank L. Boyden Physical Education building next year. Not only will it be possible to offer an expanded program in the activities already popular on the UMass campus but new facilities will enable us to increase the number of different activities as well. The student will benefit most from the scheduling patterns that will be possible. The new lighted area and the extra basketball courts will allow a much earlier termination time than has been customary in the past. During the past year 3024 male students participated in 612 separately scheduled and controlled contests. It is my hope that in the near future, all may satisfy their desire for athletic participation in the activity of their choice.

Intramural Slate Increasing Yearly

This Centennial year of the University of Massachusetts has seen the intramural athletic program expanding to meet the increased facilities that will be placed at its disposal next fall. The increasing number of students entering the University each year has been matched by increasing the activities and scope of the intramural athletic program.

It is the purpose of the Department of Intramurals at the University of Massachusetts to provide a broad pattern of organized recreational activities to attract the leisure time pursuits of the student body.

Intramural competition is designed especially to fulfill the desire for athletic participation among the large group of students who because of skill level or inclination do not wish to compete on a varsity of the general physical education program. Provision is made for the inclusion of all members of the University community in the programming of events. In Provost Gilbert Woodside's words, "Intellectual work is the most important activity in a college student's life. If this were not so, there would be no point in having a college. But as a biologist, I know that the vast majority of people simply cannot engage in intellectual activity all of the time. The human body is not geared to do this. A student who tries it will be endangering his health. Therefore we urge you to take part in the Intramural program of the University."

Dean of Students, William Field states, "Vigorous and active recreation is an ideal complement to the concentration and study necessary for academic success.

"I would like personally to encourage all men to take part in the fine program of intramural activities provided by the School of Physical Education as one positive step toward maintaining good health and a balanced campus schedule."

SIGMA DELTA PSI

Sigma Delta Psi is a national honorary athletic fraternity. The University of Massachusetts chapter is sponsored by the Department of Physical Education. The faculty advisors are Mr. Robert James and Mr. William Footrick. Membership in the fraternity is open to male students who pass certain qualifying tests. Those who qualify receive the official gold insignia key and certificate of membership. Sigma Delta Psi membership will also add points toward the all-campus trophy.

Musicale

In its final effort to serve the campus with fine educational programming, WMUA will be presenting its final week of regular broadcasting beginning Thursday afternoon, May 16, at 4:30 p.m.

This will present the last opportunity for the entire staff at WMUA to express themselves to the campus and to the community.

Those who have served this educational ideal of broadcasting to the greatest extent, perhaps, are those on Musicales. They have sist the administration to devise classical music to the radio audience of the University.

Beginning Thursday night, they will also be having their last chance to present what they feel are the finest works in the classical music repertoire.

Great Performances, Your Sunday Edition of Musicale will be presenting a re-broadcast of its all-Kreisler program originally broadcast Sunday Night, St. Patrick's Day.

Other programs will undoubtedly feature such works as the Brahms First Symphony and the Franck D Minor Symphony. The final Musicales of the season will be presented beginning Thursday, May 16 at 8:05.

The other fine programs broadcast over the University Station are well worth attention during this final week.

Honor Groups Present Last Dance Of Year

This Friday, May 17, Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman women and men's scholastic honor societies, will sponsor the first "Jamaican Holiday" dance to be held in the Student Union Ballroom.

The "Jamaican Holiday" will feature Taj and the Electras and, during intermission, the newly formed College Jazz Workshop. Trophies will be awarded to the best dancers of the night; the trophies will be on display this week in the Student Union Lobby.

Dress for the dance is what you think appropriate — bermudas, dungarees, grass skirts, anything. Tickets will be sold at the door Friday evening for fifty cents.

Cincinnati Students Heckle Intergrationist Speaker

(ACP)—"All hell broke loose," said the News Record of Ohio's University of Cincinnati, when Carl Braden spoke on campus on "The Problems of Integration in the Deep South."

The talk was sponsored by "The Students For Constitutional Freedom," a local campus organization.

Braden was repeatedly heckled by the audience. Most of the heckling concerned his appearance before the Senate Internal Security Committee and his refusal to state whether or not he was a Communist when questioned by this committee. Braden said the purpose of the committee was to prevent white people from speaking in favor of integration.

Braden's appearance on campus made the front pages of both Cincinnati daily newspapers and was featured on radio and TV. The university switchboard was flooded with calls from persons off campus. And the university president accused the sponsoring group's faculty adviser of using "very poor judgment" in allowing the visit.

The president, Dr. Walter C. Langsam, released this statement:

"The University of Cincinnati had a policy on speakers sponsored by student groups which has worked satisfactorily over many years. This has been to allow student organizations to invite outside speakers with the approval of their faculty advisers.

"This occasion is the first time a faculty adviser, in approving this invitation, has shown what, in the view of the administration, is very poor judgment.

"In this instance the sponsoring student group went about arranging for its meeting and speaker so quietly that it did not come to the administration's attention until the day before the speech. Although the administration is as strongly opposed as possible to having a speaker of this type appear on the campus, it seemed better at this late date to allow the meeting to proceed rather than to bar it.

"To forbid on such short notice the appearance of this speaker would serve to make a martyr of him—precisely what he probably would welcome.

"Because the University's policy has, if only this one time, resulted in what we feel is a mistake, the administration will appoint a committee of deans and faculty to review the policy and make proposals for bringing it in line with facts of life as they exist today.

"By actual count there were fewer than 150 at the meeting, including many who came to disagree. The University student body showed splendid patriotism as well as maturity in virtually boycotting the meeting. There were almost as many students protesting at the meeting as pickets as there were in the meeting.

"In these troubled times the University administration and faculty are determined that the University stand loyally for those things which are in the country's best interest."

A Review

Alfred Hitchcock's New Film Spotlights Birds As Actors

The author of this review attended a press reception in New York given by Universal Pictures for Alfred Hitchcock and the stars of "The Birds." We thought the background notes on the movie plus her own reactions might be incorporated into a feature of interest to the University community.

Every Alfred Hitchcock movie has a gimmick. What is unique about "The Birds" is that it has no gimmick.

In this Universal release, the master of suspense has brought to life in screen version the novella of the same name by Daphne du Maurier. He depicts a war of the birds against the people of a small town in California. The characters are simple and expressive in their reactions to the terrifying phenomenon which engulfs them, yet, the dramatic impact of the story would be lost without the use of live birds.

Because Hitchcock believes the element of surprise is as important in presenting a new star as it is in presenting a new movie, he has featured beautiful newcomer, 'Tippi' Hedren in the starring role. The story begins on a light comedy level, as Miss Hedren meets Rod Taylor in a San Francisco pet shop. She follows him to his home on the pretext that she is bringing a present, a pair of lovebirds, for his sister whom she has never even met.

In typical Hitchcock "counterpoint," the amusing initial situation turns to one of horror with the first terrifying bird hostility. By the time the bird-war reaches its climax, so has the fear and tension of the viewer. Yet, the bird-created crises have brought to the people involved a sense of maturity and understanding they previously lacked. Indeed, "The Birds" presents a highly personal, compelling story in which the characters emerge above the terror of what's happening to them.

But it is in the problems of production where the challenge of "The Birds" arises for both star and producer. Shooting of interior scenes in San Francisco were "indirectly" directed in secrecy as Hitchcock hid in a studio truck disguised as a furniture van. Hitchcock has said that "The Birds" is the most difficult movie he has ever made, because the problems were magnified in getting a flock of birds to obey a director. Until this time, no one had ever undertaken to train wild gulls to perform.

Fortunately, bird-trainer Ray Berwick was convinced it could be done and began a "bird-school" in which thousands of "pupils" where taught to attack human beings without hurting them. At Bodega Bay, a scene was fashioned in which 14,000 finches fly down a chimney and into a living room, and in another, an attic full of crows and gulls swarm and attack a group of five-hundred people without one major casualty being inflicted.

Hitchcock has symbolized the conflict in his usual dry humor: "One would think that the birds were seeking revenge for the millions of birds before them which have been shot, trapped, eaten, or otherwise abused by men."

Actually, the birds seem to enjoy their roles. After one performance, six gulls flew out to sea, but returned a few hours later to the cages in which they had been kept during training. Incidentally, the total for bird food alone totalled more than $1,000 and a Humane Society representative was on hand at all times to "protect" the wildlife, requiring that the birds work no longer than six hours a day.

SU, Committee Bills Incite Furor In Senate Meeting

Controversy was the order of business at Wednesday's meeting of the Student Senate. Former president Don Cournoyer and presidential aspirant Dave Clancy locked horns over two bills submitted by Cournoyer which would have greatly increased the power of committees. In a second battle, former Senate secretary Dolores Matthews waged a losing fight to exempt classes who will not use the new addition to the Student Union from being forced to help pay for it.

Debate first came on Cournoyer's two motions. In introducing them, he stated that the committees are the workhorse of the Senate; that it is they who know the most about a given bill. He further claimed that a "committee should know that a bill they sponsor will have to be taken seriously."

Speaking in direct opposition, Clancy stated that a person who would vote for either bill has to admit that he feels "that 51% of the Senate is not capable to constructivly alter a bill." He declared that if the bills were passed, the Senate would become "government by ⅗."

Debate over the bill raged for over an hour even though limits of 5 minutes had been imposed on each speech. Finally, Senator Dave Mathieson offered what was seen as a compromise bill. He would amend Cournoyer's proposal so that instead of forcing the Senate to muster a ⅔ majority to kill a bill, they would need the same majority to bring it out of a committee which killed it.

There was considerable argument over whether this was an actual amendment, or whether it was a new and different bill. President Jon Fife ruled that it was an amendment, and was thus in order. This amendment was debated for a short time and rejected on a voice vote.

Cournoyer then moved to amend his bill so that it took a unanimous vote of a committee to require the ⅔ vote of the Senate. However, this amendment soon went the way of the first.

In a final effort to get the bill passed, Cournoyer reminded the Senate that they had in past years delegated to the Fine Arts Council the same power which they refused their own standing committees. To this, Clancy replied "Is not this very organization the one which is most in need of revision?"

A quorum count was then called. When it was established that a quorum did not exist, a

Cardinal Cushing Speaks At Newman Center Dedication

Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, speaking at the dedication of the University's Newman Center, announced his intent to donate $100,000 towards its cost. Praising the Center, the Cardinal called it a great credit to the Springfield diocese. However, he continued, all Catholic students at the University are not from the Springfield area. Many are from the Archdiocese of Boston.

The dedication began with a solemn procession which wound its way around the center. As it proceeded, Bishop Bernard Flanagan of Worcester blessed both grounds and building.

The procession then entered the front of the Center where Bishop Christopher Weldon of Springfield enthroned a large crucifix on the wall.

After blessing of the crucifix, the procession entered the chapel where Bishop Weldon, as host, solemnly received the cardinal.

Ascending the altar, Bishop James Connoly of Fall River began the Solemn Pontifical Mass of the Holy Spirit. This Mass is always associated with the life of the scholar, being celebrated at the beginning of each academic year.

In his sermon, Cardinal Cushing stated that it would be dangerous to develop all other branches of learning and leave the religious heritage untouched. He declared that the Church's education program on the university campus must have "depth and scope" to enable the student to evaluate and integrate all his learning and to understand that all men belong to a single family under God.

The Newman Center, which opened near the beginning of April serves as a religious, social, and educational center for over 3000 Catholic students on campus. Built at a cost of over $750,000, the Center contains many spacious facilities including a chapel, library, lounge, social hall, recreation area and snack bar. It also provides office and living accommodations for the two resident priests, Rev. David J. Power, Newman Club chaplain, and Rev. J. Joseph Quigley, assistant.

Faculty Pay

Last week the Senate passed a bill urging President Lederle to re-evaluate the budget for '65 concerning faculty pay. It suggested that there be a pay increase and also encouraged increasing the faculty enrollment. Certainly the key to the "Quantity or Quality" and to a more extensive and thorough Honors program lies in the type of faculty and the number of faculty members. The heart of any University is its faculty. They are influential in creating the intellectual zest not only in the general atmosphere but in the student body. With business and industry offering huge salaries to men with Ph.D.'s in their specific fields, with the private schools offering higher salaries, one can not blame a faculty member for leaving or a prospective scholar for choosing a private school. However the challenge does not just lie with private schools. Of the six New England State Universities, according to a list compiled of Sept. 1962 UMass has the lowest faculty pay average, $7,887. URI has an average of $8,386. $500 more than the University. It's absurd! UConn is $1,000 more at $8,982. The University of Vermont has an average of $9,008, $1500 more.

What can one say? Is dedication going to be the incentive for teaching at the University? Are not the demands on our faculty as stringent as the faculty at other Universities? Is it that our faculty does less work? Is it that our faculty is less worthy? There is no need to answer these questions.

It is astounding to learn that there are only a few schools throughout the state that have a smaller faculty average pay scale. Two of these schools are A.I.C. in Springfield, and Hebrews Teacher's College in Brookline. There are only one or two others that are lower than the University.

We, the students of the University of Mass. are very fortunate in having such fine, intensely outstanding teachers and scholars. Let us hope that we will be able to keep them here, and to encourage others to come.

Looking at the faculty pay averages at private schools in Massachusetts, we are amazed at the figures. The average pay at Amherst College is $12,725. Boston U. tops us with $9,192. Clark in Worcester pays their professors an average of $10,245. The average at Harvard is $15,710. Oh, but they are private schools—how do we expect to . . . DON'T SAY ANOTHER WORD. We must be able to deal with our faculty on the same level as these private schools.

We are not saying that money is the only incentive for teaching at the University of Massachusetts. Certainly it shouldn't be the total and primal concern for teaching. However there should be the same financial remuneration available at the University of Mass. as there is at other prominent schools. If the University wishes to grow in quality as well as quantity, it must be aware of the needs of its faculty members.

G.M.M.

Fiscal Responsibilty III

In past editorials, we have exhorted the Student Senate to carefully consider all financial bills which come before it. However, Wednesday night's meeting has shown that they choose to disregard our advice. Before them was a bill which on the surface seemed innocent enough, however, a further examination revealed that the bill would result in serious inequity.

The bill, S-102, was an affrmation of the Senate's recognition of the need for addition to the Student Union. But, the result of the bill if passed will be approval of forcing seniors to pay for the building: seniors who will never see that building erected.

It is our belief that a serious principle is involved in the discussion of this bill—one which the Senate in its haste to get home seems to have overlooked. Is it right to tax a person for construction of a building from which he will derive no benefit? We believe not. No organization can morally levy a tax on a body when that body will not receive benefit from the tax.

It must be emphasized that we are not against construction of additions to the Union. What we are opposed to is the levying of an unjust tax upon a class which derives no benefit from said tax.

We would therefore ask the Senators to carefully consider this bill at their next meeting, especially the question of taxing seniors. We would request them to ask themselves if it were you, and if the charge were one hundred dollars and not ten, would you vote as you did Wednesday?

Which Side Are You On?

by JOHN B. CHILDS

The Birmingham protest march of last Saturday by University students was undertaken with no trouble anticipated. It was obvious that no fire hoses would be turned upon us, no dogs sent to attack us. We began our march with only the rain as an adversary.

As it so happened our route ran down North Pleasant and as we passed along a strange thing began to happen. Some individuals, not a large number to be sure, but certainly loud, began to hurl catcalls at us as we passed by. Jeers and mocking remarks about demonstrating fell upon us.

We do not know why those individuals jeered and catcalled. Perhaps any placard carrying group would have come under attack, perhaps not, how is one to know? However the basic fact is this. Our march, though it was not doing much, though it was a feeble attempt to be sure, was done in support of human rights. Those who jeered, those who catcalled were acting against such support.

I am reminded of a folk song, one stanza of which asks a question that is appropriate for those individuals who jeered. The stanza is simply this:

Which side are you on boys?
which side are you on?

The Final Dilemna

by JOAN SHUSTA and RENA POTISH

Final exams are practically inseparable from our educational system. They should culminate a semester of courses—coordinate all the knowledge gained during the past months. But is the exam period fulfilling its valuable purpose?

Picture a dorm—Hill, Arnold, or Van Meter—toward the end of final week; suitcass half-packed, rooms half-empty, and tension everywhere. Now, picture the occupants of this room—haggard, sleepless, anxious, heads spinning with possibilities for filling in the blanks. But what actual rewards do these students derive from this period of temporary neuroticism?????

Do they leave their geology final with a comprehensive understanding of the earth's composition and characteristics Have the statistics memorized so diligently for a psych final contributed anything to their concept of the human mind and its function? After all the toil and frustration, do they feel they have completed a learning experiverse and unconnected answers which will quickly vrse and unconnected answers which will quickly be erased from their mind?

Can the efforts expended during finals be employed towards a more worthy object? Does it make sense to study picayune facts for an examination which affords no intellectual, personal, or academic benefits?

If these students, as so often happens, must take three finals within twenty-four hours, how can they possibly assimilate three distinct learning experiences, especially when handicapped by a one-day reading period.

Finals are necessary and can serve a definite and constructive aim. Conditions which could help them fulfill their intended purpose would be a minimal three-day reading period and for appropriate courses dealing with organized essay exams, basic ideas and trends rather than irrelevant facts. The need for these changes is self-evident. It is time to act.

ENCOURAGING

The results of the Collegian Opinion Poll have not yet been tabulated. Nevertheless, the response to this poll on the part of the student body has been extremely encouraging. Close to six hundred students have taken this opportunity to critically evaluate the Collegian and offer constructive suggestions for the improvement of the paper. Many of these criticisms and suggestions will be implimented next year in an effort to improve the quality of the Collegian.

If only one-tenth, even one-twentieth, of those people who showed enough interest to fill out the qustionnaire would come and work on the Collegian, many, assuredly not all, of the Collegian's problems would be solved.

Lack of staff is not the Collegian's only problem, but it is its major one. And it will be alleviated when more students answer our oft repeated pleas for more staff members. The Collegian needs you.

the CACODYL

Neal Rindelman

Assuming that WMUA's broadcasting equipment does not explode or fall apart, they will once again be on the air for twenty four hours a day with music to study by. This is a good thing. In all probability, however, the titles of the classical music played during the week of finals will not be announced. This is a bad thing. The frustration of having the title of a piece on the tip of one's tongue but no quite recalling it is often more aggravating than the assinine final exam question of "In two hours tell me all you know about the subject of ——. Your answer should be well organized and should encompass questions raised in the lecture notes and in the text book (lab manual, outside readings.) Please make every effort to use your best handwriting. Good luck!"

Speaking of WMUA, this is probably a good time to mention that they have had a rather successful year. Aside from an occasional announcer who feels that the sound of an auto-mobile horn blasting over the radio at 7:30 a.m. is funny, and other announcers who always insist that their show is something special, the programming has been good.

Perhaps their success has been due to the unusual student cross section who work with WMUA. At the present moment our campus radio station is staffed by about ten restless engineers (all of whom have an instatiable desire to splice wires together), about twenty announcers who all have one thing in common (they are all neurotic), a news staff that reads most of the latest campus news from the Collegian, several assorted officers of the radio station (representing at least two sexes), one retired Collegian Editorial Editor, and one monkey. (I note that the order of importance to the radio station has been observed.)

I would, however, congratulate WMUA for instituting a most difficult trend, namely changing format and entire programs to meet the needs of the campus. Few, if any, organizations on campus can claim this. Particularly since 1960 has WMUA become an educational station.

In true Cacodyl tradition, however, I would also contend that WMUA still has a long way to go. The organization of a news staff to cover campus news would be a step in the right direction. The soon to be conducted polls of WMUA will help determine more precisely what type of programming the campus would enjoy most. But most important of all is to avoid the danger of too much music on the airwaves—rock 'n roll or classical. WMUA already has some purely "conversation" shows as well as the above mentioned lecture broadcasts. What should be encouraged are the programs with "live", interesting people who discuss interesting topics. Take Sunday morning and afternoon for example. Seven straight hours of music are interrupted only by news broadcast and record introductions. Basta!

Another area that will be hurting next year will be the sports broadcasts. What ever you may have thought of Jim ("M.M.") Trelease, he was a popular personality who is going to be hard to replace. Sports coverage on WMUA has always been very good, but the main problem the sports staff will face next year is lack of personnel.

Don't forget to fill in the WMUA poll sheet when it arrives in your dorm, fraternity, sorority or whatever. And if any of you could sneak into the studios in the dead of night and steal that automobile horn I would be eternally grateful.

LETTERS

Dear Mr. Dymerski,

After reading your letter in the May 15 issue of the Collegian, I have come to the conclusion that you support the point of view which I expressed in last Friday's Collegian.

I was concerned with the Communist threat in Africa, Asia and South America. If we continue to support dictators in countries on the above continents then on what rational grounds can we influence the people of these countries to desire democracy. "What way of life did we ever offer to the Cuban People that is superior to what they live under today?" Don't misunderstand me. The Cubans don't seem content with Castro. In South Vietnam we offer an absolute dictator to the peasants of that country.

In reality, our country's foreign policy encourages us to become irrational anti-Communists, instead of trying to be an expression of those ideals with which we choose to live our own lives. We are taught by our parents, religious institutions and schools of right and wrong, of justice and of equality, for all. At present we are struggling to achieve equality for all Americans and our government and history courses teach us of American political institutions and of an American way of life.

How then do we accept without protest our government's support of a dictator in South Vietnam, who has set up "reorientation camps" which are similar to concentration camps to accommodate thousands of arrested political opponents, and who with our help is starving many of his countries' peasants by spraying their fields with poison chemicals, with the intent of uncovering enemy hiding places. In Guatemala elections were being planned last April. They were never held; for an army colonel named Peralta, with the support of our State Department, overthrew the government of Guatemala and a dictatorship was established. The excuse always given for our action is that we are fighting the Communist threat to our way of life. Is dictator Diem of South Vietnam defending the American way of life? Is our backing of Colonel Peralta's April coup, in harmony with the traditional American way that people attain political office.

If we sacrifice all that we believe in to fight Communism, then in the end, what are we defending.

Manager System Saves Thousands For Fraternities

The University Fraternity Manager's Association recently hosted a group of students and alumni from Lehigh University who were seeking information which might be helpful in organizing an organizaton similar to the FMA on their campus.

Arthur Davenport, Amherst College Fraternity Business Manager, joined alumni members Lawrence A. Walsky and Morris Keen, and undergraduates Roy Hodell, Don Mattson, Dick Young, and Scott Lau of Lehigh University around a conference table.

Discussion was led by Mr. George Rodgers, University Fraternity Manager, who has often been called on to assist other colleges and universities in the formation and operation of central buying organizations for social fraternities. The FMA at the University has often been cited as an outstanding example of success in this field. Although many of the organizations of this type are now in operation, they are on campuses 25-50 member fraternities. The UMass FMA was organized with only 14 members, and there are now 16 members and 2 associate members.

The annual savings to members is between $10,000 and $20,000 annually, and is, for the most part, accomplished through a central buying system in which the fraternities consider contract offers from several bidders within the area. Food, kitchen, and maintenance supplies, as well as personnel, are procured through the FMA.

The government of the FMA provides for student, faculty, and administrative views. The House of Delegates consists of the collective presidents, treasurers, and stewards of the member fraternities.

The Board of Directors consists of two Fraternity presidents, two officers of the Stewards Council, a fraternity treasurer, two faculty members, two alumni from member fraternities, and the advisor to the IFC. The Dean of Men and the Franity Manager are members ex-officio.

A substantial part of the success of the FMA has been due to the Fraternity Manager, Mr. George Rodgers. "Mr. Fraternity" has organized and directed this organization, with its comparatively few members to an effectiveness which has received national acclaim. He has aided in the organization of several similar groups on other college campuses.

In addition to his task as Fraternity Business Manager, Mr. Rodgers has given invaluable advice and aid to the Interfraternity Council. He is, in effect, an advisor to each individual fraternity as well as the entire fraternity system. Through his successful leadership of the Fraternity Managers' Assocation, he has gained respect and admiration from fraternity men on this campus and many others. His service to the students has made him an invaluable member of the University community.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 3

When all of you go to Europe during your summer vacation, you will certainly want to visit Spain, where the tall corn grows,

The first thing you will notice upon entering Spain is the absence of sibilants. In Spain "s" is pronounced "th" and thereby hangs a tale. Until the reign of Philip IV—or Guy Fawkes, as he was sometimes called—Spaniards said "s" just like everybody else. Philip IV, however, lisped, and Spaniards, having an ingrained sense of propriety and not wishing to embarrass their monarch, decided that everybody should lisp. This did indeed put Philip IV very much at his ease, but in the end it turned out to be a very bad thing for Spain. It wrecked the sassafras industry—Spain's principal source of revenue—and reduced the nation to a second-class power.

As a result, Spaniards were all forced to turn to bull fighting in order to keep body and soul together. Today, wherever you go in Spain—in Madrid, in Barcelona, in Toledo, in Cleveland—you will see bulls being fought. For many years the bulls have sought to arbitrate this long-standing dispute, but the Spaniards, a proud people who use nothing but Castile soap, have rejected all overtures.

It is therefore necessary for me to explain bull fighting to anyone who is going to Spain. It is also necessary for me to say a few words about Marlboro Cigarettes because they pay me for writing this column, and they are inclined to pout if I ignore their product. In truth, it is no chore for me to sing the praises of Marlboro Cigarettes, for I am one who fairly swoons with delight when I come upon a cigarette which gives you the full, rich taste of good tobaccos plus the pure white Selectrate filter, and Marlboro is the only smoke I have found that fulfills both requirements. Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! The flavor reaches you without stint or diminution. You, even as I, will find these statements to be happily true when once you light a Marlboro. Marlboros come to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box, and are made only by the makers of Marlboro.

But I digress. Let us return to bull fighting. Bulls are by nature bellicose creatures who will keep fighting till the cows come home. Then they like to put on pipe and slippers and listen to the "Farm and Home Hour." However, the Spaniards will not allow the bulls any surcease. They keep attacking the bull and making veronicas—a corn meal pancake filled with ground meat. Bulls, being vegetarians, reject the veronicas and then, believe you me, the fur starts to fly!

To be perfectly honest, many Spaniards have grown weary of this incessant struggle and have left their homeland. Columbus, for example, took off in three little ships—the Patti, the Maxene, and the Laverne—and discovered Ohio. Magellan later discovered Columbus. Balboa also sailed to the New World, but he was silent on a peak in Darien, so it is difficult to know what he discovered.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about Spain. So now, as the setting sun casts its rosy fingers over El Greco, let us take our reluctant leave of Spain—or Perfidious Albion, as it is jocularly called. Aloha, Spain or Perfidious Albion, aloha!

© 1963 Max Shulman

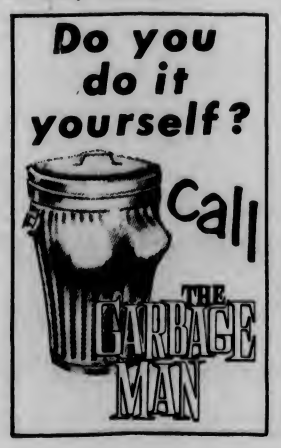
Let us not, however, take our leave of smoking pleasure. Let us keep enjoying those fine Marlboro Cigarettes—rich, golden tobacco—pure white Selectrate filter—soft pack or Flip-Top box—available in all fifty States of the Union.



Town Resident Has Large Part In Index

"I've been waiting 93 years for the 1963 Index," says Henri Darwin, 93, of Amherst. "Of course I play a big part in the '63 Index," says Haskins guardedly.

Index editor-in-Chief Alan Savat explains, "Even though the '63 book is late this year and Mr. Haskins is loyal, I can't figure him out. I mean, we're all anxious to see the book, but Henri has been a real nut about it. Of course he does play a good part in the book."

Savat also mentioned, a bit hesitatingly, that the '63 Index will be available by the end of May, just another couple of weeks longer than it usually takes to reach campus.

When asked about the contents of the new Index, Savat babbled incoherently about an honors thesis and scurried away, saying he couldn't comment any further.

When the Collegian tried to contact Haskins for further information, since he is apparently a big gun in the production of the Index, the reporter was told that Haskins was presently out of town—on a 50 mile hike.

Dr. Harlow To Study Recreation Facilities

Dr. Dana E. Harlow, Assistant Professor in the Department of Recreation, University of Massachusetts has been granted a leave-of-absence at the end of the current spring semester by the University Board of Trustees to act as Recreation Research and Planning Consultant to the United Community Services of Metropolitan Boston. In this capacity, he will direct an eighteen month study to assess the ten-year capital outlay needs of UCS's existing indoor recreation facilities and outdoor areas. The study will establish their present worth, potential reassignment, or elimination, present evaluation and possible consolidation or the acquisition of additional open-space properties and the construction of new recreation facilities.

Dr. Harlow arrived on the Campus of the University in September, 1959 from an assignment in Europe with the United Nations. In 1958, he was UNESCO Observer to the Brussels World's Fair. He holds a Bachelor of Science Degree from West Virginia University, a Master of Science Degree from the University of Illinois, and a Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Geneva. Popular with ahe student body, Dr. Harlow has been advisor to many student groups since arriving including the Maroon Key, Revelers, Recreation Club, Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity, 1962 Winter Carnival, and this year's Centennial Senior Class of 1963. This semester, he is one of the Freshman Honors Colloquia Directors. The Maroon Key in 1961 honored him during the Student Leaders' Night with a "par excellence" award and similarly, that year he was elected to Adelphia, Senior Men's Honorary. Last year, the Winter Carnival Committee dedicated its program booklet to him.

Dr. Harlow has not limited his professional and personal enthusiasm to the UMass campus. As a respected authority on the sociological and economical implications of leisure, he has been a much sought after speaker since his arrival and has addressed many professional and lay groups.

On Fri., May 24 from 6-7:30 p.m. a Coffee Hour in Dr. Harlow's honor will be held. This Coffee Hour is being sponsored by the Recreation Club, Senior Class, and the Maroon Key. All faculty and students are cordially invited.

U. of Miami To Try Out Co-Ed Dorm This Summer

MIAMI (CPS)—The University of Miami has announced plans to experiment with a co-educational dormitory during the coming summer sessions, provoking "endless amazement and debate," according to the Miami Hurricane, student newspaper.

At the time the announcement of the experiment was made, the planning committee working on the proposal had not reached any definite decisions, but expressed hopes that restrictions in the dorm would be limited to the "bare necessities."

At the completion of its study, the planning committee announced that it looked on the project as an "experiment in student self-discipline." No restrictions on student activity will be imposed at all by the school, but administration and rule-making will rest with a committee, or council of residents of the dormitory, both male and female.

The plan was reported as designed to develop the students' respect for rules which will eventually be established by their elected representatives. The administration plans to deal with the governing student council as a mature and responsible unit of the academic community, and will allow it full control over its own activities.

In fact, the committee has gone so far as to draw up an extremely liberal code of conduct for the dorm, which it will recommend to the first council of residents. Curfew will be eliminated for women as well as men, on the grounds that they should be treated as equally as possible. Rather than restrict the students, the rules would ask that they sign out in the evening by indicating where they intend to be. This will be used only to account for students who are out unusually late, and those not wishing to sign out at all would not be required to.

Students expecting to remain out overnight will also be expected to leave a number where they can be reached in case of an emergency. This rule may be upheld more strictly to avoid legal complications, but the number of a friend or relative will suffice.

Similarly, there will be no restrictions on dress or movement through the building. The committee hopes that this will lead into positive programs, and tend to discourage sloppiness and untidy housekeeping. The committee also hopes that it will encourage many combined activities on the part of the dorm resi-

Presence of U.S. Troops Eases Racial Tensions

By United Press International

Racial tensions eased in Birmingham, Ala., and Nashville, Tenn., Tuesday but flared again in North Carolina's capital city of Raleigh.

More than 800 Negroes staged a "freedom march" through downtown Raleigh Tuesday night to back up desegregation demands. Police arrested 34 demonstrators.

There were no incidents during the march but there were some tense moments when the demonstrators passed street corners crowded with white youths. Police charged 15 of the arrested group with assault against Leslie Ferguson, assistant manager of a cafeteria, who was "put in a state of fear" during a sit-in attempt.

Ministers Back Desegregation

A bi-racial committee held a two-hour meeting in Raleigh Tuesday and bank official Victor Bell, Jr. said, "I think we made good progress in understanding each other and the problem." Earlier the Raleigh ministerial Association voted 42-1 in favor of desegregating business facilities.

Birmingham was relatively quiet Tuesday and federal observers said the city's racial atmosphere was "improving." They added, however, that federal troops would remain at nearby military bases because of the chance of "trouble developing quickly."

Alabama Gov. George Wallace sent another telegram to President Kennedy demanding either the removal of the troops or publication of "the true fact of your military operation . . ." Wallace said the presence of the troops was an "open invitation to a resumption of street rioting by lawless Negro mobs, on the assumption they will be protected by federal military forces."

UMass Concert Band Releases Record Album

An integral part of the University's expansion has been the growth of student participation in the culture instilling area of musical expression. To commemorate both the Centennial year and the growth of the University Bands' Program, the UMass Concert Band has released a double record album showing both the band's wide range of media and the ability of its instrumentalists.

Recorded live on the tenth annual tour before audiences totaling ten thousand, the two records are enclosed in an attractively printed double album. A feature of the set is the March of the Redmen, specially written for the band by Arthur Purseglove and appearing for the first time on record. Recordings were made in auditoriums in Holyoke, West Springfield, Worcester, South Ashburnham, Mass., and in Hebron, Conn., while the records were pressed by the Handle Recording Service of Boston.

Each album is a complete concert and includes a wide variety of musical expression—traditional marches, the stirring Finale from Dvorak's New World Symphony, the contemporary Symphonic Songs for Band, selections from the score of the Sound of Music, and the moody Victory at Sea score, to mention a few. A limited number of these albums are now on sale in the S.U. Book Store.

Supreme Court Justice Goldberg Amherst Speaker

AMHERST, Mass. UPI — Arthur J. Goldberg, Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, will be the main speaker at Amherst College's 142nd Commencement June 16, it was announced today.

Justice Goldberg was Secretary of Labor from 1961 until his appointment to the bench early last fall. He also served as general counsel for the Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO and as a legal adviser to a number of other labor organizations.

Some Optimism Noted

The President was reported to be "cautiously optimistic" he would not have to use the 3,000 troops rushed to military bases at Montgomery and Anniston following racial rioting in Birmingham streets last Saturday night. Kennedy was said to be "very hopeful and very desirous that this matter can be settled on a local level."

Administration sources in Washington said that white Birmingham citizens who took part in working out a desegregation agreement with Negro leaders have been threatened with violence. These sources said the bombings of a Negro house and motel which touched off the rioting were aimed at destroying the agreement.

Instructor Explores Americas

by RICHARD BUSH

"Traveling around the South American continent on a 57-foot converted yawl gave me some wonderful informal training," Mrs. Alice Petersen, an addition to the UMass Botany Dept. this year, said in a recent interview.

Mrs. Petersen, an instructor in botany at the University, set out, after the death of her Flight Surgeon husband at the end of World War Two, on the sailing trip with five other people and returned in 1949.

The party left Norfolk, Virginia and travelled to Bermuda, the West Indies, Central America and various South American countries.

After continuing up the West Coast of the North American continent to Rangell, Alaska they went back down the coast to the Panama Canal and on to Norfolk.

This trip afforded Mrs. Petersen with several opportunities to inspect first hand many biological wonders such as flora and undersea caves in the West Indies.

Mrs. Petersen received her A.B. and A.M. degrees at Hunter College. She has been working on her Ph.D. at Smith College, the Biological Stations at the Universities of Minnesota and Michigan, and mostly at UMass.

Included within Mrs. Petersen's wide background in science are several types of teaching experiences. She has worked with gifted students and directed the biology laboratory at the George Washington High School in Manhattan and Taft High School in the Bronx as well as directing the chemistry laboratory at New Utrecht High School in Brooklyn.

From 1953-1955 she was an instructor in the zoology department at Smith College, then a departmental fellow in botany at UMass from 1957-1959. Upon completion of her fellowship she taught plant anatomy, field biology, and general botany at Southern Illinois University from 1959-1961.

She assumed her post at the University in September 1962.

Her various hobbies include hand crafts and painting, mountain climbing, classical music, and playing any wind instruments other than reeds; her favorites are trumpet and flute.

"Assignment: America"

by PHYLLIS BATTLEE

NEW YORK — The average kindly American tends to feel sympathy for the immigrant who comes to the U.S.A., unable to speak English. This is natural and good.

In literally thousands of cases, however, the no-speak-English immigrant is vastly more successful than the average kindly American.

Why should this be? Because our society is based on a theory of minimum work for maximum pay, and the foreign-born can understand that about as well as he grasps five-syliable words. He generally works twice as hard as his native-born neighbor to compensate for his strangeness.

Even more interesting is the phenomenon of the man of foreign tongue who rises to great heights in the field of the American arts—the theatre and literature—where a knowledge of the English language is essential. For years, for example, Hollywood's top screen writers have been men who came to this country with little or no ability to speak, much less write, dialogue in the American idiom.

"I never took lessons in English," says one of the most successful of these. "They way I learned English was by going to three double features a week, for 10 cents each, which was all I could afford back in the thirties. I learned language from Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable, you might say. And they often were reciting language from scripts given to them by immigrants who had fled Europe during World War I."

I.A.L. Diamond is his name. He's one of the top screenplay artists in Hollywood "Love in the Afternoon," "Some Like It Hot," which won him an Oscar, "The Apartment," "One, Two, Three". He came to New York in 1929, at the age of nine, from Ungheni, Romania, and settled in Brooklyn, N.Y., with his father, a merchant.

"In school," he says, "the only thing I could manage without problems, because of the language, was mathematics. We decided, in that case, I'd better try to be an engineer.

'But then I discovered movies. Better than Berlitz. By the time I graduated from high school, I'd won the English medal.

"I have a philosophy—when you have to learn a language late in life, you're more attuned to the nuances of it. You hear things in a way the native American never hears them. Dramatic phrases—they stick in your ear, rather than being taken for granted. I don't know, but it seems when you start speaking a native tongue at the age of two, you take it as such a matter of course you develop a tin car to its nuances."

Diamond—who is physically as long and drawn out as his scenarios never are — is living proof of his theory. After high school, still pianning a major in math, he enrolled in Columbia University. But during his freshman year, he wrote the famed Columbia varsity show; it was such a smash, he was assigned to write the next three annual shows—as well as becoming editor of the Columbia Daily Spectator. Before he was even graduated, on the basis of these accomplishments he had a contract in his pocket, declaring him a junior writer for Paramount Studios.

"Those were the days" he remembers, as only a memory, "when 130 writers might be working on 40 pictures a year for a studio. It was like assigning a committee to write a symphony." But Diamond plugged along, patiently, not getting much credit, until Billy Wilder discovered him and asked him to collaborate on "Love in the Afternoon." Today he has just finished "Irma La Douce," in which he is again co-author and associate producer with Wilder.

Darthmouth Men Down Connecticut Make Canoe Trip

HANOVER, N.H. UPI — Sixteen Dartmouth College students begin the traditional 218-mile canoe trip down the Connecticut River Thursday.

The 43-year-old event commemorates the pioneer voyage of John Ledyard who graduated from Dartmouth in 1775. He went from here to Old Saybrook, Conn., where the Connecticut meets the sea.

The students will travel in eight cancoes. The five day trip will include six portages and two rapids in addition to lesser hazards such as parties heid in honor of the collegians.

Ledyard canoe club president Thomas Falcon, of Longmeadow, Mass. will lead the trip.

On Friday night the students expect to stay at Northfield, Mass. and Saturday night they will be guests at Mount Holyoke College.

Alpha Zeta Elects Officers Concludes Seventh Year

The little known honorary fraternity, Alpha Zeta, ended its seventh year on campus recently with election of officers for the forthcoming school year. Alpha Zeta is the national honorary agricultural fraternity with membership restricted to those four-year graduate students whose interests lie in the broad field of the agricultural sciences or businesses.

Last October, this organization was instrumental in bringing one of the University's most distinguished alumni, Murray D. Lincoln, to campus to speak at a convocation. Lincoln, who is president of Nationwide Insurance Companies and author of an autobiography "Vice-President in Charge of Revolution", was also installed as an honorary member of Alpha Zeta.

Since then Alpha Zeta has participated in a number of activities associated with the College of Agriculture. One such activity was the sponsorship of the University Judging Teams which win wide acclaim each year in contest with teams in fields as dairy products, livestock, and poultry at other colleges throughout the country.

Last month Alpha Zeta held a Spring Banquet at which time, Dr. Franklin W. Southwick, Dept. of Horticulture, and Frank Skogsberg, manager-agent of the Berkshire County Extension Service, were initiated as Associate Members. Also initiated, as student members, were Lim Chhuy '64—Food Science & Technology; Louis Klimoski '65—Agricultural Economics; Richard Koss '65—Entomology; Edward Lemieux '65—Wildlife Management; and Peter Witherell '65—Entomology. Honored at this banquet for his service to Alpha Zeta was Dr. Martin E. Weeks of the Agronomy Department who has served three years as Chairman of the Advisors.

Five members, two advisors, and Fred P. Jeffrey, Assoc. Dean of the College of Agriculture and a national officer of the organization, later attended a New England regional meeting at the University of Vermont. Here problems of publicity, activities, and national and local recognition were discussed. The local chapter seeks greater acknowledgement on campus through fulfillment of its objectives here at the UMass.

New Officers were elected at a recent meeting and are soon to be installed. They are Chancellor, Ted Guilford '64; Censor, Edward Lemieux '65; Scribe, Peter Witherell '65; Treasurer, Lim Chhuy '64; and Chronicler, Edward Johnston '64. At that meeting John C. Calhoun, a major in Forestry, was awarded a certificate conferring honor upon him for attaining the highest grade-point-average in his freshman curricula in the College of Agriculture. The award was made by outgoing Chancellor, Charles B. Brown '63.

Nationally, the Fraternity of Alpha Zeta has acquired 55 chapters and over 40,000 members since its inauguration in 1897 at Ohio State University. The Massachusetts Chapter was founded November 16, 1956 as the 50th chapter, and at the present time has over 80 alumni members.

—THANKS—

Since this is the last time the Greek or Women's Page will be printed this academic year, Sandi May and Sandi Giordano would like to thank all those fraternity, sorority, and dormitory representatives who have contributed material throughout the year.

The committee planning the venture strongly emphasized the experimental nature of the co-ed project, and has urged all students planning to take part in the program to conduct themselves with discretion and maturity, as the results of the summer's experiment will most certainly affect the university's future plans.

Statue Kissing Fails To Stun N.U. Dean

(ACP)—You can pat him, kiss him or rub his shiny nose, but please don't use his tail for an ashtray, pleads Northeastern News, Northeastern University.

That, in a nutshell, is the administration's attitude on the care and affection that should be offered the beloved Husky statue.

For months now, students have been patting the stern-looking statue's nose. It now shines glowingly, a symbol of the student body's high regard.

The University has no objection to the nose-rubbing but it is less than enthusiastic about the disrespect shown the 700-pound bronze mascot by students who use him for a coat hanger or flip cigarette ashes in his tail.

The beginning of a new fad, with coeds planting kisses on the dog's nose, failed to stun Gilbert G. MacDonald, dean of students.

"I long ago gave up trying to control who Northeastern students kiss," he said.

A quick check of student opinion found most in favor of a tradition of nose rubbing. Some compared it to the Annapolis tradition of throwing coins at the statue of Tecumseh. Others felt it would bring good luck before an exam. One timid coed approved of the nose rubbing but felt that kissing the nose would spread germs. Her boy friend just grinned.

SORORITY NEWS

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

A welcome new addition to Alpha Chi Omega arrived with the initiation of twenty of our pledges. The new sisters are: Anita Beaupre, Linda Bodwell, Barbara Collins, Barbara Esielionis, Barbara Ford, Mae-Ellen Hayes, Marilyn Jordan, Terry Joseph, Joyce Lodico, Joan Mendrek, Arlene Nataupsky, Diane Oaks, Lorraine Osborn, Joan Panttila, Joanne Piela, Maureen Ricketts, Carol Rosch, Nat Roulston, Sally Strout, and Gisela Wagner. Besides our new sisters, we proudly welcome two new pledges: Sue Heine and Tina Poshkus.

We would like to thank Pi Phi for our recent exchange. All the sisters had a great time, and it certainly felt good to find new bridge partners for one "before dinner" game.

Congratulations are extended to Ann Williams for Revelers; Barbara Ford, Sue Heine, and Mo Ricketts for Scrolls, and to Tina Poshkus for Precisionettes. Also congratulations to Ann who was re-elected Treasurer of the class of 1965, and to Carol Atwood who was re-elected Treasurer of the class of 1966.

On HER Weekend, Alpha Chi took the initiative and played "fraternity" with a picnic in the afternoon and a party Saturday night. The situation was certainly reversed as we played "host." A buffet Sunday afternoon topped off the weekend.

The other night the Sophomores of Alpha Chi paid tribute to the graduating Seniors. As the Senior Class was the last pledge class of Gamma Chi, our local, the Sophomores learned a few Gamma Chi songs. Each Sophomore also made a doll representing one of the Seniors. These dolls were presented to each Senior girl along with a poem.

While our new house is being built, the Alpha Chi's will be "Halfway to Heaven" in Van Meter Dorm. How thankful we'll be when the new house is completed.

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

As the first year of Iota comes to a close, we find we have more than doubled the membership we had at the beginning of the year. With the addition of our two new pledges, Nancy Pero and Louise McCarthy our total is now thirty-six. We are very glad to welcome them into our sisterhood.

Congratulations are in store for Sue Barrett who will be going to New Mexico on the exchange program first semester. Congratulations also to Judy Ferris and Wendy Neilson on becoming new members of the Precisionettes.

Next September Nancy Jansen and Kay Johnson will be councilors in Hamlin and Jan Rosata will be up on the hill in Van Meter.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

On Saturday along with the cold, rainy weather came forty Kappa fathers, several mothers, and one little brother. They came for the Father's Day Picnic which had been scheduled to take place at Look Park.

Needless to say some very quick revisions were made, and happily the second plans worked out just as well as the picnic. Several sisters quickly donned aprons and succeeded in proving they could do anything in a pinch —even cook.

After lunch, the girls presented a satire on the meaning of Kappa's symbols. For the remainder of the afternoon we went to more spacious quarters and taught our fathers the latest dance steps—or did they teach us?

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Lambda Phi was pleased to entertain our National President, Mrs. Doris Knight, and the members of the Corporation Board at a meeting Wednesday evening to discuss future plans for the house.

We underclassmen bid the seniors a formal goodbye at the Annual Senior Banquet Monday evening. The affair was highlighted by the reading of Senior wills and little sister poems.

A surprise of the night was special 'awards' to each senior made by the pledge class.

Quotes On Fraternity Life

What is a fraternity?

"It is an organization common to American colleges which promotes friendship and brotherhood among its members. The members are drawn together by common bonds of interest and enthusiasm and for their own scholastic and social betterment."

—Alphonse Clemens

What is a fraternity not?

"It is not a social club or a rooming house. Especially, it is not to be considered monastic, non-social or dull."

—Durwood Owen

Is this brotherhood fact or fantasy?

"Being bound together for the natural improvement of the members and being the close knit organization that it is, this concept of brotherhood is a natural reality."

—Joseph E. Nostrum

But are fraternities really needed in today's changing and turbulent world?

"Certainly."

—Richard Bonhomme

Is this need proven by statistics?

"Yes. In 1960 fraternities installed 48 new chapters, sororities installed 24. This, and the fact that between 1955 and 1959, 88 colleges opened their campuses to national fraternities proves this need beyond a doubt."

—Joseph Q. Flash

Redmen Squeak Out 3-2 Win Over URI; Wilson Goes Route

by AL RICE '66

Lady Luck shined on Coach Earl Lorden's hitless wonders for a second game in a row, bringing back another extra inning verdict over the University of Rhode Island, 3-2.

Superior pitching on the part of lefty Dick Wilson, who went all the way, prevented the Redmen from bringing back a losing record.

The Rams drew first blood in the initial inning, as Ron Dawson walked with one out. Tom Kindl's single put runners on first and second, and Tony Williams' boot loaded them up. Dawson scored on an infield out, and the inning was history one out later.

Mass went ahead in the second with a two-run outburst. With one out, Simone singled to left. Dick Hughes reached on an error and Pete Larkin walked to load 'em up. Wilson reached on another error to score one run, and Neal Harris walked to push the second tally across. Summary: two runs on one hit.

In the sixth, URI tied the score. Two singles and a Larkin boot filled the bases with one out, and a tap to the mound somehow scored a run.

It looked like it was all over in the seventh when Chuck Scarpulla sent a ball tearing over the left-fielders head. But, a sprained ankle between second and third held the blast to a triple, and he was left stranded.

In the top of the tenth, John Awdycki walked, and was moved to third on Tom Simone's single to left. Roy Corey then doubled to short right field, Awdycki scoring, and Simone being cut down at the plate. Simone twisted his ankle coming around third, but he was out by a mile anyway.

Wilson went all the way in picking up his second victory of the season against four losses. But this is deceiving, as his earned run average comes out to a very neat 1.31. Yet, this isn't the lowest figure on the team, which sports an overall ERA of 1.36. The hitting has been hurting; the team average huddling was below the .200 mark.

Wilson gave up seven hits, and struck out nine Rams, while walking only two. This was the second extra inning 3-2 win for the Redmen, and the second consecutive extra inning complete game turned in by the pitching staff.

A report by the Institute for the Study of the U.S.S.R. calculated today that Russia should outscore the United States in the 1964 Olympics, 712 to 518, despite U.S. improvement in gymnastics, marksmanship and sailing.

The figures, based on worldwide performances in Olympic sports during the last two years, were contained in a report written by Yury V. Marin.

Although the report claimed victory for the Russians by an overwhelming point margin, it said that Russian experts were concerned about U.S. improvement in certain sports and that intensive preparations are being made to ensure a Soviet victory at Tokyo.

Marin's report said Soviet athletes are aiming for the "Liquidation of the lag" shown in certain sports. He specifically referred to track races from 100 meters to 10,000 meters, swimming events, men's gymnastics and certain weight categories in boxing and wrestling.

There are some great gimmicks out for the golfer who has everything. The best for the duffers is the radioactive "marking" of golf balls with distinctive "traces" so that properly equipped, you can find your wild tee shot no matter where it lands. It's a bit expansive and not exactly in production, but Tracerlab can probably fix you up with one for a few thousand . . . The second is a bit more expensive and, presumably, designed for the real golf nut. That's the Kearsage Valley Country Club in North Sutton, N.H. which opened officially as an 18-hole course last Sunday. Kearsarge asays it is the first golf course with its own, private landing strip. In fact, it's only a couple of hundred feet from the aircraft parking lot to the first tee. The strip has another advantage—it is 3,500 feet in length and can handle up to DC-3 size aircraft. That's just in case you want to take the whole executive floor along with you. The only unanswered question is how the sound of low-flying planes affects putting.

You'll have to hunt far and wide to find a quicker wit than that displayed by freshman Red Sox manager Johnny Pesky. You might recall a recent story that outfielder Carl Yastrzemski had been losing weight again and, presumably was coming down with trainer Jack Fadden to learn that Yastrzemski hadn't lost an ounce and was the picture of health.

"Besides," Pesky said, "if the guy is sick, I sure hope he stays that way. After all, he's batting call was sent out for Senators who had left the room for various reasons. The quorum was soon established.

Cournoyer's motion was then defeated. He then called the question on his second motion, and it too was defeated.

After the passage of two constitutions, the second battle of the evening began. The bill would indicate Senate approval of the expansion of the Union, and the resulting $5 increase in the student tax. It said, however, that the tax might have to be levied one year before completion of the building. Senator Dolores Matthews then rose to amend what she termed an unjust bill. She moved that the senior class be exempted from paying the tax, as they would derive no benefit from the building due to their graduation before its opening. The amendment was given short debate and then killed.

It was shortly after this, just before the bill was about to be passed in its original form, that a quorum call was made. Since a quorum was not established, the meeting was adjourned until Tuesday, May 21 at 7 p.m.

November 17, 1962

by JIM TRELEASE '63

With the scoreboard clock indicating only 15 seconds to play, a chilled capacity crowd of students, alumni and solons numbly looked on in dismay while a dark November wind whipped across Alumni Field at the University of Massachusetts. Down in front, a UMass tackle, Bob Burke, writhed feigningly on the gridiron in hopes of stopping the clock and New Hampshire's Wildcats who led 16-14. He scarcely succeeded in either.

Fifteen seconds later, the unheralded inevitable arrived and UNH walked off with the Beanpot, symbol of the Yankee Conference championship. Seconds later, UMass Head Coach Vic Fusia angrily grabbed his game notes and walked off the field. Players and their families dredged the sod of Alumni Field in hopes of finding an answer to it all. And long after the crowds had departed and players had dressed, a janitor looked sadly on stale, half-eaten pieces of a red and white Victory Cake in the UMass lockerroom.

Amherst, Mass. (7,000 pop.) lies between the metropolises of South Hadley and Belchertown. It is built on two colleges, an odd collection of farmers' granges, four pizza points, and a match-box movie house. Any Saturday night in Amherst would make Sunday in Philadelphia look like a trip down the Las Vegas Strip. But the night of November 17, 1962 was the blackest, deadest, and quietest of all Amherst Saturday nights. The pizzas were charred blacker than usual and the Amherst Cinema propitiously was showing "Requiem For A Heavyweight."

The Day of the Wildcat was a long time in passing. The Redmen quarterback mysteriously disappeared for a week. Many linemen refused to go near the film rooms and coaches' offices for weeks. The articulate Vic Fusia, who was scheduled to begin his speaking sojourn on the banquet circuit immediately after the UNH game, remained in silent seclusion for two weeks. It is difficult to finger one incident or one day that ended the period of mourning by players and coaches. But if we had to name one, it happened the night in late December when Fusia called Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, social and living quarters for a large portion of his players.

John Doyle, a non-grid house member, answered the phone with, "SAE, home of champions." A long, heavy silence followed. Then Fusia said, "There are no champions at SAE THIS year, young man. Now let me speak with Jerry Whelchel." Doyle recognized the voice immediately and house members today insist that John has yet to answer the phone since. Nevertheless, it was a warm moment of tragi-comedy that seemed to melt the ice of defeat.

It was a thaw that enabled players and persons close to the team last week to remark, "Losing that game may have been the best thing that ever happened to us." It was evident from spring drills that Fusia exhibited new spirit and warmth and the players showed no after-effects from their contest with the Wildcat.

Four years with Brown in the Ivy League and coast to coast schedules with Pittsburgh had well seasoned Fusia to the responsibilities, chores, and hazards of head coaching before coming to UMass. In the way of hazards, he felt first-hand the scathing treatments students and alumni had passed on his close friend and Head Coach, John Michelosen, at Pitt. When compared with Pitt, he knew he would face a serious challenge as well as comedown in player-personnel and scheduling during his initial years with UMass. As a consequence, he assembled a diversified, talented staff and attacked his first two seasons with grave 15 hour workdays, compulsory dedication, and a black frown.

The first time this reporter met Fusia, shortly after his arrival at UMass, we came away from a thirty minute interview informed and impressed. Here was a serious, dedicated man, we thought, but he's not going to win any awards from the American Association of Solar Heat Dealers.

The acuteness of Fusia's football mind was held in deepest respect by his new players but his darkened brow induced a kind of fear in his team. Fusia's balding dome, serious demeanor and determined dedication soon earned him the title "The Turtle" from his players. John McCormick, Fusia's first quarterback at UMass, tacked a newspaper clipping to the lockerroom wall before the team met the bitter-rival UConn Huskies in 1961. The article told of a plea to save road-crossing turtles from speeding traffic. That weekend, McCormick & Co. protected their Turtle with a 31-13 win over UConn.

By the time the New Hampshire game arrived in 1962, Fusia's dedication and planning had reached a peak. Previous losses to Dartmouth and B.U. had only strengthened the determination of Fusia and his staff in quest of the Beanpot.

Then came the Grid Crash of November 17, 1962.

Lacrossemen Score Five In 2nd Half; Beat UNH 6-5

Chiras, Harrington Spark Comeback

by WALT GREEN '66

The Redmen varsity lacrosse team are now well on their way toward being the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse Champions of the Eastern Division. They were brought closer with a sensational 6-5 win over the University of New Hampshire Wildcats. This was the first time that Coach Garber's team has beaten U.N.H. and it was a fitting time indeed. It was, without a doubt, the most exciting game of the year since with one minute left in the third quarter the Redmen trailed five to one. Then they broke lose with five goals and at the same time shut off the Wildcats scoring attack. It was senior Ron Chiras with four goals and Steve Harrington, (who will be back next season) with four assists, that were the big offensive gun for the Redmen.

Junior Frank Infusino won the opening face-off. Both teams moved the ball equally well but neither could seem to score. The Redmen controlled the ball for about 65% of the first quarter, but it wasn't until the last fifteen seconds that they scored. The UMass ten brought the ball up the field; once cleared, they started the finest display of passing to be seen the entire afternoon. It seemed that everyone touched the ball at one time or another. Then Steve Harrington passed to Ron Chiras and Ron drilled it in from about ten feet out. The time was 14:45 and the Redmen led one to nothing.

The second quarter saw two U.N.H. goals and none for the Redmen. Both goals were by Ballo unassistedly. They came at 2:42 and 4:53; but then the Redmen defense got tough and shutoff the Wildcats for the rest of the period. The score at the end of the half saw the Redmen down, two to one.

The third period seemed to spell doom for the Redmen since U.N.H. scored three goals in about the first five minutes. The first came at 3:03 when the ball bounced in on a freak bounce. After the goal comes a face-off at center field. The ball popped lose on the face-off and bounced towards the Redmen goal. U.N.H. middie, Barrett picked it up and tucked it in before anyone knew what was going on. The third goal was by Ballo, his third of the afternoon at 5:31. Now the Redmen trailed five to one. Again it was Steve Harrington with the ball and this time the pass went to Frank Infusino who fired it in to pop the net for the second Redmen goal. Next it was Don Tremblay all alone at 14:44, and the score stood five to three at the end of the third period.

Then Ron Chiras, playing like he was the only man on the field, scored three goals in the fourth and final period to win the game for the Redmen. Don Tremblay whipped a perfect pass to Chiras to set up the first goal at 3:09. At 11:10 Steve Harrington and Chiras clicked again as Ron rippled the net for the third time. The Harrington-Chiras combination couldn't be beat and they teamed up again at 11:37 for the winning goal as Ron tucked the ball in the corner. This tremendous fourth period surge is just another example of the "Spirit of the Redmen."

The defense was outstanding even in the face of disaster. The tight score is an indication of the defensive battle that took place also. It was the defense that constantly broke-up Wildcat plays and stole the ball. So tough was the defense, that never could the Wildcats take advantage of the extra man situations that they had on three different occasions. Paul Majeski was outstanding along with Tom "Pits" Kirby and Jon Kallio. John Harnett and Hal Ryder were also very rough on the extra man play defense.

Frank Gilliatt displayed some of the fanciest stick handling ever seen. Jrry Clinton was outstanding, stealing the ball and hustling after the loose balls to start the Redmen attacks. Don Tremblay and Steve Harrington "rode" the Wildcats exceptionally well and as a result UNH had considerable trouble clearing the ball.

"Helluva lacrosse game," said Coach Garber, as Frank Infusino rolled summersaults back to the huddle. And then the cheer went up; "UMass! rah! rah! New Hampshire!"

All that remains is the game with Worcester Poly. Tech. this Saturday here at the University at 2:00 p.m. W.P.I. should pose no problem for the Redmen and they should easily emerge the champs. Be on hand to witness the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse Champions this Saturday at 2:00.

Saturday night the Redmen will be playing the Conn. Valley Lacrosse Club under the lights at 7:00 p.m. The game will be played on the lower field.

Don Trembly battles with Wildcat Goalie Brian Poole for the ball in wild third period action Wednesday. Ron Chiras looks on, hopefully waiting for the rebound.

INTRAMURAL PLAYOFFS

On Monday May 20, at 6:00 p.m. the Fraternity, Dormitory, and Independent softball league winners will playoff for their respective division crowns on the lower athletic field behind the new Physical Education Building.

Netmen Gain Fifth Straight YanCon; Whip Coast Guard

by DAVID PODROS '65

Sparked by four sophomores—Bob Greenburg, Mike Rose, Bob Neal, and Billy Martin—and Roger Twitchell, the UMass varsity tennis team won its fifth straight Yankee Conference Championship in a row last weekend at Rhode Island.

Roger Twitchell, after being given a bye in the first seeded position of the first round (as was everyone else in all the other positions), went all the way to win top honors in the Conference. In his second round, Twitchel played Hudson from Vermont, who was tough to beat. However, after being behind 5-2, in the first set he came back to win the match 7-5, 6-2. The third round was against Massey from Connecticut, who Twitchell defeated for the second time this year by a score of 6-3, 6-1.

The second person to win his seeded position was Mike Rose in the third spot. Playing an important match with Symington from Maine, Rose lost his first set 0-6. However, seeming to answer the call of the occasion, he made a terrific comeback to win the next two sets, 6-2, 6-3. Continuing his winning ways, he defeated Seeley from Connecticut 8-6, 6-1.

Taking the sixth position championship was Billy Martin, also playing exceptionally good tennis. He won his second round 6-0, 6-2, and his third from Redmen of Connecticut 6-4, 6-0.

The doubles championships were taken by the Redmen only in the first and second positions. Twitchell and Neal teamed up in the first spot to defeat Vermont's Hudson and Freeman, 6-4, 6-1 and Elliot and Symington from Maine 9-7, 3-6, 6-2. In the second spot Martin and Bob Greenburg played a big match winning the second round against Sunshine and Chase from Rhode Island, 6-2 5-7, 6-2, and the third round against Seelye and Redmen of Connecticut 7-5, 6-4. The second doubles win by Martin and Greenburg clinched the tournament and the YanCon Championship.

In the singles Tom Simons lost in the third round to Chase from Rhode Island, and Bob Neal and Dick Leete in the fourth and fifth spots respectively, both lost to Grey and Weiss from Rhode Island.

The win by Kosakowski's is the fifth consecutive championship. This one, however, was played in a strong wind and in real tough conditions. All the netmen should be congratulated on a tremendous exhibition of tennis ability. The nearest competitor was Rhode Island with 13 points to UMass's 17; Connecticut had 10, New Hampshire and Maine 5, and finally Vermont 4.

The University of Massachusetts Tennis team completed one of its most successful seasons last Tuesday with a 6-3 win over the Coast Guard Academy at New London.

Although the team traveled without the services of its top three starters, it was able to handily defeat Coast Guard showing good depth. In the singles Bob Neal, after some trouble in the first set, defeated Ruhe 6-8, 9-7, 6-0. Bill Martin defeated Fairbrother 6-1, 9-7. Bob Greenberg overcame a bad start to defeat Franzen 5-7, 6-2, 8-6. Herb Moskowitz also had some trouble, but finally went on to win over Sherrad 5-7, 6-2, 6-2. Johnson defeated Lindak 4-6, 6-2, 6-3. Hugo suffered the only UMass loss in singles at the hands of Foster 6-3, 0-6, 4-6.

In the doubles Greenberg and Martin showed the form which won them second doubles at the Yankee Conference by handily defeating Ruhe and North 6-4, 6-0. Coach Kosakowski then preceeded to experiment with his other two doubles combinations. Although the players battled all the way lack of familiarity in the end accounted for the loss of the other two games. Moskowitz and Neal lost in three sets to Franzen and Fairbrother 6-1, 2-6, 3-6. Johnson and Hugo were defeated in a grueling match by Sherrad and Lindak 10-12, 7-9.

The Tennis team compiled an overall season record of 8-3. Although they got off to a slow start coach Kosakowski molded his team into Yankee Conference Champions for the fifth consecutive year. With only one member graduating, Capt. Tom Simmons, prospects for next year appear bright and coach Kosakowski hopes to make next year six in a row.

WSO Elects New Officers For Fall Semester

The Women's Service Organization has chosen its officers for the fall semester. They are: Jean Sargent, president; Sheila Armstrong, 1st vice-president; Lois Heselton, 2nd vice-president; Joyce Manke, recording secretary; Helen Symons, corresponding secretary; Ruth Ames, alumnae secretary; Linda Ray, historian; and Sue Fitzgerald, parliamentarian.

W.S.O. was formed on campus two years ago with the purpose of serving the campus and community, and this June they hope to be installed as a chapter of the national service sorority, Gamma Sigma Sigma.

Among W.S.O.'s service projects are the used book exchange at the beginning of each semester (co-sponsored by A.P.O.), ushering and coat-checking for University events, Christmas caroling at Amherst rest homes and in the Northampton redevelopment area, and assisting in girl scout work in Amherst. They have also sponsored work camps in North Springfield and at the Forest Lake camp in Winchester, N.H., a summer camp run by the Morningside Social agency in New York City for underprivileged children. This spring the members sold carnations for H.E.R. weekend, made puppets for the children at Belchertown Hospital, and sponsored a "Sing Out for CARE" program.

A Review

UM Alumnus Becomes Author

by GENEVIEVE REALL

More than in the past, the current era provides aspiring authors with abundant, combustible, unsettling subjects: topics that shock, revolt, horrify. The charged themes of the present loom impressivly, often obscuring the infinitely more charged, yet hushed themes of universal experience. It is not unusual that such material should gain a wide, responsive hearing. And, yet, not commonly, a writer appears who dares to think simply, to finger and search the old, obscure regions of the heart, the more homely and yet vastly more demanding areas of experience. Such a writer is Raymond Kennedy, author of My Father's Orchard (Houghton Mifflin, 1963, UMass '60). Mr. Kennedy is a cosmic miniaturist.

My Father's Orchard deals with youth's eternal dilemma: the relinquishing of childhood bonds in order to initiate, to create the world—grim though inviting—of manhood. This book, actually a long short story, tells of a crisis of identity. And although the boy, emotionally disturbed, must break from his father—he does not do so with a switchblade. Although he must learn of his sexuality—he is not educated by a stale sequence of erotic episodes. Indeed, all the truth of this crisis is rendered with a quiet impact. The tale is but a fragment of life, yet it touches the vital centers of that fragment. The time of life is brief, yet it is momentous.

Mr. Kennedy is a poet's novelist, wealthy in simplicity. The father of John Adroon is portrayed in his appropriate colors of poignance and strength. With a wry, often tender, humor, the author draws a winning portrait of John's youngest sister who, too, is somewhat cast off as the boy begins his acquaintance with a mature self. Mr. Kennedy deals with a subject so fragile and elusive that those very qualities are requisite in the style of narration. This is admirably accomplished. The book is rich in descriptive passages, and imagery explains much of what we might not otherwise apprehend. The preciousness of words and of the heart is re-discovered; for through two or three words, the author can evoke a whole range of feelings and sensations.

Although the craftsmanship is good, minor colloquial intrusions detract from an otherwise beautifully formal and smooth prose style. For instance, adolescent ruminations are mixed with the poetic, hence a slight unevenness of tone. But, Mr. Kennedy has the ability to stir one's frequently numbered reverence for the incidental, both in nature and in human relations. The cliched accolades of sensitivity and insight are fitting for his skill; for instance, a sentence about the moon from page 36 has the eloquence of some Romantic poets: "Who could believe that it, pale blossom, might have a way with seas!"

My Father's Orchard deserves reading and re-reading. Its strength, most rare in contemporary fiction, springs from the spirit.

College Bowl Contestants Needed

All persons interested in representing the University on the G.E. College Bowl are asked to leave their names at the news service office in South College. Those doing so will be tested to determine their aptitude for the show. Mr. Albert Medeira of the English Department, states that intensive preparation will be needed to field a winning team.

September will see the beginning of a series of tests and warm-ups which will narrow what is hoped to be a large field down to the actual four contestants. To get this large field to pick from, Mr. Medeira states that campus wide support is necessary.

The target date for the practice is Sunday, November 24, when the team from the University will challenge a yet undisclosed school.

"ADVISE AND CONSENT"

On Saturday, May 25. The Student Union Movie Committee will present a special movie: Advise and Consent. The movie will be held in the ballroom at 6:00 p.m. and 8:45 p.m.

Young Independents Will Sponsor Film Showing

On Tuesday, May 21, the Young Independents will sponsor the showing of "On the Waterfront", winner of eight academy awards, starring Marlon Brando, Eva Marie Saint, Karl Malden, Lee J. Cobb, and Rod Stieger, directed by Elia Kazan. This film also won the New York Film Critics' Award, and the Italian Critics' Award at the Venice International Film Festival in 1954.

'On the Waterfront" is a hard-hitting story of life on the New York waterfront, and one worker's realization of the truth about the corruption in his environment. The stirring background music was composed by Leonard Bernstein.

Also to be shown is the prize-winning cartoon, "The Violinist", an upraoriously funny spoof of the old saying: to create great music, the artist must suffer. the animated hero P. P. Harry, makes such bad music that even his best friend, the dog, is dismayed. He tries everything—including lessons—but his music remains dreadful until he takes the advice and begins to suffer. P. P. Harry's dilemma of his increasingly better music at the expense of his waning happiness is finally solved in an hilarious manner.

The films will be shown in Bartlett Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Tickets will be on sale in the S. U. Lobby from 1-4 on Monday and Tuesday, from 9-12 on Tuesday, and at the door. The price of tickets will be 25¢ each; the proceeds will be used to present more programs next year.

Princeton Students Face Jail For Part In Riots

PRINCETON, N.J. UPI—Two Princeton University students faced jail today and 47 others were under suspension for participating in a destructive spring riot by 1,500 undergraduates.

The suspensions were announced Thursday by the university's disciplinary committee.

Eleven students were suspended for a year.

Students were shocked and dismayed at the harshness of the punishment.

"It is in effect making sacrificial lambs out of 11 people," one student said.

Shortly before Dean of Students William D. Lippincott announced the university's action, a Princeton Borough magistrate sentenced two students to jail for five days for their role in the nightlong riot May 6 and 7 and fined 11 others.

The university student newspaper, the Daily Princetonian, today editorially concurred with the penalties imposed.

"In the final analysis," said the editorial, "we are convinced that the university's disciplinary body has acted with justice and humanity."

The students invaded the university president's residence and the mansion of Gov. Richard J. Hughes tossing cherry bombs, tried to overturn a two-car Pennsylvania Railroad train and

Graduate Student Recieves Fulbright Scholarship

The Department of Government announces that Peter Breit, graduate assistant, has received a Fullbright Scholarship for study in Germany. Breit will study at the University of Munich, doing special research on the question of West German attitudes to German reunification.

An honor graduate in Political Science from the University of Colorado, he is presently a teaching assistant at the University. Breit is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Delta Phi Alpha, and Pi Sigma Alpha, all academic honor fraternities.

He has taught German and has acted as interpreter for the U.S. Army in Germany.

Head Of Food Tech. Appointed To Three Federal Committees

Dr. William B. Esselen, Commonwealth professor and head of the department of food science and technology in the College of Agriculture at the University of Massachusetts, will serve on three national committees concerned with food research and development, it was learned here.

He has been appointed to the general committee on foods of the Advisory Board on Military Personnel Supplies, National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council. The committee reveiews and coordinates the activities of specialized committees of the Advisory Board having overlapping interests in the area of food, and provides guidance on a balanced research and development program.

Dr. Esselen also will serve on the committee on microbiology of food for the same Advisory Board. This committee is assigned the task of providing scientific and technical advice on the research and development activities in the microbiology of foods.

His third appointment is to the National Canners Association processing committee on low-acid canned foods in glass containers. This committee reviews and formulates safe process times for low-acid glass packed foods. The suggested processes are published and followed nationally and internationally by the food packing industry.

The Ogres Are Coming

Once more those ogres are coming. Yes, the air is once more tense and frought with apprehension and fear. Finals are coming. Some are not caught up, others are ready. Whatever the situation, we shall take them, because they do represent an aspect of the educational process—that is to draw the semester's work together.

Instead of going into a long dialectic concerning the limitations of finals as they are given now, let us say we look forward to the time when there will be a three or four day reading period before finals. In the present system, finals, as an educational learning experience, are ridiculous. The compactness and the amount of time allotted for studying is not sufficient for meeting that very purpose for which finals exist—to allow the student to see the whole course as a unit instead of separate parts. If more time is allowed for studying, the student will then be able to understand more fully the development of the material and course.

We hope that in the future definite action is taken concerning this problem.

G.M.

The Great Fear

The circumstances surrounding the inviting and subsequent disinviting of George Lincoln Rockwell, chief of the American Nazi Party, to this campus by the Young Independent Synthesis Organization are still indeterminable to those not directly involved.

On the one hand, Miss Raissa Landor, Chairman of the inviting group stated (in a Letter to the Editor, Wednesday, May 15) that the issuance of the invitation to Rockwell was a hasty and ill-considered move on the part of her organization. And, after taking into consideration Mr. Rockwell's seeming lack of political potency and intellectual meaningfulness they decided to rectify their own mistake by cancelling the Nazi's invitation.

On the other hand, Mr. Nicholson and Mr. Galligan (in a Letter to the Editor published today) accuse the Young Independent/Synthesis group of blatant hypocrisy. Furthermore they charge that the organization was, for all intent and purpose, coerced into withdrawing their invitation by a certain member of the administration.

Whatever the facts are, they will probably never be completely and accurately made public. However, we feel that beneath this entire controversy lies one fact which Miss Landor did not choose to bring out in her letter to the Collegian, and that is underlying the decision to revoke Rockwell's invitation was a profound fear on the part of the Young Independent/Synthesis Organization that if Rockwell spoke there would undoubtedly have been violence on campus.

We agree. There are many people at this University who have not reached a sufficient level of maturity to sit calmly and listen to a speaker whose views, while obnoxious, may still be pertinent to society. This is a horrible indictment, not of the University, but of a certain small group of individuals.

Nevertheless, Rockwell should be heard. Therefore, we suggest that the Young Independent/Synthsis group reinvite Mr. Rockwell, but to avoid embarrassing and almost inevitable violence, it make entrance to his lecture by invitation only. This would be perfectly within their rights as a Recognized Student Organization financed by private funds.

Disgusting Senate

To the Editor:

As a spectator at the last Student Senate meeting, I feel qualified to submit a criticsm of the attitude of certain members of said Senate. The meeting of Wednesday (May 15, 1963) was, in my opinion, a farce. The lackadaisical attitude exhibited by certain Senators was disgusting. When ex-President Cournoyer's bill to increase power of the Senate sub-committees was defeated only a quorum of 27 Senators was present. Following this, two constitutions and a minor bill were passed without a quorum. When the last bill of the agenda was brought to the floor, Senator Donald Crasco called for a quorum count, and it was established that only 24 Senators were present. This is not to place blame on Crasco's shoulders since it is the responsibility of the Senators to be present at all Senate meetings. This is their obligation to their constituency, and the open neglect of this responsibility is a disgrace to the Senate, as such, and the campus in general. This I feel, should be brought to the attention of the student body since said Senators are obligated to the students.

— LETTERS TO THE EDITOR —

Rockwell, Johnson And Freedom

To the Editor:

Unfortunately, Miss Landor's letter of May 15 did not clear up the "haze" concerning the cancellation of Mr. Rockwell's invitation to speak at the University. We are writing not only to set the facts straight, but more important to point out a very grave distortion of principle on the part of both the Young Independents' Synthesis and the administration.

We are in a position to know the facts since we originally proposed to the Young Independents/Synthesis that they invite Mr. Rockwell to speak at the University. We made this proposal in order to test the firmness and the consistency of the club's and the administration's adherence to the principles of free speech, academic inquiry, and academic freedom—the principles which were used to defend the right of a Communist to speak at the University a few weeks earlier under Young Independents/Synthesis sponsorship.

Neither the administration nor the club stood by their principles when to do so proved distasteful or difficult. A principle cannot rest on personal preference. If it is to exist, it must be applied consistently.

The Communist, Mr. Johnson, who spoke earlier, is a person whose beliefs and purposes are (or should be) as repulsive to the academic community as those of the other extremist, Mr. Rockwell. If in power, both would institute a socialistic state-controlled economy, both would rule by totalitarian methods, both would liquidate certain groups in the population. The principles of free speech are actually more applicable to Mr. Rockwell inasmuch as he does not advocate the forcible overthrow of the government, does not attack the constitution, and has not spent three years in jail for inciting riots as has Mr. Johnson.

Yet it is fashionable to have a communist speaker; it is safe; his attacks on governmental restrictions of Communists has some support; and opposition is neither violent nor troublesome. These proved to be the ultimate criterion of the club and the administration.

The club originally voted to invite Mr. Rockwell. Miss Landor, the club president, was not present at the meeting. As soon as she learned of the impending invitation, she made every effort to stop it. (It is not without significance that Miss Landor had an extreme personal aversion to Rockwell because of an exchange between them while she was picketing in California.) She was unable to stop the invitation because a quorum had approved it. Suddenly Dean Field appeared on the scene.

Miss Landor has said in her letter to the Collegian that "the executive board agreed unanimously to disinvite Rockwell, and then an informal discussion with Dean Fields took place in the Hatch."

Dean Field met the club in the Hatch, and there asked them to reconsider their invitation and vote on it. He said that while the University had not policy on speakers, the invitation to Rockwell might force it to institute a policy. He hinted at possible trouble, and warned of possible repercussions to the club stemming from unfavorable publicity and accusations of glamour hunting. After painting this pleasant picture, he told them they were free to vote any way they wished.

After a debate in which every principle and argument used to defend Johnson's appearance was denied and twisted, the club voted to rescind the invitation. The vote was not unanimous.

We trust that it shall become a matter of grave concern both to the faculty and to the students that the principles of free speech, academic inquiry, and academic freedom were denied simply because to stick to these principles was not convenient in this case.

If extremists are not to be allowed to speak, this should be admitted. If one extremist is preferable to another, this should be admitted. If, however, a principle is to be invoked, it must be applied consistently. This case of hypocrisy has brought no credit to the University.

Leadership Again

To the Editor:
Re: Mr. Davidow's Editorial "On Leadership" in Monday, May 13, Collegian

I am writing individually and not for all or any of the five honorary, leadership societies in particular to which Mr. Davidow directed his editorial. He made some excellent points in his argument, and the ideological suggestions of these points are valid.

Yet I am forced to disagree with one of his main aspects; the idea that we are to be condemned for not showing ourselves at the Birmingham protest march. The march in itself is commendable, no matter what its usefulness or impact will inevitably amount to. But I do not feel that we as members of honor societies should partake as representatives of our organizations. Our societies are not dedicated to these ideals so we should not be asked to represent our honoraries in partaking in this type of event. If we take a personal interest, we should take part as individuals, with no direct affiliations with our societies. We should be campus leaders with or without the jacket that oftimes distinguishes us unnecessarily.

The point was made that we are merely social organizations dedicated to purely social functions. This is far from true, look at our records; we are dedicated to much more. In our various positions of influence on campus, we feel that we do mold opinion and attempt to consolidate and bring out spirit and leadership in many aspects. True, more can be done by all of the five leadership societies, and to this goal I feel that each of these organizations should dedicate themselves.

The Deviates

To the Editor:

In spite of the fetish about individualism we make in this society, we have a tendency to think only in terms of generalizations of nebulous "isms." We classify each individual who, by some kind of nonconformity, commands a glance. This institutionalization of those who attempt to be free of the formalized, highly structural society that stifles them is blathently negative. The dubious positive class of eccentricity is reserved for the successful, for the relative obscurity of the nitch society creates for him.

If someone dares to deviate, he must be repressed and restrained unless he recants. The deviate must be classified. As soon as he is observed, the observer looks for certain specific characteristics that facilitate classification. For example: a beard or long hair on a male, or long straight hair, tights, and baggy dresses—beat.

No one could possibly deviate in any of these ways, or in any way, and not belong in a specific pigeon-hole. It would be un-American or something . . . .

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I get a little misty.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboros, she was a slip of a girl—supple as a reed and fair as the sunrise. Today she is gnarled, lumpy, and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper—even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I had the airmail edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. I must confess, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The airmail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore several pairs of my trousers.

It's a rare and lucky columnist

But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes—a fine group of men, as anyone who has sampled their wares would suspect. They are as mellow as the aged tobaccos they blend. They are as pure as the white cellulose filter they have devised. They are loyal, true, companionable, and constant, and I have never for an instant wavered in my belief that some day they will pay me for these last nine years.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you—the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience so full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all over to my house for tea and oatmeal cookies, but there is no telling how many of you my wife would bite.

For many of you this is the last year of college. This is especially true for seniors. To those I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will find the world outside a happy valley. To juniors I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become seniors. To sophomores I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become juniors. To freshmen I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become sophomores. To those of you going on into graduate school I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will marry money.

To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have been frivolous and funny during the past year—possibly less often than I have imagined—but the time has now come for some serious talk. Whatever your status, whatever your plans, I hope that success will attend your ventures.

Stay happy. Stay loose.

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, confess to more than a few nervous moments during the nine years we have sponsored this uninhibited and uncensored column. But in the main, we have had fun and so, we hope, have you. Let us add our good wishes to Old Max's: stay happy; stay loose.

Redmen Nipped By Maroons; Place Second In YanCons

by GENE COLBURN '64

The varsity track team traveled to Springfield Wednesday in hopes of becoming the first undefeated Redmen track team in history, as well as beating Maroons for the first time. Instead they came back with a 5-1 season's record, but have no reason to be ashamed. In what will probably go down as one of the best team efforts ever, the Redmen put out their all, and then some, to try and win the meet.

From the very first event, the mile, the meet was nip and tuck. Terry Merritt, of Springfield, followed "Digger" Brouillet for the first ¾'s of the race, and then outkicked Brouillet in the last 220. Merritt's time was 4:20.5. Dave Balch, Tom Panke, and Bob Ramsey, who finished behind Brouillet in that order, all turned in times that were personal bests. "Digger" avenged his loss in the mile when he came back and literally ran the opposition into the ground with a time of 9:27, which established a meet record.

In the 440 Craig Erikson continued showing great improvement as he ran 50.5, establishing a new meet record. Dick Ward had a great day. The 16 lb. hammer throw was another close event. Ward got off his second best throw this year, 179'4", only to have Peterson of Springfield throw 183'11", good enough for a school, meet, and field record. This was an improvement of 16' over his best previous effort. Ward then came back to pull an upset win in the discus with a toss of 147'2½", which set a new meet and UMass record. Ward also won the shot put (49'10") and the high jump (6'). In the high jump Davidson of Springfield jumped 4" higher than he ever jumped before, for second place.

Fred Lewis, won the 100 (9.9) and the broad jump. Fred's distance in the broad jump, 22'5½", set a new meet record.

Loren Flagg turned in a great double for UMass. He took second in 100 yard dash and came back to lead a Redman sweep of the 220 with a time of 21.8 seconds.

The 880 was the race of the day, as Ken O'Brien was just edged by Bob McCombie of the Maroons. McCombie led through the first quarter, and with 330 yards to go, seemed to have an unbeatable 15 yard lead. O'Bie opened up, though, and caught him just before the last turn. Both boys ran the last 300 yards with just three inches separating them; but McCombine managed to hang on and win with a time of 1:56.2.

Down to the last three events, the Redmen needed six points to win. John Harrington grabbed a third in the hurdles, and the magic number was reduced to five. But a second in the pole vault, in which Springfield's Black set a record of 13'10", and a third in the javelin netted the Redmen only four points.

The Redmen's final dual meet record, and a bid for an undefeated season, stands at 5-1.

The track team closed out one of its most frustrating weeks on record Saturday. The team traveled to Storrs for the Yankee Conference Championships, where they scored 55½ points, which in the past years would've been good enough to win. This was not their year, as Maine, last year's defending titlist, won. The Bears put on a tremendous show of depth, and walked away with the Championship with 79½ points. URI was third with 50½ points, followed by UConn, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Dick Ward and co-captain Bob Brouillet were the big guns for the Redmen. Ward won the high jump (6') and the discus. Dick's distance in the discus, 151'1" set a new UMass record. Ward lost the hammer throw by a heartbreaking half-inch as Maine's Nosan just edged Dick out. Brouillet swept both the mile and two-mile runs, putting on one of his best performances in three years. "Digger" won the mile run with a time of 4:19.9, his best time all year. Tom Panke and Dave Balch took fourth and fifth, respectively, in the mile, while Jim Wrynn followed Brouillet in the two-mile, Dick Blomstrom taking fourth.

Ken O'Brien successfully defended his 800 title with a time of 1:57.4. Bob Pendelton ran a great race as he took third place. Co-captain Loren Flagg took third place in the 100 and 220.

Fred Lewis had a frustrating day, as he only got a fifth in the high jump and a fourth in the broad jump.

"Vic subjected himself to terrific pressure in his first two years," explained a University administrator recently. "That UNH game broke the pressure cooker. He saw he could lose ball games for reasons other than his own mistakes."

Today, a smiling Vic Fusia freely discusses the Day of the Wildcat. "At first I blamed the players. Then I blamed myself. And then, after constant hours with the game films and weeks of concentration, I saw the defeat to be a product of many things, of which coaching and player mistakes held equal hands," Fusia said. "I think," he added, "we all learned many things that day and for which we can call 1962 a good year." The photograph on his office wall of a particular goal line stand in the tiny community of Villanova is another one of those "things" he spoke of.

Fusia is no less determined and no less demanding today than two years ago. But he knows how to smile at you now; a gigantic toothy smile that makes you wonder if there is a platter of meatballs and spaghetti behind you. He no longer worries about selling football to the UMass Student Body. The waning frames of film of the UNH game showed no empty seats but 10,000 die-hards.

Last week Fusia announced the initiation of a reward system to begin September 1963. For every outstanding performance of personal initiative—blocked punt, interception, fumble recovery, etc.—the player will receive a maroon letter for his helmet front until his six letters spell REDMEN. The program marks the final thaw between coach and players.

This is not to say that Fusia and his players are on a Father and Son basis or ever will be. Fusia is a Head Coach and, as such, will always maintain the demeanor of a Headmaster. His job is not to teach character and morality; he leaves that to the player's church and home . . . "If a man lacks character when he walks onto my practice field, I have no room for him," Fusia states.

His players today most often refer their problems to the assistant coaches but the word has spread among them quickly since December that, if need be, The Turtle has a warm ear for problems.

The Day of the Wildcat gave many lessons and come November 16, 1963, Vic Fusia and his team plan to teach a lesson of their own to the residents of Durham, New Hampshire.

Dean Marston Of The Engineering School To Retire

George A. Marston, Dean of the School of Engineering for 17 years and a member of the faculty for 30 years, will retire from the University, effective August 31.

President John W. Lederle, in announcing Dean Marston's retirement, praised the University educator for his contributions in the field of engineering.

"Dean Marston, through his steady leadership and demonstrated ability, has brought the engineering curricula at the University from a small department to major status as a first-rate school of engineering. Under Dean Marston's direction these curricula have taken on a comprehensiveness and depth that have resulted in important contributions on the part of the School's alumni in major educational and industrial positions throughout the country. Dean Marston's vision and dedication to the student and his needs have indeed insured the continued progress of one of the University's most productive facilities. We will greatly miss this statesman of education."

Dean Marston, who has held high posts in American engineering societies and associations, was appointed the first dean of engineering when the facility was formally organized as a school in 1947.

At the time of his appointment to the deanship, the newly organized school enrolled approximately 50 students. At present the school has more than 850 undergraduate students and almost 50 graduate students.

Under Dean Marston's direction the engineering curricula have been developed to give specialized training in each of five major areas as well as comprehensive scientific background in support of such training.

DEAN GEORGE MARSTON

During Dean Marston's tenure, all five curricula in the School of Engineering — civil, electrical, mechanical, industrial and chemical—received simultaneous accreditation by the Engineers Council for Professional Development, the national accrediting agency. Each of the engineering curricula must be evaluated on its own merits and earn accreditation as a separate curriculum and not simply as part of the

Spring Day Attempt Foiled

UMass came as close to Spring Day last Monday as it ever has since the traditional vernal rite was banned five years ago.

Originally a freewheeling springtime tension break, Spring Day came under fire when overly zealous celebrators caused destruction and an unsightly mess. In the old days the exact day remained unannounced until the Chapel bells began to peal wildly. Then classes were cut by one and all—exams included.

Police Spot Rope

The attempt was thwarted early Monday morning when a police officer removed the rope which was to be pulled by an unidentified person. Security Chief Alex Blasco praised officer Gerald O'Neil saying, "Due to the alertness of Officer O'Neil, who spotted the rope on a routine patrol" Spring Day was foiled.

Blasko theorized that a forestry student was involved in the abortive attempt because the Chapel steeple was apparently scaled in the night. The steeple of Old Chapel is about 70 feet high.

A night watchman told a reporter that he saw several people in the area of Old Chapel on his regular rounds about 11:30 p.m. Sunday. He added that one of the unidentified loiterers was on crutches. On a later patrol the watchman said he saw a cane lying on the Pond side of Chapel about 12:45 a.m. Monday.

Hopkins Tipped Off

Dean of Men Robert Hopkins said that he was tipped to the caper "very early in the morning." Hopkins would not disclose the name of his informant.

A reliable source close to the authorities said that the same informer that had tipped off Hopkins also told police.

Blasko stated that the leak stemmed from "too many phone calls" made during the early morning hours. Half a dozen students reported that they had received phone calls at their residences between two and three a.m., Monday.

The Phantom Caller reportedly used the names of several highly respected students who were quizzed by Collegian reporters. All said that they were sleeping soundly at those hours.

Phantom Caller Successful

Apparently calls from the Phantom Caller struck the mark as several hundred students were fully aware that Monday was to be Spring Day. Those who received phone calls said that they were told to send students to the Campus Pond when the bells sounded. The Phantom Caller then reportedly told students that the crowd was to be herded off campus to several picnic areas.

Once police had removed the rope from the bells, they moved quickly to stifle any further attempts by stationing Officer Daniel Schwartz outside of Old Chapel in an unmarked panel truck.

Two students who entered the steeple area were detained by Schwartz and brought to police headquarters for questioning. They were released when it was

New Campus Program Planned For Next Year

by NEAL ANDELMAN

One of the principle criticisms of the Honors Program here at the University of Massachusetts has always been that the program was not large enough to encompass the need of all students who wished to participate. A new project will be instituted next year which combines the best aspects of the Honors Program and the informality of a dormitory "Bull Session."

The aim of the new project is to present a problem to the campus, one which involves every member of the student body, faculty and administration. The problem will then become the focus of discussion on many aspects of campus life including art, drama and literature.

This year's project is entitled "Man and Automation."

A basic reading list will be proposed, and it is hoped that every member of the University community will read these books. A special reading list will also be proposed for specialized areas of the problem, for example Scriven's essay on androidology.

Throughout the year there will be centralized projects relating to the problem which will be sponsored by several groups on campus. Dramatic productions by the University Theatre, Modern dance productions, speakers sponsored by the Distinguished visitor's program, and art exhibits are just a few examples of projects that will be available to the entire University.

Supplementing these central projects will be smaller discussion units such as individual dormitory discussions and projects sponsored by many of the extra-curricular organizations on campus such as the Collegian, WMUA, and several of the academic clubs.

Every member of the University family will have an opportunity of participating in as many of the projects as he wishes. Of course no grades will be given to participants, but it is felt that a stimulating, intellectual project such as this will provide the opportunity for learning without the "Pressure" of grades to interfere with enjoyment.

For those who want to get an early start on the reading for next year's project, a partial list of the suggested books is offered below:

Human Use of Human Beings
Brave New World

Fail-Safe
Dimensions in the Mind

Notice

The College of Agriculture cordially invites its graduates and graduate students of 1963, their guests, the faculty and wives, for refreshments and an informal reception at Stockbridge Hall on Sunday, June 9, immediately following Commencement Exercises.

Honorary Sociery For Gov't Majors To Be Initiated

The first initiation of the University's newest honor society will take place this Thursday. Pi Sigma Alpha, an honorary fraternity for majors in political science will initiate approximately thirty two members.

Loren P. Beth, Professor of Government, who serves as faculty advisor to the group, stated that the qualifications for the group are at least ten hours study in political science, an average of 3.0 in the courses taken, and a cumulative average of 3.0.

Professor Beth stated that the society has chapters at over 100 colleges and universities across the nation. Members at the University include Professors Beth and Glenn Tinder.

SENIORS

Seniors are reminded that there will be a rehearsal for graduation following Class Nite. Any questions dealing with graduation can be answered by school marshals or ushers. Recipients of BA and BS degrees should line up alphabetically.

Larry Popple Cited By Collegian Staff

Larry Popple has been Photography Editor of the Collegian for three years, but it is not for this fact alone that this final issue of the Collegian is dedicated to him. Larry has fulfilled his duties as Photography Editor admirably, but it is what he has done above and beyond the call of duty that makes him the outstanding senior on the Collegian staff.

His devotion to the Collegian and his constant attempts to define the role and function of the paper on this campus, coupled with his outspoken and well-informed comments at the Collegian Executive and Publishing Board meetings have made him an integral part of all Collegian policy-making decisions.

Despite the fact that when dressed in bermuda shorts he looks like a beer keg balanced on toothpicks, he has always been the unsung hero of the Collegian. We feel that it is time we sang his praise.

Concert Assoc. Completes Plans For 1963-4 Series

The University Concert Association has completed plans for an impressive series of programs during the 1963-64 academic year.

On Sept. 30, the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre will open the Concert Association's series with a performance of Puccini's "Tosca."

The Netherlands String Quartet will appear at the University on Nov. 21, followed on Dec. 5 by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Walter Susskind conducting.

The New York Brass Quintet will present a program of chamber music on Feb. 25, and the Robert Joffrey Ballet Company, with orchestra, will appear on March 12.

Other highlights of the 1963-64 Concert Association series include choral music by the Schola Cantorum, conducted by Hugh Ross, a program of Beethoven sonatas by Roma Totenberg and Raymond Hanson, and an appearance by the Greenwich Quartet.

Photographs for I.D. pictures will be taken at the following times:

Farewell

Farewell—farewell with a note of sadness—for the year has come to an end. A year of exams, grades, snow dances—a year in which once more four year old freshmen say their final adieu. We the juniors, sophomores and freshmen of the Collegian staff will feel their exodus.

If you were ever in the office on a Tuesday, Thursday or Sunday night, you would have seen what would appear as a quiet, unassuming young lady ordering the make up staff with a resolved persistence. Once she begins to talk she reveals a lighthearted "sexiness" and coquettishness in her voice. Of course we are talking about Pat Barclay, who has consistently and reliably edited make-up for the past two years. We shall miss her, and her reliable leadership, for her energy, personality, and her wonderful companionship. We will feel her absence, for her dedication is needed.

"Hold page two, here I come," sings the sonorous voice of a past Editorial Editor. Neal and his energetic shrewdness and his ability to foresee issues has stimulated the Collegian and has given a great deal of meaning to many of the pages.

The truth is that the paper would never be published if we didn't have a business man running the finances. It's been said and to Steve Israel, "Thank you."

Wait! Who is that cute girl sitting behind that huge desk. It's Miss Personality. Oh I mean Audrey Raynor, without whom the paper would have lost its uniqueness. She has been a permissive leader and we are thankful that she has been with us.

We could go on, but space necessitates brevity. There are so many seniors whose names aren't mentioned. Their work we applaud.

Farewells should only last for a short while.

One can not really feel comfortable while saying farewell; for as well as looking towards the past, it carries thoughts of the future —the next step—the challenge of something greater which is to come. So, although this is a farewell it carries tinges of apprehension, encouragement, and excitement, as the enfoldment of life offers obstacles, problems, threats and hope for newer and more dynamic experiences.

Re: Yahoo, Caesura Distribution Act

During the last few days, I've been stormed by enraged counsellors and fellow students concerning my part in establishing the method used in distributing the recent Ya-Hoos.

To begin with, I have had nothing to do with the present method. In the fall of 1959, I had sponsored the original act for the distribution of Ya-Hoos and Caesuras. During the last year, Senator Boyden had amended the act so that its purpose is now completely different from what was originally intended. I had originated the distribution act for the purpose of insuring that every one would get their Ya-Hoo. The following is a partial quote of the original act:

"The persons in charge of the distribution of the two periodicals must adhere to the following method of distribution:

1. Dormitories (Men's and Women's)
   A. The number of periodicals necessary for each person in the dormitory will be left with the Head of Residence. The Head of Residence will then distribute to each counsellor the number of periodicals equal to the total number of students in his section. The counsellor in turn, will deliver one periodical to each student in his section."

Moreover, the wording of the amendment to the act could be improved. The amendment infers that the senate has the authority to force the Heads of Residence or the counsellors to obey this act. The original act was established with the idea that the cooperation needed from these people was purely voluntary and the new amendment should continue this idea.

INDEX

The cliche goes: "It was a long wait, but it was worth it." And that goes well for the 1963 Index. It's five days until the book comes out; and that's a long wait, but it's worth it.

Sporting a change in format, the 1963 Index will be the most changed yearbook to hit this campus. The staff has drawn upon the talents of students to put out a crisp, new book of ideas. Bill Shumway, leading UMass student artist, designed the cover and drew the divider pages for the six sections. Bill worked with pen and ink in his own definitive style to execute the artwork.

Layout is featured in a new opening section aimed at setting a tone for the book which is followed throughout. A new features section of entertaining information leads off with that mystery man Henri Haskins. Six men in the faculty, administration and student services are cited for their contributions to UMass growth, and a recap of some of the important events of the past year in the world at large is offered with a campus background.

The new Index surpasses all predecessors, not only in breadth of coverage but in depth where the worth of the book will be proven in future years.

Re: Editorial on "The Great Fear" in Monday's, (May 20) Collegian

In reference to having a highly controversial speaker such as George Lincoln Rockwell speak on our campus, I agree with Mr. Davidow's statement that there are many people who are not sufficiently mature to sit calmly and listen to a speaker without causing some type of riot or disturbance. Yet, as he admitted, this is an indictment "of a certain small group of individuals." Therefore, why should the rest of the campus community be penalized because of this small group of individuals?

Mr. Davidow's suggestion that the Young Independents/Synthesis group reinvite Mr. Rockwell but make the lecture open only to certain "invited" guests does not seem at all fair to me. It might avoid the "embarrassing violence" which everyone seems to feel is so inevitable (providing the group is successful in judging which individuals sufficiently meet its standards of maturity), but what other purpose would it serve? It would prevent many students who are sincerely interested in hearing a speaker such as this whose views, as Mr. Davidow says, "may be pertinent to our society," from attending the lecture, since the Young Independents/Synthesis Organization may decide that they are not "mature" enough to be invited.

If this issue ever becomes settled, and in the event that Mr. Rockwell IS reinvited to speak at this University, why should anyone be prevented from attending the lecture because one group of students has decided that they would not be "mature" enough to attend? (And on exactly what standards of maturity would they base their decision, and would Mr. Davidow be on the Board of Judges?)

Although the Young Independents/Synthesis group is within its rights to hold such a closed meeting, they would be violating the very principles upon which their organization is based—academic inquiry and academic freedom for all students of the University.

Barbara C. Prenner

To the Editor:
Re: "The Great Fear"

Mr. Davidow in his editorial describes George Rockwell as "a speaker whose views, while obnoxious, may still be pertinent to society" and then discusses the advisability of bringing him to campus. He is in favor of this. HE then accuses the student body of immaturity because he feels that some students would not "sit calmly" and listen to those views. What, we might ask, are those views?

They are the views of the organization that perpetrated the greatest crimes against humanity this world has ever seen, and let us hope, ever will see. We are asked to sit "calmly" to these views when they should be abhorrent to us.

This man does not now nor will ever deserve an invitation to this campus, until he repudiates the organization he now represents. And let us not be misled by cries of "the right of freedom of speech" because the Nazi Party lost this right the first time they turned on the GAS!

J.P.M. '65

To the Editor:

Certain questions arise concerning Mr. Davidow's idea of re-inviting Mr. Rockwell, with the restriction of having an audience by invitation only. Who is the "certain small group of individuals who have not reached a sufficient level of maturity to sit calmly and listen to a speaker whose views, while obnoxious, may still be pertainent to society"? How can they be identified? Who would decide on the invitation list? What criterion would be used?

It is not the duty of the University and its clubs either to shelter students from controversial views or to hide their immaturity when presented with these views.

Freedom to speak involves the freedom to listen.

Jane C. Vincent '63

To the Editor:

Dean Field reported statement that the University had no policy on speakers, but that the invitation to Rockwell might force it to institute a policy—makes it rather obvious that the administration has some sort of unstated policy that it has kept to itself.

The Collegian editorial of May 20th would suggested that fear of violence on campus is the underlying reason for cancelling a speaker. This does not ring true. Would an integrationist speaker be cancelled because of fears of extremist violence? If fear of violence is the underlying policy on speakers, then any speaker, whether Democrat, Republican, integrationist, or Rockwell—would have to be cancelled.

If policy is not based on principle, or on the fear of violence, then what remains?

Perhaps if the Young Independents had been more independent, University policy might have been forced into the open.

ASTERISK —

A Footnote To Contemporary Propaganda

by MIKE PALTER

"As finger-nailed blackboard grating, slicing
Hollow heads who oiled the waters . . . We Lit a match and poured the sulphur down
The throats of tongueless hearts."

While writing this column, I thought of another editorial which I composed in tribute to an incompetent, bigoted, and intelllecually impotent far-past president of the Student Senate. However, at the last moment I decided to tear up my painless editorial and tually impotent far-part president of the Stutor do the lying for me. I destroyed the thing after I realized that he just wasn't worth lying for.

In writing a last column, one is confronted with the same problem. It is certainly much easier to assert that "things really aren't as bad as all that" than to level one's guns at the hapless administrators and hollow-boned students of this institution. It is certainly much easier to congratulate the students for their political and religious tolerance than to document the opposite fact. It would indeed be pleasurable to commend the fraternity system if this commendation did not entail an utter disregard for the essential rot which lies within.

But this is a hard world. It is a world of super-bombs and intolerance and alienation. It is a world of sophisticated gangsterism and communism and capitalism and television. It is a world of 100 million hungry stomachs. And it is the world of the bargain basement which doubles as a fall-out shelter.

However, there is quite another side to this. Granted, it is easy to sooth the troubled waters. But on the other hand it is almost as easy to continually stir them. Cynics and iconoclasts are a dime a dozen. If I were to tell you that the student union is conducive to worm growth, you would say "so what?" And you would be justified . . . if only for the fact that I was telling you what you already knew.

It is imposible to harbor a totally cynical attitude toward this institution. To negate the true worth of the Massachusetts Review or the Honors Program would be intellectual dishonesty. To minimize the potential of any public university would be to withdraw from the democratic ideal. But to lie is even worse than this; So this will be the end.

Committee For Non-Violent Action Bring Peace Walk Thru Campus

Six peace walkers, walking with a purpose instead of for athletics, will be on campus all day Wednesday. They are part of the Committee for Nonviolent Action, and are participating in a phase of the Cuban Peace Walk, sponsored by CNVA. The walkers are walking from Boston to Rome, N.Y. where they will meet three other branches of the walk.

One walk will be walking from Quebec, one from Toronto, and one from Cleveland, Ohio. They have been walking since May 1st, and will be meeting in Rome, N.Y. on July 4th. From there a combined walk will continue to walk to Florida, where they will board a boat to Guantanamo. There they will hold their final demonstration. Themes of the Walk are: Compassion, Forgiveness, Reconciliation, and Mutual Aid. The Walkers will recommend defense by nonviolent resistence, unilateral disarmament and non-cooperation with military programs.

The Walkers are walking with a compelling sense of responsibility for U.S. policies toward

Frosh Council Plans Activities For Next Year

After much debate, the Freshman executive council succeeded in planning its schedule for the coming year. The Class of '66 will begin with a Soph-Frosh picnic to be held on October 5. In the late Fall, the class will hold a Las Vegas night, complete with roulette wheels and other attractions. The final planned event will be the Sophomore Banquet to be held in early 1964. The theme will be "Roman Times." Activities will be organized in accordance with this theme.

Dr. Vali Recieves Grant For Study Of Cold War

The University has received $7,291 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation for a study of modern Germany.

The grant will support research to be conducted by Dr. Ferenc A. Vali.

Dr. Vali, a distinguished political scientist and international lawyer, will study the complexities of interrelationships between German nationalism and the Cold War problem of German partition.

He will perform research at the University and also travel to Western Europe.

Born in Budapest in 1905, Dr. Vali was educated at the University of Budapest and the University of London. Until 1949, when he was banned from the faculty by the Communists, Dr. Vali taught at the University of Budapest and served the Hungarian government.

In 1951, he was arrested by the Communists and remained imprisoned for five years.

Upon his release in 1956, just before the Hungarian Revolution, Dr. Vali aided in an effort to reorganize the Hungarian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Dr. Vali and his wife escaped into Austria when the revolution was suppressed by the Russians. In 1957 they came to the United States.

The Ten Most Outstanding

Jean Bruen

Jean Bruen, as president of Mortar Board, president of KKG and a member of Women's Judiciary has demonstrated devoted service to the University community. It was under Jean's direction that the Mortar Boards have grown in prestige and service. Because of her sincerity and sensitivity, Jean has earned the admiration of students, faculty and administration.

John Gounaris

Diligent and hard working John Gounaris has topped off a distinguished career of service to the University by acting as student chairman of the Centennial Committee. John, who was voted the Most Valuable Maroon Key, was a primal force in the success of the year-long Centennial celebration.

Man of the Year

Don Cournoyer

When Don Cournoyer ascended to the presidency of the Student Senate, the organization was in virtual chaos. By his own effort and dedication, he raised the Senate from the doldrums to an organization of which we all can be proud. As an Adelphian, he has encouraged the newer members of the University community to take an active interest in their student government. It is this dedication both to the Senate and to the student body which make Don the outstanding man of 1963.

Donald C. Cournoyer—Campus Leader

William Shumway

Not much of an artist when he first began attending classes here, Amherst's own Bill Shumway has scored well as a creative genius in the field of art.

By no means a shirker from extracurricular activities, Bill designed the cover for the 1963 Index as well as the artwork throughout the book. Though he has bloomed late, he has bloomed in the vibrant colors of success.

Michael Palter

It is the obligation of every college student to express himself on topics that he considers important. Michael Palter has fulfilled this obligation and made his views known to the campus community in both word and deed. His social conscience, his sincerity, and his general contributions to the University warrant praise.

Members of the Class of 1963

Paul Theroux

Paul Theroux has distinguished himself in the fields of literature and political action. A frequent contributor to the literary magazine, he has played significant roles in the R.O.T.C. controversy and in numerous peace demonstrations. Mr. Theroux is a shining example of a person who refuses to capitulate to those values which he feels to be destructive of individual conscience. If he is not to be agreed with, he is at least to be greatly admired.

Alan Savat

Entering into the editorial production of a yearbook from the advertising department was the first challenge Al Savat had to meet daringly, since he had had no previous editorial experience. Then he discarded previous rules and restraints to produce a different, exciting yearbook, fighting off stand-pat ideas held by students and administration. Though the odds were against him as a yearbook editor, he came through a big winner as a long shot as the University will soon see with the release of the 1963 Index on May 27.

Woman of the Year

Betsy Robicheau

Betsy Robicheau, in her position as vice president of the Student Senate is the personification of a dedicated and respected leader. As recording secretary of KKG and as an influential member of Distinguished Visitors Program, Fine Arts Council, and the Centennial Committee, Betsy has contributed significantly to the University.

Betsy Robicheau—Dedicated Worker

James Trelease

The voice of the Redmen has contributed much to this University. Through his endeavors on WMCA he has played no small part in the growth of both our campus radio station and in the increased awareness of the role of intercollegiate athletics in the scope of college life.

His service to the Collegian as Editorial Editor and frequent contributor have been greatly appreciated.

Howard Shainheit

The pursuit of academic excellence is the prime concern of all college students. Howard Shainheit has, more than any other student on this campus, carried this pursuit to its fullest. As a member of Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Kappa Phi, and as a Woodrow Wilson Scholar, and the University's Phi Beta Kappa Scholar he has demonstrated superior intellectual achievement.

Redmen Down Holy Cross, 2-1, In Tenth Inning

Wilson Pitches Four-Hitter; Walk Forces In Lead Run

The UMass baseball club ended its regular season yesterday on a bright note with a tenth inning win over Holy Cross, one of the highest rated teams in New England. It as usual was not power that won the game, but good pitching and extra good luck. Neil Harris walked with the bases loaded in the bottom of the tenth to drive in Bob Hughes with the tie breaking run, 2-1. Dick Wilson hurled another superb game for Mass. The little lefty held the Crusaders to two hits in eight innings before Holy Cross got their lone run on a booming triple and a wild pitch.

The Redmen scored early in the game with a pair of extra base hits in the third, and Wilson had no problems in holding the lead until the ninth when John Peterman crashed a three bagger into deep right centerfield that the wind held up. With Bill Prizio at bat, Wilson let go with a pitch that was in the dirt and bounced off Dave Krukonis' shin pads, allowing the runner to score easily.

After are game evened up, it looked like it might become a carbon copy of the 13 inning Tufts game last week, since UMass was having no luck with Holy Cross sophomore Dick Joyce and Don Reidl who came in after Joyce was pinch-hit for in the eighth. Tony Williams reached Joyce, who chose a colleg education at Holy Cross over the bonus offers of nearly every club in the majors, with a single in the first, but the big bombs fell in the third. With two outs, Harris lined a rocket down the third base that went for a double. Corky Schmoyer followed it up with a three base shot to to right center that drove in the run. Holy Cross had a scoring opportunity in the top of the eighth, and the Crusaders yanked Joyce in favor of pinch hitter Tom Jordon who grounded to short leaving Bob Arena stranded on second.

Reidl had no difficulty in his first inning of relief and he got out of his second inning when John Awdycki was thrown out trying to steal second after his base hit to left. The tenth proved Reidl's undoing though, when he fell apart after Hughes led off with a line single. Pete Larkin was caught looking at a third strike but Krukonis kept the rally alive. The senior backstop drew three balls from Reidl and then took an intentional walk after Hughes swiped second. Rod Corey went up to the plate as a pinch hitter for Wilson and he watched four balls go by after being down two strikes. Harris stepped up and Reidl threw four more wide of the mark, which was enough to push in Hughes with the run that boosted the Mass record to 9-7 and gave Wilson his third win against four losses.

With the exception of the run scoring ninth, Wilson was never in danger of losing. He gave up only three hits in the other nine innings, and one was of the infield variety that appeared to have been an out on a fine play by Pete Larkin. The next hit was a clean single to center by Bob Arena leading off the eighth and he was sacrificed to second. But, John Wendelken, hitting for Tim Murtaugh, struck out and Tom Jordan, batting for Joyce ended the frame.

Arena singled in the tenth but was thrown out by Krukonis trying to steal second. Krukonis also cut down Tony Capo in the first. Wilson eliminated a third runner in the ninth when he picked Jim Halloran off first. The Redmen also pulled a double play that helped Wilson out in the fifth stanza. Paul Morano reached on the questionable infield hit to short, but a Schmoyer to Larkin to Awdycki twin killing got the second and third outs of the frame. It was the seventeenth double play of the season for the Redmen as compared to only three by the opposition.

The five hitter by Wilson lowered the UMass team ERA to 1.329 for the season. Wilson now stands at 1.263 which leads Lew Pia's 1.285 by a whisker. Mike Johnson holds the top spot with a 0.692 and Rod Corey rates the booby prize with a sky high 1.517.

Lacrosse Team Wins 13-2 Takes New England Title

The Redmen varsity lacrosse team won its final game of the season and the New England championship as well with a 13-2 win over Worcester Tech in the rain last Saturday. WPI proved no match for the Redmen as the 0-8 record they brought into the game indicated.

Mass started right off the bat when Joe Moro scored the first goal after half a minute of play. Steve Harrington followed at 3:58, Frank Infusino put one in at 5:02, Jerry Clinton at 8:29, and Frank Casey chalked up another at 9:00 on a pass from Don Tremblay. Worcester managed on goal at 13:40 to kill any dreams of a shutout.

With a 5-1 lead it was pretty obvious that the Redmen were going to come out on top, but they kept on scoring in the second period. WPI held out for quite a while, but at 11:47 Tremblay hit paydirt with his second point of the day. Less than two minutes later Harrington slammed the ball past the Tech goalie to boost the score one more notch. The UMass defensive corps had WPI even more bottled up in the second period than in the first, and the halftime score read 7-1.

Worcester scored their second marker in the third quarter, but Massachusetts netted three. The first was registered by Bob MacLoud after a minute of play. The next score came on a perfect play by Tom Kirby and Frank Gilliatt. Kirby cleared the ball and took off downfield where he passed off to Gilliatt. Kirby then took a return pass and went in for a scoring shot. The play came at 7:04 and gave Dick Garber's boys an eight point advantage. The goal that put UMass in double figures was even more unbelievable.

Garber gave his defensive team a chance at reaching the scoring column by sending John Kallio and Paul Majeski into attack positions. Kallio wanted a score and he fought ferociously for the ball, but though he tried his darndest, "The Bird" could not score. Then at 11:55 he got the ball with his back to the net and shot over his head for an unassisted score, a play you don't see every time you go to a lacrosse game. The Engineers had previously netted one at 8:28 which accounted for a 10-2 score.

Paul Majeski's turn came at 6:54 of the final period, and the defenseman turned attack scored from a Gordy Webb pass. Bill MacLoud added his second of the day at 8:04. Tremblay provided the last harrassment for the Worcester Tech goalie with a tally twenty second later. The defensemen proved just as tough at their regular jobs. Though UMass spent five and a half minutes in the penalty box, WPI was never given a chance to score while they had the man advantage.

The two All-American candidates, Gilliatt and Majeski, both played tremendous games. Gilliatt did not score, but his play was his usual first rate. Majeski played with an injured foot, but he showed why he was chosen as a candidate to represent the North at the All-America game June 8, at Lake Placid. The man in the nets, Dick Baird, had a big lead all the way, but he did not let up. Baird made some fine stops of near goals. Frank Infusino, Jerry Clinton, Joe Moro, and Hal Ryder also had fine games, and they showed that the mud and rain was no obstacle to victory.

Frosh End Season With 7-1-1 Record

Springfield College proved to be the only obstacle in the way of Coach Dick Bergquist's freshman baseball team from having a perfect season. The Maroons handed the Little Redmen a 2-0 loss last weekend in the season finale for the only defeat of the year on the UMass record. In the first game of the season the two teams played to a 4-4 tie.

Smith Stars On Hill

Bill Smith, a righty from Newburyport, gave up six hits and both runs in five innings on the hill at Springfield before giving way to John Tedeman who was touched for only two base hits by the home club in three innings of relief. That kind of pitching ordinarily is good enough for a win, but the UMass bats clicked for only two safe hits the whole game, and they had only one scoring opportunity. That came in the seventh when Mass loaded the bases on a single, walk, and error, but a strike out ended the threat.

Freshmen a-la Varsity

Overall, the season was far more successful than the final game indicated. The Little Redmen finished with a 7-1-1 mark in Bergquist's fourth year with the team. Like the varsity, pitching proved to be the strong point. John Tedeman had a record of three complete games with three wins and no losses. The strong armed right hander had a 40-10 strikeout-walk ratio with an ERA 0.90. Bill Smith had an even lower ERA, 0.74. The two should aid Coach Lorden greatly next season in his search to find replacements for his aces Lew Pia and Dick Wilson who will soon be graduating.

Della Piana Top Sticker

The team batting was not the Freshmen strong point, but Dennis Della Piana showed he will carry a big bat for the varsity next season. The center fielder from Malden knocked the ball at a .483 pace in the nine games played. Included in his 14 hits were two four baggers which accounted for some of his nine runs batted in. Della Piana also swiped ten bases without getting nailed once. Third baseman Bill Cleary hit the ball for a .318 average, and Ray Yando and Bob Scott also provided a lot of base hits.

Outstanding Senior Athletes And Coaches Of 1963

Sam Lussier — Three Years Of Excellence

Although a knee injury in the Boston University game this past season kept him out of three games, Sam Lussier was still able to pile up enough yardage to break numerous Redman records. In the B.U. game, Lussier became the first Redman ever to pile up a career total of 1500 yards. Against UConn, Lussier ran up 175 yards to establish a new single game record. The very next week, against URI, he picked up 176 yards on the ground to best his seven day old record.

Lussier came back in the UNH Championship game to grind out 42 yards, a remarkable performance considering his bad knee. Selected AAA-New England by UPI, he was also voted All-YanCon and was the team's outstanding back in his sophomore and senior years.

Coaches Of The Year

Both coaches this year have earned their laurels in spring sports. Coach Footrick, track and cross-country coach, first came to the University in 1954. In nine years of coaching cross-conutry, he has compiled a 48-21 record.

In track, Footrick has always been a contender for the New England championships. He won the title in 1961, and placed second in both 1960, and '62. This past spring, Footrick led his talented squad to a 7-1 record, his only loss to Springfield, an eastern track power, by one point.

In 1955, Dick Garber became coach of the Fighting Redmen's Lacrosse squad. The squad fought, but didn't bring back a victory until his next year of coaching. In the eight years that Garber has been coaching lacrosse, he has brought the squad from an 0-7 record to this year's 12-2 slate and a New England Championship. In 1961, Coach Garber molded his talent into New England Class "B" champions.

Garber's squad is made up of completely Bay State boys. Seeing that most Massachusetts schools don't even have lacrosse teams, it can be said that Coach Richard Garber has really made mountains out of molehills.

Dick Ward — One Of The Redmen's Best

Dick Ward is probably the best weight-man in the history of UMass track, if not one of the best trackmen this University has ever seen. Ward, by winning the IC4A 35-lb. weight throw, became the first Redman ever to win points in this major track and field meet. Dick piled up 160 points this past year in spring and winter track, participating in the 35 and sixteen pound weight throws, the high jump, and the discus.

In the Yankee Conference Championships held this past weekend at UConn, Ward won both the high jump and the discus throw. He lost the hammer toss by only half an inch.

For his outstanding achievement in track, Dick was awarded the Chester F. Bowen Jr. Award for the outstanding trackman of the year.

Paul Majeski Takes All-American Honors

Two weeks ago, Paul Majeski received the DeOrmond "Tuss" McLaughry Award which is annually presented to the outstanding scholar athlete in Western Massachusetts. Last weekend, Majeski took the platform to accept the ECAC Merit Award, one of the University's highest awards to a senior athlete, as well as the William T. Evans Memorial Award for football. Hitting the books or an opposing lineman, Paul Majeski has always excelled.

Paul received All-American honors in the Williamson ratings for middle bracket schools. He has been All-Yan Con, All-East, and All-New England at various points in his career. He has twice been selected as top lineman of the year by the Springfield Boosters Club. Quite a record in three years.

Jerry Clinton — Eight Letters In 3 Sports

Jerry Clinton, 5'10", 170 pounds, hardly looks like the average eight letterman on a college campus. Yet this freckle-faced senior has played three major sports, and played all three excellently. For two years, he was a wing on the soccer team, playing in the shadow of All-American Dick Repeta. His three years on the hockey team were rewarded this past weekend when he was presented the Varsity Club Plaque, symbol of the team's most valuable player. He also received the Joseph Lojko Award for being a three sport athlete.

In two years of lacrosse, he has been an invaluable asset. This past season, he scored six goals as a midfielder, second best production at his position. A tip of the hat to Jerry Clinton—an all around athlete.

George Lincoln Rockwell

To the Editor:

Re: Messrs. Nicholson and Galligan:

Unfortunately, your letter of May 20 did not clear up the "haze" concerning the cancellation of Mr. Rockwell's invitation to speak at the University. It merely created a smokescreen of misconceptions and half-truths to cover a barrage of untenable accusations.

We agree that a principle as great as free speech naturally cannot rest on personal preference. We do, however, believe that the ACTS of speaking, hearing, and, therefore, sponsoring must inevitably rest on personal preference.

Let us now examine the "facts" surrounding the invitation and the rescinding thereof. May we remind you that you wrote to Rockwell even before you first approached us. At our first meeting with you, we were initially excited by the proposal. We tentatively agreed, due to the urgency YOU expressed in sending an immediate invitation. This led our secretary to sign the invitation letter which you so "kindly" prepared for us, and then only with your assurance that this invitation was "tentative", and could be withdrawn if, after further consideration, it became desirable to do so.

Several executive board meetings were then held; and the executive board unanimously decided to rescind the invitation on the following grounds:

1) That we would be associated with glory-hunting spectacularism:

2) That the University and the students would have been subjected to potential violence and disorder from outside agitators (American Nazi-ites from Springfield);

3) That there was no practical follow-up or repudiation possible because of the speaker's nature, the type of program, and the immediacy and lateness of the date.

The first two of these grounds are self-explanatory, but we would like to elaborate on the third point. Our answer is to use the comparison you made: Lincoln Rockwell, Commander of the ANP; and Arnold Johnson, of the American Communist Party (whom you waved as a bloody shirt). Mr. Johnson represents an intellectual, rational, and objective (though partisan) point of view, and presents his point of view in a similar manner. This was demonstrated by his performance both here and at UConn.

On the other hand, Mr. Rockwell presents an irrational, emotional, hate-inspired viewpoint in an atmosphere of profanity, hatemongering, and violence. This has been continually demonstrated by his appearances throughout the country.

Whereas the American Communists have never attacked the Constitution and the ideals therein, Mr. Rockwell consistantly attacks these ideals and the Constitution, especially the 14th amendment.

There is a significant difference to the types of programs involved. The one, a panel in which there is immediate discussion and refutation, allows an objective airing of views. The other, a single rabble-rouser, by his observable nature, disallows any objectivity.

Following the executive board's decision, a special meeting was held in the Hatch, with a quorum present. Dean Field, WHO HAD BEEN INVITED BY US to the meeting, spoke informally with the group. He expressed his personal concern over the probable repercussions of Rockwell's appearance. If the dean had any effect at all, it was catalytic, since the majority of the members had already decided to rescind the tentative invitation. There was one dissenting vote. In our informal discussion (not a debate) we did not deny or twist any principles. The principles you seek to exploit were not, in fact, at stake because free speech is not involved in cases where disturbance of the peace is inevitable.

In conclusion, we have not recanted or disavowed any of our principles because they were not involved. There were no restrictions placed upon us, other than those of personal conscience. We acted completely in good faith with you (because the invitation, from the beginning, was tentative), with Mr. Rockwell (because we wired him our decision immediately after it was made so as to prevent any inconvenience to him), and with our individual consciences.

Student Union Expansion Causes Senate Controversy

In a special meeting necessitated by lack of a quorum, the Student Senate amended a controversial bill which endorsed the expansion of the Student Union.

The controversy was over wording of the bill which would force students who would graduate before the opening of the new wing to pay for it. The battle was started by Senator Dolores Matthews who last week introduced an amendment which would exempt graduating seniors from paying the tax. The amendment was defeated in the late hours of the preceeding meeting, but the motion itself failed to pass due to a lack of quorum.

Last night the motion was again brought to the floor, with a similar amendment. Joan Werner, member of the S.U. expansion committee, argued that she could not understand why seniors would be so "stingy". She claimed that "your children will be using the building." To this, Senator Phil Howard answered "and they will be paying for it."

The amendment was debated further, with the fact being brought out that if the tax were not imposed a year early, it would be kept an extra year. This revelation led many to state that this was the just way, with those using the building being those who pay for it. The amendment and the amended motion passed unanimously.

With this being done, two financial bills were soon disposed of and the last Senate meeting of the year adjourned.

The Other Side

To the Editor:

It is very unfortunate that the debate over the invitation to Rockwell and the subsequent cancellation of that invitation will probably end with this last issue of the Collegian. At the very least, however, some questions have been raised, some thinking has been done.

I had hoped that the debate could be waged without either Miss Landor or myself adding more versions of facts or making charges and counter charges. Because Miss Landor has tried to take advantage of the last issue, I must try to make sure the issue remains clear and is debated on its merits.

As for facts: 1) The invitation sent by the club was an official, definite invitation. The only thing tentative about it was that Miss Landor was still trying to get it rescinded. 2) The vote to rescind the invitation was taken at the request of Dean Field. It was taken in the presence of Dean Field after a debate in which Dean Field took a very leading and partisan role.

As for the issues: 1) On what grounds is one extremist preferred over another? 2) Are the students too immature to make up their own mind—and at the same time act with courtesy and dignity? 3) Do the principles used to defend the Communist's apply to Mr. Rockwell? If not, what is the difference? 4) Should a speaker (Any SPEAKER) be kept from speaking on the grounds someone may throw a brick at him?

I hope these questions will be discussed on their merits and not on feelings of personal hatreds—on either side.

Spring Day ...

found that they had entered only to see what was going on.

Blasko stated that the rope tied to the bells was taken from a large oak tree behind the Infirmary. The rope and tree are used by aboriculture students in fulfilling proficiency tests.

Twine Used

Blasko said that O'Neil found a couple of hundred feet of twine which he said was probably used to haul up the rope.

Rumors flew as to how the rope-tying was accomplished. Some said the climber must have been a "human fly", an "expert lock-picker", and, one far-out suggestion: "Beta Chi flew a man over."

Chief Blasko said that he would not investigate any further since he felt that the attempt at Spring Day was finished following swift police work.

By sheer coincidence, Monday morning, a WMUA announcer remarked "what a beautiful day for a Spring Day".

The announcer said that he was so impressed by the fine early morning weather that he made several remark about what a nice "Spring Day it would be".
